Students who apply will be required to take the ROTC qualifying exam on March 9th, a physical on March 17th, and appear before a selection board on a late March date yet to be determined. Those accepted will attend a special six week summer camp at Fort Knox, Kentucky in late June and throughout July with students from all over the United States. During the camp period, students will be paid approximately $120 plus food, lodging, and travel. Upon successful completion, camp graduates are eligible to join their contemporaries who have remained in the four-year program in the regular curriculum associated with the last two years of that program. Completion of commissioning prerequisites will require four semesters of Military Science classes on campus and the six-week summer camp normally attended between the junior and senior year. The on-campus stipend is $40 per month; summer camp pay is $180 for the six week period plus allowances.

While two-year program students are not eligible for ROTC scholarships, they are eligible for the flight training program, choice of branch, graduate school deferment, choice of active duty entry date, and other advantages of ROTC program.

For further information, interested students should contact Major Mahoney between February 21 and February 23 at the Military Science Department. Please schedule appointments by calling extension 427.

National Trend

More Funds Appropriated For Colleges

State legislatures across the nation appropriated more than $3 billion in state tax funds for annual operating expenses of higher education according to a report just published by the Office of Institutional Research of the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges.

The report showed an increase of almost $847 million for the two-year period 1964-66 representing a gain of 39 percent, the largest increase by far for any two-year period since the Office of Institutional Research began publishing these reports in 1960-61. Generally the greatest increases occurred in the states that were most behind in their support of public higher education, notably those along the Eastern seaboard. The percentage gain over the six-year period ranged from a high of 280 percent in Maine to a low of 32 percent in Montana.

Professor M.M. Chambers of Indiana University, who has prepared all of the reports, noted an actual dollar gain over the past six years of $1,634,474. He compared this increase with the prediction in 1958 by a noted economist that higher education could expect to receive no more than $1 billion additional in annual operating income up to 1970, from all public sources, including federal, state and local.

College Admissions

Getting Tougher

Ann Arbor, Mich. - (I.P.) - More and more colleges will become competitive ones as the colleges with "open door" policies are deluged with applications. In short, says Gayle Wilson, associate director of admissions at the University of Michigan, top-notch students will be competing with each other to be admitted to those universities which, in turn, are competing with more of their own kind for superior students only.

With this increase in scholastic admissions standards, Wilson says, will come a need to get applications for admissions in earlier. "No college admissions committee should act until after the high school pupil's junior year for obvious reasons, but the pupils are being urged now to get their applications in no later than the first semester of their senior years."

Another trend which Wilson sees as "a kind of national movement" is the search by universities for creative talents among high school students seeking admissions to colleges.

"More and more colleges are coming out in the open and saying they want these types of people," Wilson states. These sought-after students are those who have shown definite talents in art, music, forensics, writing, etc., who might "be lost in the shuffle if judged only scholastically by strict admissions standards."

"This is such a new trend," he admits, "that there are no studies yet, to my knowledge, which would indicate whether or not these students would get a 'lopsided' education, doing well scholastically in subjects only related to their particular talents."

An interesting trend which Wilson says "could well become critical" is: more girls. "It's a dilemma that's really a maturation problem," Wilson points out. "Girls as a group when applying for university admissions are better students than boys; at that point in their lives, say 18 years old, they are ready for college."

"But," he adds, "the boys catch up scholastically, and usually even pass the girls in college, and colleges want potential graduates." The chief hesitation about admitting more girls than boys, though, stems from the fact that girls are less likely to stay in college than boys are.

Another definite trend which Wilson sees:

"More college students spending their first two years in junior colleges with their final study at universities. More students than ever before will be studying at their own state-supported institutions."

QUESTION: Why do the girls at UVM get better grades than the boys?

Joyce Herlihy

Joyce Herlihy, '68, Jersey City, N.J. - "When the girls come back to the dorms they'll usually study while the guys would tend more to fool around. Girls are generally more conscientious about their work. The girls have more pressures from sororities to maintain a higher average, whereas fraternities put less pressure on grades. If boys aren't interested in a course they won't bother studying for it whereas girls even without interest in the course, consider it more of an obligation to do the work. Out of state girls had more trouble getting into this school than boys and are therefore naturally better students."

Kathy Torrisi, '68, Bennington, Vermont - "The girls are more conscientious than the boys. The boys understand the material but they'd rather put down their own views while the girls put down what the teacher wants. The boys have a more practical application of what they learned, and they understand the subject but the girls only learn facts and don't know how to apply them."

Robert Barnaba

Robert Barnaba, '66, North Bergen, N.J. - "A girl coming from out-of-state must have higher grades to get in. She has to be top-notch, usually in the top 10% of her class to get in. Quiet hours are more rigidly enforced in the girls dormitories."

Philip Steckler, '67, Scarsdale, N.Y. - "Guys have more to do. They have more places to go. The girls who are more limited and can't get away from this place have more time to sit down and get to work. I definitely don't think they get higher grades because they are more conscientious."

Should Students Adjust?

By Ed Schwartz

Students are often urged to "adjust."

With the collapse last year of the educational philosophy of an entire decade at Berkeley and elsewhere, college administrators are going to have a few adjustment problems of their own. Higher education has changed. It is no longer a savored luxury of the elite, as it may have been 25 years ago. Nor is it the protracted guidebook for technocrats encouraged in the '50's. The numerous popular attacks on specialization have succeeded sufficiently that even students are beginning to value liberal arts in the classroom and open discussion outside of it. This has come as a shock to those accustomed to the complacency of the "Ivory tower intellectual" for whom a university was little more than a lab, a library, a classroom, and a bunk. It's time they recovered.

In the days of elite education, there would have been some merit to the administrative contention that powerful student governments or vocal undergraduate political organizations were not an essential part of a campus. Learning was pursued either "for its own sake" or for a job. Even today, Dean Griswold of Harvard Law School could boast to a group of Oberlin alumni that "our students are too busy worrying about torts to get concerned about 'their role in the decision-making process'." His was the clearest statement of what I would call the "our Negroes are happy" school of college administrators.

Griswold, however, presides over one of the last strongholds of the elite. The relationship between the law student and the university is vertical. He has no social rules. He is not expected to "develop as a whole man," although he might. Chances are that he has his own apartment and lives independent of university facilities, except those which relate to his study of law. His concern with university decision-making merely reflects the university's unwillingness to make any decisions for him.

Undergraduate schools do not benefit from such laissez-faire policies. They boast large programs of extra-curricular activities to develop qualities of citizenship. They strive to uphold the moral standards of those enrolled. They may require that a student live in a college dorm, eat in a college dining hall, and obey a long list of college rules reprinted in a college handbook or tacked on a college wall. They may hire psychologists, special counselors, administrators of extra-curricular activities, even social directors. By their own admission, classroom education is only one part of their relationship to the student.

When an undergraduate accepts this premise, however, that student's involvement in policy is equally necessary to develop "qualities of citizenship" and that student action in local communities is a diserable adjunct to courses in the social sciences, the same administrators will revert to the elitist argument that "education should be confined to the classroom -- you have no business doing any of these things."

If I were a rabid leftist, I would brand such sophistry as a glaring example of Establishment hypocrisy. So as not to impugn motives, I would suggest that it represents an unwitting contradiction.

I do not object to a university which seeks to provide extra-curricular as well as classroom programs for its students. Indeed, as higher education is made available to large numbers and as course material replaces vocational training with "broad development," opportunities for action will be necessary for students to test conflicting theories through participation. But a university cannot confuse development with indoctrination, participation with manipulation, and expect a person trained in critical thought to accept. The student need only examine Napoleon's system on non-represented governments to evaluate the political position of his student government. A quick intake of Socrates' "Apology" should provide him an incentive for honest expression. And then there's that messy business of civil rights.

Therefore, the administrator must adjust. If he wants the American campus to become a laboratory for the "leaders of tomorrow," he must create a campus community in which qualities of leadership can be developed -- one which guarantees that a student opinion has some chance of implementation and which enables a student politico to work in the "real world" with the university's blessings. Otherwise, the administrator will discover that the student has learned his lessons too well.

Burlington Resident Performs Chamber Arts

Violinist Sadah Shuchart Start will perform Saturday evening, Feb. 19th, in the second Lane Chamber Arts concert of this sixth season. Not only has Mrs. Start been connected with the University itself, but she is also a resident of Burlington. Mrs. Start is a fine musician with an outstanding background and a professional in the truest sense.

She began studying at the age of five, and she was only sixteen when she received the first of four fellowships at Juilliard Graduate School. Among many honors she received are the Walter W. Naumberg Award and the Schubert Memorial. At nineteen, she was a soloist with the New York Philharmonic orchestra where she played the Brahms Concerto under the direction of Wilhelm Mengelberg.

After touring the U.S.A. and Canada with most of the major symphony orchestras, Mrs. Start taught here at UVM from 1946-1962. In 1964 she obtained her master's degree from Columbia where she is presently a doctoral candidate. Presently, she also participates as a soloist in the Vermont Philharmonic and gives private lessons in her Burlington studio.

Howard Bennett, Professor emeritus of our own Music Department, will accompany Mrs. Start in a well-chosen program including "Chaconne" of Bach, Cesar Franck's "Sonata in A" and dances by Dvorak-Kreisler and Brahms.

The Concert will begin at 8:30 p.m. and should be attended by all of fine professional art.

More preparations for the Walk.

Is Bigness Bad?

"Looked at objectively as a problem of organization, the modern university presents a formidable challenge alongside of which most problems of business or government seem easy. The university question, indeed, contains in a highly concentrated form the general challenge that confronts this society. When we are faced with exploding cities, or misused affluence, or traffic jams, or the proliferating complexity of higher education, we tend to raise a dispirited doubt about the worth of democratic and technological civilization. The doubt is sometimes expressed in a grim question: must more be worse?"

"That is never the right question about society in general or about the universities. Bigness as such is never the root of the trouble. Nor is progress as such. Nor affluence as such. Nor complexity as such."

"Must more be worse?" suggests that we might deliberately go back to a smaller, slower, poorer, and simpler society. In our hearts we know we won't. Yet persistent images from the past come between us and our present world, spoiling our appreciation of its opportunities and distracting us from efforts to reduce its grave defects by practical attention to the quality of change."

Cats Top Norwich Cadets 95-94 In Overtime

Layne Higgs scores two of his 27 points by driving through St. Michael's defense.

RINKMEN VICTORIOUS Face Powerful A.I.C. Sat. Over Norwich And UNH

In the last two games, Vermont's hockey fortunes have been on the upswing. The UVM skaters have downed an improved Norwich team, and finally, after nine games, mighty New Hampshire. In the Norwich game, the Cats had to contend with a fired-up Cadet team that had upset a powerful Merrimack team earlier in the week, five to four. The Vermont icemen, however, were equal to the challenge and built up an early four to nothing lead and held on the rest of the way to win. Sophomore star Lee Roy broke a personal scoring slump as he scored twice, bringing his season's total to sixteen. Also scoring for UVM were Chip Uihlein and Laddy Cook. As has been the case in previous games, Bobby Sausville was outstanding in the nets.

The hockey team then journeyed to Durham, New Hampshire to face the powerful Wildcats of UNH. In this game, UNH started off the scoring at the nine minute mark of the first period. The Cats tied the score on a break away goal by Marty Stevenson just before the period ended. In the second period, Curt Toby took a pass from Roy and beat UNH goalie Colin Clark to put UVM ahead two to one. The Wildcats of UNH, however, were not to be counted out, as Rothwell scored midway through the third period. No further scoring was done in regulation time, and the teams went into sudden death. At 2:28 of the overtime UNH's domination of UVM had ended, as Vermont's superlative sophomore, Lee Roy, lit the light for his seventeenth goal of the season. Goalie Bob Sausville was once again outstanding with thirty three saves, but it was a tremendous team effort that enabled the Cats to pull off the biggest upset since their return to the ranks of intercollegiate hockey, three years ago.

UVM, now 7-8 on the season, takes on a strong A.I.C. team next Saturday at home. This should prove to be an excellent game, as A.I.C. only lost to national power Northeastern by a score of seven to four.

The freshmen team was defeated by Norwich once again. The Kittens were down six to one after the first period, and spent the rest of the game trying to catch up. The Kittens put on a rally in the third period, but it was to no avail, as Norwich won going away, ten to five. Outstanding in the defeat were defensemen Pete Meyer and Bill Fous. Meyer scored two goals, one of them a spectacular 120 foot slapshot.

Swim And Ski Teams Away

By Steve Leveston

Last Saturday the Catamount swimming team suffered a setback at the hands of Yankee Conference rival UMass. The Redmen accumulated 53 points to the Cats 42. Although there was a considerable difference in score, the Vermont natators represented themselves well by setting a new 400 yard medley relay record of 4:02. Tom Miller and Pete Gross both turned in fine performances by taking firsts in the 100 yard freestyle and butterfly respectively.

This coming Saturday, the Cats will travel down to Storrs, Connecticut to face the UConn Huskies. Although the Huskies were defeated by the Redmen 48 to 47, Coach Leggett calls them a stronger team, and expects to have a very close meet.

After finishing fifth this past weekend at the Dartmouth Winter Carnival, Bob Stone's skiers are off to Williamstown, Mass. this Friday to take part in the Williams Carnival. The Cats were in third place after one day's competition at Dartmouth, but weak performances in the jumping and giant slalom dropped the team's standing by the end of the meet.

Co-captain Dave Hosmer's third place in the cross-country event was the top showing for any Catamount, but Don Miller, Pete Donaghy, and Pete Sargent looked good for the Alpine squad.

Besides the Williams Carnival on Friday and Saturday, Stone hopes to send some team members to the USEASA jumping and Cross Country combined Championship at Brattleboro, Vt. on Saturday and Sunday.

SPALTER SCORES WINNING POINT IN FINAL SECONDS

By Bob Bloomenthal

VERMONT 95 - NORWICH 94

The Cats were forced to make up a sixteen point second half deficit against the Horseman in order to pull off a thrilling overtime victory. Ken Spalter was the hero of the game by scoring the winning basket on a drive with less than ten seconds to go. For Norwich, hot shot sophomore Paul Stutkowski was the leading scorer with 25 points while Bob Byrne added 24. Spalter, Stutkowski's man on defense, also had 25 points for the night while Milt Goggans added 18 for the Cats.

The University of Vermont basketball team will be out for revenge this coming Tuesday night when the Cats face a rematch with St. Michael's College at Memorial Auditorium. In the first game of this intense rivalry the Michaelmen edged out a 76-71 overtime win over Vermont.

In this game the Cats were forced to battle back most of the game and finally tied the score at the end of regulation time. In the overtime, personal fouls caught up with the home troops and the Knights used a good bench to win it, 76-71. Layne Higgs was the big man in the game as his outside shooting accounted for 27 points. Ken Spalter did a good job feeding Higgs and added 17 himself. Dick Falkenbush was the high scorer for St. Mike's with 20 points.

In order to win the rematch at the Auditorium, Vermont will need a good team effort. Co-captain Milt Goggans must stay out of foul trouble, Higgs must keep up his shooting eye, Spalter must maintain his floor leadership, Boardman and Librera must continue crashing the boards and provide scoring support, and Bruce Hanna must be able to come off the bench to spark his teammates.

St. Michael's is a very tough team to beat, especially on their home court. Falkenbush is the top scoring threat, but he gets the very essential support from Bobby Kryger, Bruce Stryhas, and Bob Joyce to offset any concentrated defense on him alone. Jim Dooley is a tough rebounder and the Michaelmen have a very strong bench in Ralph Coleman, Dave Gleason, Tom McKenna, and Dick Navin.

A victory for Vermont would mean a possible tie for the State Series crown, but a defeat would eliminate the team from the race. For the Cats, Spalter goes into the game as leading scorer with a 15.6 point average. Milt Goggans and Layne Higgs are next at 14.3, but Higgs has averaged 22.0 over the last four games. Librera is also in double figures at 11.6 ppg. For St. Mike's, Falkenbush tops the team at about 22 points a game, but Kryger, Stryhas, and Joyce are also in double figures.

RHODE ISLAND 97
VERMONT 77

The Cats stayed with the highly-touted Rams for all but the last eight minutes of this one before the Yankee-Conference leaders pulled away. Layne Higgs had the hot hand in the first half as he scored 19 points and kept UVM within five at the half. Higgs finished with 24 and Kenny Spalter contributed 16 points for Vermont. URI had three big scorers in Steve Chubin (29), Art Stephanson (22), and Henry Carey (21).

Mayland's Feats Lead Track Team

The University of Vermont indoor track team hosts Union College in the Guterson Field House this Saturday and Coach Archie Post hopes for another top performance from captain Don Mayland to lead the team on to victory.

Mayland has taken ten first places in the team's first three meets, two of which have been victories. The senior Merrick, N.Y., native has sacrificed concentrating in his specialty, the pole vault, so that his versatility could aid the team by entering (and winning) more events.

Last Saturday against Boston State Mayland broke his own UVM cage record in the 55 yard hurdles with a 6.5 clocking. Other record-setters for the Cats in this meet were sophomore Ed Childs in the high jump (6'4 1/2") and Pete Jones in the two mile run with a time of 10:19.5.

Mayland has been the team's best in the 50 yard dash, the pole vault, and both hurdles, but his teammates who came through in the other events were just as necessary for the victories. Pete Nolan has been undefeated in the long jump this year as has Childs in the high jump. Other winners have been Pete Stickney in the shot put, Walt Stowell in the mile, Jones in the two mile, and a mile relay team of Vin De-Cesaris, Nolan, Jim Dedman, and John Horton.

This Saturday's meet will start at 1:00.

FROSH COMPETE TOO

Coach Post may have another Mayland coming to the varsity next season in freshman Richie Kabat. In the first two frosh meets, which the Kittens split, Kabat won six events. The talented yearling emerged victorious in the long jump, the dash (twice) the low hurdles, and the pole vault (twice).

Also showing sinning form for the Kittens have been Weston Cate (high jump), Dan Winer (35 pound weight and shot put), and Avery Seaman (discus). The freshmen will be competing against the Union frosh simultaneously with the varsity meet this Saturday.

KAKE WALK '66-ANOTHER STEP IN THE GRAND TRADITION

Festivities Infect Campus

By Judy Triplett

Without a doubt, this great weekend is our best known and grandest non-academic feature. Alumni come from many distant states, undergraduates import friends from other universities, and relatives of students make the trip to Vermont to investigate this thrilling phenomenon called Kake Walk. Seems as though everyone wants to see Vermont's magnificent winter weekend. And who can blame them?

A HOLIDAY UNEQUALLED ON ANY CAMPUS

Winter carnivals as offered by other universities cannot compare to the thrill and splendor of our own Kake Walk. It has often been said that nothing can match the shimmer of excitement that runs up and down one's spine when the lights dim and two figures dressed in silks begin the strenuous precision of The Walk. The synchronization perfected and manifested by our Kake Walkers is more than entertainment; Kake Walk has become a UVM tradition.

A SUBSTITUTE FOR MILITARY BALL

Since 1893, when a military ball was cancelled and the students came up with the idea of have a "Kake Walk" as a replacement, these festivities have been anxiously anticipated and enthusiastically received at UVM. Our weekend of Feb. 24-26 now ranks as the oldest intercollegiate winter festival in the United States.

It is actually the various fraternities who produce and coordinate Kake Walk, and who have the greatest part in it. Fraternity men do most of the walking; the intricate snow sculptures are built by fraternities and sororities (and the Independents!); and countless fraternity parties spark the weekend's entertainment. Nevertheless, the splendor and delight that is Kake Walk belongs to all who are involved in it, be it the walkers themselves or Freda Freshman and her favorite Aunt Agatha from East Padunk.

HUNDREDS PARTICIPATE -- BOTH DIRECTLY & INDIRECTLY

However, the many people directly involved in Kake Walk -- the Greeks who walk and who present their original skits; the poster makers and publicity people; the chairmen and the coaches; the king and queen candidates; the members of the band at the walking; the entertainers at the ball and jazz festival; those who plan the parties; the judges of the walking; those who distribute and who check tickets; the many who lend their talents to ice sculpture; -- all who are actively involved, who really participate in making the weekend a success, are greatly outnumbered by those whose parts are indirect.

The hundreds of people who have no share in the actual production of Kake Walk, the ones who fill the stands to be delightfully entertained through the efforts of others, also have a claim on Kake Walk. This fantastic weekend belongs to all who take pleasure from the experiences offered and who enjoy the entertainment provided.

EVEN DOWNTOWN BURLINGTON GOES INTO THE ACT

It is surprising to note just how many people are involved in Kake Walk in one way or another. Even discounting the spectators, hundreds are involved. Those whose indirect involvement is the farthest removed from any direct participation still must be said to have some connection. For example, there is hardly a store in downtown Burlington that is left untouched by Kake Walk.

Last minute shoppers find that the fashion shops are literally sold out of gowns. Stores are swamped with giddy co-eds looking for "just the right thing" to impress their favorite date on this most important of weekends. I wonder if the men's stores are this hectic?

Flower shops fill hundreds of orders for flowers for as many fortunate co-eds. Hotels and motels are filled to capacity with people who take this opportunity both to enjoy Kake Walk and to take advantage of our splendid skiing areas. Hertz and the taxi services are kept busy; the Waterman operator puts through more calls during the weeks prior to Kake Walk than at any other time. And these are only the people that come readily to mind! Certainly there are many more.

AND SO THE CELEBRATION HAS GROWN

So it is that a tradition that began at Vermont in 1893 has grown to encompass hundreds upon hundreds of people who are somehow connected with it.

This year, as every year, Kake Walk will seem more wonderful than ever before. That's the way it should be, for Kake Walk is presented for all of us. It is part of all of us, and we are justified in the pride that we take in our glorious winter weekend.

The Glorious Culmination

Brief Splendor Follows Months Of Toil

By Judy Beeber

The moment we have all been waiting for has arrived, when the lights dim in Patrick Gymnasium and the multi-colored kakewalkers do their annual routines. The moment when the white handkerchief is dropped culminates the months of time, effort, and sweat which the walkers have devoted to perfecting their performance.

For a two and one half minute performance, one may wonder how much went into the preparation for this short exercise of skillfulness. Most of the walkers started practicing in September or October. An hour or more a day is devoted to exercising in order to condition the muscles of the legs and arms to endure the strenuous activity involved in walking. Endurance is built up by running, walking and stretching.

During the months previous to Kake Walk, certain restrictions are placed on the walkers. Of course, any sport such as skiing, which enhances the possibility of breaking a limb or a bone, is prohibited. Smoking is out of the question since it shortens one's endurance.

Two boys from each fraternity are selected on the basis of height, weight and agility. The emphasis in the performance is the exactness of timing and the perfectability of the various motions involved. The kicks and hand motions must exactly follow the legal requirements. A good performance is exemplified by two walkers whose timing is so perfect that they look like one.

As in any competition, a winner must be chosen. So it's fitting that the Kake Walk Committee has set up a system of scoring the essentials of walking. Those who adhere to the requirements score the highest. The position of the head and shoulders counts twenty five points. The exactness of the kick is worth thirty points and overall smoothness and teamwork, which is all important merits forty points.

Standing on the sidelines during the walker's performance is the coach who often does not receive the credit he deserves. The coach is usually a former walker or has acquired his knowledge of the skills involved from friends and relatives who have walked sometime in the past. In the past months, he has devoted much time and effort, drilling his walkers so that each movement is precise. During the routine, on the night of Kake Walk, he provides the spirit and encouragement needed under the tremendous stress.

The kake walkers on February 25th and 26th will try their best to make Kake Walk 1966 an exciting and thrilling experience. May the best men win!

Cohen, Ostrum And DeCesaris Engineer 69th Kake Walk

David C. Cohen, Robert Ostrum, and Vincent De Cesaris are engineering the festivities of the 69th Annual Kake Walk.

IN CHARGE OF THE MONEY

David C. Cohen

David C. Cohen, from Burlington, Vt., is handling all the monetary problems of this year's festivities as Financial Director. David, a psychology major, is a brother of Phi Sigma Delta, where he has served as treasurer. He was co-editor of the Freshman Review, and has participated in the activities of the Vermont CYNIC, Billings Center Governing Board, Freshman Orientation, Advanced ROTC, Professor Evaluation Committee, Homecoming Committee, and served as Assistant Publicity Director of last year's Kake Walk festivities. Dave was a member of Key and Serpent, and is presently a member of Boulder Society, Ethan Allen Rifles and is a distinguished military student. He plans to attend medical school after graduation.

Robert Ostrum, from Florham Park, New Jersey, is this year's Production Director. Bob coordinates the work of the others as well as fulfilling the responsibility of co-ordinating the skits and walking, and securing the orchestra for the ball and the jazz groups for the jazz concert. Bob is a brother of Sigma Phi Epsilon, where he has served as Vice President. He is a member of the Inter-fraternity Council, and was Assistant Production Director of last year's Kake Walk. He has also made the Dean's List for five semesters. Presently, Vinnie is President of Boulder Society, Treasurer of Varsity Club, and a member of the varsity track team. Majoring in mathematics, Vincent will go on to medical school.

F. Peter Ambrose

Pete is a member of Key and Serpent and the Commerce and Economics Honorary. He is majoring in industrial management and plans to go on to graduate school under the Reserve Officers' Training Corps program.

Advisors Lend Helping Hand

Professor Izzo

One of the most important behind-the-scenes men of Kake Walk this year, and for the past two years, is Joseph Izzo, Professor of mathematics. As one of the faculty advisors to the '66 Kake Walk, Dr. Izzo takes an enthusiastic interest in his position. He feels that this is an all-campus project; in fact, says Dr. Izzo, few people realize how much work and how many people are involved to make this weekend a success.

Mr. Charles Wolf

Faculty And Administration Chosen To Judge KW Events

Each year during Kake Walk scores of trophies are given to houses and individuals for such things ranging from first place in walking to third place in snow sculpture. The recipients of these coveted awards are determined by a panel of judges made up of members of the faculty, and administration.

This year's judges are as follows:

FRIDAY NIGHT

Prof. William Metcalf
Prof. Paul Moody
Dean Malcolm Severance
Major Charles Spaulding

SATURDAY NIGHT

Coach Robert Clifford
Prof. David Hill
Mr. Lawrence Kimball
Prof. Milton Nadworny

SKITS

Mr. Douglas Hanau
Prof. Reginald Milbank
Prof. Stanislaw Staron

Prof. Donald Gregg
Prof. Roy Julow

Major Albert Wenz

Presentations of the awards this year will be made as follows:

FRIDAY NIGHT

Ross Fuller, I.F.C. President
Skits
Mayor Francis Cain - Walking (Preston Cup)
Ethel Starbird, representative from National Geographic

SATURDAY NIGHT

Governor Philip Hoff - Skits (Marston Cup)
Lt. Governor John Daley - Walking (Preston Cup)
Dean Anne Rankin Harris - Sorority Snow Sculpture
Dean Roland Patzer - Fraternity Snow Sculpture
Kake Walk Directors - Eldridge Trophy
President Shannon McCune - Lechnyr Trophy

Every year the judges have a difficult chore to choose the winning walkers, the best skit, sculpture and poster. Sometimes they must resort to unorthodox, but fair, method to decide.

Mr. Paterson

Mr. Gordon Paterson, as stated previously, is the former Financial Advisor to Kake Walk. This year due to an over-abundance of work he was forced to resign his position. Nevertheless, Mr. Paterson still has kept an active interest in the Committee. He has attended all of their meetings, and has been of great assistance to his successor.

EDITORIAL...

This is Kake Walk weekend, a time when alumni return to their alma mater to reminisce, a time when parents journey to Burlington to visit with children and to see UVM, a time when the Trustees meet, a time to look about in our fantasy world to reflect and project.

These groups are the backbone of our university. The alumni make their contributions, the parents pay the rising tuition costs, and the Trustees are continually planning for the betterment of UVM.

What better time than now to present a topic which has been on our minds for a long time!

As one looks across campus, many new buildings or renovations can be noticed (Bailey, Billings, and Votey) and some structures have been razed (East Hall). New building encompassing all phases of academic life are soon to be erected (a life sciences building, a new bookstore, and a co-ed dorm). The results are a new, modern look for our campus.

However, let us be more practical and look at a phase of life that we feel has been ignored by the Administration, namely health facilities. Without one's health, how can one expect to keep up with today's quickening pace of education?

Keeping in line with current CYNIC policy, we offer the following suggestions as constructive criticism concerning our infirmary.

With meager facilities, its staff has made an attempt to perform its functions to the best of its ability. But, this is not enough! The infirmary, with its present set-up, is sufficient for first aid and colds treatment, shots or physical exams. However, unfortunately it is not equipped to handle any major illness or serious problem. A doctor is not even available at all hours, and the nurses cannot and should not function in the capacity of doctors. Therefore, if a student needs a doctor immediately, he may have to wait a considerable length of time before getting to see one.

We suggest that a student wing be added to the Mary Fletcher Hospital, or perhaps at minimum a clinic be established and set aside specifically for students so that they could go there and be treated immediately with proper care and attention.

In this way, the present infirmary would no longer be necessary, and all attention could be focused on the new student clinic.

We of the CYNIC and the student body wish all our visitors a most happy Kake Walk and hope that you will give our suggestion due consideration and take the appropriate action immediately.

Kake Walk Behavior Motives

EDITOR'S NOTE:

This article appeared in the Kake Walk CYNIC in 1954.

By Prof. Benjamin Murdock
Prof. Murdock was a former Associate Professor of Psychology at the University of Vermont.

The behavior of college students is always something of a mystery to onlookers; it is especially so on a party weekend such as Kake Walk.

Here are six possible reasons why undergraduates behave as they do.

1. Emotional Outlet. The pressures and tensions that build up in the course of the daily life and activities of nearly everyone are certainly pretty well discharged, it only temporarily, by a weekend such as Kake Walk. While the immediate pressure of tests and exams is perhaps not too great at this particular time, it is certainly not completely absent, and the weekend can function as a release for these stresses.

2. Escape. Kake Walk serves as an escape or change from the daily routine of college life. No classes, books, term papers, or tests to worry about; indeed, a veritable utopia. Change per se is often and especially one of this sort. In the same vein this presents an opportunity for the individual to escape from himself, something people often like to do.

3. Prestige. Another important motivation may be the need for prestige, recognition, self-enhancement. Appearing with an attractive date, attending an exclusive party, showing to the best advantage may provide a much-needed lift to one's ego. This can happen both on the individual and on the group level.

4. Group Identification. Part of belonging to any group (the college itself, a fraternity or sorority, a small social clique) consists in taking part in group activities simply as a member of the group itself. Fraternities, for instance, are very active this weekend, and taking part in their activities makes one feel he is more a member of the group.

5. Institutional Behavior. Kake Walk is as much a part of UVM as church suppers and fourth of July are to Americans in general. And just as people traditionally have bonfires and fireworks on the fourth of July so there are dances, parties, and the walking at Kake Walk.

6. Hostility and Aggression. There is probably in most people at certain times a resentment against those in authority who often times, directly or indirectly, frustrate the desires of the individual. Kake Walk, with its general loosening of the conventional restrictions and the occasional anti-social actions of the participants, can be a situation in which the individual finds a socially-accepted way of venting his aggression against society in general and the college in particular.

KAKE WALK

Thurs. - K W Ball

Fri. - Jazz Concert
Skits and Walking
Fraternity PartiesSat. - Basketball Games
Skits and Walking
Fraternity Parties

Kake Walk is here! Months in the making (taking grades with it), a cast of thousands, starring 32 fraternity men, 2 independents, and 3 fraternities "selected" to present skits. What a show!

Kake Walk! A two day vacation, only one day less than Thanksgiving (one more than last year), not so good as Washington's Birthday and Good Friday though, but then they are national holidays.

Kake Walk! Three days with no homework. Naturally no professor or instructor would be so cruel as to give work over "The Weekend." No tests next week! Yes, nothing to interfere with the wonders of Kake Walk.

Kake Walk! UVM's population is doubled. All the girls have dates, all the guys get to see (etc.) their girl-friends, and everybody has a blast.

Kake Walk! What fond memories when it's over. What headaches! Of course those headaches come from cheering and screaming at the walking. After all, UVM is "dry" and no self respecting student would dare defy the law. We haven't all reached the magic age yet. We haven't all gone through that magic, one day, transformation into an adult.

Kake Walk! A UVM Tradition. Why do we all attend every year? What, not go to Kake Walk? Don't be ridiculous, everyone goes to Kake Walk. You're nobody if you don't. It's been the main topic of conversation for at least four weeks and will remain so for at least as long. Now ask yourself: Why do I like Kake Walk so much? What's so great about it? If you come up with any good answers, let me know.

Kake Walk! The restaurants, motels, hotels, and UVM itself make a fortune. The students, of course, spend that fortune. Another question: How much will you spend on Kake Walk? Twenty dollars? At least. Thirty or more? Probably. Now, ask yourself, "Could I have spent that money better?" I don't mean more constructively, that's no fun, but I mean could you have spent an equal amount of money on something else and gotten more enjoyment out of it? As a past Sceptic once said, "Guys, think of what twenty dollars will buy in Montreal." Girls - well, you get off pretty easily anyway. Maybe girls should split Kake Walk expenses or maybe we should run Kake Walk during Merp Week. No? Why not?

Kake Walk! Everybody is your friend, you are everybody's friend, and all the rivalries are good and clean (not like Greek Week, I hope).

Kake Walk! Billings is still a student center and there is still a dearth of noise. But there is little or no studying. That is good. Everybody is having fun.

Kake Walk! The biggest of the big and the best of the best. To all of my readers (if I still have any) have a wonderful Kake Walk (if you like that sort of thing) and remember -- Don't let anything get in the way of total enjoyment, because that's what Kake Walk is for. To hell with the exams, what do they expect the Monday after?

NOTE: Anyone desiring to praise, harangue, comment on, answer, or criticize the Sceptic is more than welcome. Merely write (if you are able) down what you desire and send it to The Sceptic, c/o The CYNIC.

Kake Walk Delights

Many the student with "Kake" time in sight,
Would give anything to "Walk" on that night.

Many are eager, but two get the break,
To bring home the cup, and of course the "Kake".

Weeks of practice and instructions so clear,
For that night of glory and the roaring cheer.

The spectra of color as teams come into sight,
Will always make it a remembered night.

Friends on the sidelines cheering them on,
Letting them know they really belong.

To that fraternity of men, not of boys,
Walking "Fo Da Kake" and all its joys.

The beat of "Cotton Babes" ringing in your ear, Heralds "The" event of the UVM year.

The King and Queen, The Kake Walk Ball,
Jazz Concert, Peerade, and that's not all.

The invitation which went to someone dear,
Was answered in person and brought very near.

The years will go on as time has before,
And no one will forget that "Walk" on the floor.

Placement Barometer

By Douglas O. Hanau, Director of Placement

Know Thyself

Your first job has to do with knowing yourself. Take an inventory of yourself, check up on your assets and your liabilities.

Begin with your assets. This is fairly easy, for you should have a clear idea of the things you can do well. You will not find it easy to estimate your liabilities, yet no one will know them as well as you do. Curiously enough, your assets and liabilities tend in the same direction, and after you have given the matter some thought you often discover that what you believe to be liabilities can actually be assets. As a matter of fact, nearly every quality you possess can be an asset if you learn to use it in the right place.

Looking back over your years in high school and here at UVM, you should be able to recall the subjects in which you excelled and those in which you did not do well. College students frequently do not know what they want to do, but nearly everyone knows what he does not want to do. To take a job in a field in which you know that you cannot do good work is to give yourself a serious handicap. Time spent in forethought is far better employed than time wasted in the wrong field.

It is a safe rule to follow your natural bent. You will devote more energy and more enthusiasm to the field that is most congenial to you and consequently achieve more in it. We take it for granted that business will select carefully the employees it needs, but too few people take it equally for granted that the employee should select carefully the business entered.

An analysis of your personality requires some detached and orderly thinking. At this point I am speaking of your personality as you reveal it in your actions. That is the only criterion by which your future employer can judge you. Whatever you do, you will be wise to recall that any shortcomings you discover in this way can be rectified. When you find where you fall short you must correct the situation. You must know what your weaknesses and what your strengths are in setting out to get a job.

You should judge yourself on the following points:

- 1) Ability to get along with people;
- 2) Dependability;
- 3) Initiative;
- 4) Capacity for hard work;
- 5) Resourcefulness;
- 6) Enthusiasm;
- 7) Facility at expression;
- 8) Ability to take criticism;
- 9) Cooperativeness;
- 10) Self-confidence;
- 11) Honesty;
- 12) Stick-to-it-ness;
- 13) Responsibility;
- 14) Creativity;
- 15) Empathy;
- 16) Competitiveness;
- 17) Attractive personal appearance;
- 18) Friendliness.

You may wonder where to begin in making an analysis of your general qualities. The following questions might help:

- 1) Do you prefer to work with people or things?
- 2) Do you enjoy handling tools, working things with your hands?
- 3) As a youngster, did you make trades with others - and so forth? Did you get the best of the bargain?
- 4) Which of your abilities receives the most praise?
- 5) For which characteristics or habits do people criticize you?
- 6) Have you ever been chosen for positions of leadership?
- 7) Have you sought or avoided positions of leadership?
- 8) Which courses have you enjoyed most? Disliked most?
- 9) Do you like working with figures or doing detail work?
- 10) Do you find it easier to express yourself in writing or in speech?
- 11) What kind of work experiences have you had and what have you learned from these experiences.
- 12) Where do you see yourself at this point in your life?

With these questions as a starting point, you should be able to learn something about your general tendencies. After you have made a careful analysis of yourself, check it against the observations of the people who know you best.

In conclusion, I would like to pass on this observation that one of our chief problems today is not a lack of the right graduate; it is that the right graduates are often in the wrong places or that - as is most probable - their best capacities have never been tapped and are not being used at all. The chief trouble lies in the whole haphazard approach to job hunting. The time to find a suitable job is when you start. The longer you wait the more difficult it is to get into your chosen field.

Few young people have the courage to do the thing they want to do. A lifework, too often, is selected entirely on the social acceptability of the occupation instead of on the ground of the individual's aptitudes for the occupation. Then too, parents and friends attempt to influence the final decision.

But, remember, this is your life and you should decide and must decide what you want to do with it.

Next week: The Job Fields.

Blood Drive

GIVE

Last fall 407 members of the university community were generous enough to donate a pint of blood to the Red Cross Blood drive, sponsored by the Ethan Allen Rifles. The set goal of 350 pints was topped, but now the stakes are higher. We are now out to set a new record in the state of Vermont - 500 pints -- with a three day drawing, something never before attempted.

Even though one might first feel uneasy about giving blood, it is actually a rewarding experience to know that one has given blood. If you have any doubts, ask one of the 407 student and faculty members who gave blood in the fall. They will all be back to roll up their sleeves once again.

You probably will never know who you have helped by giving blood, but this is not the important thing. The important thing is that you have answered the call as a responsible citizen.

We hope to see you at Billings Center during the following dates:

- Wed., March 2
8:30 a.m. - 3:00 p.m.
Thurs., March 3
8:30 a.m. - 4:00 p.m.
Fri., March 4
11:00 a.m. - 3:30 p.m.

Make an appointment by calling Ext. 343 or by signing the appointment sheet. Those who gave last fall do not need parental permission slips, but new donors under 21 will.

Come over to save a life and afterwards have a free sandwich, some coffee or milk.

The Best Of Best

By Professor James J. Best

Welcome to UVM's annual mid-winter bacchanal - Kake Walk. This is the time of year when old grads return to reminisce about past exploits while the current undergraduate body struggles vainly to have something to reminisce about. For one who is neither in his childhood nor old enough to return for a second childhood Kake Walk is inanity run wild.

The color and pageantry of the Ball, the skits and the Walking are undeniable. The snow sculptures, fresh-washed boys in coats and ties, and long-legged girls in heels add excitement. But nothing matches the sensation of sitting in a darkened gym, concentrating on pairs of satin-striped candy canes in green face, chanting "One, Two, Three . . ." with a thousand-voiced Greek chorus. Block after block of spectators roar as their Walkers enter the spotlight, patiently awaiting the off-tempo strains of the band. Kick, pivot, kick, step, two, three, four. And as they march a thousand eyes follow them, watching the same routines they saw as freshmen, sophomores, juniors, and seniors. Yet the audience still chants "One, Two, Three . . ." It's not the walkers who are the attraction at Kake Walk - the Rockettes are better and the right sex - but the audience.

After the Walking the audience heads for the parties, as lemmings head for the ocean. The gaiety of the weekend becomes ritualized - the frozen smile, the uncounted drinks, a kaladeiscope of sight and sound blending and blurring one day into the next. Sunday is quiet. Buses depart with red-eyed long-legged girls combing mussed hair. Boys, some now men, begin the long climb back to humanity.

Monday is a total loss. The weekend is an alcoholic haze and memories carry an aftertaste of scotch and lipstick. If students appear in class, their presence is merely physical. Those who have exams that week argue there wasn't enough time to study while those without dates for the weekend insist there was plenty of time. By Wednesday or Thursday Kake Walk is only 360 days away.

Is Kake Walk really worth it? In a way, yes. As one of my students said, "Kake Walk provides the needed break between the beginning of the semester and Easter vacation." For with Kake Walk the University belches and clears its system.

The Great Tradition—

Off To A Hell-Raisin' Start...

One of UVM's oldest and best-loved traditions is here again! Like any other tradition, Kake Walk has had many things happen to it, to make it the event we know today.

Our first "winter carnival" was held in 1893, when the Military Ball was cancelled. Instead, skits were held which were considered both amusing and financially successful (net profit: $165!).

In 1894, "Walkin' fo' de Kake" was initiated. This old Southern harvest dance featured a pair of plantation workers competing for a cake.

Kake Walk was considered to be too wild by the administration (they seem to have been conditioned by now,) and the event was not repeated until 1897, when it was used to raise funds for the football team.

The Kake Walk was held in the "Loft" of the Old Mill. A keg of beer, furnished for the occasion, was the cause of some embarrassment the next morning when some of the beer trickled down into the old chapel below. The incident sealed the doom of Kake Walks '95 and '96 when the faculty lowered the ban.

Awarding of the Cake.

Wallace Cummings Printing Co., St. Albans, Vt.

...And A Riotious End

Riots and brawls seemed invariably to close early Kake Walks, whether over the rightful ownership of the cake or for other reasons as potent, accounts fail to mention. A writer, in one account of that memorable affair in Chaucerian verse, was also able to account for the cake, which evidently became so badly battered in the melle, that it was unsuitable for any purpose other than a handy and effective means of prolonging the fracas. To quote the last four lines of his poem:

"So passe the nyte with many a lively broyle
Untill the cak with wayting longe y-spoyle.
And at the last, I guess nooon did gett
The cak for which, perchance, they're skrappyng yett."

Winning Team - 1912

Walking Evolves

It is odd, but in the early years of Kake Walk, the actual walking was not the highlight of the holiday. In fact, in 1904, only two couples participated in the walking; one was from the Medical School, the other was from the academic section.

By 1910, up to six couples walked. As a novelty, the walkers had bales of cotton in their paths. At an appointed time, pickaninies jumped out from behind the bales and joined in the dance. Apparently, it was not too successful.

APATHY

During another lag in spirit in 1911, the following appeared in the CYNIC:

"Any man who does not take enough interest in his college to enter - and do that back-bending, knee-bending, glorious old Vermont walk - is unworthy to be a son of Vermont and should have his diploma denied to him at the end of his four year sojourn here." Apparently it was Kake Walk or else!

One of the best stunts on record was put on in 1912 by Alpha Zeta, honorary agricultural society. A gong struck! Through the utter blackness of the hall appeared miscellaneous arms, legs, a head and dismembered bodies of a phosphorescent character, all of which kept disappearing and appearing here and there in remote parts of the hall. Suddenly a comet with a fiery tail shot through the air. Instantly all the dissected bodies vanished and in the middle of the hall there arose a huge, glowing devil which danced through the darkness with wierd, fantastic steps and then gradually faded away into invisibility. The lights flashed on. Not a sign of apparatus or of human life was to be seen on the floor!

CHARITY DRIVE

Kake Walk proved itself versatile in 1918 when all proceeds from the weekend's activities were turned over to the Red Cross. There were some patriotic innovations in the walking, too. One pair of walkers carried knitting and worked for the soldiers as they walked. Another pair was rolled into the gym in a watermelon. To complete the picture of Kake Walk in wartime, a collapsible dirigible was floated from one end of the gym to the other.

The year 1921 saw the birth of a new cinema star - Kake Walk took to the silver screen. Movie photographers from the studios of Pathe, Universal, and Underwood photographed the walkers and the skits put on by Phi Mu Delta, Sigma Nu, and Delta Psi. Kake Walk 1952 ran a close second prestigewise, gaining coverage in Life magazine.

In 1934, the first king and queen elections were held, but, at that time, they were somewhat different than they are now. The candidates belonged to political parties and had to electioneer. Once the king was elected he could choose his queen by dice rolling. This was rather an un-queenlike procedure, so in 1936, the queens were also elected.

Despite the fact that Kake Walk was very firmly established and accepted by 1952, in that year, disputes over the blackening of the Walkers' faces caused some action to be taken. Charley Johnson, who introduced "Kake Walk," was invited to attend our Kake Walk in order to settle the dispute over whether or not to blacken the faces of the walkers. Unfortunately, he was unable to come because he had cataracts on both eyes, but it was inferred by his letter, that he found nothing wrong with the practice.

Downs And Ups

Kake Walk today, a guaranteed success almost before it is begun, makes it difficult to imagine a time when enthusiasm for the annual event could have been lacking. But the year 1900 came close to marking the end of Kake Walk. Initiated as a project to raise money for athletics, the majority of UVM students in 1900 felt that Kake Walk had outlived its usefulness. A group of supporters, led by the Vermont CYNIC, campaigned so vigorously that Kake Walk was reinstated.

PEERADE STARTED

A new feature was added to Kake Walk. This was a peerade, participated in by most students at the University, and characterized by a vast array of colorful costumes.

Kake Walk was already firmly established in 1901, when there was a record turn-out - 800 people. As was to be the custom for many years to come, Sherman's Band played. Five couples "walked fo' de kake."

NEW DATE

In 1903, instead of holding the holiday in the fall or winter, it was moved up to the closest weekend to Washington's birthday. Kake Walk was then held in the "new gym."

"COTTON BABES"

Cotton Babes is the theme tune of Kake Walk. It was written in 1904 by Percy Wenrich. This familiar song almost lost its claim to fame when every copy was destroyed by fire in the same year as it was written. From memory, however, Dr. Joseph Lechnyr rewrote the entire score for every instrument. In memory of his contribution to Kake Walk, the Joseph E. Lechnyr Memorial Award is presented to the fraternity, "which most nearly approaches the spirit and devotion of Kake Walk, exemplified by Joe Lechnyr."

Ghosts Of Kake Walk Past

Sunrise Hop Birth And Death

The following is a history of the Kake Walk Sunrise Hop. Question: how much have the times really changed?

1922 - Sunrise hop was run by the "Burlington Outing Club." The event was held at the Ethan Allen Club. Tickets limited to 100 couples, $5 per couple. Comments: Breakfast poor. Numbers too large. Event caused some unfavorable comments.

1923 - Sunrise Hop put on again by "Burlington Outing Club," the officers consisting of President, Roy L. Patrick; Secretary and Chairman of hop, J.O. Baxendale; Treasurer, Lyman P. Wood. Tickets limited to 75 couples. Price $5 per couple. Comments: Breakfast good and well taken care of by Bill Sharper, steward at the Ethan Allen Club, Chaperones, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Mayforth; Major and Mrs. Paul A. Larned. Unfavorable comments on the part of many because of reported intoxication on the part of a few. Because of the large number of comments it was decided not to hold the event next year.

1924 - However, a small bunch of medics staged Sunrise Hop at the Hotel Vermont. Comments: More unfavorable.

1925 - This event discussed by Board of Directors of Ethan Allen Club and by members of Ethan Allen Club Entertainment Committee to put it on as an Ethan Allen Club event. Finally voted not to have it.

Innovations Proposed - 1947

The fiftieth anniversary of the traditional Kake Walk has come and gone and, according to all the standards of efficiency, it's time to start thinking about next year's plans. (We'll probably never forget this one!) Perfection being the goal, we thought it might be a good idea if some criticisms of the Golden Anniversary were voiced to help eliminate some of the inevitable snags next year.

Katsy Haus decided that there is a great deal of room for improvement in the method set up for the sale of Kake Walk tickets. "The system of the medics buying alumni tickets, and also entering walkers for competition didn't seem quite fair. The dance was a success, but it would be better, I think, if it were either a formal or a masquerade. A combination of the two detracts from the individual merits of each."

Stu Evans had quite a bit to say from a slightly different angle. "In the first place, students should come to a masquerade in costume. This idea that they can't find anything to wear is a lot of hooey! The cost of concocting a masquerade costume is certainly a lot less than renting a tux and buying a corsage. According to the spirit of Kake Walk, every house is supposed to compete in the snow sculpturing. As I see it, failure to do so implies a lack of student interest. But," he said, "it was a good weekend, wasn't it!"

That bit of browsing around the Waterman Building routed out some of the more prevalent criticisms of the inmates. There is no doubt, though, that everyone whom I interviewed had a most enjoyable weekend. (Hmmm, 358 days until next Kake Walk, isn't it?)

Controversy Ensues

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the Editorial which appeared in the 1954 KW CYNIC. Ten years later action was taken and the light green face, pictured here, ensued.

The Result - 1964

This is addressed to all the "correct" young men of this University and to all their "chic" young women.

This is addressed to all UVM grads who live in the past and in the glory of memories.

This is an appeal to college men and women; it asks them to stop being clothes conscious and to start developing a "social conscience."

This is an appeal to college grads to forget their memories and to look at the present and to the future.

This is an appeal. Please create the emotions accompanying Kake Walk.

Let's have Kake Walk for the art-form of "walking" itself; tradition for the sake of tradition is nonsense.

Let us remove the mantle of antiquity; let us become conscious of the "slings and arrows" which are hurled at others; let us lose some of our callousness; let us help destroy the false Negro stereotype which "black-face" perpetuates.

Let us abolish "black-face"; let us assert our learning.

The Future?

Yes, Kake Walk has changed and will go on changing. While you listen to "Cotton Babes" and watch the walkers doing the same routines that were done 69 years ago, keep one eye on the past and one on the future. What will Kake Walk '67 be like?

K W Forever Changing

Skit '28

Kake Walk has come a long way since its uncertain beginning. We have seen the impromptu stage where most festivities were private, the Armory Days (when Kake Walk was held on the present site of the Fletcher Library), the Stage where the fraternities put on stunts for which there was generally little preparation, from these stages, we have arrived at our present level of careful planning and elaborate execution of plans.

VARIETY IN KAKE WALKS

And so Kake Walk survived, and grew, and changed. At various times Kake Walk has included a sugar-on-snow party, a masquerade ball, and a winter sports competition. There were Kake Walks that lasted only one night, Kake Walks that saw women doing the walking, and even one Kake Walk where curfew was extended to allow for a sunrise dance after the walking, where refreshments were served in the wee small hours of the morning and breakfast served at sunrise. Unlikely to appear again is the photograph snapped of Ira Allen in 1958. That dignified gentleman was photographed on his pedestal, his right arm clasping a whiskey bottle, while across his chest he bore a sign saying "No Dry Kake Walk."

forget about General Electric.

We don't have any place where you can curl up and snooze away the next forty years of your career. There are no quiet little nooks in any of General Electric's 130 operating businesses in 19 countries round the world.

But if you're the wide-awake type, G.E. can provide the excitement to keep you that way. Your first assignment may be helping us find applications for a whole new family of plastics recently developed by G.E. Or you may be working at Cape Kennedy on the Apollo moon program. Or you may be working on the marketing team for a new home appliance.

One thing is certain: You'll be working. You'll have plenty of responsibility. What you won't have is a chance to doze off in the prime years of your career.

Talk to the man from G.E. when he visits campus. Come to General Electric, where the young men are important men.

Cotton Babes Forever!

Every year, as George Washington's birthday and Kake Walk approach, the UVM campus is filled with the strains of Percy Wenrich's "Cotton Babes." Since 1913 "Cotton Babes" has been the theme song for Kake Walk.

At the time "Cotton Babes" was popular, it was a favorite Kake Walking melody. Once a year, Percy Wenrich's song relives its past glory.

WENRICH IS COMPOSER OF MANY FAMILIAR SONGS

A fact little known in Vermont is that the composer of "Cotton Babes" was one of the most famous and productive songwriters of the 1910's and 20's. Wenrich is still remembered by music lovers for his biggest hits which included "Moonlight Bay," "Put On Your Old Gray Bonnet," and "When You Wore a Tulip and I Wore a Big Red Rose." When "Cotton Babes" became lege to study the organ. However, once he had been removed from the watchful eyes of his parents, he broke away from his interest in the organ and began writing popular songs. As is the way with many young artists, Wenrich's first attempts were unsuccessful. His first break came when Frank Buck of Buck and Carney Music Publishers gave Wenrich the opportunity to write a song about Africa. Buck, having just returned from Africa, thought there might be potential in such a song and even supplied the young writer with the title, "Ashy Africa." Along with this publication was another song, "Just Because I'm From Missouri." His immediate success from these songs established Wenrich in the songwriting business.

WROTE SONGS ADVERTISING GIMBEL'S DEPT. STORE

When his profession was on the downgrade and Wenrich was about to return home to Joplin, he landed a job plugging songs in the music department of Gimbel's Milwaukee department store. It was then that another of his songs became a local hit - "Under the Tropical Moon." This provided Wenrich with enough confidence and money to get to New York. The road from here was not all clear sailing, but in the following years several other songs, such as "Rainbow" which established him as a professional composer, led him on to success. One of his songs, "Put On Your Old Gray Bonnet," became President Wilson's favorite song. In the fruitful years that followed, Percy Wenrich composed such greats as "Moonlight Bay," and "When You Wore a Tulip and I Wore a Big Red Rose."

HAD MANY SUCCESSES

Wenrich, although still composing, set up his own publishing firm in partnership with Homer Howard, which he soon sold to Leo Feist along with the rights to publish his songs. During World War I, Wenrich produced such war hits as "Where Do We Go From Here, Boys," which was sung by the Marines. This was Wenrich's last great popular hit, but not his last success.

Turning to the musical stage, Wenrich produced "Castles in the Sky," an operetta (in collaboration with Ray Peck) and "The Right Girl," a musical comedy. From 1914 'til 1929, Wenrich toured the vaudeville circuit with his wife, Dolly Connelly.

After his retirement from vaudeville, the composer lived in Hollywood until he was stricken with tuberculosis. He and his wife moved to Saranac Lake where she too became ill and was hospitalized for the rest of her life. During this time, Wenrich became an ardent member of the Lambs. In 1948, he wrote "Missouri, My State." His last musical effort was in 1952 when the Civil Air Patrol asked Wenrich to compose an official song. The completion and acceptance of his work, "Cadets of the Civil Air Patrol" was too much for the elated composer and several days later he died, in March of 1952.

But every year, as there is a tense silence, a drop of the handkerchief and the "Cotton Babes" melody fills the auditorium marking the beginning of a new Kake Walk, Percy Wenrich, composer of so many well-known hits lives again on the UVM campus.

Graduation was only the beginning of Jim Brown's education

Because he joined Western Electric

Jim Brown, Northwestern University, '62, came with Western Electric because he had heard about the Company's concern for the continued development of its engineers after college graduation.

Jim has his degree in industrial engineering and is continuing to learn and grow in professional stature through Western Electric's Graduate Engineering Training Program. The objectives and educational philosophy of this Program are in the best of academic traditions, designed for both experienced and new engineers.

Like other Western Electric engineers, Jim started out in this Program with a six-week course to help in the transition from the classroom to industry. Since then, Jim Brown has continued to take courses that will help him keep up with the newest engineering techniques in communications.

This training, together with formal college engineering studies, has given Jim the ability to develop his talents to the fullest extent. His present responsibilities include the solution of engineering problems in the manufacture of moly-permalloy core rings, a component used to improve the quality of voice transmission.

If you set the highest standards for yourself, enjoy a challenge, and have the qualifications we're looking for — we want to talk to you! Opportunities exist now for electrical, mechanical and industrial engineers; and for physical science, liberal arts and business majors. For more information, get your copy of the Western Electric Career Opportunities booklet from your Placement Officer. And be sure to arrange for an interview when the Bell System recruiting team visits your campus.

Tradition Colors Kake Walk

Being one of the top college weekends in the country, the University of Vermont's Kake Walk must have something to offer. Although the jazz concert, the ball, and the skits are all an important part, nothing has been able to match the excitement of "Walkin' Fo De Kake." The competition of the fraternities for the coveted Kake, denoting excellence in performing the intricate and precise routines of Walking, is a tradition that no other college can boast of.

The walkers all wear silks and satins of different colors to identify them with their respective fraternities. The following list should be of great help to you both Friday and Saturday nights in determining who is who.

Acacia - black vests with gold lapels, black trousers with gold stripe down side.

Alpha Epsilon Pi - gold pants with blue stripes, gold vest and tails with blue trimming.

Alpha Gamma Rho - they will wear green and gold.

Alpha Tau Omega - blue costume with gold trim and gold buttons.

Delta Psi - black and white vertical stripes.

Kappa Sigma - green pants and tails with red vest.

Lambda Iota - white pants, red vest, red and white stripe vest.

Phi Delta Theta - blue costume with silver trim.

Phi Mu Delta - orange and black.

Phi Sigma Delta - violet costume with white lapels and white stripe down side.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon - kelly green costume with silver sequins.

Sigma Nu - pink and white costume without tails.

Sigma Phi - blue and white.

Sigma Phi Epsilon - red and purple.

Tau Epsilon Phi - purple tails, white trousers with purple stripes down sides.

From Snow... To Sculpture

By Dick Matheson

To anyone participating in Kake Walk, the snow sculpture is an important part of the competition, but there is a long way from snow to sculpture.

THE THREE ESSENTIALS

There are three indispensable ingredients which go into any snow sculpture: snow, a plan or idea, and lots of work and skill. Since there's no depending on the weather, the plan or idea must usually come first.

AN IDEA

As anyone who has made a sculpture knows, the idea is more important and difficult than it sounds. Originality is one of the three major criteria used in judging the sculptures, the other two being workmanship and over-all effect. Choosing and agreeing upon one idea for a sculpture sometimes takes a group weeks.

One of the qualities of snow is a facility for melting, about two days before work is planned to begin. If no new snow appears by a week before judging, fraternities have been known to part with some green stuff to get some white stuff trucked in. Once there is snow, the first requirement is to get it together and build a base

The base is usually built with wooden forms and frozen into a solid mass with the addition of water. Then work begins on the sculpture proper, often with the inclusion of a wooden framework or skeleton to strengthen the figures or structure. Skill and artistic ability (not to mention patience) are required more than hard work to put the final details on the sculpture and smooth over the work, such as the base, that was done roughly before.

CLEANING UP

There then remains only cleaning up the area, but this can be important. Judges take a dim view of glare ice left on sidewalks by spraying hoses and run-off water, especially if said judges have just fallen on said glare ice.

JUDGING

Often the snow sculpture is completed about ten minutes before judging, after an "all-nighter" of sculpturing. But this is the sort of effort that fraternities, sororities, and independents will make again this year to display their Kake Walk spirit.

The Winning Spirit

The Lechnyr Trophy is given each year to the fraternity which exemplifies the ideal spirit of Kake Walk. The trophy was named in honor of Joseph Lechnyr. When the Hayward Building burned down in 1929, Lechnyr entirely rewrote Percy Wenrich's "Cotton Babes" from memory, thus saving the song for the sake of posterity.

Ever since its initiation in 1960, the trophy has been considered the most coveted of all Kake Walk awards. The directors who choose the winning fraternity present the award Saturday night of walking.

The following fraternities have received the trophy in past years:

- 1960 Theta Chi
- 1961 Kappa Sigma
- 1962 Acacia
- 1963 Sigma Alpha Epsilon
- 1964 Sigma Alpha Epsilon
- 1965 Kappa Sigma

"De Kake" Up For Grabs Again Symbol Of Victory For 69 Years

Like all traditions, the colorful cake awards of Kake Walk Night have deep and historic origins. The symbol of "de cake" has, for the UVMer, a significant meaning, although he may be unaware of the origin of the cake's symbol.

TRADITION FROM THE DEEP SOUTH

It started in the deep South in the days of the gentleman farmer when plantation workers would celebrate the completion of the year's work with festivities similar to that of our own Kake Walk. The younger laborers would step and kick lively to the music of fiddles. Couples were judged, in the meantime, according to the precision of the grace and agility of their partners. One by one, pairs were eliminated until the winning couple was chosen. This last and final pair of precision dancers was awarded a giant and highly decorated cake. Thus, the origin of the presentation of the cake has evolved.

FIRST IMITATED BY UVM YANKEES IN 1893

Sixty-nine years ago, the entire tradition of the plantation workers was imitated by the Northern Yankee. It has stayed at UVM ever since. With the development of the Kake Walk tradition, there has been a corresponding increase of competition in various campus activities. Now candidates campaign for King and Queen of the Kake Walk Ball; fraternities and sororities compete for snow sculpture and Kake Walk poster awards. Skits with a common theme have also become an integral part of Kake Walk Holiday. Here the symbolic meaning of the cake appears once again. Cakes of different sizes are awarded to the winners in each of the above categories of competition. When one realizes the work that is involved in trying to win one of the Cakes no matter what size it may be, the winner's ecstasy should be apparent to everyone present at Kake Walk Night.

That Hard-Won "Kake"

1965 Netmen Paced By Paul Ryan

By Mike Wool

Junior Paul Ryan won the ECAC Small College Individual Tennis Championship held this past fall at Rider College in Trenton, New Jersey. Last year John Adler, now graduated, won the same championship for UVM.

The netmen of coach Brud Humphreys played in two matches during the fall tennis season. An away match at Rider College and a home duel with Hunter College were on the schedule. Led by captain Paul Ryan, Don Henson, Laddie Cook, and Fletch Joslin, the netmen looked exceptionally good against Hunter College sweeping all singles and doubles matches.

This spring coach Humphreys faces a tough task in defending the team's Yankee Conference championship. Lost from last year's championship squad are stars John Adler, Captain Rich Holden, and Win Marston, the top three men on the team.

A rewarding spring can be looked forward to if Paul Ryan continues his winning ways. The return to school of Don Henson and Laddie Cook also helps considerably. Other men looking for positions on the team are seniors Al Secunda, Don Miller, juniors Rich Sacs and Dutch Curtis, and sophomore Fletcher Joslin.

Coach Stone Hoping

The varsity ski team has been enjoying a mildly successful season under the tutelage of coach Bob Stone, the first full-time ski coach UVM has ever had. Co-captains of the team are seniors Dave Hosmer and Pete Donaghy.

The team's best performances have been a third in the St. Lawrence Carnival and a fifth at the Dartmouth Carnival. Hosmer led the team in both these meets with his showing in the cross-country event. He finished first at St. Lawrence and third at Dartmouth.

The weak spot this season, as usual, has been jumping. A lack of proper practice facilities has hampered the team perennially in this event. Also, with no financial aid to sue as a temptation, Stone must rely solely on Vermont's climate as a selling point in recruiting. Nevertheless, Vermont usually ranks among the top ten ski teams in the nation.

Top Nordic (cross-country and jumping) skiers on this year's squad are Hosmer, Alan Goedecke, Scott Leake, and Jeff Marsh. Hosmer and Goedecke are seniors, Leake a junior, and Marsh a sophomore.

A proposed bill in the Vermont legislature to promote skiing in the state has coach Stone praying. If it becomes law he will get better facilities and financial aid, thus enabling him to spare the future Billy Kidds and Rick Chaffees and keeping them in Vermont to go to school.

NATATORS HAVE IMPROVED TEAM DESPITE UNIMPRESSIVE RECORD

By Steve Leyeston

The varsity swimming team started off on the right foot this year by downing Norwich 57 to 38. Following this conquest was the slaughter of Loyola of Montreal by a 69 to 17 margin. Following this triumph a third consecutive victory was scored over Sir George Williams College, also of Montreal.

The Catamount natators are presently trying to shrug off a four meet losing streak. The Cats bowed to Union College in the last relay, and lost a squeaker afterwards to McGill of Canada. The two other defeats were at the hands of Plattsburgh (55-40) and the University of Massachusetts (53-42).

Although their record (3-4 at press time) is far from impressive, it fails to tell the whole story. The squad this year is far stronger than that of last year, when the mermen compiled a 7-2 overall record. Tom Mills, who swam the 100 yard freestyle in 0:51.8, has been a consistent victor all year, as has Pete Gross, who swims the butterfly. Backstroker Dave Cheney and freestyler Jay Weintraub have turned in times of 2:24 and 2:04 respectively in the two-hundred-yard events, not to mention Pete Fredericks, who swims the breast stroke in 2:34. Aiding these boys is diver Trent Anderson, who has been winning all year. It is evident that the Cats have top performers in almost all events.

The problem that has been facing Coach Leggett is squad this year is a lack of depth. (All four of the setbacks were lost in the last one or two events. With the addition of one or two more swimmers of the same caliber as those mentioned above, the Cat poolmen might well have gone undefeated to this point.

Other valuable pointgetters for the thincats have been Paul Ardell (weights), Jim Bahrenburg (hurdles), Rene Chaintreuil (distance runs), Vin Decesaris (relay), Jim Dedman (600 and relay), Rick Howard (distance runs), Bruce Miller (weights), John Horton (relay), and Larry Perlmutter (dashes).

The next meet for the team is at New Hampshire March 5, one week before the Cats host the Yankee Conference indoor meet.

MAYLAND LEADING TRACKMEN IN SUCCESSFUL SEASON

The indoor track team has been having a very successful season this year due mainly to the efforts of an extremely versatile athlete named Don Mayland. Mayland won ten first places in the first three meets, as the team emerged victorious in two of these.

Capt. Mayland, who as a freshman concentrated on pole vaulting and did as high as 14'4", has now, as a senior, added high jumping, the high and low hurdles, and the 50 yard dash to the list of events he competes in.

Pete Nolan, Ed Childs, Pete Jones, Pete Stickney, and Walt Stowell have also done excellent jobs for coach Archie Post. Nolan is undefeated in the broad jump. Childs has set a new school record in the high jump. Stickney has been the stalwart of the weight events, while Jones and Stowell are the top distance run-

Coach Archie Post and Captain Don Mayland go over the pole vaulting style.

Gridders Complete Best Cycle In History

By Gordon Josephson

The University of Vermont football squad successfully closed out its 1965 campaign by wrapping up its third consecutive state series crown with a 7-0 win over Middlebury.

With the close of this season, the Catamounts ended what was the most successful football cycle in the school's history. In the past three years, UVM's football teams have produced season's records of 6-2, 7-1 and 6-2. The seniors who finished their careers were lucky enough to take part in the complete cycle. They are Mike Burke, Capt. Rusty Brink, John Sullivan, Harvey Bazarian, Terry Lynn, Bob Murry, Joe Albanese, Laurel Husband, Scott Fitz and Ed Kihiry. All of these men have made tremendous contributions during the last three seasons.

The loss of these boys will not be a total disaster, since there will be a host of bright talent returning next year. A few of these boys are Dick Hebert, Bob Mitchell, Jeff Kuhman and Jack Schwerberger from the offensive unit and Bill Van Bennekum (Next years captain), Tuck Nelson, Colin Hurd, and Joe Soldano from the defensive unit. Soldano also complete a successful place-kicking season by making good on 19 of 21 extra point attempts this year.

The Cats finished up with an overall record of 6-2. They were 2-2 in conference play, absorbing their two big losses to tough UMaine and UMass teams. (U Maine, the conference champions, went to the Tangerine bowl in post season play.) They averaged a total of 20 points a game and allowed the opposition only 13. Joe Soldano, Rusty Brink and Bill Van Bennekum-most season honors by being named to the all Yankee Conference Offensive unit, Brink and Van Bennekum were also named all-conference Defensive unit.

In the statistics department, the following boys were the leaders: Scott Fitz lead the individual passing category with 53 completions in 137 attempts for 653 yards and a 38.7% pass completions. Dick Hebert, Jeff Kuhman and Jack Schwerberger lead the pass receiving division chalking up 201, 217 and 168 yards respectively. The Rushing leaders were Mike Burke, Dick Hebert and Scott Fitz with 289, 206 and 203 yards respectively. Hebert lead in net yards gained per carry with an excellent 5.1 yards/

SEASON IN REVIEW AMERICAN INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE

In UVM's opener, the Cats trounced the Aces 42-19. UVM spotted A.I.C. an early touchdown before the offense started to roll. On scoring efforts by Mike Burke, Dick Hebert and twice by Scott Fitz, the Cat's lead at the half 27-13. The Cats stretched their lead in the third period on a rush by Terry Lynn. Dick Hebert rounded off the scoring by taking a 25 yard pass from sophomore Dave Shumate.

WORCHESTER POLYTECHNICAL INSTITUTE

The Cats went on another scoring rampage in their home opener by blanking the engineers 42-0. Tech was held to -12 yards rushing. Another shining performance by quarterback Scott Fitz sparked the Cats offensively. Fitz ran with the ball only 4 times but he picked up 93 yards in addition to completing 3 of 4 passes for 59 yards. For the third consecutive year the Cats entered the U Maine game with a 2-0 record.

UNIVERSITY OF MAINE

UVM tasted their first defeat as the bigger and stronger black bears from Maine whipped them 35-6. The Cats scored first but they were simply outclassed. All-Yankee Conference quarterback Dick DeVarney cut our secondary to ribbons and scored 4 T.D.'s. In the final 2 periods the Cats were held to 51 yards. The win kept Maine at the top of the Yankee Conference which they eventually went on to win.

UNIVERSITY OF RHODE ISLAND

If one had to select the best team effort of the season, this has to be it. Before a large homecoming crowd, the Cats upset the Rams 28-6. Going into the game the Cats were picked as one touchdown underdogs. Coach Clifford stated after the game "It was the greatest defensive team effort since I've been coach here." In singling out the stars of the game the names that come to mind are defensive end Bill Van Bennekum (next year's Capt.) defensive lineman Bill Wolf, Joe Soldano and linebackers Tuck Nelson and Rusty Brink. The win upped Vermont's record to 3-1 and for the Rams it was their first defeat of the season.

UNIVERSITY OF NEW HAMPSHIRE

UVM gained its second Yankee Conference win by downing UNH 23-7. It marked the Cat's 10th win in their last 11 home games. The Wildcats put up quite a scrap especially in the first half as the Cats did not score until 8:30 of the second quarter. During the final 2 periods the UVM defense held New Hampshire to 22 yards on the ground and none through the air. Cat captain Rusty Brink was named all ECAC center of the Week for his performance in this game.

NORWICH

Under almost unbelievable conditions the Cats squeaked past the Norwich Cadets 7-6. In a typical State series game the Cadets from Northfield played as though they didn't realize that UVM was a heavy favorite. Playing in the rain, the Norwich defense held the Cats to only 33 yards total offense in the 1st half and jumped to a 6-0 halftime lead. It was the first time all year that the Cats had not scored in the first half.

The margin of victory was provided by junior halfback Dick Hebert who scored the Cats lone touchdown on a 50 yard punt return. A late 4th quarter field goal effort from the UVM 17 yard was unsuccessful and the Cats were victors.

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS

Traveling to Amherst to meet the Redmen of the University of Massachusetts, the Cats found themselves as at Maine, outmanned and outclassed. Sophomore quarterback Gregg Landry stared for the Redmen as did ends Bob Meers and Milt Morin (First draft choice of the Cleveland Browns). UVM's lone touchdown came on a beautiful 27 yard pass from Scott Fitz to Dick Hebert.

Despite the score, the real low point in the game came early in the first period when Capt. Rusty Brink injured his ankle. This was a real disappointment to Rusty as he had been anxiously awaiting revenge for the Cats lone 1964 loss to UMass at Burlington.

MIDDLEBURY COLLEGE

This marked the season finale for UVM as they shut out the Middlebury panthers 7-0. In doing so they captured their third straight state series crown. Middlebury was held to 40 yard rushing. The Cats lone score came on a 42 yard touchdown jaunt by Mike Burke. Burke closed out his football career at UVM with a marvelous 115 yards rushing in the game.

Outgoing 1965 team captain Rusty Brink hands ball to 1966 captain-elect Bill Van Bennekum.

1965-66 UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT SOCCER TEAM

This fall's edition - only the second - has already surpassed last year's total number of wins and did it in just four games. Catamounts were 3-4 in 1964, the first season of intercollegiate soccer. Members of this year's team, front (left to right): Jack Semler, Jeff Hyman, Tim Madison, Bill Willey, Captain; Ted Manning, Jim Cunningham, Mark Burwick, Tom Bitter. Second Row: Bill Burling, Eric Bauer, Bob Schroeder, Bruce Miller, George Wrightson, Pete Giroux, Curt Tobey. Standing: Hal Greig, Coach; Pete Baldwin, Dennis Linneham, Terry Abbott, John Nefzger, John Rutledge, Bill Lansing, Bob Stone, Assistant Coach. Absent when photo was taken: Don Carlson, John Edbrooke, Jim Gordon, Tom Landman, Bill Woodward, Bill Byford-Brown, Jeff Taft, Brad Sumner.

Booters Have Winning Year

The UVM soccer team closed out a most successful season posting a 7-2 record with losses coming only to Middlebury and UMass (a 2-1 loss in double overtime).

The Catamounts pulled a lot of surprises this year. Having had only a mediocre record last season, not much was expected for the 1965 season. Nevertheless the team had a lot of confidence in their ability. Vermont knocked off Maine 7-1 and UConn 3-0 early in the season proving they could stand up against the best teams in the East.

STRONG DEFENSE IS THE KEY

Leading scorers from Vermont were outside Dennis Linneham, a senior, and center forward Pete Baldwin, a sophomore. Also contributing a great deal to the attack was inside left John Semler, another sophomore. The defense which allowed only 1.5 goals per game, was the part of Vermont's game which provided the margin of victory in many close games which Vermont won. Center halfback Jeff Taft played consistently good ball all season long. Captain Bill Willey, a center forward, came back on defense time and again to break up opponents scoring opportunities. Playing exceptionally well in the nets all year were Vermont's two goalies, Tim Madison and Gerry Abbott. Madison saw most of the action and by examining his average goals per game (1.5) one can tell that he was anything but vulnerable in the nets. Gerry Abbott saw service in key situations, when, due to strong wind conditions, many high shots were taken at the Vermont goal.

The Vermont soccer team in only its second year of intercollegiate competition, certainly proved to the Yankee Conference and the rest of New England that they are not just a good team, but must be rated with the top soccer teams in the area.

HOOPSTERS HAVING FINE SEASON

From the Cat's Mouth

This column would like to pay tribute to the greatest and most dedicated athletes at the University of Vermont. The Kakewalkers. One might dispute this claim, but what other athlete or team on this campus puts in so much practice and preparation for so small an amount of time before the public. Some teams have been practicing for as many as six months for the actual walking routine, which last only a short but grueling 2-3 minutes.

What makes great kakewalkers is not, as many think, the physical attributes of the walkers themselves. Although it cannot be denied that the selection of men who are good athletes and of approximately the same build are assets, they are but a minesqueal part of the overall picture. The inner desire and drive of the individual walkers, particularly as a team is, so to speak, the catalyst which drives them.

Every Kake Walk, there is always disagreement on the quality of the judging. Leaving the gym, one can always hear the discontent of the individuals who felt that their particular fraternity was dealt with unjustly - "The judges were prejudiced" or "Did you see how many mistakes X made?" These discrepancies are an inherent part of a judging system which is basically subjective. However, in the final analysis it is obvious that these discrepancies have arisen over the awards for third or fourth place. The first or second spots are rarely disputed for these boys genuinely stand out from all the rest. They weren't lucky or just "born Kakewalkers" - they worked hard and knew what they wanted - they lived with desire for months - they could hear the strains of "Cotton Babes" in their dreams.

ICEMEN HOVERING AT .500 MARK

The UVM hockey team started the season by dropping a 6-3 decision to the powerful UNH Wildcats. UNH took a 3-0 lead in the first period and in spite of Lee Roy's two quick goals in the second period and Capt. Marty Stevenson's score in the last period they emerged victorious.

UVM then journeyed to Hamilton and brought home a 7-3 win. In this game the Cats' sophomore line got into the act with Curt Tobey and Jack Semler scoring two goals each and Lee Roy scoring one.

The next game was a state series battle leading to a decisive 5-1 victory for UVM. Tremendous team effort was displayed and an outstanding performance by Tom Gregg, sophomore goalie.

UVM's next outing was against Connecticut. Both teams played poorly and the lead changed hands several times. It took a 5 goal outburst, led by Lee Roy scoring who scored 4 times, to lead to a 10-5 UVM victory.

Over the Christmas Holidays the Cats played in two games at the UNH Tournament. They downed UConn 4-3 and were beaten by UNH 8-1.

UVM started out the new year with an 8-4 lead against top ranked Williams. The score stood at 4-4 up until the last 5 minutes of the game when Williams unleashed a 4 goal barrage leaving UVM far behind. For UVM Tom Gregg was again outstanding in the goal.

The team, sporting a 4-3 record travelled to Storrs defeating UConn 11-2.

UVM then journeyed to Mass where Boston State led by ex-Olympian Bobby Quinn, blitzed the Vermont defenses for 8 goals. Curt Tobey and Ryan scored for UVM. The defeat proved very costly as Roy and Tobey were injured.

The next game was at Waterville, Me., where the icemen absorbed a 14-5 defeat at the hands of the greatly improved Colby Mules.

New Coach Seems To Have Inspired The Team's Success

1965-66 UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT BASKETBALL TEAM

By Bob Bloomenthal

One of the most pleasant surprises of the winter sports season to Vermont fans has been the unexpected showing of the basketball team. With a new head coach in Art Locke, formerly a star for NYU, and a completely new style of play to learn, most observers did not expect the Cats to fare any better than last year's team which finished with a dismal 7-13 surprise.

Showing great enthusiasm and employing a much more alert defense, the Cats have come through with a 9-7 record so far. At press time, the team still had a chance at a piece of the State Series championship which rival St. Michael's has dominated in recent years.

Locke has depended mainly on six top players for his surprise success so far this season. Three seniors make up the core of this unit which also contains two juniors and one sophomore. Probably the biggest reason for the team's success has been Locke's ability to rid the team of a "loser's attitude" which often occurs on a team which constantly faces opponents with big height advantages as the Cats do.

The top six players have been: Ken Spalter - Kenny has been the floor leader for the Catamounts this season, providing excellent playmaking ability with a good outside jumper. The 5-9 senior from Brooklyn has excellent court sense and is a good ballhawker on defense. Although sitting out most of last year, Spalter has rebounded this season to lead the team in scoring with a 15.7 average.

Milt Goggans - Milt is co-captain of this year's squad and is the team's second leading scorer with a 15.1 norm. The 6-4 veteran has been moved to a forward spot to take advantage of his shooting eye, but he remains the team's top rebounder. Goggans has improved his defense this season but unfortunately, his tendency to foul has often made the team realize his value most when he has been forced to the bench.

Layne Higgs - Layne is the third senior on the squad and is also the other co-captain. He is a vastly improved defensive player this season to make him a better-rounded player. He is the team's best outside shooter and owns the individual season scoring high of 27 against St. Mike's. He has averaged 13.6 points a game for the year while being employed as a swing man of the John Havlicek-type. He stands 6-3.

Russ Boardman - Rus, a 6-5 junior, has moved in as center of this year's team. He has greatly improved his overall game under Locke's guidance. Boardman still seems to get better with each game as he has averaged 7.5 points a game as well as being a top rebounder.

Bruce Hann - Bruce has been Locke's sixth man all year and has been a valuable asset. "The Streak" is a defensive stalwart and has improved his scoring output lately. He has an 4.5 ppg. average and is 6-0 guard.

Bill Librero - Billy has been the lone sophomore to crack the UVM starting lineup as a 6-3 forward. Librero is a rugged rebounder and has good scoring potential. He has hit for an 11 point average so far.

Although these six have carried the brunt of the load, sophomore reserves Bruce Lombard, Don Katz, Alden Hale, and Sandy McLeod have also been valuable. Junior Don Longley has also contributed from his backcourt position.

Vermont basketball fortunes are looking up for the future, though, as the freshman team has lost but one game this year. Looking even farther ahead Locke has done an all-out effort in his recruiting to finally get the equalizer, the big man, to enroll at UVM. The Catamounts have a new look this year and are bound to improve in coming years with Locke at the helm.

4 early goals and then held on for a 4-3 victory. Bobby Sansville played another great defensive game, turning away 36 shots. The cats then went to Durham

N.H., for a third try at mighty UNH. At 2:28 of sudden-death overtime, Lee Roy scored his 19th goal to end a 9-game losing streak against the Wildcats.

IFC Selects Three New Vice Presidents

Sophomores Head Council Committees

On Tuesday, Feb. 22, elections were held for the purpose of choosing the three vice-presidents of the Interfraternity Council for the year 1966-1967. The three were chosen from the sixteen sophomore representatives to the Interfraternity Council.

David Crane
(Credit, SPS - Davidson)

Dave Crane, a pre-medical student majoring in zoology, is a brother of Sigma Phi fraternity. He is a past member of the freshman ski team and is active in the ROTC Program.

Gary Glynn
(Credit, SPS - Davidson)

Gary Glynn is a dean's list student who is majoring in chemistry. He serves as Treasurer for his fraternity, Sigma Alpha Epsilon. Gary was a member of Gold Key and now is serving on the Student Leadership Conference Planning Committee.

Douglas Provost
(Credit, SPS - Davidson)

Douglas Provost is a brother of Phi Delta Theta fraternity where he serves as Alumni Secretary. Doug, a dean's list student, is on a pre-medical curriculum, majoring in zoology. He was also a member of the freshman rifle team.

WILL SERVE FOR 1 YEAR

These three vice-presidents will serve for one year, heading the various committees of the IFC. Next year at this time one of the three will become the new president of the Interfraternity Council while the other will become either Treasurer or the Chairman of the Kake Walk Dispositions Committee.

Frosh Will Live In MAT

Mr. Mazuzan, Assistant to the Dean of Men, disclosed last week that men's dorms will no longer be classified "freshman" or "upperclass."

Presently, there are no freshmen living in the M.A.T. complex and few upperclassmen (other than floor counselors) living in Converse, Chittenden, Wills, and Buckham Halls.

Next September there will be about six freshmen assigned to live on each floor of M.A.T. and a corresponding number of upperclassmen to live in the C.C.-W.B. complex.

Those presently living in Marsh, Austin, or Tupper, however, will not be assigned back to the other complex unless they wish to be. Counselors have been asked to tell this year's freshmen that many of them may still be living in the C.C.W.B. complex next year.

WHY SEPARATION TILL NOW?

Frosh and upperclassmen were originally segregated more or less unintentionally. A few years ago men had to live on campus for only their freshman year.

M.A.T. was completed in the middle of a school year, and to fill it, sophomore and junior men were called from their off-campus housing. Freshmen were already settled for the year in the C.C.W.B. halls, and there was no sense in making them remove to the new dorms.

It Lasted For Three Days

By Judy Triplett

Wheel! Wow! What a weekend! There was only one major problem: it only lasted three days. I'm sure most of you will agree that there really is nothing that even approaches the gaiety and excitement of Kake Walk. (Those of you who don't agree must have been in the wrong place at the right time. Sorry!)

MONDAY MORNING EXAMS!

Monday morning sure was hard to face, though. Let's all give an enthusiastic round of applause in appreciation to the considerate profs who scheduled Monday morning exams. The way I hear it, one professor, who shall remain anonymous because we don't like to gossip (not much anyway), gave an hour exam Monday morning and said he was doing it because he felt that KW was a waste of time! Now, I'm as much for individuality as the next guy -- "to each his own" and all that -- but did he have to put salt in everybody's ice cream?

THE ELEGANCE OF THURSDAY

Everyone seemed to enjoy the ball Thursday night. The Elgarts and their orchestra met with the approval of all, and proved to be as entertainingly unique as was advertised. The McCoy's' rocking sound provided an enjoyable variety in pace. The girls all looked beautiful even if they all did have the same hair-do, the guys -- well, it's remarkable what a suit and tie can do for some people.

THE BEAUTY OF NATURE ADDED...

Friday was beautiful. Of course, no one who had a car and a place to go will agree with me; but all rugged, loyal, Vermont nature-lovers and/or skiers will agree that the snow was absolutely lovely, even if it did cause a few minor inconveniences here and there. Temperatures remained comfortably winter-warm all weekend, though, so no elated spirits should have been deflated on account of the weather. It was the loveliest weekend that we've had this season.

NOTHING IS PERFECT!

The jazz concert was thoroughly enjoyable, especially because the Brandywine Singers had to follow a tremendous act, and must have been a trifle nervous on that account. Of course, I am now referring to the splendid air show that entertained us while we waited over an hour for the scheduled program to begin. It was well worth the wait, however.

THE SING ALONG

The Brandywine Singers are as talented as they are personable, and everyone seemed pleased with their renditions of such great favorites as "Hound Dog," "Anne," the beautiful and timely "Flowers of Peace," "Marianne," "Mandy," and many more. The audience sang along with gusto (?) to "Where I'm Bound," "This Land is Your Land," "That's What You Get for Loving Me." And we all laughed along with the Brandywines when they gave us "Little Red YoYo" -- and roared to a grossly amusing "working song."

THE DIFFICULTIES OF SNOW

When it was learned that three-fourths of the Dave Brubeck Quartet were still circling somewhere overhead, unable to land because of the snow, the Brandywine Singers graciously offered to come back and sing for us a while longer. Those who stayed had a good time, as did Dave Brubeck, who was enjoying the show from the side-lines. It was an enjoyable afternoon. We are assured that the quartet will appear here sometime before May. So save your tickets, folks.

THE TRUTH IN HUMOR

Skits at the walking were amusing. Tau Epsilon Phi's spoof on the proposed co-ed dorm as an incentive to concentrated study (but of what?) was understandably well received, for its originality and organization showed great effort on the part of all concerned.

Phi Sigma Delta kept us chuckling with their snappy dialogue as Freddie Freshman unlocked the forbidden room in Fleming Museum, releasing the evil spirits who annually appear to abduct all freshmen who threaten to jeopardize our coveted UVM apathy. The clever "magical" appearance of the devil delighted us all.

Kappa Sigma's "Exodus at Redstone" made an impression on we girls who have to tromp out into the early morning snow to practice escaping from imagined flames.

Unfortunately, "Mean Old Mrs. McBust" and her lever continue to triumph over Super Counselor and the "frost-bitten females." Skit winners were the same both nights, with Phi Sig coming in first and TEP second.

THE GOAL REACHED

The walking was beyond description. It was fantastic. Winners for Friday night: 1. SAE 2. Kappa Sig 3. Sig Ep 4. TEP. Winners for Saturday night: 1. Kappa Sig 2. Sae 3. TEP 4. Sig Ep.

THE ADDED ATTRACTIONS

Alpha Gamma Rho proudly carried off first honors for snow sculpture, with Theta Chi coming in second. The Thomas Eldridge Award was presented to Acacia, and the Lechnyr Trophy went to Sigma Nu. David Rowe of Sigma Nu was presented with an award for his winning poster.

AND SO IT ENDS

It was a bit sad to see the seventeenth team leave the floor on Saturday night. It meant that Kake Walk '66 was over. But the memories remain, to be replaced only with happier ones that will come with Kake Walk '67.

New Doctoral Degree Offered

The University of Vermont Graduate College will inaugurate its 10th doctoral program when it begins a Ph.D. program in electrical engineering in September.

The program will be an interdisciplinary one, drawing on the faculties of six departments within three colleges -- electrical engineering and mathematics in the College of Technology, medicine, physiology and biophysics in the College of Medicine, and physics in the College of Arts and Sciences.

Vermont started its first Ph.D. program in 1958 and offers degrees in biochemistry, botany, chemistry, microbiology, pharmacology, physics, physiology and biophysics, psychology, and zoology.

"Supremes"

Perform Sunday

One of America's top musical attractions, the fabulous Supremes, will appear in a benefit concert for the Vermont Tuberculosis and Health Association. The concert will be held at Burlington's Municipal Auditorium on Sunday, March 13, starting at 6:30 p.m.

The Supremes have practically clinched a permanent place on the Top 40 hit charts with their current "My World is Empty Without You" standing at number 5 and on its way up. They have sold out the Copa in New York City and have future bookings at leading resort areas into 1968. The Supremes are no newcomers to the benefit performance, either, as they have appeared on behalf of several charity organizations in the past few months.

The three girls present a program which is based on what has been labeled "the Detroit sound," a pleasing blend of rhythm and blues and ballads.

Tickets for the benefit are priced at $2.50, $3.00 and $3.50 and are available at Bailey's Music Rooms, 88 Church Street, Burlington or by mail to Supremes Concert, c/o Bailey's.

Anna Moffo Entertains

Arrives: Lane Series Wednesday

By Judy Beeber

A critic from the New York Times made this comment about Anna Moffo's voice, "From a vocal standpoint, Miss Moffo left nothing to be desired. In its lower register, her voice had a fullness that resembled an idealized clarinet in tone; her upper notes were flutelike, never shrill and flawlessly produced." Anna Moffo, hailed as the "most beautiful woman in music" and leading soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company will appear on the Red Lane Series, Wed., March 9 in Memorial Auditorium at 8:30 p.m.

Miss Moffo was born in Wayne, Pennsylvania, the daughter of an Italian descended shoemaker. She started out by performing in church choirs and at small social gatherings. She graduated from Philadelphia's Curtis Institute of Music with a Fulbright grant for vocal study in Italy. Her first debut into the field of opera came when she was offered a contract to star in the full length spectacular of "Madame Butterfly." The Italian production of "Madame Butterfly" proved to be an important step forward in Anna Moffo's career, making her an overnight sensation throughout Europe.

In concert recitals in the United States and Europe, Miss Moffo has shown an affinity for the lieder of Schubert and Wolf, the chansons of Duparc and Ravel and the contemporary art songs of America. During the 1964-65 season, Miss Moffo's schedule included appearances at the Metropolitan Opera as Lucia, Norma in "Don Pasquale" and Liu in "Turandot." At Milano's La Scala, she scored a success in "La Traviata" and in Monte Carlo, before Prince Rainier and Princess Grace of Monaco, she gave a great performance as Manon in Massenet's masterpiece.

In September, 1966, Miss Moffo will recreate the part of Violetta in "La Traviata," at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York's Lincoln Center. Another future event of Moffo is the planned revival of Massenet's "Manon," to be given for the first time at the Paris Opera.

Included in her Lane Recital, will be two famous operatic arias: "Una voce poco fa" from Rossini's Barber of Seville, and "Ciascun lu sa" from Donizetti's Daughter of the Regiment.

The Unusual Is Usual At UVM

By Margaret Crane

Although I have thus far received no answer to my last article from members of the university community (if because of apathy or Kate Walk, I am not sure) the parents of some students have answered. Their unanimous opinion is best stated in the letter which follows.

Dear Miss Crane,

I am sorry to say that your article on long hair clearly shows your lack of contact with these characters and how little you've been around. Every red blooded, right thinking American knows that there are only three types of males who grow long hair; hoodlums, queers and little boys who need a screen to hide behind. I might add the same comment about those who grow beards. As a good woman, I would no more allow my son Holden to grow long hair or a beard than allow him to live in one of those co-educational dormitories which your university plans to establish.

In fact Miss Crane, let me warn you that a group of mothers with boys at UVM are planning on April 1, to demonstrate against the ultra liberal policies of the university. Our slogan is, "Down with long hair, beards, blue jeans and professors who are Democrats. They are corrupting our sons!"

Signed,

Mrs. Oam I. Prudish
Burlington, Vermont

Responses are still welcome. Send them care of the CYNIC. Incidentally, for those who are interested in a different type of "long hair," please note the article on the Thai Exhibit at the Fleming Museum. Better still, go see the exhibit. It's very worth while.

Burlington was chartered as a town June 7, 1763. The first family to arrive and remain permanently came in the spring of 1783.

EDITORIAL...

Kake Walk has come and gone. Now the campus will settle back in its shell and try to catch up on all the back work. Each KW is more extravagant than the last, each group of Directors trying to outdo their predecessors. In order for KW to continue to be "a more spectacular weekend," we feel that certain aspects should be changed.

1) Something must be done about the ticket situation. KW is supposedly a fraternity weekend. Why then do these houses not have sufficient tickets for the brothers to attend the walking? Should not the fraternity members (and all UVM students) receive the necessary tickets before allowing residents of Burlington and alumni to purchase them? And what about the dates of boys in houses presenting skits? These girls sit in the bleachers for approximately one hour, and then for the rest of the evening sit on the floor with their dates. Why not let the dates sit in a single row around the gym floor in front of the bleachers from the beginning of the program? In this way, the vacant seats will be sold to people otherwise not able to attend, and these seats would not be wasted.

2) The idea of the Eldridge trophy is excellent since few people really know how hard some of these teams practice for walking. However, there is one thing which must not be allowed concerning the awarding of this trophy. In actuality, only the walkers know who best deserves this award, and we are certainly not contesting the winner. But, it has been rumored that one house campaigned for votes. Any house stooping to such low tactics certainly does not deserve to even be considered for such an award.

3) Even at KW everyone must stand in lines. The coat room at the Ball was absurd. No one spent $3.75 to spend three-quarters of an hour in a line before even reaching the dance floor. Perhaps two separate coat rooms would prove more efficient in the future.

One further note: it is indeed a shame that all the people "behind the scenes" did not receive public recog-

S.A. Elections Set For Mar. 18

Voting for next year's Student Association officers and next year's Junior representative to the Student Committee on Discipline will be held on March 18. Interested students should start thinking as to whether they would like to run for any of the eight S.A. offices that are open -- President, First Vice President, Secretary, Sub-Secretary, Treasurer, two Sub-Treasurers and also the Junior Student Committee on Discipline representatives. These positions are open to the general student body with the requirements that candidates not be a Senior (Student Committee on Discipline candidates must be a sophomore at present time), that they be able to participate in student activities, and that they have a required cumulative average of 72 or better. The offices of President, First Vice President and Secretary of S.A. have an added requirement that candidates must have served on an S.A. committee or sub-committee for at least one semester previous to candidacy.

On Wed., March 9, at 4:15 p.m. in the Marsh Room of Billings Center, there will be a preliminary meeting of all students interested in running for any of the above listed offices. At this time election rules and procedures will be explained and petitions and qualification cards will be given out. This meeting is not required for students desiring to run for office, however attendance is strongly recommended. Students unable to attend will be able to pick up petitions and qualification cards at the S.A. office in Billings. However, all petitions will be due in at the S.A. Office by 4:15 p.m. on Mon., March 14.

All sophomores seeking a Student Committee on Discipline position should turn in a sheet with their reasons for wanting this position before the March 9 meeting. All sheets with reasons can be placed in the Student Committee's on Discipline mailbox in Billings Center.

If there are any questions on election procedures, call Edwin Congdon at either Extension 343 or 3-9866.

Pass-Fail Initiated At Carlton

Northfield, Minn. - (L.P.) - A newly-instituted system of pass-fail grading in a limited number of courses at Carlton College seems to be fairly popular, according to Dean Willis D. Weatherford, Jr. Students participating in the program now represent almost half the upper two classes, the only ones eligible.

Under the new system, a student may declare one pass-fail course per term provided that he has previously accumulated 15 credits. The system is designed so that successful completion of a pass-fail course gives one credit but in no way affects the student's grade point average. Instructors may request that certain courses be taught on a pass-fail basis. There are now four such courses being conducted.

The system is popular with students because it enables them to enjoy a course, usually out of their major, without having to worry about a grade. On the other hand, many students are foregoing the privilege because they need to improve their average in preparation for graduate school.

The Best Of Best

Comments On Chaperoning

By Prof. James J. Best

The recently released Fraternity Self Study pinpointed a glaring weakness of the Greek system on campus - 55% of the faculty said they would not be willing to act as chaperones for social functions. In contrast, only 25% state they would not speak or be a social guest at a fraternity or sorority. If my experiences as a chaperone have been typical I may be able to provide some insights into why over half the faculty dread the thought of chaperoning Greek parties.

My wife and I chaperone for several reasons. Chaperoning provides us an opportunity to leave our two year old son in the care of a sitter and have an evening out. In addition, we are interested in meeting and talking to students and, as a young faculty couple, we feel an obligation to perform various social functions for the University community. Experience has taught us that chaperoning events fall into four categories - very bad, bad, not so bad, and acceptable. With only a few exceptions most parties fall into the first three categories.

Two case studies may provide a taste of what fun it is to chaperone. In the first case we were asked to chaperone a joint fraternity-sorority party at one of the campus houses. When we arrived we were escorted to the "chaperone" - TV room, where we met the other chaperone, the sorority house mother. The three of us shared the confines of that monastic cell for four hours, a time span broken only by the welcome silence of the band taking a break. The sorority girls were gracious enough to introduce themselves and their dates but the boys seemed unaware of our existence (I must admit that the chapter president introduced himself when we first arrived and showed us to our room). After two hours of thumb twiddling and trying to listen to a Troy Donohue movie over the rumble of the band we were cautiously approached by one of the boys and asked if we wanted coffee. When we said "Yes," he disappeared, to reappear twenty minutes later with our coffee. We saw surprisingly little drinking at the party itself although the lawn in front of the house was littered with empty beer cans thrown from parked cars. At the end of the party - we could tell the party was over because the band was leaving - we walked out the front door. Not a word was spoken, to us or by us.

A second case was the first party we chaperoned on campus. The fraternity called us well in advance to ask if we would chaperone and offered to pay for our baby sitter. When we arrived at the house we were introduced to the house mother and chatted with her in her quarters; as the boys arrived with their dates introductions were made by the housemother. Before the band began blasting we were given a tour of the house and shown the bar (Yes, there was a bar, Virginia). Indeed, the chaperones had their own bottle; compliments of the house. During the course of the party we were encouraged to go wherever we wanted and do whatever we pleased. If we wanted to talk with party goers we did so. At midnight we left, with some reluctance. A few weeks later the house invited us over as their social guests for a Saturday night party.

From the foregoing examples it is clear why we now chaperone at one house and not the other. In the one case the chaperones were there only to meet University regulations - we were regarded as bodies, not people. There was little attempt to show us any consideration, to make us feel welcome. At the other house, we were made to feel welcome and that we were a part of the party. And what fun are parties if you're not a part of them, even as a chaperone?

Placement Barometer

Know Your Field

By Douglas O. Hanau, Director of Placement, UVM

One of the main reasons why the average senior job applicant does not know what he or she wants to do is because rarely is any attempt made to investigate the different types of jobs. The senior looks around a store, sees the crowd going in and out, listens to the sound of the cash register, and decides "I want to own my own business." He does not know what training is required to operate a business, he does not know anything about running a department, he is not familiar with the principles of merchandising. Hundreds of thousands of students decide on the career that is to make or mar their future life with as little thought as that.

In 1965, the Department of Labor issued a Dictionary of Occupational Titles, which defines the duties of many thousand separate jobs. This dictionary is available in the Placement Office and in nearly all public libraries. Also available for your browsing in the Placement Office is the Occupational Outlook Handbook, Bulletin No. 1375. For $4.75 you can order your personal copy by writing to: Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C.

This publication is one of the best of its kind that the writer has had a chance to review. Remember your aptitudes for work have a far wider range of application than you tend to give them. An aptitude, properly used, can be applied in many different ways. In the long run, job satisfaction means that the job must be within the range of your own abilities and your limitations and that it must excite your interest. The interest, the enthusiasm, the drive, must stem from you. In my opinion, attitude is as fundamentally important to success as aptitude. Together, they are unbreakable.

Your next step is to find out something about the job. It is a good plan to start at home by talking it over with your father, an uncle, or an older sister or brother. From this point you should talk to someone you know in the line of work you want to enter. You are likely to find that the reality is different from your present picture of it, and this will be of advantage to you when you apply for a job.

As a rule, the experienced person in the field you have decided upon will not tell you the things you expect to hear. Look up someone in banking, insurance, or in data processing and talk the matter through. You will find that it is not enough to be interested in people if you want to work in a personnel department; that it is not enough to be mechanically inclined if you want to be an engineer; that it is not enough to be an English major if you want to work in advertising.

If you want to work in chemical research or industrial marketing, for example, talk to someone who actually earns his living in the field. He will tell you what your training should be, what the work consists of, what conditions you would encounter, and give you an approximate idea of the rewards you can fairly expect. If you have no friends in your chosen field, there are a number of older men in your community who can give you good advice; the manager of your local bank; any business enterprise; and perhaps the school vocational counselor. In talking with these older men, however, you must take into account that they are telling you about life as they have seen it. Their philosophy is based on their own experience, but remember that your own reaction to their stories and advice is your best guide as to whether or not you are interested in or qualified for their particular line of work. There is another angle to these preliminary interviews, that is the trained reaction of these men to you and to your personality. Often they can point out some quality in you or in your training which would unfit you for the work you have in view, and while you need not take their advice, you should never ignore it. If you are alert and attentive you will be in the advantageous position of being able to learn by someone else's experience instead of having to learn by your own. It is a rare student who really takes advice; but, if it is sound advice, you can often save yourself years on the wrong track and avoid a lot of pitfalls by taking it.

UVM debaters argued their way to 23 wins, losing 12 decisions, in three tournaments Feb. 18-19.

At Dartmouth University, seniors Norman Snow and David Webster, both of Burlington, had a 7-1 win-loss record and won third place trophy with 102 schools in competition.

In the preliminary rounds, Snow and Webster defeated St. John's (N.Y.), Iona (N.Y.), Northern Illinois, Navy, Princeton, Stanford, and Emory (Ga.), and lost to Illinois State. The pair went on to win over Illinois State in the octo-finals and Emory in the quarter-finals. In the semi-final round Snow and Webster were defeated by Redlands (California).

The second team at Dartmouth was senior Michael Schoenfeld (New York City) and sophomore Nicholas Danigelis (Burlington) with a 4-4 record. Schoenfeld and Danigelis defeated Northwestern (Ill.), Maine, Loyola (Chicago), and Rhode Island and dropped decisions to Harvard, St. Joseph's (Pa.), California, and Kings.

Both teams debated both sides of the topic "Resolved: that law enforcement agencies in the United States should be given greater freedom in the investigation and prosecution of crime." Coach on the trip was Dr. Robert Huber, Chairman of the Speech Department.

Bowling Green State University (Bowling Green, Ohio) also hosted a tournament to which UVM sent debaters. Senior Craig Nelson (Greenville, Maine) and sophomore Robin Frost (Haydenville, Mass.) tied for fourth place with a 4-2 record. The pair won over Bowling Green, Arizona, Illinois State, and Akron and lost to Air Force and Bradley. Nelson and Miss Frost debated three rounds on each side of the question.

At Buffalo University (Buffalo, N.Y.), four freshmen novice debaters participated in a varsity tournament, winning six debates and losing four. Trip coach was Miss Lynn Baier.

The negative team of Sheryl Parker (Springfield) and Priscilla Goekmeyer (Middletown, N.J.) won four of their five debates. The team defeated Rochester, LeMoyne (N.Y.), Canisius (N.Y.), and Clarion (Pa.) and lost to Duquesne. Miss Parker was awarded a certificate for fourth place negative speaker.

The affirmative team of Donna Loizeaux (Whiting) and George Phillips (Florence) won two rounds, losing three. The pair dropped decisions to two Canisius teams and Utica and won over Brockport and Clarion.

Apply For Position On Governing Board

Applications are now being received for student membership on the Billings Center Governing Board. The Board is composed of four students, two faculty members, and the Director of Student Activities and the Billings Center, ex officio. It is the policy-making body of the Billings Center. Board responsibilities include office space assignment, and the general operation of the building.

Applications may be obtained from the Information Desk in Billings Center and must be returned to Mrs. Newton by March 25, 1966. No applications will be accepted after this date.

Goodman Comments

"Alienation"

It is not clear what young people mean when they say they are "alienated." Let me briefly review the concept historically.

In the sense of estrangement from God, alienation is a powerful theme in early Protestant theology. "God is hiding His face." The Lutheran answer was, of course, Have faith. Do not rely on works, for they are as alienated as you.

Turning the theology into epistemology, the Hegelians referred to the divorce between our subjective needs and intuitions and the objective world given in science and social institutions.

Hegel relied on the working out of history to bring these parts together. But reviving the Protestant insight, Kierkegaard insisted that we must be authentically committed in our moment by moment choices and not treat ourselves as scientific or historical objects. This "existential" answer has of course had great influence in criticism of our present over-organized routines.

Marx pinned down the alienation to people's loss of control over their productive life, and therefore loss of their primary human nature. Productive machinery and rules of work had passed into the hands of an owning class. Products of labor became commodities moving in a market, rather than uses in a community. His answer was, organize politically and expropriate the expropriators.

Nineteenth Century Definition

In the late 19th century there was also a psychiatric meaning of alienation as insanity (psychiatrists were "alienists"). The hallucinations of the insane mind were incompatible with, or divorced from, sensory reality. Freud tended to extend this concept by showing that everybody was somewhat psychopathological, and his bias was to relax the anti-instinctual bans that led to such a deep chasm between wish and reality.

All these extensions of Alienation are deeply important and true at present. And in the conditions of today, we have found another important aspect of alienation which (I think) is meant by the young. Modern societies increasingly exclude vast groups of people; e.g. the aged, the farmers, the Negroes, the young. (With automation, the exclusion threatens to become wider.) To be "alienated" is to feel productively useless, without future, excluded. Further, the needs and feelings of the excluded are not paid attention to in the goals and decisions of administrative society. To be "alienated" is to feel processed, exploited, administered.

What follows? First, the young cannot identify with the social goals and they say, "That's not my scene, I am nowhere." But then, as an immediate next step, they say, "They are nowhere. We young are the only people. We have to go it alone; if necessary, we must resist their interference in our lives."

This has been the persistent tendency of the present "youth" phenomena: the adolescent sub-culture, the Beat movement, the para-colleges, the draft protest.

Different, Hopeful Aspect

But let me now suggest a different and more hopeful aspect of "alienation" which is also directly relevant to today passing into the future.

In important respects, advanced societies are too comfortable and we call them "affluent;" they are too achieved and we say they are "establishments." Such a condition is stifling; it cuts one off from meaning, which is given only in the risky motion of growth. For example, some psychotherapists jocosely speak of the "California syndrome," referring to people who have grown up with every advantage and satisfaction and then break down at 40, complaining, "Life has passed me by." Certainly the young of the middle-class feel a frustration that leads them either to senseless delinquency or to efforts to make a better world on new premises.

Among dissenting college students, it seems that just because they have been economically secure, they transcend economic motives. Sure of $5,000 a year, they do not need to compete for $20,000. Similarly, since they come from respectable homes, they can go to jail without disgrace. But this is not necessarily a sign of lack of commitment. On the contrary, it may mean a forward step in rich societies: toward productive enterprise, social service, lively community, as goods in themselves, no matter what the economic and personal costs.

nition. We cannot allow to go completely unmentioned the efforts of the band, the KW Assistant Directors, the Secretary, and the Faculty Advisors. A year's planning goes into Kake Walk, and surely note cards for the Master of Ceremonies would not detract from its presentation. Even professionals use them.

Even as KW has ended, this volume of the CYNIC comes to a close with this issue. Just as we have tried to help improve it, so must we continue to do with the CYNIC. We feel that we have taken a great stride forward this year. Our content and layout have improved. Certainly we have far to go. A more concerted effort on the part of students and administration alike is a start. This will all come in time. My job is done. To the incoming staff I wish the best of luck and wholeheartedly pledge my support. I hope that everyone will do the same.

Chamber Series Presents "The Bernard Shaw Story"

The Lane Chamber Arts Series will present Bramwell Fletcher in "The Bernard Shaw Story" on Sat., March 5 at 8:30 p.m. in Ira Allen Chapel. This is not a reading, but a one-man theatrical presentation of the life and philosophy - a self-portrait - of one of the great men and artists of our century. In Mr. Fletcher's performance he seeks to reveal the fully rounded personality of Shaw, private and public; from youth to ancient.

The show begins with Shaw's own self portrait, taken from a speech in "Don Juan in Hell," delineating what must have been the "real" Shaw, both the "surface clown" and the "underlying philosopher." In attempting to clarify Bernard Shaw's idealistic vision, the performance reveals his own unique methods for bringing that vision to the attention of the public, and his lifelong effort to inculcate that vision in the minds of his audiences. Contrasting the sacred and profane elements in Shaw's life, Fletcher makes apparent the facade that concealed the purposeful life of the playwright, dedicated to the revelation of truth as he saw it. The surface glitters with wit and humor; the underlying thought is infinitely more serious.

The production is divided into two parts. Part one, in the main, reveals Bernard Shaw's early life - his boyhood in Dublin, his years as a young man in London during the first nine years as an author. He is shown as newspaperman, music critic, novelist, dramatic critic, and finally the emerging playwright. His marriage at 42 is depicted, and he airs his many extraordinary views on a wide variety of subjects from women, through socialism, doctors and religion. Part Two finds Shaw as a fully mature man, dealing as such with the problems that beset all of us in our civilization today.

Bramwell Fletcher in his early twenties met Bernard Shaw at an exhibition of paintings in London, and happened to sit next to him at the lecture following the exhibition. Two weeks later, Fletcher had tea with Shaw, and sat rather speechlessly while the great man talked. This contact with Shaw led Fletcher into a complete study of the playwright's works and his life. The result, after many years, is the production of Bramwell Fletcher as George Bernard Shaw. It presents an illumination of Shaw's life and character. The ideas are those of Shaw, but they have been arranged and dramatically formed for theatrical presentation by Mr. Fletcher.

How do you test a product that's six miles long? Or reduce the size of something almost too small to see?

TOUGH jobs... typical of the engineering work being done day after day at Western Electric, the manufacturing and supply unit of the Bell System. And you can have a hand in solving problems like these.

The six-mile product was a complete telephone cable. How to test it before it was buried underground—before modifications, if necessary, became time-consuming and expensive? The solution was to design an "artificial cable"—a model a few inches in length whose electrical characteristics matched those of the full-size cable. In this way, engineers learned which type of cable would do the job best, how many repeater stations would be needed, and where repeater equipment should be installed. Artificial cable lets us anticipate and solve many other problems... before they ever arise.

The small product was a thin film circuit—an electrical path only thousandths of the thickness of a human hair. How do you design equipment to make certain parts thinner, to increase resistance, without altering other parts? WE engineers used capillary action to bring liquid only to the desired areas—and electrolysis brought about the precise reduction. It's quick in the telling, but it took sharp minds to arrive at this solution.

Western Electric needs more sharp minds. Whatever your field is, there are plenty of opportunities for interesting work, and for rapid advancement. If you set the highest standards for yourself and seek a solid future—we want to talk to you! Be sure to arrange a personal interview when the Bell System recruiting team visits your campus. And for detailed information on the opportunities that await you, get your copy of the Western Electric Booklet "Opportunities in Engineering and Science" from your Placement Officer. WORLD-WIDE Cynic

By Marlon Robinson

There is only one reason why men become addicted to drugs; they are weak men.

Martin H. Fischer

A recent publicized topic on campuses is the use of drugs. Students everywhere are being arrested for selling or using the forbidden weed. Nine PENN STATE students were arrested February 9th on a narcotic charge.

Colleges such as ANTIOCH COLLEGE are forming drug advisory boards. The one at ANTIOCH will concentrate on the type of student who uses drugs, on making information available, on the effect it has on the student and the community, and on guidelines for dealing with and preventing the situation.

At a panel discussion, Dean Seymour of DARTMOUTH felt that the reason for narcotic use was the basic unnaturalness of a college community. Also, the amount of money that pushers receive is a determining factor. He also said, "If I'm officially confronted with a case of a student taking narcotics, I will and I must turn him over to the authorities."

The cause of using narcotics must lie in the "SAID" environment. This seems to be a sufficient reason for studying and changing the environment on a college campus.

The "GOD IS DEAD" issue is spotting colleges from NORTH CAROLINA WESLEYAN to NORTHEASTERN UNIVERSITY and from UVM to the UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA. WHY?

Shoplifting: A problem in American colleges! Yes, it seems that this is a cheaper method to maintain an abundant stock of widely used materials.

Batman's popularity continues to soar among the college set. One might call this fact a pseudo-intellectual characteristic.

Where is the IFC's Constitution?

The LAPEYETTE COLLEGE chapter of Sigma Chi withdrew from the national organization on Feb. 15th because a pledge of Korean ancestry was refused approval for initiation by the national committee.

This is the second case of this type involving the national committee of Sigma Chi. In April of 1965, the STANFORD UNIVERSITY chapter was suspended from the national because they pledged a negro student. Also the BROWN UNIVERSITY chapter cut all ties with the national because of its discrimination policy. The chapter at the UNIVERSITY OF COLORADO was placed on probation by the state regents with complete loss of rushing privileges.

Closer to UVM, the MIDDLEBURY chapter of Alpha Xi Delta sorority split from the national and became a local under the title of Alpha Xi Alpha. Among the reasons cited was that the national practices a discrimination policy.

The UNIVERSITY OF MIAMI has now on the campus the largest national and only international fraternity, Tau Kappa Epsilon. This is the only fraternity never to have had a discriminatory clause. The members believe that the man is the deciding factor, not the wealth or rank of the individual. Also, they drew up a statement of their position which is 1) any kind of discrimination has no place in a Greek system; 2) an organization would not put financial stress on a prospective member; 3) the present fraternity policy of developing a particular stereotype is unfair and inhibiting to the organization and the individual. TKE is directed toward fulfilling all three and does so.

And Viet Nam continues to dominate the college scene. The approaches are numerous; the humorous side, the great debates, and the letters... It seems that these methods are serving no real purpose except to repeat. Why not join together and accomplish something for the Democratic Cause or for anti-Democratic Cause!

Speaker Advocates Removal Of Supernatural Elements
From Christian Theology

By Mimi Morton

In a recent issue, Time referred to Dr. Paul M. van Buren as "one of the four best-known advocates of a death-of-God theology." Dr. van Buren will discuss his views on this controversial subject at the 1966 Vermont Conference. The three speakers at this year's conference will give their own answers to the question: "Is God Dead?"

Dr. van Buren feels that any talk of God, including the prospect of his reappearance, is philosophically meaningless. He is an advocate of linguistic analysis which attempts to clarify theological language by examining the ways in which words are used. Through this analysis, Christianity will be stripped of its supernatural elements and will be made more believable for twentieth-century man. In his book, The Secular Meaning of the Gospel, Dr. van Buren employs linguistic analysis on the theory that Christ is truly man and truly God, (as declared at the Council of Chalcedon-A.D. 451). Through these interpretations of early Christian doctrine, Dr. van Buren wishes, "to examine the human imagination as a central theological category; that is, how much of religion is part of man's imagination and how important is imagination for all aspects of his life?"

Dr. Paul M. van Buren
Associate Professor of Religion
Temple University

Professor van Buren was graduated cum laude from Harvard, and from the Episcopal Theological School. In 1957, he graduated summa cum laude from Universitat Basel, Basel, Switzerland. From 1957 until 1964, he taught at the Episcopal Theological Seminary of the Southwest, Austin, Texas. Since 1964, Dr. van Buren has been Associate Professor of religion at Temple University.

"The above list of facts," says

Dr. van Buren, "says almost nothing about me"; but the following quote from Professor van Buren may help clarify how and why he came to devote his life to theological research.

"The facts of my life which provide far more information, however, are not so simply listed. It would start, I suppose, with a very normal youngster of moderately affluent and proper background who began to wake up during a monotonous stint with the Navy during a monotonous war, who had only two and a half years left of college to make something of, who was led by one professor into an interest in theology which was not quite killed in seminary and led him to three exciting years with Professor Karl Barth in Switzerland, the effects of which took some time to wear off. I only discovered Ludwig Wittgenstein at the point in life in which I had begun to realize that life is something to be lived in the present, that living is not quite the same thing as accomplishing, being not quite the same as doing. This led to a course of exploration in which I suppose I shall continue for the rest of my life, exploring persons, human life, and human thought, one puzzling piece of which is that which we identify (not knowing what else to do with it) with the tag 'religion.'"

Summer Jobs

Financial Aid Office
Has Large Listing

The Financial Aid Office at the University of Vermont is looking for summer jobs.

UVM Aid Director Allen Walker said his office already has a wide range of summer job openings, with new ones arriving every day, and he invited state firms which may have summer jobs to list them at UVM.

Walker said he has also extended an invitation to students at Vermont to register with his office if they are interested in obtaining a summer job.

In this way, he said, "we hope to be able to help both students and employers."

Walker said that many students hold part-time jobs during the college year, and he said his office would like to invite area firms which have or may wish to create such opportunities registered their jobs with his office.

More than 500 UVM students are working on campus in jobs provided by the University, the college work-study program, or by Saga Food Service.

UVM, in company with most other colleges, considers student earnings as part of the total student aid picture, he said. This year, the University was able to award more than $1,000,000 in aid to over 1100 students.

The total was in scholarships and loans. However, a survey made in 1962 showed that 85 per cent of UVM's undergraduates had paid summer jobs. Of the number, 56 per cent reported earning part or most of their college expenses.

Thailand's Art Shown At Fleming

By Margaret Crane

"Thailand: Art of Hills and Valleys," is the subject of the current exhibit at the Fleming Museum. The material has been loaned by Dr. and Mrs. Lucien M. Hanks, Dr. and Mrs. R.L. Sharp, and Mr. William Woburn who made the collection while conducting the Thailand Project of Cornell University and the Bennington-Cornell Tribal Survey in North Thailand.

The exhibit includes articles of clothing, jewelry, and religious objects from Thailand and surrounding areas in South East Asia. Of special interest are one ceramic and two bronze Buddha heads, also a large highly detailed bronze drum. The clothing on display shows examples of the finest and most detailed embroidery imaginable. The head-dress and costumes of the Siamese dancers are some of the most ornate and beautiful pieces in the collection.

On Tuesday evening, Dr. Jane Hanks (Mrs. Lucien Hanks) gave a fascinating lecture on the exhibit and the people of South East Asia. She pointed out the similarities and connections of these people with those living in Vietnam. The exhibit allows one to taste some of the culture of the long isolated peoples who have now become the focus of attention in the world.

CHALLENGED BY AN INTERESTING SOCIAL EXPERIENCE IN ISREAL

Today's frontiers are being opened as much by the dedicated as by the adventurous. In Israel you can reap the very personal benefits of being both. Through Sherut La'am you can find yourself fulfillment, volunteering your knowledge and skills, in education, social work and health services; or by participating in an exciting social experience in communal living in a Kibbutz for a years time. The fourth group of volunteers is scheduled to leave in June, 1966, for a year of voluntary service in the Kibbutz or immigrant centers in development areas. MILITARY BALL

Many years ago, in the early 1890's, the main social event on the UVM Campus, was cancelled for reasons that are now unknown. This gave birth to the oldest Winter Carnival in America - Kake Walk. Having just participated in another Kake Walk, this reporter will be eternally grateful to the 'Hash House Boys' for improvising when the powers that be cancelled the military ball.

However, although Kake Walk has become the main social event on campus, the Military Ball still holds a prominent spot in the strata of social events at the University. Although it is a formal affair, there is a certain air of informality that allows a greater freedom of expression between students and instructors. It seems to us that the Military Ball is one of the few annual formal events that allows such an instructor-student relationship.

The Military Ball is again being co-sponsored by the Pershing Rifles and the Ethan Allen Rifles. Hopefully, many students outside the Military Science Department will attend the Ball this year in the company of members of the ROTC Brigade.

EAR'S BLOOD DRIVE

We would like to join the Ethan Allen Rifles in expressing thanks to those of you who took the time to donate in this annual Spring Blood Drive. It is not our thanks that we are expressing, it is the thanks of the new-born infants in need of blood with a different Rh factor, the open heart and other surgical patients, and the accident victims. Maybe you know some of these people. Maybe you are one of these people. In both cases you know what we mean when we say Thanks.

CADETS RECEIVE
DMS AWARDS

Four more cadets have been designated as Distinguished Military Students. This award is made during the senior year to those cadets with a high academic average who have shown superior leadership qualities during their participation in the ROTC program. Cadets who are distinguished military graduates will be offered a Regular Army commission. We extend our congratulations to Cadets John Hughes, their cooperating institutions. Following her studies at Merrill-Palmer, Miss Jewett will be returning to the university to complete her Bachelor's degree.

South Burlington, Vt.; Alan Levine, Burlington, Vt.; John Munn, Bradford, Vt.; and Michael Sherman, Worcester, Mass.

CADETS ON CAMPUS

The past week has been an eventful one for a good many ROTC Cadets. David Cohen, senior from Burlington, Vt., functioned as Kake Walk financial director for one of the most successful Kake Walks on record. Also in a key administrative role was Peter Ambrose, junior from Fairfield, Conn., who functioned as assistant director for publicity. Reigning over the entire weekend was Kake Walk King David Pietsch, senior from Honolulu, Hawaii. Russ Beardman, junior from Matapoisett, Mass., was selected by his fraternity to compete in the King campaign, quite a distinction in itself.

In another area, IFC elections proved fruitful for ROTC cadets. Juniors Fred Brown, Woonsocket, R.I. and John Tobin, Fair Haven, Vt. have taken over the helm of the Interfraternity Council. Brown is the new president and Tobin the treasurer. The new vice-presidents include sophomore cadet Gary Glynn, Springfield, Vt.

Cats Face St. Lawrence In Finale

Puckmen Finish Year 8-11

Hockey Team's High Scorer
Lee Roy

By Fred Schlapp

AIC 11 - UVM 3

A powerful AIC team demonstrated why it is one of the top teams in the East in topping UVM 11-3. The Aces blew the game open in the first period by exploding for five goals. In the second period the visitors scored three more times to pull the count to 8-0. The Catamounts refused to be shut out, however. A wicked slap shot by Lee Roy notched Vermont's first goal and 27 seconds later Chips Uihlein scored on a breakaway to make it 8-2. In the third period IAC scored again before Jack Semler put the Cats' third score on the board. The Aces then scored twice more to make the final total 11-3.

UVM 6 - UMASS 2

The UVM hockey team scored three first period goals and went on to a 6-2 win over Massachusetts. Except for a few rallies by the visiting Redmen, Vermont dominated the game. For the Cats Jack Semler and Laddy Cook each had two goals to pace the win. Ozzie Swett and Bob Snyder accounted for the other Catamount goals.

MIDDLEBURY 4 - UVM 2

Against a tough Middlebury team the Cats played a fine game, but lost, 4-2. As in their first encounter with the Panthers, UVM missed many scoring opportunities, especially in the second period when the Cats bombarded the Middlebury goalie with a multitude of shots. Scoring for Vermont were Chips Uihlein and Ozro Swett.

SALEM STATE 5 - UVM 4

A strong Salem State team was pushed to the limit by Vermont in gaining a 5-4 win over the Cats. State, led by defenseman Timmy Twomey, a former Catamount, jumped out to an early 1-0 lead only to have UVM come right back with a quick score to tie it up. Salem went ahead again, 2-1, but at the end of the first period the Cats regained the lead, 3-2. State tied it at 3-3 early in the second period and then forged ahead on a screaming sixty footer slapped by Twomey. The period ended with Vermont trailing 4-3. Salem scored early in the third period to make it 5-3, but the Cats drew within one on Lee Roy's third goal of the game. It marked Roy's third hat trick of the season and his twenty-first goal of the year, but the Cats were never able to score the equalizer. Paul Dorsey had the other UVM goal in the game.

The loss concluded the season for the Cats who finished with an 8-11 record. Although this may not appear impressive, it is quite respectable considering that UVM played many opponents who place a much greater emphasis on the sport and give many hockey scholarships.

Gain Tie For State Title With Win Over Norwich

UVM's sparkplug Kenny Spalter tries to get pass off against tight UConn defense.

By Bob Bloomenthal

The University of Vermont basketball team will be out to close a most surprising season on a winning note Saturday night when they host St. Lawrence University at the Patrick Gym. In their last outing the Cats assured themselves of a winning season and won a piece of the State Title by defeating Norwich, 96-86.

Thus Vermont enters the St. Lawrence game with an 11-8 record, seven of the losses coming against Yankee Conference opponents. Last year the Hawks turned back the Catamounts, 90-79. The season series stands at 12-12.

Probably the biggest reason for UVM's surprising success this year has been little Kenny Spalter. The 5-9 senior from Brooklyn has paced the Cats in scoring this season with a 16.8 average and has been particularly effective in the clutch this year.

Vermont is not a one man team, however, as three others are averaging in double figures for the year. Co-Captains Milt Goggans and Layne Higgs are hitting at 15.2 and 14.1, respectively, while sophomore Billy Librera has an 11.4 norm.

In the Norwich game, Spalter, a CYNIC All-Star and second team All-Yankee Conference pick, led all scorers with 26 points. Goggans came up with a good game to add 20, while Higgs, Librera, and Alden Hale were also in double figures with 14, 12, and 10, respectively.

Hale has been doing a very good job lately filling in for Russ Boardman, who injured his ankle in the second St. Mike's game. The 6-5 sophomore scored 15 points in the Connecticut game last Saturday before his 10 point performance against Norwich.

In the Kake Walk game against UConn, the Cats were downed, 92-70. Spalter led Vermont with 18 while the Huskies were paced by All-Conference choices Wes Bialosuknia (22) and Bill Corley (19).

Intramural Scoreboard

By Mick Kropsky

Sigma Nu moved into fifth place in the race for the coveted All Sports Trophy as a result of a 70 point first place showing in the Intramural Indoor Track and Field Meet. Close behind the Nus in the meet was Delta Psi with 65 points. Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Theta Chi finished third, fourth, and fifth, respectively.

SAE thus remained in first place in the overall standings for the All Sports Trophy with 439 points. Delta Psi's fine showing in the track meet moved them to within only six points of the front runners with 433 points. Sig Ep and Phi Sigma Delta held onto their third and fourth place positions, while Sigma Nu is now fifth.

The track meet witnessed many outstanding individual performances. Richie Kabat of Phi Sig took first in three events, as well as setting a record. Sig Nu's Art Brown also set a record in the 50 yard dash with a 5.6 timing. Another record fell when Bob Ciulla of Sigma Nu bettered the pole vault mark by one foot with a vault of 12 feet. Other individuals who turned in fine performances were double event winners Weston Cate (Converse), Avery Seaman (Delta Psi), and Dick Catron (Sigma Nu).

Alden Hale shot and rebounded well against tough Connecticut.

Track Team At New Hampshire

UVM's indoor track team travels to Durham, New Hampshire this Saturday to take on the New Hampshire Wildcats in a meet. The Cats will be taking a 3-1 record into the meet.

Again the big gun for Vermont will be senior Don Mayland. In sparking the Catamounts to three wins in four starts, Mayland has chalked up 13 first place finishes, three seconds, and tied for a third. In the process he has established two University and field house records, although neither has come in his former specialty, the pole vault.

Mayland has three firsts and a second in the 50-yard dash, an event he ran for the first time just over a month ago, four firsts in the pole vault, four firsts in the 55-yard low hurdles, two firsts and two seconds in the 55-yard high hurdles, and a tie for third in the high jump.

Other winners for the Cats in their most recent victory over Union include Larry Perlmutter in the long jump, Walt Stowell in the mile run, Jim Dedman in the 600 yard run, Ed Childs in the high jump, Pete Jones in the two mile run, and the mile relay team of Perlmutter, Dedman, John Horton, and Vinnie De-Cesaris.

Coach Archie Post will try to get his team in peak form for the New Hampshire meet as the Yankee Conference meet, which will be held in the Guttererson Field House for the first time is but a week away.

Ski Team 4th In East

The University of Vermont ski team made its shortest trip of the year last week, but was engaged in the biggest meet of the season.

Bob Stone's skiers were one of eleven teams taking part in the Eastern Ski Association Championship at the Middlebury College Winter Carnival. The Catamounts finished fourth in the meet and thus maintained their position as one of the top five teams in the East. Dartmouth edged host Middlebury for the Carnival title.

Vermont had fared extremely well in cross-country in the three previous carnivals, but hasn't been able to put together consistent performances in the alpine and jumping. As a result, the Cats had a third and a pair of fifths in these outings.

The top individual for Stone has been Co-Captain Dave Hos-mer of Syracuse, N.Y. Out with injuries much of last year, Hosmer has a first, third, fourth, and a sixth at Middlebury to show in four grueling cross country races to date. Scott Leake of Bennington and Alan Goedeck of Manchester, N.H. have enabled Vermont to place high in team standings in cross country racing. Also participating in the nordic events are Jeff Marsh of Rochester, N.Y., and Pete Sargent of Hanover, N.H., who will jump.

Sargent also takes part in two alpine events as do Co-Captain Pete Donaghy and Don Miller of Burlington, Bruce Latelle of Springfield, and Carson Loomis of DeWitt, N.Y.

Stone plans to split the team up this weekend, sending some members to the Norwich Carnival and the rest to the USASA Alpine Championship in North Conway, N.H.

UVM Honors Strickler

The Senate of UVM has voted the awarding of a master's degree posthumously to a former ROTC instructor who died in Viet Nam in January.

Capt. John Strickler had completed his class requirements for his Master of Science degree in commerce and was working on his thesis at the time of his death.

He received his Bachelor of Civil Engineering degree from Cornell University in 1958 and then went on active duty in the Army. He was assigned to the military science department in September of 1962 and was transferred to Viet Nam last April.

UVM Living Costs Rise

Room And Board Will Total $870

The cost of living will rise for UVM students next year, following Board action in increasing room rates from $335 to $400 per person for a multiple room, and $380 to $450 per year for a single room; and from $440 to $470 per year for board.

Robert Tracy of Barre, vice chairman of the Board and chairman of a committee which studied the matter, said the increases are the first room-board increases in several years at UVM. The new total of $870 is in line with other institutions, he said, noting that other New England universities range from $800 to $950. Neighboring St. Michael's College charges $850, he said.

The student activity fee will also be increased beginning with the 1966-67 academic year, from $15 to $17.50. President McCune said the increase had approval of student association leaders, and that it represented a consolidation of fees in that it included provision for payment of senior class fees now assessed separately for the senior class use.

Men students living in UVM residence halls will pay an additional $2, the funds to be assigned for use of the governing bodies in each of the residence halls.

The Board also authorized the University to enter into a contract with Saga Food Service for the coming year. President McCune said Saga has had the contract for the past 10 years and "we are very satisfied. We were one of their first and larger universities and they are proud of their association with us and do a good job for us."

Women students have been to the polls and elected officers for the Women's Student Government Association (WSGA) for 1966-67.

Theo Russell will head WSGA for this coming year.

Theo Russell of South Glens Falls, N.Y., was elected president. Janet Levine of Schenectady, N.Y., vice president, Pamela Lovell of Burlington, treasurer, and Barbara Montgomery of Newburgh, N.Y., secretary.

Rae Newcomb of North Haven, Conn., was elected chairman of the judiciary committee and Lynn Wilson of Rutland the secretary to judiciary. Elected as senior judiciary members were Nancy Waldron of Pittsfield, Mass., and Elizabeth Bradspies of Amityville, N.Y. Junior members elected were Nancy Gear of Farmington, Conn., and Rosemary Marotta of Delmar, N.Y.

Other officers selected were Michele Hennessey of Bellows Falls, house chairman; Nancy Changaris of Tenafly, N.J., assistant house chairman; Claire Kahkola of Bellows Falls, scholarship chairman; Judith Leach of Abington, Mass., social chairman; Judith Roberts of Lexington, Mass., fire marshal; and Ann Persons of South Barre, public relations.

Miss Russell is a junior and had previously served as scholarship chairman of the house committee and as fire marshal.

She is secretary of the junior class, is president of Staff and Sandal, junior honorary; and is a member of the Vermont Conference committee.

All undergraduate women are members of WSGA.

Leadership Conferences Set For 19th

The Student Leadership Conference, which is sponsored by the Student Association with the help of the Dean of Men and Women's Offices, is to be held at the Mt. Philo Inn on Sat., March 19.

A comprehensive program has been set up with the aim of fully developing the leadership potential on this campus. The day will be started off by a keynote speech given by Dean Wilton Pruitt, Dean of Student Personnel Services at Trenton State College and a participant in the National Training Laboratories of Bethel, Maine. The speech will concern the theory of leadership. Then the group chosen to participate in the conference will divide up into discussion groups to discuss the theory of leadership with the specific sub-topics of (1) characteristics and roles of a leader and (2) problems of a leader and how they can be handled on our own campus.

The participants in the conference are going to be chosen from the six major student governing bodies of the university, namely, the IFC, PanHiel, SA, WSGA, and the Men's Residence Halls Council and Assembly. Although the majority of the cost is being acquired through University funds, a small token of $3.00 per person is being charged to pay for the meals. The emphasis is being placed on the members of the sophomore and freshman classes so that the value of the conference will be felt when they assume leadership positions on the campus. A total number of sixty conferees will be chosen to participate.

String Group Will Perform

On Saturday evening, March 12th, The Lane Chamber Arts Series will proudly present The Kroll Quartet.

The program for Saturday evening consists of String Quartet in E flat major K.428 by Mozart, String Quartet in F major Op. 96 ("American") by Dvorak, and String Quartet No. 5 (1962) by Walter Piston. An appearance in Berlin last fall featured the world premiere of Piston's String Quartet No. 5 which was written especially for the Kroll Quartet. Members of the Quartet are William Kroll, violinist, leader and founder; William Stone, violinist; Harry Zaratzian, viola; Avron Twerdowsky, violoncello. This distinguished group of string players has been in almost continuous association for the better part of twenty years.

The group tours annually on the North American continent and in Europe. Its repertoire comprises the entire classical and romantic literature as well as a great number of contemporary works.

Is God Dead ?

By Mimi Morton
The Ides of March marks the opening of the 1966 Vermont Conference entitled "Is God Dead?"

The Ides is, historically, a time of controversies and unrest, (you will recall the murder of Caesar on this day.)

Nonathiest To Speak At VC

The third speaker is John MacQuarrie, Professor of Systematic Theology at Union Theological Seminary. To put it simply, Professor MacQuarrie believes in God. He has done extensive study into the theological views of Hegel, Kierkegaard and Bultmann, and could be considered a conservative Christian existentialist.

Dr. John MacQuarrie

Dr. MacQuarrie received his M.A., Ph.D., and D. Litt. from Glasgow University, Glasgow, Scotland. He was a professor of Systematic Theology at Glasgow from 1953 to 1962. He is presently teaching at Union Theological Seminary, New York. In January of 1965 he was ordained to the diaconate, and in June of 1965 he was ordained a priest.

The University of Vermont students really comprehend the full meaning of this question? Are they aware of the many points of view held by outstanding men in the field of religion? It would be unfair to the students to present this topic to them point blank. Therefore, a Pre-Conference Conference has been scheduled.

The purpose of the Pre-Conference Conference is to have members of the University community present their ideas on the topic and to suggest what might be said by the speakers. Dr. Robert Hall of the Philosophy and Religion Department, Mr. William Paden also of the Philosophy and Religion Department and The Reverend Donald Boyer of the University will hold a panel discussion to present the topic and answer any students' questions. The Pre-Conference Conference will be held in the NORTH LOUNGE at 7:30 P.M. on TUESDAY, MARCH 15.

Bids Opened

The Board authorized the University to advertise for bids and award a contract to the lowest qualified bidder for construction of a new University Store.

Architect for the project is J. Henderson Barr of Burlington. The estimated budget is $400,000.

Financing of the project will be by a loan to be retired over a period of time from gross income of the Store.

The present Store has occupied the same space in Waterman since that building was completed in 1941.

Enrollment has grown substantially, from 1300 before WW II to 3300 right after the war, and to close to 4500 this past fall.

EDITORIAL...

This year has seen the emergence of two rather disappointing extremes of humor out of the week of Kake Walk festivities. In contrast to the low grade of humor (leaving nothing to our imagination) which characterized Pops Night, this year's Kake Walk skits were plagued by an almost antiseptic and, therefore, colorless brand of comic relief. But, in the case of the Kake Walk skits, their humorous shortcomings were externally imposed upon three otherwise masterful productions. For this The Kake Walk Committee is responsible. They are to be congratulated on a conservative, almost puritanical, philosophy of censorship, resulting in three skits which were more sterile than hysterical.

Perhaps an example is in order here. The cue for the line in question was, "You were expecting maybe Jack Fey?", to which one of the "girls" in the scene was to have replied, "No, just Expecting." "Bad taste!", proclaimed the austere board of censors we call the Kake Walk Committee. Pregnancy is, of course, an unspeakable abstraction; women never expect babies, and their children must, therefore, come as quite a surprise. Similar complaints were registered by the other two fraternities.

Lest anyone mistakenly conclude that what we are suggesting is that Kake Walk needs a little more smut, let us suggest sophistication as a more accurate noun. The point is that Kake Walk is a twentieth-century college weekend in Burlington, not a seventeenth century Sunday School picnic in the Massachusetts Bay Colony.

Otherwise, the Kake Walk Committee did a great job.

Letters To The Editor Tributes To Our Past Editor, Larry Miller

"A Giant Stride"

To the Editor:

It is perhaps out of fashion to address a letter to the editor which does not express disagreement or perhaps violent protest. However, as an alumnus and a parent, I have been so impressed with the tremendous improvement in the CYNIC this year, the impulse to express this opinion has been irresistible.

In content, greater coverage of campus activities, better writing and improved readability, it seems to me you have made a giant stride.

Congratulations to you and your staff.

Very truly yours,

William C. Cronin, '33

Improvements Noted

To the Editor:

As a new CYNIC management takes over publication, I would like to take this opportunity to commend you and your staff for the excellent job and community service performed in providing a truly improved and enlightened newspaper. Not only has there been significant advances in format, but the quality of writing (present company excluded) has been considerably upgraded. It is very easy to be critical of a newspaper without understanding many of the problems involved, and then sit idly by and do nothing about the situation. In my opinion the pride you and your staff have exhibited in publishing a campus newspaper of quality was clearly in evidence with your recent Kake Walk issue.

On behalf of the Placement Office, I would like to extend to you and your management every good wish for success in your post-graduate plans.

Sincerely yours,

Douglas O. Hanau

THE SCEPTIC

By Lou Blumenfeld

Panic, panic, all ye mortals, for the time nears whereat ye may be called to the service of the Lord.

That's right, sit there and worry. Do not work, discuss, fear, sweat, lie awake nights, cry, moan, complain; be bitter, but heavens, do not study. For soon the day may come when college students will be drafted if their grades are not acceptable.

Certainly worrying makes sense. If you sit and worry maybe you can think of a way to avoid the draft. Forget it! There are many people who think of methods for draft dodging full time. These men work for the government — their methods of dodging are used to counter yours. And you always thought counter-insurgency was a military tactic.

If you haven't already noticed, worrying about being drafted can do only one thing: produce low grades. Low grades, of course, produce the strengthened possibility that you will be drafted. Only good grades can successfully combat the draft.

A song goes: "Que sera, sera;" "what will be will be." If you follow that, you will be free from worry. If you do not, what you will be, will be a soldier. Which will you be?

I recently noticed, written on a desk in a classroom (more people around here write on desks than on paper) "draught beer, not students." This produces the interesting image of a student pouring forth from a tap into a glass. As absurd as this sounds, think about it. Students may yet pour forth from a tap, the University (which is being tapped) into a glass, the U.S. Army, wherein they shall be held for two years.

These thoughts are most interesting and, for my part, enjoyable. No, I am not exempt, I too may be drafted, but I refuse to worry about it, for, as it is written (in this column), what can worrying do besides increase the possibility? As has been said, "We have nothing to fear but fear itself." Let us learn from the wise men of history. Let us leave the army until that time comes and let us spend our years at UVM studying and enjoying ourselves, for these are our best years (or so they tell us).

Donors Thanked Blood Drive Highly Successful

To the Editor:

The entire Red Cross Blood Center staff joins me in expressing our appreciation for the very successful three-day UVM blood drawing held last week. The final total of 641 pints not only set a new record for the University but also for the entire Vermont-New Hampshire region.

Through your columns we would like to express our appreciation to each one of these 641 students, faculty and staff members who responded to this appeal. Thanks to their help, we were able to continue providing all the blood required by our hospital patients.

The Ethan Allen Rifles, with David Pietsch as Chairman of the project, together with his associates, Joseph DiGeronimo, Peter McGregor and Paul Tierney, did an outstanding job in organizing the drawing, and in enlisting the support of scores of students who assisted our staff in processing the donors. Our staff agrees that the assistance provided was the best yet in the many years drawings have been held on the University of Vermont campus.

We would also like to express our appreciation to Mr. David Bain, Coordinator of Student Activities and the Billings Center Student Governing Board. Mr. Bain's suggestions proved most helpful in eliminating bottlenecks encountered at the drawing last October. Everyone here agrees that the use of the Billings Center Lounge was a major factor in the success of the drawing.

Sincerely,

Edward R. Stearn

Trustees Announce Personnel Actions

The February meeting of UVM's Board of Trustees marked a number of key personnel actions.

The University will tap a native New Englander and now associate director of libraries at the University of Florida, to become director of libraries at Vermont effective July 1.

A graduate of Yale who earned his B.S. in library science at Columbia, Paul B. Keabian began his library career at Yale in 1939. His background includes 15 years' service with the New York Public Library and a year's service as a program specialist in library development at the University of Baghdad under Ford Foundation sponsorship in 1961-62. He joined the University of Florida staff in August of 1963.

Born in Watch Hill, R.I., and a veteran of WW II Air Force service, he is a member of numerous professional associations.

The Board also approved establishment of the new post of assistant dean of the College of Technology, and named Dr. Joseph Izzo, associate professor of mathematics, to fill the position.

Dr. Izzo is a graduate of the University of Illinois, where he also earned the M.S. He holds the Ph.D. from Columbia University. A veteran of WW II Navy service, he joined the Vermont faculty in 1956.

The Best Of Best Whither Thou Goest....

By Prof. James J. Best

The University is currently facing a crisis, one of which most of the student body is unaware. It does not concern whether the library should have closed stacks or whether the infirmary should be part of the hospital or whether faculty salaries are too low. The current crisis involves a far more basic issue - should UVM be a college or a university?

While the question may appear simple-minded it is not; the answer will determine the future scope and direction of the school. If UVM is to be a first-rate college it must place its primary emphasis on teaching, with high faculty salaries, higher admission standards, and an intellectual community of faculty and students. If UVM is to be a first-rate university it must place increased emphasis on research and graduate studies, while recognizing that undergraduate education is one, but only one, of the many functions of a university. To achieve excellence as either a college or university will require a serious commitment of time, energy, money and personnel. More important, it will require agreement on long range goals and strong leadership; lack of either will result in UVM becoming either a third-rate college or a fourth-rate university.

One major question mark, of course, is President McCune. After a year of "learning the ropes," he must provide concrete evidence of his ability and willingness to lead the University. Strong leadership will go far toward resolving the University's crisis.

In another vein: The other night two of my students dropped by our apartment to chat with my wife and I. If I had said two "friends" rather than two "students" there would be no cause for comment. But the thought that students should seek social contact with faculty members frightens some students and faculty members. All too many people feel that although faculty and students are part of the same institution their contact should be limited to the classroom. Even contact within the classroom should be limited to a one-way flow, from instructor to student. Students feel that any contact outside of class appears, to faculty and peers, as "brown-nosing"; subsequently, non-classroom contact is limited to discussion of term papers, exams, and grades. Faculty members, on the other hand, often don't want to take the time to talk with their students - being occupied with more "important" business or feeling that students have little to talk about besides term papers, exams, and grades. Thus, my two visitors are cause for comment.

Tuition Tax Credit Possible

The high cost of higher education is much discussed these days by the professional educators, politicians, students and, understandably, by the students' parents.

Ways must be found to ease the growing burden of tuition and fees. New sources of scholarship funds must be created. These objectives must be attained with a minimum of senseless controls and without skyrocketing administrative costs. The situation calls for fresh, imaginative thinking - precisely the kind of thinking that created the tuition tax credit proposal that soon will come to a vote in Congress.

Under the tuition tax credit concept, each taxpayer will be allowed to subtract from his tax bill a specified share of the amount he spends for college tuition and fees. Since taxpayers will be permitted to pay tuitions for any student and receive credits, new sources of funds for scholarships will be created.

As explained in the Ribicoff-Dominick bill, the maximum tuition tax credit would be $325. For example, a parent or individual who paid out $250 in college tuition or fees could subtract that amount from his tax bill. If his bill was $750, he would send the Federal government a check for $500.

Through tuition tax credits, parents and students will be aided. They will have more freedom to choose from among the nation's many fine public and independent colleges and universities.

Last but not least, we provide activities as well as an ideal location to allow you to let-off steam. This is a dry campus, but for those of you who are over 21, there is the Mill in Winooski. For those of you under 21, there is a regular ferry service and a bridge to N.Y. State. I'm sure that you have all heard of Kake Walk. Its functions are to unify the campus, dispell apathy, and to provide an activity where you can vent your emotions.

Let me warn you freshmen, that there is a paradox to your situation. Recall yesterday when the dean told you to look first to your right and then to your left and remember the faces, because they wouldn't be there when you graduate. Now that we have you here we will force many of you to leave. There are only a limited number of beds at UVM and Burlington suffers a similar shortage. Freshmen, if you want to stay, you had better learn to play our little game, and play it the way we tell you to!"

I'm still here, trudging away playing the game. Believe it or not I even have a new advisor, Professor Dulltone, a very distinguished research scientist.

STUDENTES

By Margaret Crane

As I was sitting in the library this afternoon, my mind began to wander. It came to rest on my second day on campus, to the hour when I first met my advisor, the man who introduced me to one of the greatest adventures of my life, college. I was assigned to Professor Glue of the Forestry Department. Why, I still don't know. I came to UVM as a dental hygiene student. When I asked him why I had been assigned to him, he told me that that was the way in which this bureaucracy was run and that I must learn to accept it for what it was. There were, I later found out, no less than fourteen offices which I had to visit in order to change my advisor.

"CREDO UNIVERSITES"

It was not a matter of personality that made me shy away from Professor Glue. It was just that he kept insisting that I take animal husbandry, and I couldn't find time for it in my busy schedule. Far from feeling anything negative for him, I now respect him and thank Heaven that he was kind enough to crack my disillusioned concept of what college is all about. I recorded his, "Credo Universitas." It is as follows.

"Welcome Freshmen, to UVM. My name is Dr. Glue. I will be your academic advisor for the next four years, if I can get tenure. You may now be unfamiliar with that term, but you will soon be fighting for the same thing yourselves.

WHAT IS IMPORTANT

You, I am sure, have come to college with many misconceptions. Most laymen think that the purpose of a university is to educate. They see the stacks of books, some of which eventually get read, and the students busily running back and forth to and from classes. But in this case seeing should not be believing. Education, as such, weighs lightly in the balance of reasons for your being here. Of far greater weight are several socio-economic functions which the university provides.

Many of you have heard that most women come to college to find a man. Boys, please realize that besides this being both true and natural, you too are here looking for a mate of your own mentality. Unfortunately, the university's admissions policy sometimes makes this rather difficult. Most of the females on campus fare outshine the males. However, although some of you may be left out, the majority who are looking for "mothers" will find the type readily available here on campus.

UVM'S DUTY TO VERMONT

Economically, the university is of great importance. To the State of Vermont we are source of income from the money spent by out-of-staters. They not only spend their money in our shops, and state liquor stores; they also provide employment for the employees of this university, from professors to cooks to our efficient police force. Another of our economic functions, similar to that of the armed forces, is to keep you young people off the labor market as long as possible. If you were all free to work, no amount of planning in Washington could keep the unemployment rate even near an acceptable level.

Want to be a leader and double your chances for success in life? You can, by earning both a degree and an Army officer's commission at the same time... even though you may not have taken ROTC training in your first two years!

Through a new program, you can be commissioned as a Second Lieutenant after taking two years of Army ROTC training while you complete your studies for a college degree. You can qualify for this program by attending a special six-week summer training camp after your sophomore year and then completing the ROTC Advanced Course in your junior and senior years of college.

Here's what ROTC training and an officer's commission will do for you:

- It will qualify you to fulfill your military obligation as an officer.
- You will learn to organize, motivate, and lead others.
- You will develop leadership qualities that many college men miss—self-discipline, physical stamina, poise, bearing, the acceptance of responsibility and other qualities that contribute to success in either a civilian or military career.
- You will receive $40 per month during your junior and senior years, plus pay and mileage for summer training.

The training and experience you will receive through Army ROTC will pay off for the rest of your life. A decision to take advantage of this new program could be one of the most important you will ever make.

You owe it to yourself to investigate this new important opportunity.

Student Ambassador Program Initiated

A new program has been initiated at UVM called the Student Ambassador Program.

The basic purpose of the program is to generate greater interest in, and foster a better understanding of those countries which are becoming increasingly important in world affairs. Through the experiment, at least one UVM student will receive an all-expense paid trip overseas to one country, and the rest of us will gain insight into the cultural, economic, and political thought of other countries today.

Sponsored fundamentally by the Experiment in International Living (located in Putney, Vermont) and administered through the UVM class officers, the Student Ambassador Program will get underway this semester. The all-expense paid trip which one of you has the opportunity to take will begin in June 1966 and last for nine weeks.

India is the country which will be visited this year. Because the Indian government supplies $250 to encourage American students to tour their country under the experiment, and the experiment itself supplies $250 to those groups initiating the Ambassador Program, the amount of money which needs to be raised on campus is $475. If this amount to be raised is adequately surpassed, a second UVM student will be sent to Chile.

This brings us to the question of how the program is to be carried out. In order to sponsor the Student Ambassador Program at UVM, we must all help raise the finances needed to cover the expenses of the one of you who will actually tour India this summer. How can you help? For many of you, this will mean nothing more than attending a dance, or having supper. For the more energetic, there are many outlets for your talents which will make the program a real success. Soon there will be much more information published on the hows, whats, wheres and whens.

Who may make the expense-paid trip to India? Anyone who has attained at least a sophomore status at the university may go with the exception of seniors, who may not go unless they are returning to the university next year as graduate students. The reason for this limitation is that the Student Ambassador from UVM will, when he or she returns in the fall, be speaking to various organizations and groups on his experiences, sharing his insights about the country with us. Also the UVM Ambassador taking this trip will be called upon to help perpetuate the program. Details about applications will be published soon.

Your class officers invite you to take an active interest in the program. The number of students who may take the trip will be increased next year so that more UVMers may take advantage of a really great opportunity. Through the Student Ambassador Program, many of us can benefit if we will only be interested enough to do so.

Watch the CYNIC for further information or contact you class officers.

Vandalism?

Three times within a period of five weeks, the needle in one of the listening booths (Billings Center) has been broken. Perhaps it is only troublesome since both occurrences have been in the same booth, or one may think in terms of vandalism.

Either way, carelessness seems to be obvious, since the needles cost $19.90 each.

Students Attend Model Gen. Assm.

The 1966 National Model General Assembly is now being held in New York City. It will take place at the Statler Hilton Hotel, the United Nations Headquarters, and Fordham University, March 10-13.

The purpose of the National Model General Assembly is primarily to encourage college and university students to actively study and learn about the United Nations and its multi-faceted procedures, operations, and goals. This is done by providing the opportunity for students to participate in an accurate facsimile of the United Nations General Assembly. Each school has been assigned a particular country to represent, and the delegates are expected to have made themselves experts on the role played by that particular nation within the United Nations.

This is the first year that The University of Vermont is among the many other colleges and universities to participate in the Assembly. It is sending six delegates headed by Mr. Schmokel of the history department. The delegates are Joan Clark, Elaine Farrell, John Stevens, Doug Chi-offi, Ted Merritt, and Mary Ellen Anderson, all of the Class of 1968. They are representing the Public of Liberia in Africa. Each heads a particular committee concerning the various aspects of the country and has resolved different courses of action which can aid the country nationally and internationally.

The Republic of Liberia has close ties with the United States and is of particular interest to the delegates for it has certain connections with UVM. A former UVM professor, Professor Burgess, picked out the site for its founding. Also, a UVM alumnus, Jehudi Ashman, was the real founder of the colony and was an effective agent in solving many of its problems. Although Liberia still has many problems to cope with, it is making fast progress under its liberal president, President W. Tubman. The delegates from UVM hope to make substantial proposals that can be of concrete assistance in its development.

Applications may be obtained from the Information Desk, Office of the Director of Student Activities, Billings Center, and must be returned to Mrs. Newton by March 25, 1966. No applications will be accepted after this date.

Take Courses By Examination?

Chicago, Ill. - (I.P.) - Loyola University has outlined a new credit plan that allows a student to earn full academic credit in a course by taking only the final semester examination.

Any full-time University student may earn up to four hours credit without attending class. A maximum fifteen semester-hours of credit can be earned in this way. The fee for any one examination equals the cost of one semester-hour's tuition.

The student, in order to take advantage of this plan, must first obtain the signature of the chairman of the department offering the desired course. The chairman decides, on the basis of any criteria he chooses, whether the student should be allowed to take the exam. The same procedure must then be repeated at the office of the dean of the specific college.

"Encounter"

Coffee Shop Opens Tonite

"The Encounter," UVM's coffee house, opens for the first time tonight at 7:30 in what was the lounge of St. Anselm's Chapel. "The Encounter" as its name suggests, is a meeting place for UVM students, faculty, and personnel.

The coffee house will be open tomorrow and Sunday night as well as tonight; after this week it will be open four nights a week, Thursday through Sunday, from 7:30 until half an hour before Redstone curfew.

Each night a program is planned featuring local and campus talent, and other programs may include poetry reading, play readings, discussions, and a variety of other possibilities. Customers are encouraged to sing and play their own guitars when there is not one else performing.

Waiters and help are volunteers; because "The Encounter" is non-profit, prices are reasonable.

If you're not doing anything tonight plan to drop over to "The Encounter!"

WAKE ME WHEN IT'S OVER

The trouble with early morning classes is that you're too sleepy. At late morning classes you're too hungry. At early afternoon classes you're too logy. At late afternoon classes you're too hungry again. The fact is—and we might as well face it—there is no good time of day to take a class.

What shall we do then? Abandon our colleges to the ivy? I say no! I say America did not become the hope of mankind and the world's largest producer of butterfats and tallows by running away from a fight!

If you're always too hungry or too sleepy for class, then let's hold classes when you're not too hungry or sleepy; namely, while you're eating or sleeping.

Classes while eating are a simple matter. Just have a lecturer lecture while the eaters eat. But watch out for noisy foods. I mean who can hear a lecturer lecture when everybody is crunching celery or matzo or like that? Serve quiet stuff—like anchovy paste on a doughnut, or steaming bowls of lamb fat.

Now let us turn to the problem of learning while sleeping. First, can it be done?

Yes, it can. Psychologists have proved that the brain is definitely able to assimilate information during sleep. Take, for instance, a recent experiment conducted by a leading Eastern university (Stanford). A small tape recorder was placed under the pillow of the subject, a freshman named Wrobert Wright. When Wrobert was fast asleep, the recorder was turned on. Softly, all through the night, it repeated three statements in Wrobert's slumbering ear:

1. Herbert Spencer lived to the age of 109 and is called "The Founder of English Eclectic Philosophy."
2. The banana plant is not a tree but a large perennial herb.
3. The Archduke Ferdinand was assassinated in 1914 at Sarajevo by a young nationalist named Mjilas Cvetnik, who has been called "The Trigger of World War I."

When Wrobert awoke in the morning, the psychologists said to him, "Herbert Spencer lived to the age of 109. What is he called?"

Wrobert promptly answered, "Perennial Herb."

Next they asked him, "What has Mjilas Cvetnik been called?"

Wrobert replied, "Perennial Serb."

Finally they said, "Is the banana plant a tree?"

"To be honest," said Wrobert, "I don't know too much about bananas. But if you gents want any information about razor blades, I'm your man."

"Well," said the psychologists, "can you tell us a blade that shaves closely and cleanly without nicking, pricking, scratching, scraping, scoring, gouging, grinding, flaying or flensing?"

"Yes, I can," said Wrobert. "Personna® Stainless Steel Blades. Not only does Personna give you a true luxury shave, but it gives you heaps and gobs and bushels and barrels of true luxury shaves—each one nearly as truly luxurious as the first."

"Land's sake!" said the psychologists.

"Moreover," said Wrobert, "Personna is available not only in the Double Edge style blade, but also in the Injector style blade."

"Great balls of fire!" said the psychologists.

"So why don't you rush to your dealer and get some Personnas at once?" said Wrobert.

"We will," said the psychologists, twinkling, "but there is something we have to do first."

Whereupon they awarded Wrobert an honorary L.L.B. (Lover of Luxury Blades) degree, and then, linking arms, they sang and danced and bobbed for apples till the campfire had turned to embers.

The Forgotten Factors

By Douglas O. Hanau, Director of UVM Placement Service

There are a number of factors rarely taken into consideration in deciding on the type of work you want to do, and yet they have an enormous influence on the surroundings in which you will work and the conditions under which you will work. Some of the most important of these are: a) Big company vs. small company?

b) At home or abroad?

c) Work for yourself or for an employer?

First, we have this question of largeness vs. smallness. Which is to be preferred depends upon your personality and interests. Generally speaking a large employer can offer more opportunities with higher salaries etc., on a long range basis. On the other hand, a man's ability may stand out sooner and more prominently in a small business. He is likely to go ahead much faster during the first few years, but he may reach a certain salary level, finding that he cannot advance any further because he is in a family-owned business. Or there simply are not enough good jobs to go around. Furthermore, in the area of benefits such as tuition refund for continuing education, stock participation, medical, etc., a large employer may be in a better position to provide you with more than his smaller counterpart.

The second problem is whether to take a job at home or abroad. There seems to be a popular fallacy among many of our students that companies send a man abroad for a limited period of time and then bring him back for an executive job. First of all you have to spend many years learning the business here before being sent overseas.

Also many American employers in foreign countries will tend to hire natives over Americans in order to benefit from the very background we are talking about. Many students are attracted to foreign employment because of the glamor. You will find that your job is like any other, except that it is a long way from home.

The third problem is whether to go into business for yourself or to work for an employer. If you are without training or experience, the odds are tremendously against you in your own business. Chances of succeeding with a small business of your own are much less today than they were in the past. Competition is more severe and, as a rule, far more capital is required than the individual is able to supply, but, some people would rather take orders from themselves.

Probably the antithesis of working for yourself is working for the federal, state, or municipal civil service. Examinations for a variety of jobs are held every year. These are some excellent jobs and worth your looking into. The Placement Office has some information and your local post office can help.

Before leaving this topic, I should point out that there are a number of other forgotten factors such as pressure, relocation, travel, to name but a few. I have emphasized in previous articles that before looking for a job you must make a plan. Too many seniors are inclined to build a career in a hit-and-miss fashion. Some of the problems you must consider have already been covered in this series. The first is the question of what you have to sell, that is, your own training and aptitudes. The second is where you want to sell it, that is, the type of employer that most interests you. Your next, and most difficult, question is how to sell it.

McCune Will Initiate New Honors Programs

* President Shannon McCune was guest speaker at an Honors Dinner Monday for faculty and students.

Speaking of his early years as a student, Dr. McCune joked, "I frankly was fairly . . . dumb! Now I think they call them slow starters." To laughter he stated that he had been third from the bottom of his class before he became motivated (of course there were only 11 in the class). He then pointed out that his entire class completed college and only one failed to pick up a Ph.D. or equivalent.

Dr. McCune indicated that his participation in an honors program (he wrote a paper on the geography of Korea) had given him an impetus to work on his own and to focus his studies on specific subjects. His interests have continued, for he read passages from a book soon to be published which he has written on Korea.

UVM TO LEAD IN HONORS

The President said that UVM was the first state university to develop an honors program, and that he plans to begin several other honors-related programs designed to provide UVM with an intellectually stimulating environment.

Dr. McCune spoke of "courses by examination" (which UVM does have), scholarships for honor students, and a program to attract potential honors students to UVM.

The President also wants to initiate an honors system to consist of John Dewey scholars, James Marsh fellows and ten student-nominated Torrey professors.

Dr. McCune expressed hope that quests for knowledge by joint faculty-student research teams might become commonplace and suggested the establishment of an honor house on campus.

$500,000 Grant Awarded UVM

A $500,000, five-year W.K. Kellogg Foundation grant to the College of Medicine was a highlight of a meeting of UVM's Board of Trustees.

The Kellogg grant, which will help strengthen medical departments of anatomy, microbiology, physiology, and medicine, and help establish the recently authorized department of physical medicine and rehabilitation, was part of a total of more than $1,300,000 in gifts, grants and scholarships accepted by the Board.

Included was over $670,000 in teaching and research grants (a complete list will follow) in addition to the $500,000 Kellogg grant; more than $139,000 in gifts; and over $27,000 in scholarship funds. The greatest share of the gift, grant and scholarship total is earmarked by the donors' terms for specific purposes.

President Shannon McCune said the Kellogg grant comes "at a point where the impetus for superior quality medical education can be greatly accelerated."

He cited new medical construction at Vermont, "a faculty augmented by new blood, and the vigorous leadership of Dean Robert J. Slater and Associate Dean Edward C. Andrews," and said the Kellogg grant, "superimposed on the regular operating budget of the College of Medicine, will be instrumental in setting the course of the College for years to come."

The Unusual Is Usual At UVM

By Margaret Crane
People are waking up! And they have opinions. Here are two.

Dear Miss Crane,
In an age of mass-production when human beings are beginning to look alike, do the same dances and drive similar cars, there is very little left for individual expression. Therefore, to retain some semblance of sanity and individuality, we do sprout beards and being practical, attempt more suitable hairstyles for such a cold climate. It saves on earmuffs.

Not being a red-blooded American, I disagree with Mrs. Prudish's statements about the types of men who wear long hair and/or beards. Hoodlums do not grow beards; they bristle. Queers are usually looking for attractive mates and in most countries it is generally accepted that they do not grow beards. As for little boys, with patience they grow 'beards' to hide from mothers who live in a co-educational world but who refuse to accept the fact. More men are wearing beards today because they are further losing their identity in times when women are even buying H.I.S. or M.A.N. trousers because of their slimline; they fit better with cow - "boy" boots.

Good luck UVM, with your radical approach on the co-educational dormitories you plan to establish in the near future.

Signed

Ted Feather
Luanshya

Central Africa

Dear Miss Crane:

In response to the letter from a Burlington citizen which you printed in your March 4 issue (#28), we, as two UVM male students, would like to put in our two bits. We would like to point out right now that we do not wear our hair long, nor do we cultivate beards. However, we believe that those who do have every right to do so. We think that a person should be allowed to look as sloppy as he pleases. The impression he wants to make on others is up to him. Of course, he will have to make a definite change in his appearance if he plans to obtain or keep the decent job for which his present education is preparing him.

We would like to say at this point that we believe that a properly trimmed beard (together with a decent haircut) is anything but sloppy. (Let your son grow a beard and a mole and he may turn out to be President.)

The proposed April first demonstration (and we couldn't think of a better day for it) would cause nothing but discontent among students and the "professors who are Democrats."

We repeat, if someone wants to look like a slob, let him.

Sincerely,

Howie A. Peer

Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra

Rare Works Heard

By Ken Klonsky
The Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Max Rudolf, presented a Lane Series concert on Thurs. night, March 3. The program consisted of four rarely heard works and a popular encore.

The first selection was the suite from the Ballet "Die Geschopfe des Prometheus," by Ludwig Van Beethoven. It struck this reviewer as being a flat and listless interpretation. Beethoven must be played with far more gusto and emotion to have its full effect.

The second offering was an ultra, ultra-modern work by Gunther Schuller called "American Triptych: Three Studies in Texture." The piece is in three parts based on three modern paintings by Alexander Calder, Jackson Pollock and Stuart Davis respectively. Unfamiliarity with a modern work like this tends to breed intolerance and disgust.

The Calder piece sounded like background music for "War of the Worlds." However, the part based on Davis' "Swing Landscape," was an excitingly played, jazz-like piece of music.

The Bela Bartok "Dance Suite For Orchestra" was first played in the 'U.S. by the Cincinnati Symphony. The melodious and playful Hungarian music was given an interesting interpretation.

By intermission, the orchestra had yet to display its heart. One wondered if the final scheduled work of the evening, Carl Nielsen's "Symphony No. 4" might not bring the audience to life. The symphony was written during World War I and its theme, that music, and only music, can express "the elemental will to life," was a beacon of light in a pessimistic world. With an explosive outburst, the orchestra had finally surged to life. This symphony was a total triumph for

$1200 CORSE FELLOWSHIP

Applications for the Corse Fellowship of $1200 will be accepted by Dean W. H. Macmillan, Graduate College, through April 15.

The orchestra, who seemed to reach impossible heights in the driving conclusion. By the enthusiastic ovation, it was evident that most of the audience had been deeply moved. A brief encore, Wagner's "Prelude to Act III of Lohengrin," was played to perfection.

After a slow beginning, the Cincinnati Symphony caught the stunned listener completely off guard. The Nielsen Symphony and the Wagner prelude made the evening worthwhile.

This fellowship, established through the bequest of Frederick M. Corse, '88, is awarded annually to a graduate of UVM holding the Bachelor of Arts degree, to a senior or to a recent graduate with the proper qualifications.

Applicants, either young men or young women, must have majored in English, or a classical language, or two of the European languages, and must be preparing for a career in college or university teaching. Exceptional ability, character, and capability for independent thought are considerations.

Application blanks may be obtained from Dean Macmillan's office, 107 Waterman Building.

A TRIBUTE TO THE COACHES

No matter how well Vermont's athletic teams fare, the quality of the coaching staffs in all sports cannot be praised enough. Only the small amount of scholarships prevents UVM from being a true Eastern power in all these sports, but the coaches have done a marvelous job with what they have been given to work with.

In Bob Clifford and John Coons the football team undoubtedly has two top-notch mentors. Their record, especially in the past three years (6-2, 7-1, and 6-2), speak for itself.

During the winter Athletic Director Ed Donnelly has four excellent coaches working for him. Basketball coach Art Loche took a mediocre at best team from a year ago and formed it into a winner in his first year at the helm. Ski coach Bob Stone, although getting no financial aid whatsoever, guided his team to a fourth place in the Eastern Championships this year while competing against tough competition.

Jim Cross did an outstanding job with the hockey team this past season although using an all-sophomore first line against such perennial powers as Salem State, New Hampshire, and A.I.C. Cross was recently honored as Coach of the Year in Vermont hockey by a local paper.

If anyone doubts Les Leggett's ability as a coach, just ask one of the swim team members about the physical conditioning Leggett demands of his performers. Les, who doubled as end coach on the football team for the past three years, has decided to give that post up to devote more time to his swimmers.

Both Leggett and Cross must do their recruiting without the use of financial aid as a lure, but their results have been amazingly successful.

When the UVM baseball team takes the field for its home opener next month, a genius will be at work in the dugout. Colorful Ralph Lapointe has yet to have a losing season in his 14 years as coach here. His team has again been picked as one of the best in the East for the coming season.

Thus, although most fans credit the players for a team's success in college athletics, the coaches play an integral role. The college athlete is still an unfinished product and much of his success depends on the coach. UVM has been fortunate to be blessed with some of the best.

Cat-Tracks—By glancing at the final basketball statistics it is easy to see how the Catamounts moved from a 7-13 record to 12-8 in one year despite the loss of three starters. . . . As a team the Cats made 44.7 per cent of their field goals this year compared to 38.5 per cent a year ago. . . . On offense the team improved their output to 78.1 points a game from 72.1 last year. . . . Coach Loche's stress on defense can be seen in that UVM gave up 77.3 points per game this year as compared to last year's 87.8 average. . . . Individually, Kenny Spalter was the top scorer (17.1) and foul shooter (78.3 per cent). . . . Milt Goggans was the team's best rebounder (10.3) and field goal shooter (50.8) per cent.

As the new sports editor of the CYNIC there are still many positions open for people willing to write or otherwise work on my staff. Anyone interested should contact me at the CYNIC Office or by phoning UN 2-2311. Anyone is welcome as no prejudices are held due to fraternity affiliation, or any such matters.

Track Team Hosts YC Meet

Seven defending champions will be on hand to try to retain their crowns when the third indoor track and field championships are held at the Gutterson Field House on Saturday.

Five of the seven champions also hold the Conference records in their particular events.

On hand from Rhode Island, which won the team title last year, are Fred Collingwood who took high jump honors in 1965 with a leap of 6-5 1/4, Larry Girouard, who captured long jump Paurels with a leap of 22-5 1/2, and Gary Pace who toured the 600 in 1:13.

Jon Kirkland of Maine won the 1000 last winter with a time of 2:15.4 while the other record holder is Don Mayland of Vermont. The captain of the Catamount squad and with 14 first places to his credit in five meets this year, Mayland has won the pole vault two years running and holds the record at 14-3/4.

Mayland also competes in the high and low hurdles and the 50 yard dash. Coach Archie Post is hoping for point-getting performances from Jim Dedman (600), Pete Jones (2 mile), Walt Stowell (mile), Ed Childs (high jump), Larry Perlmutter (long jump), and Pete Stickney (weights).

Other defending performers are Terry Carpenter of Massachusetts in the mile and Maine's Craig Hurd in the 35-pound weight.

Saturday's meet starts at 10 a.m. with the long jump, pole vault, 35-pound weight, and shot put. Dash and hurdle trials and semi-finals are set for 10:30 a.m. The high jump starts at 1:30 p.m. All other finals start at 2 p.m.

Milt Goggans, Kenny Spalter, and Layne Higgs pause after finishing their basketball career winning note while leading UVM to victory over St. Lawrence. (Credit: Robinson, SPS)

The University of Vermont basketball team closed out its season on a winning note last week by trampling St. Lawrence University, 86-65. The Catamounts thus finished the year with a 12-8 mark, including five wins in their last six games.

It was the final game in the collegiate careers of seniors Ken Spalter, and Co-Capt. Layne Higgs and Milt Goggans and all three came through with good nights. Spalter led the team with 23 as he averaged 21.8 points a game for the last six of the season. Higgs finished with 22 to raise his final season average to 14.5 while Goggans had 17 to finish at 15.3 for the year. Junior Bruce Hanna, playing with added confidence, was also in double figures with 13.

Vermont thus loses through graduation their top three scorers for next year's team. Returning will be 6-2 Billy Librera (11.2), 6-5 Russ Boardman (7.2) lars. Also coming back are junior Don Longley and sophomores Sandy McLeod, Alden Hale and Bruce Hanna.

The real promise of next year's team, however, comes from this season's 9-1 team. Top prospects are Dave Lapointe who averaged 15.5 and had a game high of 28, Jeff Plunkett, a good shooter, and 5-9 guard Terry

Art Loche—The new head basketball coach made his first year a successful one by having a winning season.

Girl Skiers Place 3rd

The UVM Girls' Ski Team finished up a very successful season with the last of three meets held at Middlebury during Wake Week. Nine schools participated in the meet—UVM placed third in overall team results, behind Middlebury and McGill. In the slalom Linda Andrews, Joanne Bass and B.A. Cunningham placed for UVM. Placing in the giant slalom were Peggy Nutt, second, Joanne Bass and Linda Andrews. The ski team is under the management of Katrina Koziol and coaches are Miss Cochran and Miss Chase of the Women's P.E. Dept.

Ski Team Closes Carnival Season

The University of Vermont ski team closed out the carnival portion of its season by traveling to North Conway and finishing third at the Norwich Carnival.

Coach Bob Stone brought his personnel for the Carnival and entered in four events. Jeff Plunkett, Scott Leake in cross country jumping, and Bob Bertram, Stephens and Carson in alpine.

Hosmer took a six country and eleventh to finish seventh in combined. Leake's finishes in the same placed him eighth in combined.

When three of Vermont's entries in the slalom were disqualified or failed to finish, the team's ranking in the carnival was greatly hampered.

In addition to the Norwich Carnival, three other teams participated in the U.S. Alpine Championship at Mount Mansfield in North Conway. Three were Co-Capt. Stephens, Bruce Latelle, and McCormick. Unfortunately McCormick broke his leg on practice run.

Peggy Nutt, a classmate, took part in the women's slalom and placed sixth in the slalom.

Individual events are the Pineland Ski Carnival and the National meter cross country ship at Andover, Me. the Mackenzie Trophy Lake Placid on March 10, and the National Senior Alpine ship at Stowe on March 11.

Baseball Nine Announces Schedule

Because of the weather factor and a changing academic calendar, the University of Vermont baseball team will have "three seasons in one" this spring.

The "first" season will involve the spring training portion, the annual southern trip in late March and early April. The 74th regular campaign opens in mid-April and finds the Catamounts, defending co-champions of the Yankee Conference, playing 11 of their 16 games.

After a two-week layoff for exams, and commencement for the seniors, Vermont will play its final five games.

During the 1964-65 academic year, the University started on a new semester schedule which moved up commencement by about two weeks. This change necessitated the need of playing last spring's entire 16-game schedule in 19 days.

Although placing a heavy burden on the pitching staff, Coach Ralph Lapointe's team tied Connecticut for the YC crown and walked away with the state title for the 12th time in Lapointe's 14 years as coach.

The 1966 schedule: Southern Trip - March 27, at Seton Hall; 28, at Rider; 29, at George Washington; 30, at Loyola (Baltimore); 31, at University of Baltimore; April 1, at Columbia; 2, at Fairleigh Dickinson (a.m.), at New York University (p.m.)

Regular season - April 18, Norwich; 22-23, at Massachusetts; 26, at New Hampshire; 28, Middlebury; 30, Connecticut; May 1, at St. Michael's (Vt.); 2-3, at Maine; 5, St. Michael's; 7, Rhode Island; 18, at Norwich; 21, at Connecticut; 23, at Middlebury; 25, New Hampshire; 30, at Dartmouth.

ADMINISTRATION DRAFTS NEW HOUSING POLICY

Senior Women Granted Apartments

Dean of Women, Harris

Dean of Men, Patzer

The Decision Makers

By Richard Berk

In a decision unprecedented at the University of Vermont, the administration has ruled that women students who have completed six semesters of college (i.e. most senior women) and all students who have reached the age of 21 by Dec. 31, 1966 will be permitted to live off campus, the ruling to take effect this coming fall.

An official letter outlining the new policy and the philosophy behind it should be distributed to students within the next 48 hours. The essence of this letter is as follows: "Recognizing the commitment of the University of Vermont to educate as many qualified new students as possible within the limits of available physical and faculty resources, and further recognizing that housing ought not to be a deterrent to the education of any qualified student, the following policy for the University is announced by the Student Personnel staff,

Dean of Women, A. Rankin Harris and Dean of Men, Roland D. Patzer, and approved by the President of the University, Dr. Shannon McCune, to become effective for the Fall semester, 1966:

- I. The University will provide housing for all full-time undergraduate students except for commuting students and those who desire to live off campus under the provision of Parts II and III of this policy.
- II. Students above the freshman level who are active or pledges of a fraternity or sorority may register for University residence hall housing or chapter housing.
- III. Both men and women students who have completed six full semesters of college as of June 15, 1966 and also those who reach the age of 21 years as of December 31, 1966 may register for University residence hall housing or off-campus housing.

- IV. The University will not be responsible for the approval of off-campus housing facilities for those eligible under this policy. The Director of Housing, however, will furnish a listing and information on housing facilities that are available in the area."

THE JUSTIFICATION

Some of the principles involved in the administration's establishment of the new housing policy are officially stated as follows:

1. The University is in a position to provide an opportunity for more prospective students to obtain a college education.
2. The University believes that a student usually benefits by living in University residence halls. These benefits are educational and financial in nature. The residence hall program gains in stature and function when those students who live in residence do so on the basis of voluntary acceptance of these educational and financial benefits. Additionally, our society demonstrates by its legal posture that 21 is the chronological age break in the assumption of complete adult responsibility, and therefore University policy ought to afford the student of this age the freedom of choice of residence.

3. Based upon enrollment projections the University anticipates that it will be necessary to continue to provide "temporary" facilities beyond normal housing capacities during the next few years. The justification of the use of these "temporary" facilities is more apparent under the new policy.

The administration offers further insight into the reasoning behind its decision in the statement that, "Historically, the development of a University residence hall philosophy and policy for men and women has been a separate evolution. The program for women is of long standing and rich in tradition while the men's program is of recent origin. In reviewing our present housing policies the University is now in a position to establish a more uniform policy for both men and women students."

Critics of the new policy will no doubt attack the administration's justifications as rationalization of a purely practical move designed to make greater dorm space available in the light of a projected increase in enrollment. While there may be some element of truth to this line of reasoning, it is apparently not the entire story. Addressing herself to this question, Dean of Women, Anna Harris said, "The policy change appears to be more drastic for women than men. In fact it sounds more drastic than I consider it to be. We've been moving in this direction for years, in dealing with special, individual cases."

THE RAMIFICATIONS

The ramifications of the new housing policy are as numerous as they are potentially dramatic. Not only undergraduate students but graduate students, faculty and staff and the community at large will be affected by this decision. In fact, all those living in other than University residence halls and fraternity houses will be burdened by the increased competition for inadequate apartment space. A lesser consequence of the new policy may be a worsening of the on-campus parking problem as more students are forced to drive to classes. But perhaps the most interesting consequence of this whole situation will be its effect on curfews. Housing is an administration decision, but curfews are basically a student domain to the extent that they are set by WSGA. The fact that senior women may have apartments means that these women will have no curfews. What about senior women who, for one reason or another choose to remain in the dormitories? It is reasonable to expect that they will demand the same freedom from curfews, as may women other than seniors, in the process of approaching a single standard. In any event it is inevitable that these considerations will bear heavily upon the thinking of WSGA in determining next year's curfews. The extent of their effect remains to be seen.

In addition to these ramifications, the new housing policy will doubtless engender problems, as well as benefits, of which we cannot presently conceive.

Players Present "Mother Courage"

By Sue Noble

MOTHER COURAGE AND HER CHILDREN, a play in epic form by Bertolt Brecht, will be presented at the Arena Theater on March 17, 18, and 19 at 8:30. Tickets are available for all three nights at the Arena Theater and the University Bookstore.

The play is under the direction of Edward Fiedner, and the intricate scenery and lighting have been designed by William Schenk - both of the drama department. The powerful character of Mother Courage is portrayed by Linda Simet, while Donna Kristiansen, Trent Anderson, and Larry Sargent play her children. Sherri Mundell is the harlot, Yvette, and Bill Dixon plays the Chaplain. Also taking major roles are Philip Brown, Marilyn Deutsch, Sarah Dopp, and Wendy Goodale. Filling multiple parts in the play are David Franzohi, Fred Finkelstein, Michael Vogel, Eric Rosencrantz, Jeff Kent, Michael Minsky, Steven Simon, Jim Collins, William Levy, Kenneth Pick, and Arnold Weatherhead.

MOTHER COURAGE was completed by Brecht in 1939, at a time when Hitler and his armies were thundering across Europe. Although Brecht wrote Mother Courage as a chronicle of the 30 years war, the characters speak from the self-wrought misery of all wars. Mother Courage, with her fatalistic approach toward the horror of war, brought serious political consequences to Brecht.

When he returned to a post war East Berlin, the communist party tried to swing him over to their own artistic viewpoint. A favorite playwright of the party, E. Wolf, suggested that Brecht give Mother Courage a strong political resolution instead of leaving the audience to draw their own conclusions. But Brecht felt that "If Courage learns nothing, then the public can learn something from watching her."

The fate of Mother Courage and her Children become, in effect, the fate of all of us, in this production by the University Players.

Vermont Conference — God And Secularization

Discussion Centers On Death Of God Theory

The imperative for the theme of this year's Vermont Conference comes out of the awareness of many churchmen of the challenge of secularization; Albert van den Hauvel, a Dutch Theologian and an officer of the World Council of Churches, defines secularization as "the process of ever-growing independence from any transcendent control." Secularized man holds either the position that it is impossible to believe in any reality apart from that which can be investigated by the sciences or that the knowledge given by the sciences is the only knowledge worth having. What secularization amounts to, in the blunt though inadequate phrase of Friedrich Nietzsche, is "God is dead."

CULTURAL COLLAPSE

Many theologians accept a cultural collapse and see the slow realization of this collapse forcing man to radically and sometimes violently question some of his oldest and most basic presuppositions about himself, his world, and God. They do not all agree on how the problem of secularization should be approached. Some, though they acknowledge the emergence of radically new technology-oriented culture, hold that God is responsible for it. If God is brought into question at all it is not God Himself, but man's understanding of God, which is challenged and modified. God is seen as being responsible for a new stage of man's development - a stage which challenges man with new freedom, new opportunities, and if he takes himself and his world mont Conference speaker.

seriously, new ways of seeing himself and God.

GOD & HISTORY

Others, William Hamilton,
Thomas Altizer, and Paul Van Buren, usually referred to as the "Death of God" theologians hold various positions concerning the relationship between God and history. Altizer, in his unique, mystical, and oftentimes opaque way, seems to be saying that God actually lived in history and literally died in history and on the cross at that! In consequence, Al-tizer sees man taking on the stature and self-understanding of Nietzsche's "Overman." With the proclamation of God's death, Altizer sees man to be more fully alive. Man has been freed for a fuller existence. William Hamilton speaks frequently of the "death of God," but enigmatically points out that man's posture in light of God's death should be that of "waiting upon God."

Paul Van Buren, a priest of the Episcopal Church and Associate Professor of Religion at Temple University, and also one of the speakers at the Conference, is seen by many of his colleagues in theology to have completely capitulated to the demands of the secular. Van Buren bases his position mainly on his understanding and acceptance of the works of some positivist British philosophers and maintains that it has become impossible for man to believe in any reality apart from that which

IFC Retreat Scheduled

By Carl Lisman

The Interfraternity Council plans to hold its annual retreat on April 2 and 3 at the Mount Philo Inn. Its purpose is to coordinate and consolidate new and old programs for the coming academic year. It also will give the new IFC officers and the new chapter house presidents an opportunity to get acquainted. Dean Patzner, Dr. Miles and Dr. Perrine will be the guest speakers.

The retreat will begin on Saturday afternoon and end on Sunday.
Three general discussions are planned for this period. The main topic of the retreat will be the Self Study Report. This report contains the opinions of a cross section of the university population. It gives much information about the problems facing the fraternities. It clearly points out the weaknesses in relations between the faculty and fraternities.
A new program to improve these relations is expected to come from this discussion. New and better rushing rules will also be discussed. This shall be the preliminary step to a new rushing policy to be adopted for next year. Fraternity public relations will be examined thoroughly in order to obtain more and better publicity. Means for improving good will on campus and in the community shall also be discussed.

The retreat is designed to bring the fraternities into a close working unit, in order that the policies and programs of the coming year will be beneficial to the fraternity system at UVM.
The IFC is preparing for a new year and the retreat is to be its official opening and guide-post.

MILITARY BALL WILL BE HELD TONIGHT - QUEEN TO BE CROWNED

Tonight, the ROTC Cadet Brigade of the University of Vermont will hold its 98th Annual Military Ball at the Hotel Vermont, co-sponsored by Ethan Allen Rifles and Pershing Rifles. As in the past, some 37 girls representing the sororities and women's residence halls on campus competed for the honor of being Military Ball Queen. After three days of balloting by each of 500
ROTC Cadets, the 5 finalists were chosen. They are Miss Barbara Bigelow, a freshman from Madison, N. J.; Miss Jean Hansen, a freshman from New Providence, N.J.; Miss Laurel
Monti, a sophomore from New Britain, Conn.; Miss Jill Taylor, a sophomore from Plattsburgh, N.Y.; Miss Brooke Taylor, a
N. Y.

In every sense of the word, each of the five young ladies immediately became a winner, for while the Queen becomes an honorary Cadet Colonel and brigade commander, the members of her court are all appointed honorary Cadet Captains and commanders of the four companies within the brigade. Rather than a "Queen-for-a-day" approach, the girls continue to be honored at major formations of the brigade throughout the year to include the Annual Military Review to be held this year in April.

The extremely difficult task of selecting one Queen from five charming and beautiful finalists was turned over by the Cadets to a panel of five judges from the University and the Burlington
Community at a formal tea last Sunday.

The judges were Mrs.
Shannon McCune, wife of UVM's
President; the Honorable Francis
J. Cain, Mayor of Burlington;
Mr. Lawrence Van Benthuyssen,

Anna Moffo Extolled

By Ken Klonsky

On Wednesday evening, March 9, at Memorial Auditorium, Lane Series presented Anna Moffo, lead soprano from the Metropolitan Opera Association. With the possible exception of the Moscow Philharmonic, this beautiful woman was indeed the top attraction of the year. Miss Moffo, accompanied by James Shomate at the piano, was a pleasure to look at and an experience to listen to.

The choice of program was not the best, but it was carried off with professional excellence. She sang from Scarlatti, Mozart (only a fair Alleluja), Brahms, Strauss, Rossini, Poulenc, Debussy, Hundley, and Donizetti. Rossini's "Una voce poco fa," from The Barber of Seville, was good for demonstrating both the vocal and acting talents of the performer. The Debussy songs were beautiful, melodious and extremely well done. But the program lacked the famous arias that would naturally appeal to any audience.

It was not until the encores that one was given more than a fleeting sample of the eloquent heights that a lead soprano can achieve. Miss Moffo aptly chose the two greatest Puccini arias from Madame Butterfly and La Boheme respectively. The sound was merely gigantic.

Anna Moffo impressed the listener as a saucy waltz and as a tragic heroine. As "the most beautiful woman of the opera," she left nothing to be desired but herself.

New Housing Policy Raises Problems

By Judy Triplett
Laura Schildhaus

The sundry and varied repercussions brought about by the administration's adoption of a new housing policy emanated on Monday from all possible sources. It seems that everyone is very concerned over the matter of senior women's housing.

On first inspection it would seem that this decision would affect only a small nucleus of the student body, this minute segment being those who have completed six semesters of college or those who have reached the age of 21 by December 31, 1966. The fact is that this new policy affects all students, faculty, administrators, and other Burlington residents.

If anyone has tried to find an apartment in the area, she (or he) knows that it is virtually impossible. Rents are going up because of the new demand, but that isn't stopping the apartment hunters. We are sure that those now living in apartments have been besieged with telephone calls and visitors, both male and female. But, are there really that many women planning to live off campus next year?

The first reactions in the girls' dorms Monday evening resembled a prison break. There were cries of "We're free, we're freed!" and thoughts of an end to pink cards, curfews, proctoring, quiet hours, and the many other "gruesome" rules imposed on women by some higher authority. Actually, all of these rules are made and enforced by the women themselves -- and yet they still complain. Changes in these rules come from the women students. It seems that the provincial ones around here are not the members of the administration, but the women who have this right and don't exercise it.

Those girls who feel that it isn't worth their while to change the rules or that they can work as effectively for the other women students while not being held to existing rules have chosen to look for apartments. These girls made carefully planned excursions into the wilds of the apartment-hunting world and by now most of them are tired and left without a ray of hope for

Previews Heard On "God Is Dead"

By Steve Carlson

Is the "God is dead" movement intended to be a wake? Or perhaps it is a theological striptease? These and other interpretations were offered and discussed by members of a pre-conference panel, in an effort to explain the topic for this year's Vermont Conference -- "Is God Dead?"

The panel, which presented the discussion Tuesday evening, consisted of two members of the UVM Department of Philosophy and Religion, Dr. Robert Hall and Mr. William Paden, and Reverend Donald Boyer of St. Anselm's Episcopal Chapel.

The panelists generally agreed that the statement "God is dead" does not refer to God as a person or God as a being which was once alive and died physically. It refers rather to the old concept of God -- a concept which has, perhaps, become unintelligible to the modern intellect.

Father Boyer pointed out that, "Some theologians think that although great events take time, that the dawn is breaking -- that we are on the threshold of a new cultural epoch which is not fertile for the old God. Many theologians, including van Buren, confess that they are living in this kind of cultural change -- that their "castles-in-the-sky."

The prospect of successful apartment hunting looks especially grim for the students, and there are many, who don't have cars. It seems that the most conveniently located apartments either do not rent to students or are prohibitively expensive. Those with reasonable rates are either too far from campus or in undesirable section, this latter point being of concern mainly to co-eds.

Aside from the competition factor, though, reactions to the new policy are generally favorable. In fact, the only other point which seems to be disturbing people is the curfew question.

Freedom from curfew is a most attractive aspect of off-campus living. The liberal no-curfew policy of the men's dorms has long served as fuel for grievance discussions on the part of dissatisfied freedom-starved co-eds seeking a single standard.

There are those few who predict drastic change in the wo-the old concept of God is not only unintelligible, but unnecessary." Dr. Paul van Buren is Associate Professor of Religion at Temple University, and will be the first speaker at the conference.

According to Mr. Paden, van Buren believes that, "we can have Jesus talk, but not God talk." In other words, Jesus was a historical person, the name "Jesus" refers to an actual man. On the other hand, there is no verifiable referent for the word "God," and therefore it is pointless to talk about God.

Schubert Ogden of Southern Methodist University, who will be the second speaker, takes a different position. According to Dr. Hall, "For Ogden, there is a significant meaning to God." However, for Ogden too, "the traditional concept of God is dead."

Dr. John Macquarrie of Union Theological Seminary, who will be the third speaker at the conference, has been called a "conservative Christian existentialist." According to Dr. Hall, Dr. Macquarrie believes in God, but sees a real problem in "how to reach modern man today." He sees the miracles of the New Testament "as a stumbling block to religion -- they go against the intellect. That doesn't mean we should do away with the myths and re-write the New Testament, but that we should re-interpret it."

In evaluating the "God is Dead" movement, Mr. Paden raised the question: "How much of the gospel can you throw out and still be a Christian?" He called the movement a "Theological striptease," and said, "You can throw out the virgin birth, the resurrection, and even God himself and say, 'How do you like the gospel now?' But you can't strip these things away and still have the meaning of the gospel."

He said, however, that the "God is dead" movement is more than a passing fad, because it is headed by clergymen. Although the idea has been around for many years, it has existed outside of the clergy. "Now, however, it is becoming firmly rooted because it is spreading from within."

The Vermont Conference will take place in the Ira Allen Chapel, at 7:30 p.m. on March 22, 23, and 24.

FACULTY APPOINTMENTS

Dr. Norman R. Alpert was named professor and chairman of the department of physiology and biophysics effective June 1.

He succeeds Dr. Ferdinand J. M. Sichel who joined the Vermont faculty in 1937 and who has guided this department of the College of Medicine as chairman since 1944. Dr. Sichel will continue to serve as professor and chairman of the Division of Biophysics.

Dr. Alpert is associate professor of physiology at the University of Illinois. A native of Stamford, Conn., he is a graduate of Wesleyan; earned his Ph.D. at Columbia, where he taught prior to joining the Illinois faculty in 1953.

Dr. David B. Hill, assistant professor of mathematics at Vermont was named director of the University's Computation Center. He will continue to teach in the College of Technology and to serve as a consultant in mathematics for the College of Medicine.

He holds the M.E. degree and the M.S. and Ph.D. in mathematics, all from Stevens Institute of Technology.

Norbert Charbonneau, who has served as computing consultant, will become operations manager for the Computation Center.

Both are effective March 1.

Lake Champlain Studies Center Established

Research Base-- 47-Foot Cruiser

University of Vermont Trustees have taken another step to encourage systematic research with related teaching benefits on the nation's seventh largest fresh water body.

The Board approved establishment of a Lake Champlain Studies Center for the purpose of coordinating, promoting, and facilitating research and education in the biological, geological, chemical, physical and other sciences; and named Dr. E. Bennette Henson, associate professor of zoology, as director.

The Center will provide logistical support for faculty and visiting scientists engaged in research on Lake Champlain and other fresh water bodies; collect and disseminate information concerning fresh water research; conduct seminars and conferences; and support educational programs depending on fresh water environment.

Faculty of various engineering and science departments have been exploring the Lake's bays and coastal waters in small craft for several years, joining scientists of the Vermont Fish and Game and Water Resources Commissions in their research interest in the Lake.

Late this fall, the University acquired a 47-foot cruiser with federal water resources research funds. It is being equipped this winter for research activity on the broad waters of Champlain. Dr. Clinton D. Cook, vice president for academic affairs, under whose office the Lake Studies Center will come, said that acquisition of a relatively large research vessel was the key to development of a major Lake Studies Center as a teaching and research arm of the University.

Dr. Henson, who will direct the Center, earned his B.S. at Marshall, his M.S. at the University of West Virginia, and his Ph.D. at Cornell. He has taught at West Virginia, Baldwin-Wallace, the University of Maryland, and St. John's College; and served as a research associate in the Great Lakes Research Division of the University of Michigan; and as an aquatic biologist with the National Water Quality Network of the U.S.P.H.S. He joined the Vermont faculty in 1965.

men's dorms' curfew policy, expecting such measures to be instigated by senior women in dorms who will demand equal curfew rights. Actually, however, most people seem to think it unlikely that drastic measures in this regard would be either practical or desirable.

For one thing, an extended curfew would mean increased expenditures on the part of administration, and therefore on the part of the students themselves. An alteration of the curfew would mean extra provisions for night watchmen; hostesses at main desks would be required for longer hours, meaning that each girl living in the residence hall would be expected to put in more hours at the desk; head residents' duties would be extended, for they would be required to be up later.

To abolish women's curfews all together seems a good plan -- especially to the men -- but this action, too, would encounter complications. The elimination of curfew restrictions would mean that women's residence halls would need to be always unlocked. And, to prevent "sight seers" and unauthorized personnel from entering and leaving at will, someone would be required to be at the main desk at all times. Needless to say, provision for a 24-hour hostess team is out of the question.

A suggested possibility to eliminate these complications came from a sophomore who argued vehemently in favor of equal curfew rights for all women. She suggested that keys be issued to the women students. This would eliminate the problems posed above and would deal more effectively with the basic issue, that being the right of the women to choose and to decide for themselves in a responsible manner the hour at which to return to their living units.

EDITORIAL...

Jim Fontanella is running for President of the Student Association. Or is he? It seems that no one cares enough for the job to run against him, so he is virtually unopposed. The SA wields a great deal of power and authority at the University. There is much respect given the officers by the administration, if not by the students. We feel compelled to express our regrets to the university community. We know that there are many qualified students among the masses, but perhaps you yourselves don't realize your potential. Jim Fontanella will make a good president -- we are confident of this. However, he will need the support and cooperation of the students whom he is representing. We hope that you have given him this vote of confidence by helping to elect the most qualified officers to serve under him.

We are pleased to announce that the CYNIC has a new faculty advisor, David A. Bain. Mr. Bain as the Director of Student Activities has, in the few months that he has been here, become an important and familiar figure to the students. We hope that, under his experienced guidance, we can continue to improve the CYNIC. We wish to express our appreciation to Mr. Van Benthuyzen, or past advisor, for his patience and his many hours of dedicated service.

THE SCEPTIC

By Dick Matheson

The campus rejoices to a New Deal! All seniors can live off campus.

Anyone over 21 can thrill to the freedom of their own apartment. And that, of course, means that those left in the dorms will be free to do as they wish, unbothered by foolish restrictions of those horrible adults (anyone over 21?), who, as everyone knows, simply don't understand the younger generation!

But what a sight to see the crafty administrators fooling those rascal student! What a sight to see those poor, innocent, unsuspecting students being permitted to jump out of the fryer -- and into the fire. How could they know that a thriving metropolis such as Burlington could be destitute of housing? But it is time they left the sheltered confines of the university and stepped (stumbled?) boldly out into the harsh, cruel reality of the world -- and Burlington!

It can't be true, we assume, that Dr. McCune would really rent out rooms to students -- in the Presidential mansion. We can imagine the dreadful usurpation of authority by those typical American youths, brought up to "strict" family discipline: "Say, Dr. McCune, did we tell you we were having a party here tonight? We'd be glad to have you come in for a while, until, say, eight. Well, how were we to know you were going to invite the governor over tonight; do you suppose you could entertain him over in your office. And say, have you ever eaten out at the Lure?"

It can't be true, we assume, that UVM will no longer demand to approve all off-campus housing? Why, students will be living in slums and supplementing their federal student loans with federal poverty grants. Slum-living, the school would be quick to point out, increases social awareness. Social intercommunication in the community would be drastically curtailed, though, if that new fad--living in public telephone booths--caught on.

It can't be true, we assume, that UVM would permit a new co-educational dorm to be built on campus, but refuse to permit co-ed housing off campus, such as co-ed apartments, . . . or, say, co-ed rooms? After all, can't two live more cheaply than one? The Dean of Women must recognize that her charges are big girls now. Of course, this time next year, . . . And what a popular fad it would be: UVM would be assured of making TIME magazine--then there would be thousands more applicants to UVM each year. There might even be enough to fill those new dorms planned,

Aid Arrives Too Late

To the Editor:

We would like to raise an issue of great importance in the light of the death of the janitor on the second floor landing of Coolidge Hall, on March 14.

When the man was discovered, one girl tried to get an ambulance, or some assistance by calling the Waterman operator. The operator connected her with the Infirmary, which had no equipment that was necessary for this job.

The man was dying. Why the operator couldn't call a hospital, or the Fire or Police Departments is beyond us. We had to wait about eight minutes before we could get an outside line -- at a time when every minute counted.

We suggest that

1. the operators be trained to handle an emergency situation such as this or 2. have some type of emergency phone installed on each floor (the type that doesn't require a dime).

This afternoon was a traumatic experience for us, and we would like to see something done so that we never have to live through another one like it.

We admire the Burlington Fire Department, for arriving about three minutes after they were called.

been put forth since early Fall. I'm sure many of the staff are aware of how much stamina goes into preparing for KAKE WALK, whether they win or lose, but it is discouraging to note that none of this ever reaches the home town papers.

I was pleased to see and read in the Brattleboro Daily Reformer (local paper for this area) a picture of the Albee brothers from Newfane, particularly when they were awarded the Eldridge trophy but I also believe it would have been just as interesting to know the results. It is too bad that members and friends of the families have no opportunity to read about local students and their participation at the University.

I am also offering constructive criticism in the fact that the pictures in the KAKE WALK publication, could not have contained pictures of entries for snow sculpture this year. It would seem that, when the publication is not available until intermission and printed on Friday that it could contain pictures of up-to-date participants. The background of KAKE WALK and the articles were most interesting but while looking through the pictures it would be more gratifying to see last year's participants, and not some other class.

Thank you for your time and perhaps you might question other parents if this all seems self-centered.

Sincerely,

Harold A. Nordstrom

Columnists Criticized

To the Editors:

If a totally untalented layman may ask a question, why is it that the people who write the columns in the CYNIC indulge in such vagaries? I am referring to Miss Crane and the infamous Sceptic. Surely both these observers of University life can find better topics than a pseudo-sarcastic look at imagined University policy, and the draft situation which no one needs to be reminded of! Miss Crane herself, once proposed to tell us what was "new" at UVM? Can't she find anything? Or is she too busy criticizing what she imagines is wrong with the old things? As for the Sceptic, well perhaps the original writer of that column spoiled me, but to place that title over such insignificant contents as that which has appeared in the past few issues seems almost a sacrilege!

I don't claim to be a writer. If I did, perhaps I'd have a go at correcting what I criticize. I do not dispute the talent and style of these people -- only their topics.

Look around you, Miss Crane, and you too Sceptic! Want something new to write about? Why not wander down to the Arena Theater some night -- there are 2 shows in production at the moment, and one of them, Playtimers Tour, is certainly a novelty? Or ask someone on the Lane Committee what's wrong with Memorial Auditorium, or for that matter, what's right with the Lane Concert Series? The Peace Corps was on campus. Did you interview the representatives? Scope presented a poetry-reading. Did you interview the poet or the audience?

I'll let you in on a secret. There's a lot of new things around, but you seem too preoccupied with rehashing the old problems to notice them!

Yours truly,

Esther Sundell

Oldsters Applaud HAPP

To the Editor:

Plaudits to the Administration for having seen the merits of Dr. Wilhelm Rabb's Heart Attack Prevention Program (HAPP) and for making it possible for faculty and staff members to join the program right on our own campus.

This pioneering venture aims at a daily minimum of regular, vigorous physical exercise, abstinence from smoking, reduction of animal fats and cholesterol in the diet, and the delimitation of tensions. (No, they don't absolutely insist on no smoking.)

Toughest for most of us over-aged destroyers engaged in the HAPP program is the physical exercise. Fortunately, we have as instructor the genial, yet demanding, Dr. Robert Gobin, of the Phys. Ed. Dept. While cracking the unsound barrier is never exactly hilarious, Bob Gobin has made it fun.

Now at midpoint, the UVM HAPP program is already paying bigger dividends than we anticipated. We're all healthier, happier, more relaxed than when we started and inordinately proud of our little accomplishments (I mean, how many people over 45 can run the mile in less than seven minutes?)

We think other F&S people who are mulling the program should join at once, or at the next opening. Meanwhile, we reiterate our thanks to the University and to that remarkable, self-effacing physician, Dr. Wilhelm Raab.

Sincerely,

What will happen if there aren't enough students living on campus to fill those fine (and costly) new structures? Certainly it would be a shame to waste all that space! We can see it now: "The administration has announced that all students of any age or class will be required to live on campus again next semester." Back to some record-breaking high room and board rates to pay for the new dorms and facilities. Back from the fire, into the fryer.

What Happened To God?

By M. Minaky

It is somewhat dubious that Vermont Conference will provoke quite as much excitement as Kake Walk. But, after all, one can take only so much intellectual stimulation. Furthermore, the topic of the conference ("Is God Dead?") is illegal to discuss in this great state of Vermont; public profession of atheism is prohibited by statute 9783. Few, very few, students would even think of breaking a law regardless of what that law might be.

The death of God seems to be a new concept. NBC and CBS have decided that it was a newsworthy event. LBJ, when he was only president, proposed the erection of a "monument to God." As an economy measure, he could simply rename the Washington Monument. It is easy to pride one's self on the knowledge of a new idea; it is the "in" thing to do. But like most new ideas, this one is very old. Nietzsche first spewed it forth. Being a genius, he was also somewhat mad, and like most men of genius he was misunderstood by everyone except those who didn't claim to agree with him. The ancient Teutons also feared the death of the gods. Their gods obliged them and the Germans also became Christians.

It would be foolish to deny the passing on the Divinity. All one has to do is take a walk or read a history book. There are, of course, several interpretations of the death of God. Some of them may even be of interest.

The Pseudo-neo Marxists claim God's death was caused by economic factors. Man (American, British, French, German, and Nordic people) became self sufficient and no longer had to pray to avert famine, plague or other disaster. Of course a man could pray that famine, plague or another disaster might fall upon somebody else. Then that man could indulge in some moral crusade and make a pretty penny from it. But one day a sage discovered that famine plague and other natural disasters such as wars are not caused but simply happen with no one to blame. Supplications to Jehovah declined sharply. The commodity of Heaven, miracles, were no longer needed. The foreign markets could support themselves and father, Son and Holy Ghost Inc. went bankrupt.

The Conspiratorialists believe that all events in history are conspiracies. World War I was Mormon. The Cuban Revolution was Jewish. Leaders of this movement include such symbolic beings as General Walker, Gov. Wallace, Herbert Hoover, Mark Lane and the entire State Department of the United States. No prominent person with the possible exception of a Pope is allowed to die a natural death. God, being a somewhat prominent as well as controversial person, was probably murdered. Certain deviationists claim however, that He is now residing in Argentina.

The New Christians are a very diverse group, and were influenced by Kierkegaard, Heidegger, Jaspers, and other names they also pronounce badly. The goal in life is to make a Kierkegaardian leap of faith.

So that man would have to make a leap, God constructed the universe as a paradox, making it more difficult and hence easier to make the fateful leap. No idea can be true unless it is paradoxical. All paradoxical ideas are true. This statement is one of many affirmations of a leap of faith. Take my word for it. The affirmation of the death of God is not a paradox. Hence it is untrue. God is not dead; man is.

Of course we all know or think we know that man is alive. To say man is dead is a contradiction. But all contradictions may be resolved easily by calling the paradoxes. It is all very simple; we are all dead. Certain New Christians who are more optimistic will claim that it is foolish to declare or affirm that man is dead. But if he is not really dead - he should be. The topic of Vermont Conference 1966 may very well be "Armageddon - Now!"

The most important and most valid interpretation of the death of God is, of course, the 'pataphysical. The second law of 'pataphysics states that probability is in inverse proportion to expectability. No one really thought God would die, and so he did. Everybody closed his eyes and mumbled, "I believe, I believe."

Go To India

Remember reading in last week's CYNIC about the trip to India? The UVM Student Ambassador program? For those of you who are interested, here are the details concerning applications and fund raising.

Applications for the UVM Student Ambassador trip to India will be available at the main desk in Billings Center, from Tuesday, March 22, to Tuesday, April 5. All applications must be returned to the Student Association office in Billings no later than Tuesday, April 12. The application involves making out forms, obtaining references, and receiving a physician's report. It is designed to encourage the very interested applicant.

Anyone of sophomore status at UVM, who will be returning next year as an undergraduate or graduate student may go. No foreign language is required. Details about the trip will be attached to the application forms.

The freshman, sophomore, junior and senior classes are sponsoring a tag day for India on Tuesday, March 22. This is to help raise the $475 needed to send one of you as the UVM Student Ambassador to India. Classes are competing to see who is number one in supporting the free trip to India. Certain representatives of your class will be spotted around the campus holding mugs to collect your nickels, dimes, and quarters; and tags to show that you've contributed will be distributed. Be sure to give your contribution to your own class representative. You won't have to hunt for him.

After vacation on April 17, a buffet will be held at Redstone Campus to assist further in fund raising. Details will be published later.

UVM TO HAVE FRENCH HOUSE

Next fall UVM plans to have a dormitory in which only French will be spoken. Twenty-four girls will occupy Slade Hall, which will also be the location of the French Cultural Center. The French Department, which is responsible for the project, plans to import a french speaking woman, probably from France, to act as head resident.

The French House is the result of the combined efforts of Mr. Lascoumes, Mr. Kohler, and Dr. Dagget. Dean Harris and Assistant Dean Wing, have aided tremendously. It was because of their enthusiasm and co-operation that Slade Hall was chosen as the location.

The French Cultural Center will be headed next year by Mrs.

Geno, wife of Mr. Geno of the French Department. She will work with the head resident and the French Department to provide a program of activities for the residents of the French House and all other interested students. The program will supplement classroom French with many enjoyable opportunities to use the language.

Many students have shown considerable interest in a French dormitory. Their interest seems to be producing results. Similarly, some degree of interest has been expressed in a Junior Year Abroad program. The possibility of such a program is being investigated.

Placement Barometer

Check And Double Check

By Douglas O. Hanau, Director UVM Placement Service

Wait a moment before you start out on your job-hunting expedition. Just as you automatically stop to check your pocketbook or pockets to make sure you have your keys, billfold, fountain pen, and so forth, before you leave home, stop for a last-minute check on the equipment you are going out to sell.

Perhaps you have read this series of articles hastily, saying to yourself, "Yes, I know all that." I hope you have not made such a mistake. You will clarify your thinking greatly by writing down all the essentials. This eliminates vagueness. It gives you something tangible to say, and it helps you to keep firmly in mind where you are going and what you are going to do when you get there. I stress this point because it is so vital. Ninety-nine applicants out of a hundred fail in an interview out of vagueness.

1. HAVE YOU MADE A CAREFUL ANALYSIS OF YOUR APTITUDES? Keep in mind that if you go into work for which you have an aptitude you will be able to handle it better and get farther than if you go into work for which you have no aptitude. But remember that an aptitude is an indication, and it is of no value unless developed.

2. HAVE YOU TRIED TO FIND OUT THE FIELDS IN WHICH YOU ARE MOST INTERESTED? If you have no idea how to go about answering this question, check the following items and see what kind of pattern you get. a) Working with machinery; b) Keeping records; c) Handling figures; d) Installing equipment; e) Teaching children or adults; f) Addressing meetings; g) Selling ideas; h) Selling products and services to people; i) Organizing committees; j) Handling groups of people; k) Writing articles or stories; l) Reading or studying; m) Working by yourself; n) Research work; o) Planning campaigns; p) Planning home furnishings and design; q) Following instructions; r) Making decisions; s) Traveling; t) Keeping regular hours; u) Improving conditions for others; v) Tackling emergencies; w) Working with statistics; x) Operating office machines; y) Publicity work and advertising z) Performing before a group.

3. DO YOU KNOW WHERE TO GET TESTS THAT WOULD HELP ORIENT YOU ON GENERAL INTELLIGENCE, APTITUDES, INTERESTS, SKILLS?

By writing to some of the following concerns you can obtain tests covering almost every conceivable field as well as that of general aptitudes and intelligence:

The Psychological Corporation, 522 Fifth Avenue, New York 18, New York

Science Research Association, 228 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago 4, Illinois

The World Book Company, Yonkers, New York

Our Testing Service, located in Waterman, has further information to provide on the subject. Tests are valuable, but they are only an indication of ones ability.

4. HAVE YOU MADE A LIST OF EMPLOYERS WHICH HAVE THE KIND OF JOB FOR WHICH YOU WANT TO APPLY?

5. HAVE YOU LEARNED ANY PERTINENT FACTS ABOUT THESE EMPLOYERS?

6. HAVE YOU LEARNED THE NAME OF THE MAN IN EACH ONE TO WHOM YOU ARE GOING TO APPLY?

7. HAVE YOU PUT TOGETHER A RESUME?

8. HAVE YOU THOUGHT OUT SOUND REASONS WHY THEY SHOULD HIRE YOU AND CAN YOU MARSHAL THEM LOGICALLY?

9. HAVE YOU THOUGHT OUT REASONS FOR WANTING TO WORK FOR THAT PARTICULAR EMPLOYER?

10. DO YOU KNOW WHAT EXTRA TRAINING THE JOB WOULD REQUIRE OF YOU OR WHAT TRAINING WOULD HELP YOU TO ADVANCE AND HOW YOU COULD GET IT?

If you can answer all these questions in the affirmative you are ready to start looking for a job.

can be investigated by the sciences. He sees man as increasingly aware of his secularity-of his belief that he has been delivered from religious and metaphysical control over his reason and language. History has been "defatalized" in that man has discovered that he has been left with a world on his hands, that he can no longer blame fortune, the furies, the gods or God for what happens to it.

VAN BUREN

Van Buren addresses himself to the demands and mentality of this "modern" secular man and reduces theology so that its content might be brought within the sphere of the intelligibility of the secular. God is reduced out of the picture as both unintelligible and unnecessary. A "religionless" Christianity remains in which Jesus functions as a model for man, Van Buren sees Jesus as the man who attained a true freedom which was experienced and appropriated by others.

Van Buren's thought seems to have changed somewhat since the publication of his one book, The Secular Meaning of the Gospel, in 1963. In the book he could see some residual value in the traditional activities of religion such as prayer and worship; but in a recent interview which appeared in the "New Yorker," he seems to have dismissed them and indicates that he no longer exercises his ordained ministry. In his version of "secular Christianity" we seem to be left simply with the exhortation to take Jesus as the "contagious" example of the fullest and truest life for man. Theology is reduced to ethics, and to those who ask for something more he answers, "What 'more' can there be in a secular age?"

A great deal of the sometimes very confusing dialogue going on between theologians and "atheologians" hinges on various understandings of secularity. How secular is secular man? What kind of thought is he really capable of? We are in the midst of great change, but are we really being conditioned toward a final "experience of the absence of God?" or given the novelty of the change and lack of perspective are we just temporarily going through the "absence of the experience of God?" As I see it, these questions will be seen as the issues of this year's Vermont Conference.

S A Surveys Prof Evaluation

New Departure For UVM

Something is about to happen that has never before been done on this campus. Although this will not be a first for college campuses in general, it will be an important forward step here on the part of the student body.

Have you ever wished to evaluate -- yes, constructively criticize your professors and their teaching? Certainly everyone has been guilty of hashing over what is right or wrong with their professors. This is our chance to direct these value judgments, formally, toward the persons who can use them most -- the professors themselves and their department heads.

Recently the SA student committee on Professor Evaluation was formed to spearhead this operation. Although an evaluation of this sort has always taken many months to formulate and enact on other campuses, our student committee hopes to get this evaluation underway by next semester. We will use the survey results, questionnaires, sampling techniques, and suggestions for success from the other 23 colleges that have enacted such a program. Our attempts will further be directed by the professional help of the faculty itself. The project was begun last semester when President McCune sent delegates to McGill University to gather information for beginning a Professor Evaluation.

It is our hope that the administration, department heads, and faculty will use the results for the improvement of college teaching. In this light, it is the responsibility of us, the student body, to promote overall campus interest for the project. This is our undertaking. The student must know for whom the results of such a survey would prove most beneficial before work can begin on questionnaires and mechanics of the survey.

any students interested in good college teaching. See you then.

Students interested in working with the committee in the future stages of the survey are asked to contact Nancy Poplawski or call the SA office for information.

Students Attend Model UN

By Connie Chapman

On March 10-13, six UVM students participated in the 39th National Model General Assembly in New York City.

Representing Liberia, John Stevens (ambassador), Joan Clark, Doug Cloffi, Elaine Farrell, Ted Merritt and Mary Ellen Anderson were given a briefing and a tour at the Liberian mission in New York. Each participated in a committee patterned after actual UN committees, and included the Colonial, the Political, the Legal, the Special Political, the Economic and the Social and Humanitarian committees. Here the delegates voted on previously submitted resolutions which had been referred to their particular committee. Those resolutions which were passed could then be brought up before the plenary session.

The session, however, was not all work, and delegates were able to have informal sessions with some of the other 900 and more delegates who represented 105 colleges and 27 states. Saturday night was the occasion of a banquet, with guest speaker, N.Y. Representative John Bingham, and a ball at Fordham University.

Other sessions, held at the Statler Hilton Hotel, were well attended and the committees were especially enthusiastic as opposed to the more dignified plenary sessions.

At the final session Sunday, elections were held, and the secretariat was transferred from Yale, who conducted this year's session, to Harvard. In cooperation with the Continuations Committee and the Collegiate Council for the UN, it will be their responsibility to mail out information to next year's delegates and to conduct the next session.

Of the three hundred or so original resolutions, few reached the plenary session and only about 15 were finally passed. It is to UVM's credit that one resolution co-sponsored by Liberia was passed through committee. During voting, each delegation had one vote, and was expected to vote according to the principles of the country they were representing.

Such issues as the admission of Red China into the UN, the censure of Rhodesia, apartheid in South Africa, the position of the United States in the Dominican Republic, and recognition of the Viet Nam problem (neither of the last two invoking censure of the United States) were among the dominant and lively topics.

UVM, under the skillful management and effort of Professors Schmokel and Briggs, hopes to expand its program due to its favorable impression of its first year of participation.

Please don't zlupf Sprite.
It makes plenty of noise
all by itself.

Sprite, you recall, is the soft drink that's so tart and tingling, we just couldn't keep it quiet.

Flip its lid and it really flips. Bubbling, fizzing, gurgling, hissing and carrying on all over the place.

An almost excessively lively drink. Hence, to zlupf is to err.

What is zlupfing?

Zlupfing is to drinking what smacking one's lips is to eating.

It's the staccato buzz you make when draining the last few deliciously tangy drops of Sprite from the bottle with a straw.

Zzzzzlupf!
It's completely uncalled for. Frowned upon in polite society. And not appreciated on campus either.

But, if zlupfing Sprite is absolutely essential to your enjoyment, if a good healthy zlupf is your idea of heaven, well...all right.

But have a heart. With a drink as noisy as Sprite, a little zlupf goes a long, long way.

SPRITE. SO TART AND TINGLING, WE JUST COULDN'T
KEEP IT QUIET.

NDEA Short — Changed

By Edwin Norse

Since the National Defense Education Act was passed in 1958, an increasing number of students have been receiving loans under the National Defense Student Loan Program. However, this year President Johnson initially failed to include in his fiscal budget an allowance for such expenditures. In the last two weeks a decreased amount of money has been appropriated for NDEA. This could lead to a decrease in the amount of money given to participating institutions, as compared to last year.

In the event that a university should receive less money than requested for those eligible for the NDSL loans, it would lead to a probable decrease in the amount of NDSL loan given to each student. Should this occur, students would be forced to rely on other sources, such as the Vermont Student Assistance Corporation. Should the NDSL lapse completely, as nearly happened, such an agency would certainly not be able to handle a large volume of requests.

Add to this the fact that school costs are rising almost $100 next year. With the increasing costs and lesser amount of loans available, a few students could be left out in the cold.

What alternatives face us to rectify such a situation? It may seem like a rather pat answer, but writing Senator Aiken or your own Congressman might not be without effect. It was only on Congressional appeal that President Johnson put any money back into the NDEA. Unless enough people show some interest, he can only conclude that there is no real need for the act at all.

TWO MAPS FACTORS

We are primarily interested in two major factors in these beginning stages: 1) will student interest and response be strong enough to support a Professor Evaluation program? 2) By what standards do we, as students, evaluate a good teacher?

In essence, the survey cannot begin until we can hear the general pros and cons, goals and aims, and views of both faculty and students. We feel the only way to bring out these points beneficially is to join the faculty and students in an equal showdown. Perhaps some faculty members are afraid the evaluation results may hurt them by not only decreasing their popularity, but by influencing their chances at tenure and promotion. If this is the case, these professors may be the ones who need it most. Perhaps the students do not have a healthy attitude of the seriousness and far-reaching effects of such a survey. Perhaps the faculty does welcome the never-before-heard voice of the students in a formal manner. These and other points will hopefully be brought up by representatives of the faculty and students at a Panel Discussion.

MEETING APRIL 7

It will be held on Tuesday, April 7 in Billings North Lounge from 7 to 9. Be sure to reserve this time and come armed with questions and comments.

Remember your interest (or lack of it) at the discussion will decide whether we continue with the project or drop it. It is an invaluable opportunity and one that should not be passed up by

WORLD-WIDE Cynic

The University today, the service tomorrow - This is a statement that is worrying many male students across the country.

GIRLS

"We need your help! Recognition of intellectual development should not be dependent upon grade point (average). Carried further, military deferment should not be determined by class standing. Despite the unquestionable validity of these assertions, male students in the lower half of their college class stand to be inducted."

"To overcome this unfortunate situation, we need your assistance. By sacrificing your academic averages, you will allow a greater proportion of males to enter the upper half of their classes. This is not an attack on intellectualism, study, learn, grow. We merely ask that you withhold your knowledge in exam situations. Don't fail us." This was a full page ad in the UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN newspaper. At ANTIOCH COLLEGE, a petition, sponsored by the Students for a Democratic Society, urged that the college refuse to cooperate with the Selective Service System in ranking male students. A member of the SDS stated, "The war is morally wrong, therefore the draft is wrong, and therefore the college's cooperation with the draft would be wrong." He also wonders how far an educational system has to bend to another system. (The Record)

The SDS of DARTMOUTH COLLEGE wants to petition and picket against the draft. This petition asks "that the political activities of a person have no bearing on his Selective Service status, that no draftee be forced to engage in warfare without his consent, and that two years of non-military projects service be recognized as the fulfillment of a citizen's obligations."

Many students are wondering if they have the right to refuse that the Selective Service receive a notification of their class position. College presidents are discussing this with the region officials.

DENVER UNIVERSITY has taken a different approach. The Academic Deans approved a system which will permit inducted men during an academic quarter to petition for credit in the courses that they were enrolled. There are two conditions which the student must meet: 1) unable to secure postponement of induction or enlistment until the end of the quarter and 2) completion of at least half the work of the quarter with a grade of C or better. The maximum credit to be allowed will not exceed full credit for the quarter in question. (Paul Todd - The Denver Clarion)

It seems that college professors are against the class rank method. Some are even threatening to withdraw grades. Also, some are wondering if this method will effect the mark that they give each individual student!

By Walter Pressey

"Let the cold wind blow
Let it blow, Let it blow..."

So go the lyrics of a song which was popular a few short years ago and we feel it is going to regain its popularity, at least at UVM. Cold winds, snowstorms, and bad driving conditions won't curtail ski trips for UVM skiers any more. The long-needed and long-awaited Outing Club Ski Lodge will be ready for use by spring vacation, if not before. Notice has been received by the contracting firm that they will be out of the building by St. Patrick's Day. The Ski Lodge Board of Governors has announced that they plan to open the lodge for use as soon as the necessary arrangements can be made.

LODGE OPEN TWELVE MONTHS

If you don't ski, don't worry; you can use the lodge, too. The lodge will be operated the year around. If your group or organization plans a function off campus, consider the lodge. If campus pressures build up to the point where you need a vacation, take one -- at the lodge. As you can see, the Outing Club Ski Lodge fills a gap for the University community. Now there is a place for an inexpensive vacation.

FORTY-FIVE MINUTE TRIP FROM UVM

The lodge is situated on the road to the Madonna Mountain ski area, Route 108, about three miles from the village of Jeffersonville. The trip from UVM takes about forty-five minutes. There are two bunk rooms -- one for women students and the attic for men. Meals will be served cafeteria style at the lodge. A place to sleep, something to eat -- what more could you ask for? Good companionship? Well, bring your friends and gather 'round the fireplace.

$1.50 FOR CHAPTER MEMBERS

By this time our more pessimistic readers are probably worried about the cost. The Board of Governors has set lodging prices at $1.50 per night for charter members and $3.00 per night for non-charter members. This Friday the Board of Governors plans to meet with the resident managers, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Parant, to go over policies on meal prices and other matters. Before you ask your next question, we will answer it. You can become a charter member by pledging your $35.00 breakage fee on deposit at the University, to the Outing Club Ski Lodge fund, or if you would rather, you may send a $35.00 contribution to the fund. Charter members will be given first consideration for reservations which can be made in Billings Center. Mondays are expected to be very busy at Billings for there are already 600 charter members. Charter membership also provides reduced ski rates at four local ski areas.

Sacred Concert

On Sunday afternoon, March 20th at four o'clock the Department of Music of the University of Vermont will present a sacred choral concert in the Ira Allen Chapel. The concert is free and the public is welcome.

The program will consist of the three choruses from the Pergolesi Stabat Mater sung by the University Women's Chorus and accompanied by a string quartet from the University Orchestra. This will be followed by the Mozart Requiem sung by the University Choir and accompanied by the University Orchestra. The solo parts will be sung by an octet from the choir.

The concert will be conducted by Francis Weinrich of the Department of Music.

IT'S TOURNAMENT TIME

Although the basketball season ended at UVM almost two weeks ago, it is just reaching its peak for those schools participating in the NCAA and the National Invitation tournaments. The fields have been pared down in these tourneys, the two biggest post-season tournaments in college basketball, and their titles will be decided this weekend.

The NCAA tournament will play its semi-final round this Friday night and the championship will be decided Saturday night. The four remaining teams are Duke, Kentucky, Texas Western, and Utah. To give an indication of the caliber of ball these teams play, Rhode Island, the Yankee Conference representative which beat UVM by an average of 30 points in their two meetings, was trounced by Davidson in the first round, 95-65. Davidson proceeded to lose to Syracuse, and Syracuse was Duke's last victim in moving to the semi-final round. Kentucky, Duke, and Texas Western are rated the top three teams in the nation.

Duke will meet Kentucky in the semi-finals and we look for the Blue Devils to get by the Wildcats and go on to take the championship. The Blue Devils have been rated in the top ten for each of the past six years. They count mainly on the fantastic outside shooting of Bob Verga, and the rugged inside play of 6-6 Jack Marin and 6-7 Mike Lewis. Kentucky, without a man over 6-5 depends on quickness and teamwork as their forte. Their top offensive threats are little Louie Dampier and Pat Riley. Although Kentucky has won more NCAA titles than any other school we think that Duke has too much raw material and will overpower the Wildcats in their attempt for another championship.

In the other semi-final Texas Western should easily get by Utah, but does not seem to have enough to stop Duke. Western has two outstanding guards in Bobby Mill and Orsen Artis and an excellent sophomore in 6-7 Dave Lattin. Also on the Texas squad are former NYC high school performers 6-8 Nevil Shed and 5-6 (that's right) Willie Worsley (and they claim he can stuff). It has taken last minute heroics of 6-5 Willie Cager in their last two games for TWU to come out on top as both have been overtime encounters. Utah, who got this far due to a lack of competition in the Far West Region, depends on the prolific scoring of 6-4 Jerry Chambers who has averaged close to 35 points a game down the stretch for them.

In the NIT, we see Brigham Young winning it easily. Their team, led by Dick Nemelka, plays a run and shoot style of ball and there does not seem to be another team in the tourney capable of stopping them. No offense to coach Loche, but neither NYU nor any of the other remaining clubs have the horses to stick with BYU.

Cat-Tracks - Speaking of tournaments, in the recent state high school championships at the Patrick Gym, there seemed to be a few good college prospects . . . Three were Bennington Catholic's 6-5 Tom Caron and 6-2 Stan Krawczyk, and Braintree - Randolph's 6-2 Tom Sivret . . . We hope Mr. Loche's recruiting plans include these boys . . . Also in this high school tournament a UVM alumnus guided his team to a state championship and an undefeated season in his first year . . . He is Billy Christie, a star relief pitcher for Ralph Lapointe for the past three years on the baseball diamond . . . This year's baseball team has been working hard under Lapointe's guidance in preparation for their upcoming Southern Trip . . . Lapointe has his top three ERA pitchers back - John McCord, Len Sheflott, and Bruce Bovenizer . . . McCord, a side-wheeling string bean, gave up but four earned runs in the 34 innings he worked to head the staff with an ERA of 0.99 . . . Sheflott was 1.07 and Bovenizer 1.35 . . . Team captain is senior Bobby Cornin, an excellent infielder who will be the starting shortstop this year.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Mr. Bloomenthal:

I want to congratulate you on your editorial in the March 11 CYNIC. The coaches have indeed done excellent work -- they have in other years also, but it's not often that the CYNIC has acknowledged this.

By the way, Hal Greig (soccer coach) should surely be included with the others.

As a suggestion for further trail-blazing, how about devoting your pen to those unsung heroines in the Women's Phys. Ed. Department?

Sincerely,

John H. Kent
Professor of Classics

Thank you for your letter. We regret having left Hal Greig, the Yankee Conference soccer Coach of the Year, out of our column.

NOTE: Both the NIT and the NCAA finals may be viewed on the tube this Saturday. The NIT starts at 2 P.M. on Channel 3 and the NCAA at 10 P.M. on Channel 5.

Bruce Hanna has been elected by his University of Vermont teammates to captain the 1966-67 Catamount basketball team.

Hanna, a backcourt man with tremendous desire and hustle, especially on defense, will be taking over the post held by Layne Higgs and Milt Goggans this season.

Hanna averaged nearly 10 points a game in helping the Cats spurt to five wins in their last six games. He had the best night of his career against Norwich in Burlington this season when he engineered a rally to wipe out a 16-point Cadet lead as the Cats won in overtime, 95-94.

For the season he finished with 105 points in 20 games after scoring 60 points in 19 games his sophomore year.

Head coach Art Loche cited Hanna for his "fine floor play and steady defensive work during the campaign."

MILT GOGGANS - The outgoing co-captain was named to the Yankee Conference All Scholastic team.

Milt Goggans, a three-year starter on the University of Vermont basketball team, has been selected to the 1966 Yankee Conference All Academic team.

Sponsored by the Yankee Conference sports information directors, the team stresses excellence in the classroom as well as on the basketball court. To qualify for nomination, players had to have a B average or better and to have been a stand-out basketball performer.

Goggans, a senior secondary education major, averaged 15.3 points a game this year, led the team in rebounds, and was the top field goal percentage shooter. He is from Hoboken, N.J.

Also named to the team were Wes Bialosuknia and Dan Hesford, both of Connecticut; Jim Cymbala of Rhode Island, and Terry Carr of Maine.

Another Vermont player, Layne Higgs of Barre, received honorable mention.

Track Team 5th In Yan Con Meet

ED CHILDS - The sophomore high jumper took the lone first place for UVM last week.

The University of Vermont track team closed out its indoor season last Saturday by finishing fifth in the Yankee Conference meet held at the Gutterson Field House. The final team standings were as follows:

Massachusetts	47
Rhode Island	40 1/2
Connecticut	36 1/2
New Hampshire	30
Vermont	21
Maine	20

Six meet and nine cage records were set in the 13 events of the meet. The only double winner was Copeland of Connecticut who took firsts in the 55 yard high and low hurdles.

Sophomore Ed Childs got the only first place for Vermont with a 6-1 3/4 effort in the high jump.

DON MAYLAND - The track captain was the team's high point getter in the meet.

Captain Don Mayland was the top pointgetter for the Cats, however, with two third places. Mayland's shows came in the pole vault and the low hurdles. The UVM senior had won the pole vault in his two previous years on the varsity.

Five other members of the team also contributed to the final Vermont point total. They include Pete Stickney and Paul Ardell in the shot put, Tom Fyles in the pole vault, and Jim Dedman and Vinnie DeCesaris in the 600 yard run. UVM also came in fourth in the mile relay.

With the conclusion of the indoor season, the team will have a month off before opening the outdoor season April 16 against Bowdoin.

Intramural Scoreboard

By Mick Kropsky

Delta Psi, with a third place finish in the Indoor Mile Relays, moved into the top position in the race to capture the All-Sports Trophy with 468 points.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon dropped from first to second place with a 459 point total. Sigma Phi Epsilon follows in the third spot with 419.9 points. Sigma Nu (340.4) and Phi Sigma Delta (336) round out the top five teams.

Delta Psi and Sigma Nu tied for first place in the intramural ski meet held at Stowe last weekend. Accacia was third in total scoring. Bill Duke of Accacia lead in individual scoring, while Dave Morse of Delta Psi was second.

The other top finishers were Sigma Alpha Epsilon - fourth; Phi Delta Theta - fifth; Lambda Iota - sixth.

The ski meet proved to be a great success with all the top teams finishing very close to each other. The race for this year's All Sports Trophy is developing into quite a battle.

Sigma Nu, winner of the Indoor Track and Field Meet, finished first in the Mile Relays also. Sig Nu's team of Jeff Kuman, John Hilton, Bill Lawrence, and Dick Catron ran the mile distance in 3:45.3. Runner-up in this event was Sig Ep followed by Delta Psi and Sigma Phi.

Intramural events which will soon be completed include the Ski team co-captain Dave Hosmer turned in the top individual performances of any team member this season in his specialty, the cross-country event. His showings include a first, a third, a fourth, and two sixths in five grueling races this year.

All-Campus paddleball doubles and squash tournaments. Also currently in progress is the volleyball league. On tap for the remainder of the year are such events as swimming, tennis, badminton, and softball.

Leadership Conference Spurs Student Involvement

Promotion of student involvement was both the subject and object of last Saturday's Leadership Conference -- the first of its kind at UVM.

The conference, sponsored by the Student Association in conjunction with the Dean of Men and the Dean of Women, was host to approximately sixty delegates, who represented a variety of campus organizations. The program, consisting of speeches by prominent members of the university and group discussions among the student participants, was an attempt to direct the thinking of and hopefully to direct the plan of action of these participants.

The Keynote speaker for the event was Roland D. Patzer, Dean of Men. His speech was entitled, "Leadership and Sandbox Politics." Dean Patzer characterized a good leader as having: integrity, a critical eye,

Peace Corps

Directory Issued

WASHINGTON -- The Peace Corps this week published a directory listing some 120 training programs it is launching this Summer for 47 nations of Asia, Africa and Latin America. Directed at the Class of '66, the directory is being mailed to thousands of college seniors and graduate students across the United States.

The directory marks several advances in Peace Corps planning. It is the first guide of its kind published by the Peace Corps and its contents represent the largest number of training programs and the largest number of overseas job openings -- over 7,000 -- in the organization's five year history.

The directory contains descriptions of each program scheduled to the June, July, August training phase. The programs are listed by type and geographical region and are indexed by appropriate college major. They include:

- Latin America -- community development, education (teaching at all levels), technical and industrial education, rural education/community development, educational television/television literacy; public and municipal administration; food/agriculture/4-H, physical education, nursing/social work/pre-school, health, cooperatives, electrification, arts crafts and secretarial.

- Africa -- education, health, agriculture, land settlement, domestic arts and home improvement, community development, highway development, construction, fisheries, social welfare and adult and vocational education.

- North Africa, Near East and South Asia -- education, community development, rural literacy, food production/agriculture, health, family planning, youth work, public works, architecture/city planning, small industry development and warehousing.

an understanding of others, a capacity for hard work, a creative urge, a perception of a changing yet unchanging world, and the ability to both chart a course of action and to pursue it. Patzer impressed upon the student leaders that "The wealth of youth is wasted because one does not realize its worth until one is too old to use it."

After considering the "Dynamics of Discussion" as presented by Norman T. London, the assistant dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, the participants divided into six discussion groups. Each was to decide on a problem which was to be considered of prime importance to the university and its student leaders.

The groups then presented their problems to the conference en masse. Each problem was then voted upon by the delegation, and it was resolved that the discussion for the remainder of the evening would encompass the solutions to "What would facilitate increased involvement of the student in University life?"

Intervening speeches at this time consisted of "Leader-follower relationships," given by Mervyn W. Perrine, assistant professor of psychology; and "Tools and Techniques of Leadership" by Major Francis Mahoney.

The conference culminated in the presentation of the individual groups' suggestions on how they would promote more activity among the students and a Conference Overview by Dean Anna R. Harris, Dean of Women.

The steering committee will be discussing and evaluating the conference in an attempt to determine its effectiveness and to make future plans.

UVM Wins $6000 Grant

The University of Vermont has been awarded a $6000 grant by the Research Corporation of New York for support of a research project in the area of entropy determinations.

The project, "Calculational and Experimental Aspects of Entropy Determinations," will be under the direction of Dr. Claus A. Wulff, assistant professor of chemistry. Entropy deals with mathematical factors used to measure unavailable energy in a thermodynamic system. Thermodynamics, in turn, is the science which treats the mechanical action or relations of heat.

According to Dr. Wulff, within the framework of thermodynamics, entropy production is considered to be the driving force behind chemical and physical processes such as the erosion of mountains, the metabolic processes necessary for life, and the many chemical reactions used by industry.

In addition to their use in calculating such equilibria, entropy values have become a powerful method in the elucidation of the molecular structure.

"With literally millions of chemical species now available, such experimental determinations become an impossible task. The obvious need is for reliable methods of entropy estimation," says Dr. Wulff.

To do this, the initial phase of the project will be spent developing "models" and calculational methods to estimate entropy values. Once this is done, such calculations will identify certain key compounds whose entropies would serve as checks on the "models" used. These key compounds would then be subjected to experiment.

Assisting Dr. Wulff on his research are three graduate students, Paul Abajian, John Lerbacher and Ronald Provost. This research is also being supported by funds from the Petroleum Research Fund and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

The Research Corporation was created in 1912 by Frederick Gardner Cottrell as a foundation for the advancement of science. It supports basic research in the natural sciences through grants-in-aid to colleges, universities and scientific institutions. Its grants total more than a million dollars annually.

A Review...

By Errol Selaby

On March 17, the University Players presented Bertolt Brecht's Mother Courage and Her Children. The show, under directions of Mr. Edward Feidner, ran three nights. The set and lights were designed by the technical director, Mr. William Schenk. The play was presented in the Arena Theater.

Brecht's play is concerned with the lives of Mother Courage and her three children: Ellif, Katrin, and Swiss Cheese. The events take place over most of the continent of Europe during the Thirty Years War. Brecht finished the play at the outbreak of World War II, and it depicts the scourge and terror of war—not of one war but all wars. Brecht's concept of the theater was not only one of removal, but one of great theatricality. He uses every means possible to destroy any sense of the immediate, replacing it with a sense of prolongation and timelessness. Brecht conceived of the drama in Epic terms rather than Aristotelian. By Epic Brecht means a theater of aloofness and uninvolvedness, rather than a complete adherence to Aristotle's concept of catharsis. Brecht does not deny the cathartic experience but subordinates it. Brecht rather attempts to stimulate reflection and awareness.

As one entered the dimly lit theater, the simple appearing black set made up of ramps, platforms and levels loomed ominously, foreshadowing events to come. The barren stage and well-constructed set created no sense of confusion and distraction with the exception of the sign which read "Mutter Courage Und Ihre Kinder." The sign was brightly lighted in magenta, a color which somewhat detracted from the sense of unity ultimately desired by Mr. Schenk. Barring this jarring sense of color at the opening some technical rough edges, and Courage's well-designed but sometimes clumsily used wagon, this technical achievement ranks high in the annals of stage design at the university. However, in comparison, much of the acting on this opening was not of the same high quality.

First I must extend my congratulations to Miss Donna Kristiansen for her fine performance as the mute daughter, Katrin. Her sensitive portrayal of this sympathetic soul was consistent and real. Her movements and sounds were pointed, unhesitating and a relief. Whenever she was on stage, she held most of the audience's attention, though occasionally upstaging everyone. However, this occasional, unintentional upstaging was never offensive, but, on the contrary, a delight to watch.

I must also single out Mr. William Dixon. He had a consistency of character and a nice combination of old age, religion, and war in his portrayal of the Chaplain. Never were his attempts at humor offensive, but rather, were a useful device to break the feeling of heaviness within the play. He overcame the lack of interrelation between the actors, a lack which was prominent throughout the performance.

The cook, portrayed by Phil Brown, had a nice subdued character which he effectively made believable, but later in the play his attempt to react as a hard, insensitive man returning from the war was difficult to believe. However, his performance was on a higher level than the majority of the cast.

Yvette, portrayed by Sherri Mundell, was never believable. Yvette is a prostitute trying to make a living out of war, but Sherri's interpretation of whorishness would not excite a seafaring man destined to a life of abstinence on a wayward island. She, along with most of the cast, recited her lines as a child doing the Gettysburg Address on Lincoln's birthday.

Ellif and Swiss Cheese, played by Trent Anderson and Larry Sargent, never established any believable relationship with their mother. Their interpretation seldom met the specifications of the play or of the lines and the characters of the brothers were never seen. Their only sense of unity was their drawing of the wagon onto the stage at the opening. Mr. Anderson seemed preoccupied with the expression "Project" which gave his voice and performance a false sense of character.

Linda Simet as Mother Courage, showed some stage presence, but it appeared for this opening night that the three weeks of rehearsal was insufficient for achieving a believable characterization of this difficult role. Miss Simet, Mother Courage being her first role at the University, showed some nice potential, but her New Yorkish accent was distracting throughout the performance. She obviously did not comprehend the role, but Brecht's adept ability with dialogue saved much of her performance. There was little interaction between her and her sons though she showed some sensitivity toward Katrin as the play progressed. Most of her performance was on one level and she showed little growth or any sense of the tragic in her portrayal. Her finest things were done in the second and final act of the play, but even here she showed no development or emotional conflict. I do believe however, that she has a potential which, if properly cast could be exploited.

The play presented on Thursday evening was the culmination of three weeks work, and three weeks work for such a difficult show places a great strain on all those concerned, especially the director. I feel that had they had more time to rehearse and work out such difficult roles, the opening could have been a more sophisticated performance.

Lane Series

Rumanian Ballet Performs National Dances

Gay Rumanian Folk Ballet - Who said it couldn't be done?

By Judy Beeber

Rumania has been referred to throughout the years as a country with unusual "zest for living." The Rumanian Ballet will demonstrate this characteristic when they perform on the Red Lane Series on Monday, April 4 at 8:30 p.m. in Memorial Auditorium. Often called "Clocirlia" (Skylark), after the most popular of Rumanian folk songs, the huge ensemble of 90 dancers, singers and instrumentalists has prepared a program rooted in the more than fifty regions of the country and displaying as many aspects of the colorful life of the people. The group is now touring North America under the direction of Impresario S. Hurok.

All the dances to be performed are national in character. Dances from Transylvania, frolics from the territories of Wallachia and Baragan as well as dances from the region of Carpathia and the lowlands of the Romany gypsies will be featured. Among the highlights will be the "Sirba", a dance in which athletic prowess and acrobatic technique is required, and a series of "Horas", both danced and sung, which contain some of the fastest steps on record.

The dazzling embroidered garments worn by the members of the troupe will reflect the culture of the Rumanians ranging from the lowland peasants to the hunters of the Carpathian mountains. Notable among these will be the "lie", a peasant shirt worn by the men of the plains, the "Pote", a woman's skirt made of ribbons, an "lie", a woman's waistcoat showing gypsy influences and the "naframa" or kerchiefs with crowns of flowers, tassels, beading, glass ornaments and sometimes wires twisted into intricate shapes.

The orchestral ensemble will present some of its outstanding soloists to introduce some of the Rumanian instruments to Americans. Dumitru Zamfira will play the "kaval", or shepherd's long pipe, which produces both eerie and lyrical sounds. Bistrita Remus will perform on the "tara-got", a clarinet-like wind instrument that imitates bird calls. A "kobza", or guitar with ten strings, will be played by Serban Ion. The "cymbalon" a dulcimer-like instrument that is struck with small hammers, will have a duo-team of Tony Iordache and Alecu Iile as its exponents.

Victor Predescu is the ensemble's conductor, a post he has held for some 16 years. Gheorghe Popescu-Judet is the Ballet Master, and, with his constant travelling, observation and research is also the principal Choreographer, responsible for staging almost the entire repertory of the troupe.

For those who have never seen a European dance troupe perform its national dances, a most exciting and inspiring evening should be expected.

Debaters Win 22

Twelve members of the Lawrence Debate and Discussion travelled to four tournaments March 11-12, winning twenty-two debates and losing twelve.

At the New England Forensic Conference, sponsored by Middlebury College, UVM entered all four forensic events, placing among the top schools in three events. Trip coaches were Miss Lynn Baier and Mr. Robert Carr.

Junior Brad Sumner participated in oral interpretation of literature. Senior Bob Brooks qualified for the finals in extemporaneous speaking and placed fourth in the final round. In original oratory, sophomore Robin Frost also qualified for the final placing third.

The affirmative debate team of Mike Schoenfeld and sophomore Nick Danigellis won all four rounds of debate. The pair defeated Bates, St. Anselm's, Bowdoin, and Maine. In the semi-final round, they lost to Southern Connecticut.

The negative team of Bob Brooks and Robin Frost won over Norwich, Williams, and Emerson, and lost to Colby. With a 7-1 win-loss record, UVM took third place in debate, also placing second in overall forensic records and receiving five certificates for excellence.

Four novice freshman girls flew to a varsity tournament at Brooklyn College, returning with a second place trophy and a 10-2 win-loss record. Trip coach was Miss Carmen Wessner, former UVM debater.

The affirmative team of Donna Loizeaux and Ramona Goddard won all six rounds, defeating Killroe, William and Mary, Rutgers, Courtland, Columbia, and Denison. The team tied for first place affirmative team.

Negative debaters Scheryl Parker and Priscilla Goekmeyer, won four debates and lost two, tying for third place. The team defeated American University, Staten Island, Wagner, and Wooster, losing to Georgetown and Canisius.

University of Pennsylvania sponsored the Liberty Bell Tournament to which UVM sent two debaters. Senior David Waite and Freshman Bob Daniels won over Belmont Abbey, Redlands, and North Carolina and lost to Seton Hall, Pennsylvania, and Wayne State.

Senior Dave Webster and Norm Snow won two debates and lost six at the Heart of America Tournament sponsored by the University of Kansas. The two defeated San Fernando and University of Alabama and dropped decisions to Oklahoma, Minnesota, Boston College, Augustana, Houston, and Washburn. Trip coach was Dr. Robert Huber.

Cadets Begin Student Teaching

In the Army, classroom instruction is applied in the field to give students a working knowledge of problems they must face. Senior Cadets majoring in education are now learning firsthand the problems educators face every day. Remembering our days in high school we bet that some of the neophyte teachers will wish they were pitching tents and eating C-rations before the week is out. However, we're sure that the training the Cadets have received in both education and ROTC courses will stand them in good stead as they move into the classroom. Since all of the Senior Cadets have participated as instructors in ROTC classes and drill, the leadership principles they have learned will be worthwhile remembering.

A Leadership Conference was held Saturday at the Mt. Philo Inn. This brings those involved back to the activity which they have pursued since it was announced that one would be held. This activity is reflection. We have reflected for an entire week. We know that the conference was a success and that we learned a great deal. And yet we still sit back and try to analyze the day and its concrete effects for us as well as those who were not fortunate enough to attend. As you know (if you don't, read the story on page 1), there were speeches, discussions, dinners, and informal chats at the Conference. Sound dull? It was anything but that. The steering committee, headed very capably by Helen Keith, chose from among the best speakers on campus. In spite of the apparent success of the conference, many questions come to mind which can be answered by no one at the present time.

First of all, the conference was attended by the leaders of the governing groups on campus. Are those groups effective in their present endeavors? If so, some credit is due to the leaders of the groups but if these groups are ineffective, it is not the sole fault of the leaders. These groups of students represent every faction on campus. If they are not doing anything for you, then you should have thought twice before you elected them (or failed to elect them).

Aside from the problems which were raised in the discussion groups, the most important aspect of the entire day was the fact that it was a first step toward achievement of effective leadership on campus and involvement of the students in the problems faced by faculty members, administrators, and the students themselves. This, if we may repeat ourselves, is only an initial step into what may prove to be a most effective program. There are two things impeding the progress of a good leadership program -- time and money. It has been suggested that a similar conference be held twice a year, involving more students, faculty members,

The Best Of Best

By Prof. James J. Best

SA is at it again! After a year of soul searching and conversations with students at McGill, SA is again promoting the idea of Professor Evaluation. Before beginning this bold venture, however, a faculty-student panel will be held on April 7 to discuss the idea. Although I will be unable to attend the panel I would like to raise some points for the panel to consider.

What is the purpose of Professor Evaluation? Is the purpose to open channels of communication between students and faculty, or to open channels of communication between students and administration, regarding the professor's performance in class? While it is true that, "This is our chance to direct these value judgements, formally, toward the person who can use them the most," it is an open question as to who those "persons" are. If Professor Evaluation is designed to tell a professor the merits and demerits of his classroom presentation, its effectiveness will depend on what the individual professors do with the comments; those interested in being good teachers will listen while those who don't care, won't. If, on the other hand, Professor Evaluation is designed to influence tenure and promotion, it will have its greatest impact on younger, less experienced faculty members who want both tenure and promotion -- not the older, tenured associate and full professors.

The Leadership Conference of last Saturday was an eye-opener. For the first time in my two years on campus I saw the cream of student extracurricular leadership gathered in one place. I had neither seen nor heard of three-fourths of them before. One fascinating by-product of the Conference was an impression I received from talking with some of the conference participants. While ostensibly talking about campus problems, most participants were actually talking about students versus faculty/administration in hand-to-hand combat.

The next six weeks will be exciting ones for the faculty. Sometime before the end of the semester we will receive letters telling us that we have been rehired and at what salary. If we don't like our salaries, too bad, since salaries are not negotiable. On the other hand, May is a little late to go looking for a new job for the following September. It is interesting to note the number of faculty members who are willing to leave UVM, even before the new contracts come out in May.

The crusading classicist, Professor Kent, dropped me a note the other day to bring to my attention a grammatical error I had made in an earlier column and to ask that I give "a plug for those unseen and unsung heroes of our Faculty, who work approximately 70 hours each week; I mean the Women's Physical Education Department." Hats off to the leaders of the green gym suit brigade. Rest secure in the knowledge that you have an able protector in Professor Kent.

It must be Spring. I saw a barefoot boy in the library last night talking with Miss Vermont.

Reader Defends Columnist Crane

To the Editors:

In response to Ester Sundell's letter criticizing Margaret Crane's column, I believe that it is valid for a columnist to ask questions, and the question which she asked about long hair was a good one. One might criticize the letter in response to her column as being rather stupid and immaterial to the subject toward which she was originally headed.

Her satire (Studentes, March 11) however, did not deserve being called, "A pseudosarcastic look at imagined University policy." I have been in classes where teachers have made the very comments that her imaginary advisor made. Sociologists and economists will tell you these facts one by one. The students on campus will make the other observations. Her criticisms may not be properly headed in her column, but they are certainly worthwhile commentaries of what is wrong with some of the people who belong to the University in one capacity or another.

Miss Crane could, I am sure, write an ordinary news column, but I enjoy the topics which she has chosen. They represent a fresh approach to some of our problems, both old and new.

Yours truly,

Eva Whitefield

Land Grant College Benefits

There are 97 land-grant institutions and major state universities in all 50 states and Puerto Rico in the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF STATE UNIVERSITIES AND LAND-GRANT COLLEGES. In addition to their main campuses, they operate more than 275 permanent branches throughout their states.

Land-grant institutions count among their alumni more than half of all living American Nobel Prize winners, close to half of the members of the National Academy of sciences, half of the nation's Governors, Senators, and Congressmen, the Vice President of the United States, half of the nation's supply of school teachers, two-fifths of its civilian federal executives, more than one-third of the nation's leading corporation executives, and many outstanding labor leaders.

Among land-grant institutions; students are 53.8 percent of the National Science Foundation's fellowship winners, 48 percent of the NDEA's modern foreign language fellowship winners, and 27 percent of current Woodrow Wilson fellowship winners. These institutions also educate about one-third of all foreign students in the United States. More than four-fifths of their freshmen rank in the top half of their high school graduating classes and close to one-third rank in the top tenth.

Placement Barometer

Learn Your Job

by Douglas O. Hanau, Director, UVM Placement Bureau

Your first job is to get a job. Your next job is to learn your job. The new entrant upon modern business must expect to serve something of an apprenticeship and to continue training continuously in order to augment his or her value to the employer. The person who is willing to do that will find that opportunity today, while unlike that of yesterday, is just as abundant as it ever was. If you plunge wholeheartedly into the business of learning all you can about your job, the reward, not only in advancement, but in job satisfaction, will greatly repay your efforts. It is the idler who is discontented, not the person who tackles his job the hard way.

The college-graduate woman who is hired as a secretary looks around her at the other jobs, if she has any sense, to see what the women holding them have that she lacks, and to figure out what she must do to fit herself for a better position. Go to almost any employer today and you will find people who, after working all day, go to school at night, taking courses to help them in their work. In most instances, employers encourage this program by refunding at least part of the cost. It is as important to the employers to have trained people whom they can advance as it is to the person to be trained so he or she can advance.

A vast majority of job seekers complain that they run into a vicious circle: "No experience-no job; no job-no experience." They demand to know what they are to do about it. The error here is that the untrained applicants have applied for jobs which require experience. In other words, they have been seeking a job blindly. Every organization has starting assignments which do not require any specialized training or experience, and the untrained candidate should apply for these. Their whole approach is wrong.

Training is essential for advancement and training is available today to a greater extent than ever before in our history. Yet the fact still remains that not one person in a hundred makes use of this method of increasing his or her value to an employer. The day frequently comes when the employee has an opportunity for real advancement and is unable to grasp it due to insufficient education. Nowhere is there a greater need for improved training and education than in the application of man's most constantly used and most frequently misused tool-words. The number of people who can use either the written or the spoken word adequately is shockingly small. YOU CAN GO ONLY SO FAR DOWN THE ROAD YOU CHOOSE TO GO AS YOU CAN PERSUADE OTHER PEOPLE TO ACCEPT YOUR IDEAS. Your most effective method of persuasion consists of words. If you are to reach a position of any importance at all you will have to express yourself in writing. Letters and reports will be one of your chief methods of conveying your ideas. If you cannot express them clearly you are lost.

The same thing applies to the spoken word. It is my personal conviction that a course in public speaking should be compulsory for every college student. It not only gives a man an incomparable advantage by making him more at ease and giving him greater confidence in himself; it also increases his ability to express his ideas and to impress them on others. Every day in the week some man puts over an idea in a business conference although everyone present may have disagreed with him when he started to speak. Why? For the simple reason that he can present his ideas clearly and forcefully. Men constantly fail to carry their point because they cannot marshal their thoughts. They hem and haw, they wander from the point or leave it out altogether; they bog down in confusion.

Promotion does not come by accident; it comes by preparation, and preparation in business means training. Two weeks after you are employed, few will know or care where you went to college. It is not what you have learned, but whether you can make use of what you have learned, that interests your employer. To sum up, training and continuous preparation are the answer to that cry, "Give us the skill!" The opportunity to acquire it is given you; but you must acquire the skill by yourself. Time is the most valuable possession you will ever have and your future depends to a large extent on the way you make use of the time at your disposal. This realization hopefully you will have already discovered during your stay here at UVM.

The Unusual Is Usual At UVM

Getting a little bored with your subjects? Want something up-to-date, dynamic, yet down-to-earth? Why not explore the world, or one of its parts with the Geography Department.

Next year the department will offer a total of fourteen different courses, many of which have just been added to those previously offered. Because of the expansion, it is now possible for students to major in Geography.

Geography one, two and three, are designed to give an over-all view of the world. Specific areas are covered in the geography of Africa, Canada, USSR, Asia, Europe, Latin America, and the United States. Each of these courses gives an opportunity to get to know the land, the people, the potentials and the problems of the area. If one is interested in making maps, there's a course in cartography, or in weather, a course in climate. Historical Geography of the United States, Historical Geography of Europe, and Political Geography, are courses which combine two disciplines.

Geography courses tend to combine a little of what one learns in geology, history, political science, sociology and economics; they tie the loose ends together and make a lot of sense of what before seemed facts for facts sake.

Geography courses are not "Gut Courses," but they do offer large dividends for every hour you put into them. One student even remarked, "Geography gives you a hundred new subjects to talk about at cocktail parties."

Tag - You're It

"Tag day" brought the "student ambassador" program $260 closer to its goal of raising enough money to send a student to India for nine weeks this summer. Further details will be published after vacation. The officers of each class wish to extend their thanks for the cooperation and support of the student body.

Coffee House Snag

Encounter Coffee House, slated to open last weekend, was delayed again -- this time for legal reasons. A request for a zoning variance was presented on March 22 at City Hall. In spite of the cancellation, some 75 persons showed up Friday night. They got their coffee free! Opening night is now tentatively set for after vacation.

Land-grant institutions are concerned about preserving the individuality of the student in an age of growing enrollments and are working in areas such as the development of small colleges within the larger university, academic programs in residence halls, student-faculty-administration meetings and communications, independent study programs, honors programs, and improved guidance and counseling programs.

and administrators. There are not enough time during the one-day conference to satisfactorily cover the one issue brought up for consideration, let alone all of the other important topics mentioned. It is hoped that a 1 1/2 or 3-day conference be held. This raises the problem of financial coverage. The leadership conference is of definite value to the university. Why, therefore, can't the university sponsor such a program? We have raised many questions. We hope that those who attended the conference will take the initiative to follow it up in their individual realms as well as on a campus-wide basis. Let this stand as a pledge by the students that this is only the beginning. We, the students, can and will strive for increased involvement in the workings of our community.

General Electric is an easy place to work.

All you need is brains, imagination, drive and a fairly rugged constitution.

Oh, yes. Something else that will help you at G.E. is an understanding of the kind of world we live in, and the kind of world we will live in.

There's a lot happening: The population is continuing to explode. The strain on resources is becoming alarming. At a time when men are being lured by the mysteries of space, we're faced with the task of making life on earth more livable.

There's a lot happening at G.E., too, as our people work in a hundred different areas to help solve the problems of a growing world: Supplying more (and cheaper) electricity with nuclear reactors. Controlling smog in our cities and pollution in our streams. Providing better street lighting and faster transportation.

This is the most important work in the world today: Helping to shape the world of tomorrow. Do you want to help? Come to General Electric, where the young men are important men.

Spring Floods (?) Ensnue

East Thursday, March 10, one too many toilets was flushed in the Waterman Building, the sewage pump broke down, and the floor of the Waterman Dining hall was covered by a river of stinking filth. Neither the students who eat at Waterman, nor the Saga employees who had to clean up the mess, found the situation very pleasant.

This is the second time this year that sewage has backed up into the dining hall. The first time it was certainly not pleasant, but perhaps necessary to show someone that something was wrong; the second time it was a disgrace. Since the university has made the decision to place the dining hall at the lowest level of the building where such an overflow may occasionally occur, they are, in all decency, also obligated to provide the satisfactory equipment, or the auxiliary equipment, to keep the dining hall a sanitary and pleasant place to eat. Perhaps, if those who have failed in their responsibility, were the ones who had to eat at Waterman, they would be a little more prompt in alleviating the problem.

MILITARY BALL HERALDED AS TREMENDOUS SUCCESS

Queen Barbara Bigelow, her court, Tippy Connor, his sixteen piece orchestra, and wonderful planning and coordination by the Ethan Allen Rifles and Pershing Rifles all combined to make the 98th annual Military Ball a highlight for the year on the UVM social scene.

DATELINE... ROTC

By Walter Pressery

Guests arrived at 8:30 and were received by Peter McGregor, Brigade Commander, and his fiancée Miss Ellen Cruickshank, President and Mrs. Shannon McCune, Colonel and Mrs. Leonard Robinson, Vice President and Mrs. Lyman Rowell, Miss Joyce Herlihy, Military Ball Queen for 1965, and David Pietsch, President of Ethan Allen Rifles.

The music of Tippy Connor's orchestra graced the ball and made the time fly until the highlight of the ball - the crowning of the queen. At 10:30, the Pershing Rifles honor guard formed an arch of gleaming sabers under which the royalty for 1966 was escorted. The honorary Cadet Captains for Companies A, B, C, and D respectively are Miss Laurel Monti; Miss Jean Hansen, Miss Brooke Taylor, and Miss Jill Taylor. Each girl was escorted by the Commander of the company which they sponsor during the next year. The honorary Cadet Colonel, Miss Barbara Bigelow, was then escorted to her throne by Cadet Colonel Peter McGregor, to be crowned by Miss Joyce Herlihy. Each girl was presented with a small silver saber and the insignia of her rank. The Queen received an engraved silver bowl.

Past Present

The Company's first engine, the Wasp, took to the air on May 8, 1926. Within a year the Wasp set its first world record and went on to smash existing records and set standards for both land and seaplanes for years to come, carrying airframes and pilots higher, farther, and faster than they had ever gone before.

In recent years, planes powered by Pratt & Whitney Aircraft have gone on to set new standards of performance in much the same way as the Wasp had done in the 1920's. The 727 and DC-9 are indicative of the new family of short-to-medium range jetliners which are powered by the highly successful JT8D turbofan. Examples of current military utilizations are the J58-powered Mach 3 YF-12A which recently established four world aviation records and the advanced TF30-powered F-111 variable-geometry fighter aircraft.

Your and the Future

Take a look at the above chart; then a good long look at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft—where technical careers offer exciting growth, continuing challenge, and lasting stability—where engineers and scientists are recognized as the major reason for the Company's continued success.

Engineers and scientists at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft are today exploring the ever-broadening avenues of energy conversion for every environment... all opening up new avenues of exploration in every field of aerospace, marine and industrial power application. The technical staff working on these programs, backed by Management's determination to provide the best and most advanced facilities and scientific apparatus, has already given the Company a firm foothold in the current land, sea, air and space programs so vital to our country's future. The list of achievements amassed by our technical staff is a veritable list of firsts in the development of compact power plants, dating back to the first Wasp engine which lifted the United States to a position of world leadership in aviation. These engineering and scientific achievements have enabled the Company to obtain its current position of leadership in fields such as gas turbines, liquid hydrogen technology and fuel cells.

Should you join us, you'll be assigned early responsibility. You'll find the spread of Pratt & Whitney Aircraft's programs requires virtually every technical talent. You'll find opportunities for professional growth further enhanced by our Corporation-financed Graduate Education Program. Your degree can be a BS, MS or PhD in: MECHANICAL • AERONAUTICAL • ELECTRICAL • CHEMICAL ENGINEERING • PHYSICS • CHEMISTRY • METALLURGY • CERAMICS • MATHEMATICS • ENGINEERING SCIENCE OR APPLIED MECHANICS.

For further information concerning a career with Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, consult your college placement officer—or write Mr. William L. Stoner, Engineering Department, Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, East Hartford, Connecticut 06108.

BEST PLATOON IN BRIDAGE ANNOUNCED

At the Military Ball last Friday, the announcement of the best platoon in the brigade was made. The winning platoon commanded by Cadet Lieutenant David Matte is the first platoon of Company C commanded by Cadet Captain Walter Stowell. Matte, a senior from Fair Haven, Vt., is participating in the student teaching program at South Burlington High School, and Cadet Sergeant Niel Day commands the platoon in his absence. We are sure Cadet Matte is performing just as well in the classroom as he has on the drill field.

ROTC INSTRUCTOR TRANSFERRED OVERSEAS

Department of the Army has released information indicating that Sergeant First Class Richard A. Domaingue, a UVM ROTC instructor since 1962, will be transferred to the Inter-American Geodetic Survey Team, Honduras, early next fall.

SFC Domaingue is a graduate of the Army Language School's course in Spanish. His assignment immediately preceding arrival at UVM was with the U.S. Army School of the Americas, Panama, Canal Zone. He is a graduate of Technical High School, Springfield, Massachusetts, and a veteran of 19 years service. In addition to his tour in Panama, SFC Domaingue has served in Okinawa and Germany. He and his family presently reside in Essex Junction, Vermont.

ADVANCED COURSE ENROLLMENT WILL CLIMB

Between the solid support for the ROTC advanced course being shown by sophomore Cadets and the response to new programs by students not presently enrolled in ROTC, there is no doubt that advanced course enrollment and officer commissions will continue to climb in the future as has been the case for years past. Some fifteen students have indicated their intent to reestablish their ROTC affiliations. The Brigade welcomes their decision.

Bailey Library Newman Center Display Opens

Paul Judzinak and Pat Starkevich display model of exhibit.

Have you seen the new exhibit at the Bailey Library? It tells the story of the UVM Catholic Center rapidly nearing completion on the Redstone Campus. Begun last Saturday, the display will last about a month.

Included in the exhibit are scale models of the chapel and Center building, samples of interior woodwork, glass, rugs and stone. A collection of photos record the growth of the two structures. "I think people will be interested in Paul Aschenbach's creative sketches even though these may not be finally incorporated into the Center's architecture," said senior Paul Jedzinak, a brother of Theta Chi. Paul is responsible for the exhibit, aided by Patricia Stankevich, '68, of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority. Blueprints of the Center are included in the exhibit.

The new Catholic Center will be dedicated May 8 by Cardinal Cushing.

"Headstart" Discussed

By Ann Lindley

The Bertha Terrill Home Economics Club sponsored a program on "Operation Headstart" held on Thursday, March 17 at 6:30 p.m. in Southwick Auditorium. Mrs. Corrine Madox, the head of the state organization, spoke on the training of teachers to work here in Vermont. One goal, she stated, was to "break the cycle of poverty" in which children of parents out of work may also have trouble getting work. She expressed her hopes for future development of the organization. Mrs. Mary Jane Butties, director of Headstart in Burlington, told of her many varied experiences working with underprivileged children in the Burlington area.

A coffee hour and discussion period followed, during which the audience was able to question the two speakers as well as several UVM co-eds who worked with Headstart last summer.

ENROLLMENT NOTICE

Arts and Science students enrolling for either their junior or senior year have as advisors the chairman of the department in which they are majoring. Sophomores continue with their freshman advisor. Anyone in doubt should see Dean London, College of Arts and Sciences, 159 Waterman.

FSEE EXAMINATION

The FSEE examination is open to college seniors and graduates as well as to others with a combination of experience and training equivalent to a bachelor's degree. It is used to examine people with high potential for positions in 60 major occupational fields.

The 1966 FSEE testing schedule is rapidly drawing to a close. Students who are interested in federal employment and who have not yet taken this examination have only two more opportunities to do so. Applications must be submitted by March 16 for examination scheduled on April 16 and by April 19 for test to be held on May 21.

NEW COURSE OFFERED

"Social Work in the Community" will be given Fall Semester 1966-1967. This will offer field experience in social agencies in the Burlington area and a weekly seminar. The course completes the Pre-professional Social Work Sequence which include "Social Welfare as a Social Institution" H. Ec. 113, and "Social Work as a Profession" H. Ec. 114, both of which will be given next fall.

THE RUNNING GAME

With the arrival of spring, baseball becomes the name of the game at UVM. In the past few years, mainly due to the emergence of Maury Wills in the major leagues the running game has burst into prominence. It might be noted that the pennant winners of both big leagues in 1965 used more speed than they did the previous year.

The Twins did not top their league in home runs, yet they finished first in the American League. The World Champion Dodgers had over 200 less hits and 200 less runs than the league leaders in these categories, but no team had more wins.

One national baseball journal has gone so far as to say, "We wonder if there has not been about 40 years of overemphasis on the importance of the long ball, started by Babe Ruth and the rabbit baseball."

"No doubt Mays, Mantle and Company will aim at the fence as usual, but the banjo hitters, some of them at least, might be told that singles and two-base blows will win more games than an occasional home run and a flock of strikeouts."

"It will be surprising if we don't see more of what is known as 'inside baseball' this coming year in the major leagues."

We are wondering whether this same prediction could apply to UVM baseball this year. To start from the top, Vermont has an expert baseball strategist in coach Ralph Lapointe. Since Lapointe arrived at UVM 15 years ago he has instituted a tradition of winning baseball. His record in his 14 previous seasons here is an excellent 191 won and 115 lost.

The obvious strength of this year's team is in the pitching. Thus, just as the Dodgers, Vermont will not need many runs to win ball games.

Another strong point of the team which has not been noticed much yet is its speed. Bob Cronin, Bill Leete, Bruce Lombard, and Dave Wayne can all move down the line and the others are not far behind.

The big question mark remains to be the fielding. Cronin is the only proven good glove man on the squad. With four sophomore on the starting nine, including two infielders, this may present a problem.

Even without a power hitter in the lineup we look for Lapointe to generate a good offensive attack. Expect to see many attempts by the Catamounts to bunt, drag, steal, and try for the extra base. Their personnel seems custom made for that type of play.

All in all, despite the return of only five lettermen to this year's squad, if the promising sophomores, along with a junior and a senior, can jell defensively, it looks like another banner season for Ralph Lapointe -- a la the L.A. Dodgers this time.

Would you believe... Last year's top two collegiate ERA teams will meet when UVM plays Rider College on the Southern Trip... The recently named All-Y. C. basketball first team corresponds exactly with the team picked by the CYNIC a few weeks ago... The only difference on the second team is that URI's Jim Cymbala replaced Vermont's Ken Spalter on the official team... Spalter, Lyne Higgs, and Milt Goggans all honorable mention... Higgs and Spalter also will be honored tonight on the All-State team chosen by WCAX-TV... Higgs and Goggans are slated to play in an Elizabethtown, N. Y., Invitational Basketball tournament this weekend for a local unit called Mike Posey's Burlington Independents... Other members of the team include former Champlain College performers Sandy Hines, Jake Moore, and Bob Tipson, and past St. Mike's players Ed Kryger and Jim Dooley... While this year's basketball team had two Barre, Vt. members in Layne Higgs and Alden Hale, the baseball team list two more Barre products in Rick Aldrich and Don Fitts... There is also a brothers act in Captain Bob Cronin and sophomore Dave.

Frosh Hoop Stats Promising

The 1965-66 freshman basketball season at the University of Vermont was a highly successful one, particularly for two people with the same last name.

The Kittens of Coach Ralph Lapointe won nine of 10 games while the top scorer was son Dave who averaged 22.9 points a game.

Dave, a standout at Winooski High and at Deerfield Academy, never was below double figures as he poured in 229 points. His low output was in the season's opener, when he got 14 against Dartmouth, while his high was a brilliant 38-point effort against Plattsburgh State.

Next in scoring was guard Terry O'Leary of Central Islip, N.Y., who had 133 points for a 13.3 average. Also hitting over the 100-point mark were Barry Coughlin of Rumford, Me., 102, and Bob Jacobs, an even 100 points.

Vermont made a clean sweep of hoop honors against state clubs, posting a 6-0 record against St. Michael's, Middlebury and Norwich, defeated Platts-

THE RETURNING PITCHERS - Righties John McCord, Bruce Bovenizer, and Len Sheflott are counted on heavily this season.

THE CAPTAIN AND THE COACH - Bobby Cronin and Ralph Lapointe.

The University of Vermont baseball team will leave for its 55th annual southern trip this Saturday. The Cats, whose first southern trip took place in 1892, will be engaged in twelve contests on the tour this year, the most of any trip to date.

Coach Ralph Lapointe's nine has a tough act to follow after last season's 11-5 mark. Last year's squad tied for the Yankee Conference crown and had two All-Conference performers on the roster. They were Charlie Foster and John Tartera. Tartera, drafted by Baltimore, was also a two-time All-New England pick. Neither return this year.

The top regular back this year is Captain Bobby Cronin who hit .304 last year. Of 21 players on last year's team only Cronin, catcher Rick Aldrich, and pitchers John McCord, Len Sheflott, and Bruce Bovenizer return. The Cats may have to borrow a page from the Dodger's script of "How to Win a Pennant and the World Series Without Hitting" - a walk, steal second, move to third on the overthrow and score on an infield out.

Definitely the strength of this year's team will be pitching. The three returners, McCord, Sheflott, and Bovenizer, all had earned run averages of under 1.35, and had a combined won-lost mark of 7-2. Lapointe expects additional pitching help from sophomores Dave Cronin, Don Schneider, Brian Palmer, John Packard, Ron Gondek, and Pete Kleinknecht. All but Cronin throw from the right side. Vermont ranked second in the nation in pitching last year with a team ERA of 1.31.

Both hitting and fielding are big question marks at this point. The squad has 11 sophomores plus two juniors and two seniors who haven't played before. With such a lack of established players nothing can be predictable. Lapointe does expect the bulk of his hitting, however, to come from the bats of Cronin, Aldrich, senior Dave Wayne, and sophomores Don Fitts, Dave Holton, and John Packard.

Oddly, the two other probable starters are both veterans of other sports. Second baseman Bruce Lombard was a key reserve on Art Loche's basketball team and third baseman Bill Leete was a star defensive back on last fall's football squad.

The probable starting lineup:

Position	Name	B T	Class	Hometown
C	Rick Aldrich	R	R Jr.	Barre, Vt.
1B	John Packard	R	R Soph.	Shrewsbury, Mass.
2B	Bruce Lombard	R	R Soph.	Windsor, Vt.

Golfers Go South Too

Ed Donnelly's golf team will have a southern trip of their own this year. The linkmen will be involved in five meets during the vacation.

Donnelly has four top men returning this year, and all four are juniors. They include Jim Nixon, Lloyd Hier, Art Shields, and the coach's son, Joe Donnelly. Other members of the team are junior Pete Sargent and sophomores Bob Nadier and Tom Cioffi.

This year the team will be looking to improve on last season 4-3 mark. The Cats also took a third in both the Yankee Conference and the State meets. The schedule for the southern trip is as follows:

March 28 at George Washington
29 at Navy and Dartmouth (triangular meet)
30 at Navy
31 at American University
April 1 at Hofstra
The golfers will open there regular season on April 21 against UMass at Amherst.

Frosh Track Team Seeks Manpower

With the recent close of the indoor track season, the UVM freshman teams warrants a great deal of praise. They completed their five meet schedule with the services of only ten active men.

This may not seem unusual at first, but when there are 13 events in an indoor meet, a ten man roster leaves little room for depth.

This spring, the team will have the best frosh track schedule which has ever been arranged for a freshman track team at UVM. In an outdoor meet their are 17 events, even more than indoors.

There is an obvious shortage of interested participants on this year's team. Even coach Archie Post says, "we need more manpower to handle this outdoor schedule."

In a freshman class of the size it is at UVM, it seems almost incomprehensible that such a lack of interest can be shown in any sport. Let's get with it, frosh!

Aldrich Hurt

First line catcher Rick Aldrich suffered a broken finger earlier this week. At press time it was not known whether he will play in the Southern Trip opener.

With the varsity ranks being somewhat decimated by the graduation losses of starters Milt Goggans, Layne Higgs, and Ken Spalter, Coach Art Loche will be welcoming this year's freshman team with open arms.

UVM Hosts "Sing Out '66"

The Colwell Brothers, stars and producers of the show, and cast of 130 from all over America and 17 other foreign nations.

SING OUT '66, a musical show, born to meet the challenge of our times, is coming Tues., April 12 at 8:30 p.m. to the Patrick Gymnasium at the University of Vermont. The price of admission is $2.00.

Students of the University of Vermont and members of the Burlington-Lake Champlain Chamber of Commerce will jointly sponsor presentation of "Sing-Out '66."

This musical demonstration by people, for people, stars the Colwell Brothers, who are the producers of the show, and a cast of 130 from all over America and 17 other countries.

"It is one of the most wonderful things I have ever seen," was the immediate response of Gen. Murray Bywater, Commander of the Little Rock Air Force Base, Jacksonville, Ark., attending one of "Sing-Out's" first performances in the South.

The two-hour show opens with the youthful challenge "Don't Stand Still," and then storms through 13 more original numbers such as "Freedom Isn't Free," "Up With People," "Which Way America?" and ends with the forceful "Can't You Hear America Calling?"

"They stage as rip-roaring a popular musical show as anyone could want to see. They make the kind of music the youth of the world understands. What is more, they sing words that make sense," was the response of the Ledger in Columbus, Ga.

More than a show, "Sing-Out '66" was created and produced as a result of the Moral Re-Armament conference for "Modernizing America," held last summer on Mackinac Island, Mich. Five thousand students from 150 colleges and 300 high schools and 51 other countries took part in the conference.

During the conference, leaders from all over the world spoke to these young people on relevant issues facing the modern world right now.

Ideas abounded at the conference. Talent was mobilized into a show. At the forefront were three brothers with an amazing history of this kind of action. The Colwells, Steve, Ralph, and Paul, had just returned from a 172,000 mile trip singing in 37 countries before 27 prime ministers and heads of state. They cut a swath through these countries with their banjo, guitar, mandolin and bass that earned them the unofficial title, "America's Ambassadors in Song."

Within the past six months, 300,000 have seen "Sing-Out '66" on college and high school campuses, in arenas, auditoriums and coliseums. As a result of its contagious spirit, new sing-outs are being formed throughout the Western and Southern states.

One student summed up his feelings when he said, "Before 'Sing-Out' came I knew what the problems of the world were, but now I know I can have a part in doing something about them."

Chancellor Ludwig Erhardt has invited the group to Germany, to be sponsored by the German Government. They will leave May 1st to spend a month visiting all cities and universities.

Steeves Honored

A University of Vermont education professor has been selected to discuss one of his books in a series of radio programs sponsored by the Intercollegiate Broadcasting System.

Dr. Frank L. Steeves was chosen to represent Odyssey Press Inc., in the College Authors Forum, a 15-minute taped program fed by IBS to 125 college radio stations.

Different textbook publishers were asked to select a work of one of their authors for inclusion in the series, and Odyssey Press picked Dr. Steeves and his book "Issues in Student Teaching" as their entry.

In this book, Dr. Steeves describes case study as a method of teaching and learning, and presents four groups of cases.

McCune Appointed To UNESCO

University of Vermont president Shannon McCune has been appointed to serve on the United States National Commission for the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO).

Dr. McCune, who served a three-year term on the Commission from 1958 to 1961, was notified Friday (March 25) of his appointment by Secretary of State Dean Rusk. His present term continues through the conclusion of the fall meeting of the Commission in 1968.

The Commission for UNESCO was established by Congress in 1946 to advise the U.S. Government and to help formulate and implement programs for the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization. Membership consists of 60 representatives of principal, national, voluntary organizations interested in educational, scientific and cultural matters; and 40 other outstanding persons, all appointed by the Secretary of State.

During 1965, UNESCO's major concerns were the fight against illiteracy, the extension of educational opportunities and cooperative efforts in science, particularly in the areas of water research and oceanography.

UNESCO's budget for 1965-66 was $49 million but it was more than doubled by funds from two other sources -- the United Nations Technical Assistance Program, to carry out field missions rendering aid mainly in education and science; and from the United Nations Special Fund.

One hundred and twenty countries hold membership in UNESCO, giving it more total members than the United Nations.

When President Johnson sent a message to Congress in February about international education, he pointed out how the United States has "long supported UNESCO and other multilateral and international agencies. We propose to continue these efforts with renewed vigor."

Rowell Tapped As Gubernatorial Possibility

Lyman S. Rowell

Dean Lyman S. Rowell, Vice President of the university, has been endorsed as candidate for the governorship of the state of Vermont.

Winston Prouty, U.S. Senator from Vermont, officially endorsed Rowell this week for the GOP nomination. According to United Press International, "Rowell himself in another prepared statement said that Prouty's recommendation is 'not one to be treated lightly and in all humility I shall give his request serious consideration.'"

Prouty, himself, was previously being considered by the GOP as a candidate for the office. Therefore, with the senator's public endorsement and support of Rowell, the Vice President may become the leading contender in the political race.

Festival Presents Shakespeare's "Hamlet"

"Comedy Of Errors" And

"Henry IV, Part 1" Also Offered

The Champlain Shakespeare Festival has announced plays and dates for its eighth annual season in repertory on the University of Vermont campus at Burlington.

Director Edward J. Feldner has chosen The Comedy of Errors, Hamlet, and Henry VI, Part 1, and he has scheduled the earliest opening date in the Festival's modest history, July 25. The company will play six nights a week until Sept. 3.

Last year, performing nightly in continuous repertory, the Festival played to over 2,000 people or nearly 90 percent of capacity.

The company of professionals and apprentices plays in the 250-seat Arena Theatre located in the Fleming Museum on the Vermont campus.

The six-night-a-week schedule is a departure from the first seven seasons of the Festival, which played nightly during August. This year, the company will have Sundays off.

This season will also see the first repeat. Over its first seven seasons, the Festival has presented 21 of Shakespeare's plays. The presentation of Hamlet this summer will mark the second offering of the play, also offered here in 1961.

Enrollment Increasing Out-of-State Numbers Show Large Jump

4070 Expected Next Fall

By Marion Robinson

According to Mr. Harold Collins, Admissions Director, the projected enrollment for undergraduates in the fall of 1966 will be 4074. This is an increase of 250 students over the 1965 enrollment which was 3824. In order to understand how much the college will actually expand, these above figures are broken down into 4 categories. On the basis of past statistics, the Admissions Office expects that a total of 2722 students will return, which is an increase of 145 over last year (2577). It is anticipated that the drop out rate will be the same as last year.

1350 FROSH EXPECTED

The expected enrollment of new students (freshman and transfer) will be 1352, or an increase of 105. When this total is broken down, the number of resident freshmen will be 796 as compared to last year's 768. Also, the number of expected transfers (75) increases by one. Together these two figures total 871, so the expansion here is only 29. When this figure is subtracted from the expected freshman and transfer enrollment (1352), the result shows that the number of 1966 out-of-state freshmen and transfer students can be 481 or a possible increase of 76 over last year's 405.

50-50 RATIO OF IN-STATE - OUT-OF-STATE

Mr. Collins also said that, during the past, the University has attempted to maintain a 50-50 ratio between the total resident and non-resident students; but notice the present class situation. It seems that the trend has been a rise in the number of resident students. In class statistics, the present junior class has a 50-50 ratio, the present sophomore class a 60-40 ratio, and the present freshman class a 66-34 ratio. This is due to the fact that more Vermonters are attending college. However, the Admissions Office hopes to obtain a 60-40 ratio and remain there in the future. Even though this is the aim, next year has an expected ratio of 36-38 for non-resident students.

FEWER DROP-OUTS

The slight actual increase (76 plus 29) may be due to the fact that the drop out rate has decreased from 20% of 10 years ago to a present rate of 10%. It seems, according to the statistics, that more women are staying in college than they did 10 years ago. This is probably due to the number of changes in social standards which allows the women to manage two careers. Or it may be that it is taking longer to find a husband! Mr. Collins also stated that the actual increase of out-of-state students will consist of primarily women enrolling in the Liberal Arts and Education Departments.

EFFECT OF NEW HOUSING REGULATIONS

Also the fact that senior women can live off campus next year may be a determining factor in the expected increase, but the fact remains that more available dorm space does not create more classroom space.

It will be interesting to see how much this new rule and the lower drop-out rate effects the enrollment in the years to come. It is possible that the University is increasing to the point at which it will be turning out graduates like a factory assembly line.

Is God Dead? Old Concept Of God May Be Dead But Religion Lives On

By Dick Matheson

We now know two things:
1. God is dead;
2. God is not dead.

"GOD'S DEATH" NOT ISSUE

The most obvious point that the three lecturers agreed upon was that the question symbolizing the theme of this year's Conference — "Is God Dead?" — was ridiculous and not really the question at all. One wouldn't ask, "Is Beauty dead?", but would ask various men what they understood Beauty to be and if or how much they were aware of Beauty in their experience.

REALITY CHANGES

Dr. Paul Van Buren explained that at one time there was no misunderstanding when Reality and God were spoken of with capital letters, as highest principles, but there has been a gradual change.

We use the word "reality" to refer to "a common network of understandings," an "agreed-upon frame of reference," "ground rules" for seeing and understanding the world in which we live; our conception of reality is an agreement about how things are.

POETRY TO PROSE

Man's experience of life and man's religious experience is received subjectively through his imagination. But to explain these experiences to someone who is only aware of objective things, one must use objective terms.

The nature of the experiences are lost when an attempt is made to translate or lower them from a poetic (subjective) to a prosaic (objective) level.

The implication of what Van Buren says is that men who have "known" God in a mystical sense have tried to make their experience comprehensible to common men by using objective terms. The Biblical concept, "God is love," is thus translated into the prosaic phrase, "God is a being who loves."

Van Buren implies, then, that we should shy away from traditional, misleading religious concepts and that we should search for personal religious experience and beliefs, which alone can be valid to us.

URBAN RENEWAL

Van Buren compared man's religious thought to a city. Though we may have to replace many of the old sections with new improvements, we still must preserve certain memorable "houses" (concepts) from the ancient "ghetto" (The Bible), which, if totally demolished, would eradicate the spirit or essence of the city.

He said that God is what permits everything to be just as it is. We might say that God permits reality.

FAITH IS NOT REASONABLE

Dr. Schubert Ogden began Wednesday by generally affirming the necessity of God to Christianity. "Faith in God," he finds, "is not merely an element of Christian faith; it is Christian Faith."

A problem in Christianity is the view which claims Christian faith is essentially reasonable (acceptable to the prosaic mind, Van Buren might say). But more and more there is an awareness that Christian faith is not reasonable — this agrees with Van Buren's point that God (or god) is conceived by man's imaginative faculty.

IFC Plans Improvements Rushing And Public Relations Discussed

Dean Patzer and Dr. Perrine discuss fraternity policies at IFC retreat.

The Interfraternity Council held a retreat last Saturday and Sunday at the Mount Philo Inn. The retreat produced excellent results on all topics discussed. It also brought the Council into a close working unit which will increase its operation and effectiveness.

Dr. Miles lead the discussion concerning the rushing policy, stressing it should help the freshman in academics and the adjustments to college life. The rushing policy for next year is expected to change radically. A majority of the Council agrees that a fair, simple, and sound policy with no un-enforceable regulations should be adopted. The Council wants a policy which will not interfere with the academic life of the rushee.

Dean Patzer presented a case study concerning the responsibilities of the fraternity. Numerous suggestions for improving relations in the community were also discussed.

Dr. Perrine lead the discussion of the Self Study Report.

Former Cynic Editor Will Speak Here

A former CYNIC editor who is now the Catholic Bishop of the state-wide diocese of Burlington will return to his Alma Mater on Thursday, April 14, at 7:30 p.m. to lecture in the Marsh Room of the Billings Center.

Bishop Robert F. Joyce will speak on the Second Vatican Council, which he regards as one of the great religious events of our time. As a representative of Vermont Catholics, Bishop Joyce was present at all four sessions of the Council.

The Bishop's talk will be followed by a thirty-minute color film, "A New Pentecost," which traces the last two sessions of the Council. The film features such Council Fathers as John Courtney Murray, widely regarded as the architect of the declaration on religious liberty, and such Protestant observers as Dr. Robert McAfee Brown.

Bishop Joyce's lecture will be the final presentation of the 1965-66 Augustine Series, sponsored by the UVM Newman Center.

Bishop Joyce was graduated from UVM in 1918, having served as CYNIC editor and president of the Newman Club. The Bishop has always maintained close ties with the University and was for six years a member of its Board of Trustees.

Ottawa Visitors Learn of Canada

The growing spirit of nationalism sweeping across Canada was the prevalent attitude that students on the Ottawa Field Trip of the Canadian Area Studies Program discovered on their recent visit to that nation's capital.

The group arrived in Ottawa about 1 p.m., Thurs., March 17, and went directly to the American Embassy and then out to Ottawa's modern, mushrooming new university, Carlton. Students from the college received the visitors at an informal tea at which Dean Farr of the Arts College spoke. The emphasis in his talk was on the individuality and distinctiveness of Canada as a nation. A similar theme also predominated in conversations with the Carlton students.

That evening the UVMer's attended a session of the House of Commons and listened to the floor discussion which is conducted in both French and English with simultaneous translations.

The next morning the touring students returned to Parliament and were taken on a special tour of the building by Constable Lee. After witnessing the ritualistic Speaker's Parade, they went to the Ladies' Gallery of the House to hear the "Question Period," a time during which any member of Parliament may ask the Prime Minister or any member of his cabinet any question they wish to have answered.

The highlight of the trip was a luncheon at Parliament with seven members of Parliament present. After the meal each spoke briefly, and again the visitors noticed the recurrent theme, "Canada - is your best and closest ally but she is a distinct national entity."

The final scheduled activity of the trip was a visit to the Department of Mines and Technical Surveys of the Canadian Government. Here the Vermonters saw the process by which the new atlas of Canada is being made; they also learned of a number of other extensive mapping projects the department has under way.

The students returned with a consensus that the trip proved to be quite enlightening and gave them a far better understanding of our northern neighbors.

EDITORIAL...

Sing Out '66 is coming to Burlington next Tuesday and along with it an opportunity to begin treatment of a long festering wound in an otherwise healthy community. The wound is characterized by an atmosphere of mutual antagonism between the UVM student community and the community at large. It is a traditional brand of antagonism in many college towns, but tradition is no longer a sufficient justification for its existence. Sing Out '66 is an elaborate musical revue of sorts and, as we understand it, its purpose is to promote the revitalization of the American moral fiber and the creation of a distinctly American ideology within this country. Their activities are not limited to the United States, however, and the movement appears to be truly international. In short, the co-sponsorship of the concert by the Student Association and the local chamber of commerce constitutes a potentially good start in the direction of improved relations between the University and the community. We may support this beginning by attending the performance, and follow it up with community projects (charity drives, orphanage, picnics, etc.) sponsored by S.A., Fraternities, and individuals.

While the lessening of misunderstanding between the University of Vermont and the people of Burlington may not be their primary goal, it is safe to say that such an achievement would not be entirely inconsistent with Sing Out '66 theme of "moral rearmament."

A NEW THEISM

Ogden says that man finds the traditional form of belief in God unacceptable because he would have to believe in statements which are not scientifically or historically true, and because he would have to accept the classical metaphysical belief that divine reality is more "real" than the earthly reality we now know. This would be belief, Van Buren said, in "unreality."

Ogden offered a neo-classic theology, a new theism, which he thinks would be acceptable to modern man. This involves an awareness that; religious language should be understood on a metaphysical or existential level rather than a scientific or historical one; besides the five senses of science, "Man also enjoys an internal awareness" and therefore should not accept answers which deal only with the scientifically verifiable senses.

These first two points are more or less restatements of Van Buren's belief that man's religious experience is on a subjective plane. His third point was that "we count," that the ultimate significance of our lives is dependent upon God.

OGDEN'S CONFLICT

But, despite Ogden's presentation of a "new" theism, he still seems to accept the traditional or classical theory that divine reality is more "real" than physical or worldly reality. He believes that if God is "totally unaffected by man and the world, this can only imply that the entire secular order is in the last analysis neither real nor of any consequence."

BEING AND GOD

Dr. John Macquarrie said that belief in God is "faith in holy Being," faith that there is meaning and value beyond human experience.

Later he said at various points that: (1) Being is nothing apart from beings; (2) Being is not the sum of all beings; (3) Being is the act that lets things be; (4) but God and Being are not synonymous; (5) God implies that which permits Being; (6) Being is stable and neutral but God is dynamic and positive.

REVELATION

The highest level of thinking is not "calculative" thinking, which is scientific, that is, from subject to object (man observes a stone). It is not "existential" thinking, mutual reaction between two subjects (two friends converse). The highest level of thinking, according to Macquarrie, is "essential" thinking, in which the object reaches out to the subject, "the seeker is grasped by what he is looking for" (a great painting effects a man).

"Essential" thinking underlies the relation of man and God; man realizes God through revelation. In these terms Ogden would likely call the works in the Bible essential rather than calculative.

AGREEMENTS

Each of the lecturers seemed to understand his own terms, but each seemed wary of relating his beliefs to those of the other speakers. All agreed that a former concept of God had been replaced by a new concept, but none claimed that God or religion is dead.

Macquarrie's "Being" and Van Buren's "reality" may be very much the same thing, though the former wasn't seen as changing. Perhaps Being is the same as "reality" with a capital "R," that is, as seen by a former theism as a highest principle.

Another basic agreement among the speakers was that religion is subjective and revelatory and that objective, traditional concepts in religion may be misleading.

Each of the speakers could be labeled "Christian existential-

Letters To The Editor

Selsby Reviewed

To the Editor:

Mother Courage and Her Children is perhaps a misleading title of Bertold Brecht's play of this name that was presented in the Arena Theater on March 17, 18, and 19, in that it describes only a portion of the play, not the whole theme of the play. I think that it was especially misleading to Mr. Selsby, who reviewed the play for the March 24 edition of the CYNIC, for he apparently did not see, or denied, any story beyond and above the tale of a lady peddler and her bastard children.

I do not question Mr. Selsby's opinions about various actors in the play. I do attack his leaving out the important opinion, the opinion about the play as a whole, unified production, the lack of which makes his article presented as a review of Mother Courage a lie. Mr. Selsby did not say where he thought the play as a presented work excelled or where it failed. His preoccupation with analyses of various individual performances, although valid and perceptive, present a too limited and consequently false description of the work. Mr. Selsby presented opinions about acting in Mother Courage; he did not review Mother Courage.

Contrary to what Mr. Selsby stated in his article, there were not seven, but twenty-one actors in the cast. I do not seek individual recognition for each one of them, but point out that Mother Courage is more than Mother Courage. Mother Courage is the focal point of the play, and as such, all acts upon her. But, and I think Mr. Selsby missed this, as a focal point she is the means through which one is able to abstract meaning from the complexes of characters and events which exist and happen around her. Individually, the soldiers, the peasants, the corpses, the young men, the old women are far less important than Mother Courage. Collectively, they are as important as, possibly more important than, she and her associates. The essence of Mother Courage is presented within the relationships between Mother Courage and these characters, all the characters which form some sort of dialogue with her, and a true opinion as to the excellence or nonexcellence of the production of Mother Courage is derived from an analysis of how well both characters and relationships were portrayed and presented.

By treating only a portion, a somewhat irrelevant portion, of Mother Courage, Mr. Selsby has done this play, this particular production, and those who have read his article, an injustice. And if the purpose of any critic is to give just analysis, then Mr. Selsby has failed as a critic.

Eric Rosencrantz

ists," to the extent that they refuse to be bound by conventional religious concepts, seeking their own positive, individual beliefs.

Certainly the three speakers offered those who attended Vermont Conference challenging thoughts and beliefs, to achieve what Dr. McCune saw as the purpose of the Conference, to stimulate our thoughts and create "mass thinking" (homosapiens).

PLACEMENT BAROMETER

New Occupations In U.S. Today

By Douglas O. Hanau, Director, UVM Placement Office

SHIFTS IN JOB MARKET CREATE NEW TERMINOLOGY. (Reprinted from the Burlington Free Press March 24, 1966). Can you define the duties of an astrogeologist, a synoptic meteorologist, an engineering psychologist or a geomagnetician? If you can't, you're in the majority. Yet, these are among the fast-growing new occupations in the U.S. today.

Would you guess that job prospects are bright in the fields of atomic energy, electric power, radio, television, telephones, petroleum and natural gas? If so, you're in the majority. Yet, the fact is that the rate of new job growth in these fields actually is shrinking.

Never have changes in the U.S. labor market been so dramatic, so rapid-fire as in the era in which we live. A comparison of the Labor Department's latest 862-page Occupational Outlook Handbook with previous editions in the past decade underlines the fantastic extent to which whole new occupations are emerging under our eyes, while whole old occupations disappear.

Meanwhile, within the major job fields, detailed shifts of importance to millions also are occurring. For instance: The small U.S. dairy farmer is fading from the countryside. But "agribusiness" jobs in other fields are climbing: agricultural research workers, agricultural economists, workers in feed mills, fertilizer productions, food processing.

Openings for artists, actors, writers, musicians continue to be exceedingly limited. But the market for school teachers in all of these fields is expanding substantially and so are chances for commercial artists, technical writers, illustrators.

The broad field of atomic energy is stabilizing. But future growth is anticipated in jobs in space vehicle propulsion, in electric power stations, in radioisotopes for medicine and food preservation. Automation obviously is wiping out vast numbers of jobs, particularly among the unskilled and undereducated. But, just as obviously, automation is creating other jobs for computer programmers, copying machine service men, tape librarians, tape perforator typists, etc.

A relative shrinking of jobs in many goods-producing industries has been going on through most of the post-World War II years. But a sharp increase in jobs in services has been a post-war phenomenon too and there has been a spectacular upsurge in employment in government, health and education. The implications of these employment trends go beyond their clear impact on the millions choosing careers in this era. They mean that our schools and teachers must make giant strides in equipping students with the general, basic knowledge which they can carry from job to job. This knowledge will be essential if employees are to cope successfully with the shifts in their occupations in the years ahead. They mean that vocational counselors must become far more proficient in guiding students through the maze of today's and tomorrow's occupational opportunities. Matching industries and abilities with jobs is becoming a "skill" in itself. They mean that employers must place increasing stress on continuous worker training-retraining -- and workers must be prepared to undergo training-retraining throughout their working lifetimes.

(Note: An astrogeologist studies the surface of the moon or planets. A synoptic meteorologist interprets information on weather conditions from world-wide reports, weather satellites, etc. An engineering psychologist studies man-machine relationships. A geomagnetician probes the earth's magnetic field.)

Experiment applicants have many reasons for wishing to go abroad; these motives may or may not be consistent with the goals and values of The Experiment. If they are not, The Experiment recommends that the applicant seek a different program which will better serve his personal needs. The Experiment offers a complete program with a specific purpose, and every Experimenters is expected to participate in every part of it, from beginning to end. This is an essential point, because the questions most often asked by applicants are nearly all related to it.

How much spending money should I take?

Experimenters should spend their private funds tactfully and prudently, in order to minimize financial differences between themselves, their hosts, and other nationals of the country. In most cases, $150 should be quite adequate, although you will want to take more if you travel independently during the city stay.

"Shoemaker" Coming

By S. J. Stearns

Fred LaBelle, director of the University Players' second spring production, has passed Shakespeare by in favor of a wild and bawdy Elizabethan comedy, The Shoemaker's Holiday by Thomas Dekker. Whether your taste lies in "sweet sentimentalism" or in "behind the barn" jokes, you'll find it all in this play.

May I apply for a homestay family with interests that match my own -- for example in music, in business, or in sports?

The Experiment's Local Representative in the community in which you will live tries to find a congenial family, based on what you have said about yourself in your application, correspondence, and "Dear Family" letter. So many considerations enter into the process of finding a suitable family, however, that The Experiment cannot guarantee to place you in a family which will satisfy a list of preferences stated in advance. Nevertheless, unless you are different from almost every other person who has Experimented, you will become so devoted to your family abroad that you will wonder how The Experiment ever managed to find "the one family" ideally suited for your homestay.

The plot, one common in melodrama, pits two young couples against their age old foes, war and fighting parents. The result, however, becomes anything but ordinary when a group of fun-loving shoemakers get involved.

Simon Eyre, "the mad shoemaker of Tower Street," leads the members of the "gentle craft" with the philosophy that we should "be merry while we are young, old age, sack and sugar will steal upon us, ere we be ware." It is obvious that Firk, Eyre's "fine firkling journeyman" and Hodge the "brisk foreman," do not intend to let Simon down. They do their utmost for the four lovers, but oh how they do it!

It all adds up to a fast moving and uproarious evening in the theatre which no one should miss.

Playtimers Go On Tour

Give 14 Performances In Vermont And Quebec

A determined band of eight University of Vermont undergraduates took to the open road last week, ready to uphold the theater tradition of "the show must go on."

The eight made the 11th annual Playtimers' Tour and in the course of five days gave 15 performances in Vermont and Quebec. The Playtimers are a group of student members of the University Players and each year during the spring vacation give up their holidays to provide a touring play for elementary schools.

This year's production was "The Farmer and the Fox," a story based on a Chinese fairy tale found in the book, "Tales of a Chinese Grandmother." The play revolves around a legendary figure called the Fox Fairy which could change into any shape or form it desired and was usually very mischievous, in this play, the Fox Fairy helps a poor farmer and a rich man's daughter to marry.

Legends concerning the Fox Fairy date back as far as 200 B.C.

Esther Sundell of Montgomery Center directed the production. Cast members were Susan Bowman of Tom River, N.J.; Louis Blumenfeld of New Britain, Conn.; Patti Onderwyzer of Burlington; Jan Quackenbush of Palm Beach, Fla.; Judy Watson of Belmont, Mass.; and Roy Zuckerman of Valley Stream, N.Y. Jeff Freeman of Brattleboro was the technician. Costumes were designed by Cora Stimpson of Hartland.

TWO ROTC INSTRUCTORS ASSIGNED TO KOREA

Information received from Department of the Army indicates that two members of the Military Science Department at UVM will be transferred to Korea this summer. Lt. Col. Albert Wenz will be assigned within the Eighth United States Army while SFC Gilford Knight will be assigned to the Joint Military Assistance Advisory Group.

Lt. Col. Albert Wenz

Lt. Col. Wenz has been at the University for four years. He is the executive officer of the ROTC Instructor Group. He resides in Burlington with his wife, Martha, and daughter, Laura, a UVM freshman. Lt. Col. Wenz has been active in spare-time graduate study. A veteran of 20 years service, he has served in Europe and the Orient. He has been awarded the Commendation Medal.

SFC Knight has been with the ROTC Instructor Group for two years, having arrived at UVM from duty with the Office of the Joint Chiefs of Staff in 1964. He holds a Master of Arts degree in English from the University of West Virginia. SFC Knight has been active in spare-time academic work, having undertaken a study program to meet teaching certificate requirements while at UVM. He, too, resides in Burlington.

SFC Gilford Knight

SFC Knight, a veteran of 18 years service, has had 29 months of infantry combat experience in World War II and the Vietnam Conflict. He has been awarded the Silver Star, Bronze Star, Commendation Medal, and Combat Infantry Badge.

THE BEST OF BEST

By Dr. J. Best

Dr. Robert Babcock, Provost of the Vermont State College, has recently been addressing himself to the problem of numbers in American higher education. In a speech at Norwich University recently, Dr. Babcock rued the growth in size of American colleges and universities, claiming that students were losing contact with the faculty in the larger institutions. While I agree with Dr. Babcock that the size of an institution may have some unfortunate consequences for some students I do not agree that smallness, of itself, is the cure. If this were the case higher education should return to the one-room schoolhouse. Size is a problem only when faculty and students allow it to become so.

The results of the last meeting of the Board of Trustees came as quite a shock to many members of the academic community. On the recommendation of the President and the Policy Committee only four men were promoted from Associate to Full Professor, a surprisingly small number considering the number of Associate Professors. By its actions the Administration challenged those who had either expected or hoped for promotion to try again next year or leave. Since there is no clearly defined time schedule for promotions (one serves four to seven years at the Assistant Professor level, and seven to nine years at the Associate level) waiting for an additional year is no guarantee of promotion. Congratulations to all those who were promoted, however.

A student today accused the University of discriminating in favor of Jews and against Gentiles. She complained that Jewish students were allowed to take off part of the week as religious holidays while the Gentiles had to attend class all week, even Good Friday afternoon. The Atheists and Agnostics were not available for comment.

Since "trivia" seems to be sweeping the nation (via Playboy) here are some UVM "trivia" questions:

1. When was UVM founded?
 2. What is Professor Gould's first name?
 3. Who is the sculptor and what is the name of the sculpture in front of Bailey Library?
 4. Who was the noted architect who designed Billings Hall?
 5. In what year did the Department of Sociology and Anthropology become a separate department?
 6. How many floors are there in Waterman?
- Answers will appear in next week's column.

Rumanian Ballet Charms Audience

By K. Klonsky

The final Red Concert in the 1965-66 Lane Series featured The Rumanian Folk Ballet under the direction of Petre Nastovici with the Folk Orchestra conducted by Victor Predescu on Monday evening. The performance proved to be a pulsating, swirling spectacle of color that totally delighted the entire audience.

The Rumanian Folk Ballet was a superbly conditioned and ebullient group. They succeeded in bringing the best of their great tradition to an American audience. The family of man was given yet another warm chapter.

The program opened with the "Dance From the Oltenia Region," done by the entire company. As a promise of things to come, it left no doubt as to the electric and exciting quality of this company. The remainder of the show consisted of orchestral pieces, instrumental solos, singing solos, and more elaborate dancing. The most unusual part of the program was soloist Damian Luca on the pan pipes. This rare, stairway-like, hand-mouth instrument produced some wonderfully enticing melodies.

"THE DEPARTURE"

By Sue Winters

Many a student or teacher has had an idea swell up inside of him -- a screaming emotion, a searching problem, a tiny wisp of soul-shaking knowledge -- and he has kept it hidden from the world, not daring to share his thoughts, afraid that he might be laughed at or misunderstood.

When people express their modern world thoughts in refreshing styles of writing, when they give their contemporaries a glimpse into the secret confines of their souls . . . this is the Departure, the magazine written by those who dare.

Some of the selections in the winter issue of the Departure are especially captivating. "The Key," a poem by M. David Storti, is almost mystical in its presentation of a simple but profound message. More of this twentieth-century open-minded searching for truth is presented in the play White Shade of Isolation by Peter J. Whalen. This play, about a boy in his mid-teens searching for a way to give a sacrifice and to have it received, leaves the reader with a few strong impressions to think about.

Of interest to many is the essay on a modern day Hell as compared to the Hells of other ages. This essay, A Hell For Our Time, written by Doctor Strandberg, gives a pointed insight into the need for and the conception of Hell in the human mind.

Many selections in the winter issue are worthy of full-page reviews which are unfortunately impossible. However, if you have not read the issue, it is to your benefit to do so. Learn something about the philosophies of your contemporaries.

The Spring issue of UVM's literary magazine will be coming out in late April or very early May. Watch for it. It deserves your attention.

Cats Go 4-7 On Southern Trip

CAT-NIPS

By Bob Bloomenthal

When Art Loche stressed defense on the basketball court this past winter, he had the right idea. In the recently released final NCAA basketball statistics, the only category in which the national champ Texas Western shows up is team defense.

Although Western went through the whole season with but one defeat, the Miners failed to place one member in the top eighty individual scoring leaders in the nation. Without an outstanding scorer, Texas Western used a tenacious defense to force their opponents to play their type of game all year. This was quite obvious in the championship game against favored Kentucky.

The Wildcats were the seventh best shooting team in the nation, but the aggressive play of Texas Western threw Kentucky off and brought victory to the Miners. Texas Western finished as the fifth best in team defense for the year.

A few familiar names from the Yankee Conference also made the final stats. Massachusetts' Clarence Hill was 27th in scoring with a 24.1 average while URI's Steve Chubin was 32nd and UConn's Wes Bialosuknia 55th. Bialosuknia was also 16th in free throw percentage, while Chubin placed 26th in the same category.

The two top sophomores in the conference, Art Stephanson of Rhode Island and Bill Corley of Connecticut, were also mentioned. Stephanson was fifth in the nation in the field goal percentage with .593, while Corley was the eighteenth best rebounder with an average of 14.0 bounds a game.

One interesting point is that only three sophomores placed within the top fifty scorers in the nation. Houston's 6-9 Elvin Hayes was eleventh at 27.2, Denver's 6-3 Harry Hollines was seventeenth at 25.3, and Columbia's 7-0 Dave "Nice News" Newmark who finished 35th with a 22.9 average.

The sophs did considerably better off the boards by placing five within the top fifteen rebounders. Hayes and Newmark were two of these, with Hayes placing fifth and Newmark fifteenth.

Would You Believe . . . Jim Cross was officially named hockey coach at UVM last Saturday . . . The complete freshman and varsity teams had signed a petition to keep him after the tremendous job he did as interim coach last winter . . . 'TAKE AIM' -- University of Vermont rifle team won four of six matches this winter. Team members are, front, from left: Paul Lewis, Richard Walker, David Keenan and Amos Eaton. Standing: Coach S/Sgt. Chris Garland, Jim Bellino, Steve Curland, John Pratt and Harry Hodgdon.

The University of Vermont baseball team will travel to Massachusetts this weekend to continue their "spring training" after finishing their Southern Trip with four wins. The victories came over Baltimore, Springfield, Fairleigh Dickinson, and AIC.

Saturday the Cats will be at Springfield for two practice games and Sunday they will take on MIT in a pair. Coach Ralph Lapointe will probably start his top four pitchers on the trip in John McCord, Len Sheflott, Bruce Bovenizer, and Ron Gondek. Vermont, co-champions of the Yankee Conference last year, face Norwich on April 18 in the season opener.

On the recently concluded Southern Trip, the Cats showed a lack of offensive and defensive punch in dropping their first four outings. Once they got in the swing of things, however, they won four of the remaining seven games.

John Packard, a sophomore, turned in the top hitting performance of the Catamount regulars by posting a .263 average. He also had the only UVM home run. Freshman Dave Lapointe had the highest batting average at .500 but he appeared in only two games. The pitching wins were credited to McCord, Bovenizer, Packard, and freshman Charlie Brucato.

Spring Football Drills Start Saturday

The University of Vermont football team will begin its annual spring practice this Saturday. According to the Yankee Conference rule, the Cats will then have 21 days in which to complete 15 practice sessions.

A total of 55 men are expected to turn out for the opening drills, the largest number to report since coach Bob Clifford arrived here in 1962. Among these hopefuls are 24 lettermen as compared to the 13 lettermen who returned to last season's 6-2 squad. The number of lettermen does not truly indicate the amount of experience on the team, however, since last season marked a return to platoon football.

Next year's team will still be basically a young unit as Clifford employed as many as six sophomores in his starting lineup much of the time last season. The crew up from this year's freshman team looks impressive, though, and should give the others good competition for starting positions.

The biggest question mark which Clifford hopes to at least partially answer this spring is the quarterback slot. With the coming graduation of Scott Fitz, the Cats will be losing a three-year starter. The number two quarterback from last fall, Bill Leete, will not see action on the gridiron this spring as he is spending his time tending the hot corner for Ralph Lapointe's baseball nine.

There will be four other candidates trying for Fitz' vacated position. They are sophomore Dave Shumate and freshman Paul Simpson, both of St. Johnsbury, Vermont, and freshmen Barry Coughlin of Rumford, Me., and Jack Stroker of Ridgewood, New Jersey. All four have excellent potential, but none have had the valuable varsity experience at quarterbacking which Leete possesses.

Another position which should be up for grabs is Rusty Brink's old linebacking spot. The returning linebackers are junior Pete Ambrose and sophomores Colin Hurd and Bill Wolff, but freshmen team members Bill Vukovich and Tom Dexter will be pushing the veterans all the way. Two more candidates, Skip Uilhein and Bill Garrison come to the team with no previous collegiate football experience while at UVM.

Junior Dick Hebert, a valuable team member at flanker back on offense for the past two years, will be tried at the running back position this spring. Hebert has shown good running ability in previous games, such as his punt return which won last fall's Norwich game for Vermont.

Clifford received a setback when it was learned that Don (Tuck) Nelson was stricken with mononucleosis recently and was forced to drop out of school. The aggressive defensive specialist is expected back in the fall, however.

Clifford also mentioned that much time will be spent on the pass defense this spring. This important phase of the game was one of the Cats' most vulnerable spots last year, especially in losses to Maine and Massachusetts.

The coach also plans to use more contact this year than in any previous spring. This should help the staff evaluate the quality of the personnel easier, as well as toughen up the players. scrimmages will be held on April 16 and April 23, while the conclusion of spring practice will be highlighted by the annual intra-squad game on April 30 during which the team is divided up evenly.

Dean Harris Resigns Post

(Credit: Oliver, S.P.S.)

Accepts New Post In Washington

By Laura Schildhaus

Anna Rankin Harris, the Dean of Women, has announced her resignation in order to accept the newly created appointment as Executive Director of the National Association of Women Deans and Counselors. Dean Harris has served the University since 1954.

In a letter to the dean, Vice-President Rowell has expressed his regret at her resignation, stating that her tenure at the University has been a period of great satisfaction. At the same time, he is thrilled at the prospect of her new position which is one of great distinction. This is brand-new. Miss Harris will serve as director of a department of the National Educational Association in Washington, D.C. The University is honored that Dean Harris has been selected to fill this position.

President McCune commented on Miss Harris' departure saying, "The University Community is indeed sorry to have Dean

Rowell Declines Nomination

Vice-President Lyman S. Rowell has, much to our relief, declined the endorsement of Senator Prouty and the Republican party to run as Gubernatorial candidate for the state of Vermont. In a letter to the senator, Mr. Rowell said that after giving serious consideration to the proposal, he believes that "I will accomplish more for Vermont and I will derive more personal satisfaction if I continue my affiliation with the University of Vermont."

Draft Tests Imminent Panel Discusses Draft And Selective Service

By Lou Blumenfeld

The Draft and The Selective Service will be discussed at a Panel discussion on Mon., April 18, at 7:30 p.m. in the Ira Allen Chapel. UVM Deans and Colonel William Burke, head of the Vermont Selective Service, will answer questions concerning the college qualification test and Selective Service in general.

According to Colonel Burke, the Selective Service is a civilian service which "manages the manpower resources of the nation in the best interests of the health and safety of the nation."

Your local draft board is "out to assist any registrar to get all the protection under the law."

The draft board does not make U.S. policy. Rather, it carries out those policies set forth by Congress. Thus, if one is dissatisfied with U.S. foreign policy, he should write his congressman. If the complaint concerns his draft status, he should contact the local draft board. Colonel Burke says that if you cooperate with the board, it will cooperate with you.

Inaugural Schedule Announced

On Saturday, April 16, Dr. Shannon McCune will be formally inaugurated in the Patrick Gymnasium as the 18th president of the University of Vermont.

He will wear the silver medalion of the Presidency to be conferred upon him by Vermont's Governor, Philip H. Hoff. The University's Class of 1927 Memorial Mace will be carried by the Marshal, Dr. Brady B. Gilleland, at the head of the academic procession, colorful with the robes and hoods of visitors and of Vermont's own faculty members.

A cordial invitation is extended to all University staff and students to attend the inaugural ceremony. No tickets are required for the general seating area.

The inaugural scene will be set Friday evening when a "Conversation Among Friends" takes place at 8 o'clock in the Ira Allen Chapel.

Their discussion will be concerned with present-day education.

The public is invited to this event, also.

On Saturday morning, the academic procession will form at 10 a.m. at the hockey rink end of the Fieldhouse, and will move to the Patrick Gymnasium at 10:30.

There, the Most Rev. Robert F. Joyce, bishop of the Vermont's Catholic Diocese, will give the invocation and benediction.

Governor Hoff will install Dr. McCune as president. Greetings

Rowen Heads Production

The Interfraternity Council has approved the appointment of the Kake Walk Directors for 1967. Each of the new directors has been promoted from a position as assistant director for this year's Kake Walk.

Appointed as Financial Director is Nicholas F. Rowland of Kappa Sigma. Freu is a Political Science major and plans to go on to law school.

The new Publicity Director is Peter Ambrose, a brother of Sigma Nu. Pete is an industrial management major and intends to go on to graduate school.

Theodore Rowen, Production Director for next year's festivities, is a brother of Tau Epsilon Phi. Ted is a political Science major, and plans to go on to law school.

We salute this year's Directors, Dave Cohen, Vin DeCesaris, and Bob Ostrom for a job magnificently done, and for giving us a Kake Walk we will never forget.

Our three enthusiastic Directors share the hope that the 70th Annual Kake Walk will be the traditional biggest and best ever.

Ambassador Tranh van Dinh Speak On Vietnam Policy

On Thurs., April 21, 1966, the Interfraternity Council is presenting, as part of their lecture series, the Honorable Tranh van Dinh. The lecture will be at 4 p.m. in the North Lounge of Billings and is open to the public.

Mr. van Dinh is the past acting ambassador to the United States from Vietnam and is now the Washington Chief for the "Saigon Post." He is a respected journalist and is also quite learned in the area of the United States' involvement in South East Asia.

There will also be a press conference on Wed. afternoon for all of the local news media.

The Interfraternity Council feels that this topic is one of major importance and hopes that many will take advantage of this opportunity.

Ski Lodge Finally Opens

At last, the 'Open House of the lodge!

Ole Man Winter has given us great skiing, but thereby hampered building operations. Weather plus other "snags" have been essentially overcome and we're proudly ready to show you your lodge.

Sunday, April 17, the Governing Board of the UVM Outing Club Lodge will sponsor a GALA Open House. The general public is welcome from 1:00 to 4:30, but students especially are urged to attend. Because students' contributions have played such a large part in making the dream of the Lodge come true, the Governing Board is planning a FREE buffet at 5:00 PM for the charter members. These students will receive an invitation through the mail. This invitation should be presented at the buffet.

To help those students who have no available transportation, the University is subsidizing buses to the lodge. A minimal charge of $1.00 will, however, be asked. These buses will leave Waterman and Southwick at 1:00 and 4:00. Buses will leave the lodge at 3:00 and 8:00. You may sign up for the trip at the S. A. Office in Billings between 9:00-11:30 and 1:00-3:00 before Saturday noon.

Robinson To Head Military Academy

Col. Leonard G. Robinson

PEEKSKILL, N.Y., April 11 — Colonel Leonard G. Robinson, professor of military science and head of the Army ROTC program at the University of Vermont since 1963, will become superintendent of Peekskill Military Academy on July 1, the Peekskill board of trustees announced last week.

SCHOOL HAS NATIONAL REPUTATION

New in its 134th year, Peekskill has a national reputation for successfully preparing boys and young men for college and the challenges of leadership. The school is situated approximately 50 miles from New York City in the scenic Hudson river highlands within close range of Bear Mountain State Park and numerous lakes of Westchester and Putnam counties.

KEY FACTORS IN SELECTION

In announcing the appointment, board chairman Frank W. Lovejoy cited Colonel Robinson's rich blend of experience with youth and in education as key factors in making the selection.

Colonel Robinson, who will retire from the Army on June 30, is a graduate of Phillips Exeter Academy and Harvard. He holds a master's degree from George Washington University and was a consultant in educational administration prior to entering the Army. At the University of Vermont he has lectured in history and international affairs in addition to administering one of the nation's major ROTC organizations. As a former chief of the Army's history division, he played a key role in the production of the official histories of World War II and the Korean War.

From 1949 to 1952 Colonel Robinson served on the faculty of the Army's Command and General Staff College and graduated from the Army War College in 1957. Before assignment to the University of Vermont, he was with the Joint Chiefs of Staff in Washington, D.C.

Broadway Hit Coming

"Barefoot In The Park"-Tues.

By Judy Beeber

As a finale to the 1965-66 Blue Lane Series, the Broadway hit "Barefoot in the Park" will appear on Tuesday, April 19, at Memorial Auditorium at 8:30 p.m. A critic from the Dallas Morning News said, "Playwright Neil Simon has worked in howl after howl, situation after situation, all calculated to tickle the funny bone."

This comedy is being sent here by Saint Subber, producer of the original New York production, as part of a nation-wide tour of 110 cities. The author, Neil Simon has written three major Broadway hits - "Come Blow Your Horn", "Little Me", and now "Barefoot in the Park", which is still playing to packed houses in New York, where it is currently the third longest running show on Broadway.

The original production was directed by Mike Nichols, the man who practically invented improvisation with his comedy partner Elaine May and who has established himself already as one of the busiest directors in the theater. Besides his current efforts in "Barefoot in the Park," he is represented this season in New York with "The Knack" and his comedy hit "Luv". He also directed the Tony Award winning show "The Odd Couple."

Joan McCall plays the flighty young bride in the show. She made her Broadway debut last spring opposite Brandon de Wilde in "A Race of Hairy Men." Playing opposite to Miss McCall will be Joel Crothers as the young groom. Mr. Crothers worked his way through Harvard from which and with a Phi Beta Kappa Key, by acting between semesters in "Have Gun, Will Travel", "Alfred Hitchcock", "Zane Grey", "Dobie Gillis", "Bachelor Father", and other TV shows. Woody Romoff plays the charming deadbeat neighbor, a connoisseur of exotic foods. He has appeared as Shakespeare's Shylock 425 times at Virginia's Barter Theater and on Broadway he was seen in "Irma La Duce", "Carnival", and many others.

With a highly experienced writer, director and cast, the show cannot avoid providing an evening of entertainment to its viewers.

The story in brief, is about a young married couple, the Bratters, who are just moving into their first apartment in New York City after six days of married life. The problems and situations which they encounter are more humorous than tragic. Playing the star role of a matron of pronounced ladylike gentility who tries not to appear too startled by the wacky domestic arrangements set up by her newly married daughter is Lynn Bari. Miss Bari has acted in eighty movies and a good many plays since the beginning of her career. On the stage she has appeared in the Pulitzer Prize winning "All the Way Home," and in "Bye Bye Birdie" last spring. She won tremendous acclaim for four roles in a bill of short plays, "Ballad of a City," drawn from stories by Steve Allen and presented in Pasadena, California.

Will Faculty Be Evaluated?

Last Thursday from 7 to 9 P.M., many faculty members and a few less students gathered at North Lounge in Billings to discuss the proposed Professor Evaluation Survey. Following an explanation of the history of professor evaluation at other colleges, the reasons that it would be desirable, and the process to be followed, students and faculty had a rather lively discussion as to the pros and cons of evaluating professors.

OBJECTIVE IS IMPROVEMENT OF COLLEGE TEACHING

The plan of the Professor Evaluation Committee is to have the results of the planned questionnaires go only to the individual faculty members, to be used as each sees fit. Hopefully the result would be to point out to the teacher both his strong and weak points so that he could improve his method of teaching, benefiting himself and his students.

CONDITIONS MUST BE MET

In order for this survey to work, certain conditions must be met.

1. Professional advice must be enlisted to help set up the survey.
2. Students must maintain close contact with the administration as well as the faculty concerning aims and goals.
3. Students and faculty must be properly oriented to the seriousness and importance of the survey.

This presupposes two important considerations on the part of the faculty, that they have faith in student judgement and that they do not doubt the fairness of the methods used.

PILOT PROJECT

When the questionnaire is ready and properly approved, it will be given at first just to the classes at all levels in the chemistry, physics and zoology departments. These departments have been chosen because they have both labs and lectures.

EVALUATION GOES ON EVERY DAY

A spokesman for the Professor Evaluation Committee summarized their position as follows.

"Evaluation goes on every day whether the professors care to admit it or not; the question is whether or not they care to hear it. We feel that a professor evaluation can be one means of helping a professor to undergo self improvement if he wishes. It is one formal method on the part of the students giving the faculty member a black and white picture of what his students think."

Anyone, students or faculty, with strong feelings or helpful suggestions concerning professor evaluation, is requested to address their comments to the committee in the form of a letter, care of S.A. at Billings.

MILITARY COMMAND TECHNOLOGY

MITRE is chief technical advisor and systems engineer to the Air Force Electronic Systems Division of the Air Force Systems Command. In this capacity, we design and develop such global, computer-based systems as the NORAD Combat Operation Center and the Back-Up Interceptor Control System. Other commitments: development of a future air traffic control system and supporting the Defense Communications Agency in the development of the National Military Command System. We call this Military Command Technology.

For the young systems engineer, this is uniquely rewarding work. You associate with the top men in your field. You work in an atmosphere that allows you to extend your capabilities professionally and academically.

At MITRE, men trained in single disciplines are encouraged to grow beyond their original fields of interest. Systems designers learn to work from an increasingly broad base.

You may work in such diverse areas as information theory, computer design, display techniques and propagation. You may analyze. You may synthesize. You may deal with systems or individual components. At the highest levels you may have to consider political, economic and social factors... as well as the available and predictable technology.

If you have a B.S., M.S., or Ph.D. in Electrical Engineering, Physics, or Mathematics and want more information regarding opportunities at MITRE, call collect, James L. Come On Playtimers . . . Come On!

On Tour With The Playtimers Or, From Soul To Soul

By Jan Quackenbush

SUNDAY NIGHT

Ready or not, kids . . . here we come! Our scenery, props, costumes, lights, make-up, luggage and guitars are stashed, squashed and stuck into 2 cars . . . set to roll. If our spirit calms a bit, the eight of us will store-away some sleep somewhere and we'll see you tomorrow; all 1200 of you. You know we had our last rehearsal today, and things look great! Don't worry, Fox-Fairy is my best friend and has promised to see that we'll be in Middlebury for breakfast. Oh, pray with us that we haven't forgotten anything important . . . like gas, please? And sleep well; I know we will!

MONDAY NIGHT

Know what's worse than getting up at 5:30 a.m.? Never going to sleep at all. As I sit here in Bennington's beautifully ancient Putnam Hotel and recall today's events, the funniest one that comes to mind was eating breakfast at 7:45 in enough make-up to smear 3 pillow-cases. Multiply that by 7 and brother, it's hard to get a waitress. The most important aspect of today? I guess you'd call it total success. With all those smiling faces, I mean . . . let's face it! From Middlebury, we barn-stomped to Bristol, raced to set-up stage, shared 3 cups of caffeine and had a "Hit!" Then into cars and, after a slightly unusual lunch of returning stares at a Howard Johnson, we finaled into Bennington.

TUESDAY NIGHT

What do you suppose being asked to sign about 600 autographs indicates? Well . . . perhaps. But I know for sure that it means they liked the show, even if some thought it was a "real live commercial." And that's what counts for us: seeing that 600 children have a great time and knowing we helped. Performing at Bennington is . . . indescribable; that includes the generous lunch we received. In spite of Lou's "Battle With The Beard," the shows were grand. And at Molly Stark, we got to dance the frug before "curtain-time." You know, there's wonderfulness in standing on a hill below a sugar-shack beneath the moon; a long search for a finer stage!

A relaxed cast.

WEDNESDAY NIGHT

Four shows again today: 2 at White River Junction, 1 in Hartland and in Putney. Tiredness creeping in. Why? Set, Show, Clean; Show, Strike, Pack; Lunch; Set, Show, Strike, Pack; Drive; Set, Show, Strike, Pack, Drive. . . At the Grange Hall in Hartland, could see the ghosts of Vaudeville watching over us: atmosphere! No curtain, so scene change best ever. Had really fine audiences, especially the crickets. Then a snow-flake drive to the Weston Inn, and here . . . "but that's another story!"

THURSDAY NIGHT

An early awakening; almost a contradiction at Jack Straw's. The morning delight of toast and coffee, and we were off to the Town Hall of South Londondary. Another beautiful vaudeville stage and grand audience. In spite of growing exhaustion, we wonder if we deserve this privilege, and we work hard to answer . . . "Yes!" Then a drive to Putney and lunch. We set stage in 15 minutes, performed for 45, struck in 6, packed in 7, and drove through Burlington to Montgomery and relaxation. Thoughts for the day: "Where are you two going on your honeymoon, the U.N.?" Well, can't win them all. "Did you really get married?— Uh . . . let me ask my wife." Now we're set for Canada, and I wonder if the foxes need their rabies shots!

FRIDAY NIGHT

Full of Spirit to Canada. Yes, kids are the same everywhere. The two shows were smooth and polished, not much talking after the last one, though, I guess the drive back indicates how we really feel about the tour; we missed the exit to Burlington on the Interstate, almost as if some voices deep inside us kept urging: "Come on, Playtimers . . . Come on. We want to see you; please don't stop."

POSTSCRIPT

If I were writing a book about the Playtimers' Tour of '66, do you know what its theme would be? It would be: Cooperation and Team Work Spells Success. The setting would be in Heaven and the characters would remain the same. I wouldn't change them, just add a few . . . say like a hundred million children. Know what I mean?

EDITORIAL...

An inauguration is an historical event in the life of a university. As we approach the end of his first year acting as President of The University of Vermont, we wish to comment briefly on the man whom we are officially inaugurating tomorrow.

This man McCune has added new dimension to the concept of dedication and selfless devotion to a student body which has previously been ignored by the office of President. He has extended himself personally to all those with whom he has had contact and has done much to foster such contact. We cannot speak for him as an administrator, nor are we in a position to offer any meaningful commentary on his success in raising funds for the University. There are others better qualified to do this. But, as students, we cannot help but remark that Dr. McCune has made his office directly accessible to student opinions, and in the process has succeeded in bridging a traditional gap between the administration of this university and the students who are its essence.

As students, we owe this man a debt of appreciation. We of The Cynic urge you all to partially discharge this debt by attending his inauguration.

A "Moral Rearmament"?

By K. Klonsky

And what rough beast, its hour come round at last, slouches toward Bethlehem to be born?
W.B. Yeats

Sing Out '66 hit the Patrick Gymnasium on Tuesday evening and the results were unexpected and unusual. First, I would like to say that they were musically brilliant. The sound of this large conglomeration of young American men and women and representatives from many allied countries was overwhelming at times. However, they were here to preach a philosophy and I find this philosophy personally repugnant and positively dangerous.

What Sing Out '66 asks for is a "moral rearmament" of the United States so that it can better serve as an example to other countries. Sound good so far? Stick around, Moral rearmament is to be achieved by "1. Honesty 2. Righteousness 3. Purity and 4. Love." These various youths "abstain from pre-marital intercourse, drinking, smoking and other perverted habits. Save your libidos! America will rise again.

JEFFERSON IDEALISM?

This nonsense seems a throwback to Jeffersonian idealism. These people refuse to face what Robert Penn Warren so brilliantly called "the terror of our condition." How can one cover up the evil that is innately part of himself with this super-patriotic unthinking rubbish. One must ask: I am a man, and how can I, as part of mankind, be related to the German who murdered 6,000,000 innocent people? Or "Why did that man commit rape, for I am a man and must as such be part of that act?" When the times cry fervently for recognition of our inner selves, Sing Out '66 advocates a return to the ways of our forefathers. They didn't fornicate, "Why did Rome fall?" they ask. They have deduced cause and effect for themselves and no one is going to tell them differently.

One of the members of this entourage, a nervous college Freshman, was arguing with me after the show. I asked him tongue-in-cheek if he had been to bed with a girl recently. His reply: "Do you masturbate?" These poor mesmerized youths! Who's responsible? I asked another who had praised our role in Vietnam; would you like it if the Chinese supported the South in a civil war against the North in this country? His reply: "What China?... That's far away, I'm talkin' here and now."

Sing Out '66 is in for a big fall. How Hawthorne, Fitzgerald, Melville, Warren, C.G. Jung and other great minds could be so totally ignored is frightening. "You can't live crooked and live straight." Who in hell is going to purify himself?

If Sing Out '66 gathers support, America is in for another run of Dick Divers, Jack Burdens, Captain Ahab and the whole crop of disillusioned characters. For when man attempts to stomp out evil, he suddenly discovers the evil in himself, and then all hell breaks loose.

A VOICE OF SANITY

I managed to locate a voice of sanity in this group. He was a particularly eager talker because he hadn't been able to say anything but hellos and goodbyes all week. Why? Because if you slip in any way from the straight and true path set by "the leaders" they bring you up at the next meeting and try to find out what's wrong with you. You are publicly shot down because of a certain subversive belief you might have! The majority is always right! You bet.

HUMPTY DUMPTY

Humpty Dumpty has once again begun to ascend the wall. Somewhere, he must hear someone crying. "Not Again!" Will the world have to swallow Puritan American stupidity for a few more years or will those "bearded youths" come out of their coffee houses and show us what they've learned? The time has come for reality! Sing Out '66 does not answer this need. Instead they offer an idealistic alternative that will lead to nowhere but the black labyrinth of disillusion called the American Dream.

Letters To The Editor

Praise For Simet

To The Editor:

As a member of the University of Vermont student body, I feel it my responsibility to praise Linda Simet in her role as Mother Courage. It is my belief that Mr. Selsby has done her a grave injustice. First, she showed more than "some" stage presence. Considering the demanding role; one in which the actress must appear on the stage for almost the entire performance, I would have to say that Miss Simet was remarkably polished for one who had only three weeks rehearsal. Mr. Selsby's objection to her "New York accent" is asinine, to say the least. How does he think Mother Courage would have spoken had she lived in the United States and learned the English language? A New York accent is no more than the inflection of a foreign tongue on the speaker, usually a second generation American. Furthermore, what evidence can Mr. Selsby give that Miss Simet "did not comprehend the role?" In conclusion, I feel the whole cast especially Linda Simet and Sherri Mundell, were greatly slighted by a thoughtless and unsophisticated review.

Yours Truly,
Kenneth Klonsky

Our Loss

To the Editors:

I would like to make a short statement concerning my feelings, which I am sure characterize those held by many other members of the University of Vermont Community, concerning Dean Anna R. Harris' recent resignation. Members of the student body, administration, and faculty have felt her beneficial impact as both a unique personality and as an extremely able administrator. I feel that the many people who have worked with her realize that it will be our loss and the National Association of the Deans of Women and Counselors' gain. I wish Dean Harris the best of luck in her new position and hope that she will return to the University Community often.

Sincerely,
Helen H. Keith

Teacher Evaluation?

To the Editors:

Albert Camus once observed that the young should be told the truth. They rarely are. Their education is largely a canon of myths and theoretical truths taught by theoretical idealists and theoretical non-conformists who in point of fact are timid and frightened little men. And yet, mysteriously, in spite of disappointments the young continue to seek the illumination of truth as they will continue to do so long as they remain young in spirit.

THE PURPOSE QUESTIONED

I am certain that many of the students who are enthusiastic about the current movement to evaluate professors hope to discover truth about their university — to reveal the incompetent teacher, to show up those who are indifferent to students' needs and aspirations, to expose the cynical grantsmen and the pseudo-researcher. And with equal candor they would hope that the effective teacher would be rewarded for his concern for young people and his dedication to the primary task of education which is teaching. But truth will not easily out here as in other departments of living unless the student seeks it along elusive pathways. The first answers are never the real answers. Truth in education is hidden behind the cliché, the rationalization, the empty slogan, the cloak of professional jargon. It must be sought out again and again with probing, painful questions that dig beneath the protective armor of evasion, myth, half truths and deliberate lies.

EVALUATE ONLY FACULTY?

Moreover, the state of a university cannot be assessed by measuring the superficial qualities of the faculty alone — their glibness in lecture, their command of a narrow discipline, or their good sportsmanship toward fraternities. Those who would have the truth must also evaluate the other two thirds of the university — the administration and the students.

To evaluate the administration means to question its policies searchingly, or in the popular phrase, to hold a dialogue with those who are responsible for administrative decisions. The undergraduate needs to ask them if he truly belongs to the university. Is he wanted, save in the sense that his tuition supports programs which many thoughtful educators find inimical to his best interests. What is the function of a university anyway? Is its purpose the transmission of facts, the discussion of great and searching ideas, the quest for new insights, the learning of the basic arts and sciences? Or should the university of today be a kind of Research-O-Rama dedicated to grantmanship, where teachers publish and perish as teachers? Can a young faculty member at your university win tenure without publishing even though he is an acknowledged effective teacher? And among the gray heads, who is rewarded? Those who are the most effective teachers or those who publish the most and who conform to administrative prejudices? What is the real value of most publications? Are they new contributions to knowledge or green stamps to be accumulated for promotion?

WHY?

Dear Editor,

This is a copy of a letter sent of Mr. George T. Mazuzan Assistant to the Dean of Men relative to his recent floor counselor appointments. Since it is of informative value to our students, I would ask that it be printed in the forthcoming edition of the Cynic. Thank you.

Dear Mr. Mazuzan:

This is to inform you that there is considerable unrest among the freshmen men concerning your committee's floor counselor appointments. It has been brought to my attention that several deserving candidates were passed over to give an appointment to a person with considerable wealth, and low college grades. This seems to me to be quite an injustice, as I understood the requirements to be personal integrity, high scholarship, and monetary need. It is therefore the opinion of many in the men's dorm that the committee is guilty of "playing favorites," and that the candidates should be reviewed and reappointed. Thank you.

Apologizing for the inconvenience that I have caused you and your department.

I Remain,
An Interested Freshman

"Sing Out" — Wonderful!

To the Editors:

The performance of "Sing Out '66" last evening was an overwhelming experience for all those people from the University and the Greater Burlington community who were fortunate enough to attend.

The artistic abilities of the cast coupled with an idealistic purpose, enabled them to enrapt the majority of the audience for the two hour show.

In connection with the performance, we would like to express our thanks to Mr. Parnell Kirby, Mr. Thomas Schiermerhorn, and the Greater Burlington Chamber of Commerce for all their co-operation in co-sponsoring "Sing Out '66." Through the co-sponsorship, involving both the UVM Student Association and the Greater Burlington Chamber of Commerce, we feel that better relations have been promoted between the University and the Burlington community; and hope that in the future many other into the community to serve the same end, as well as to have an enjoyable and educational experience working with the new, responsible and concerned people of the Burlington community.

Sincerely
Helen Keith and Walter Pressey

CAMPUS DEVELOPMENT: MARRIED STUDENT HOUSING

The Board authorized the University to choose an architect to develop plans for housing units for graduate and medical married students. The Board had authorized the University to explore private financing of construction of such units at the former Ethan Allen Air Base property.

Goodman Comments

Since my own youth -- I was born in 1911 -- there has been important progress toward freedom, naturalness, and honesty in sexual matters. In child care, as taught by Dr. Spock or the Department of Labor manual, there is a widespread relaxation of toilet-training and a reasonable tolerance of masturbation. There has been a remarkable liberation from censorship of so-called pornography, so that it is now almost possible to write plain English about most human problems. Information about contraception and venereal diseases has become publicly available and useable.

Psychology, whatever its merits or demerits, has squelched a lot of superstition. And by and large, religion has let up on hellfire.

In major respects, however, there has been no improvement. Practically, parents leave their young out on a limb with their "freedom"; they are permissive and even sentimentally approving of sexuality, but they do not provide space, moral support, or practical information. Police law is as barbarous as ever, despite the fact that moral legislation with regard to sexual matters like marriage and divorce, abortion, statutory rape, or homosexuality (just as with regard to gambling, alcohol, or drugs) invariably does more harm than good. And the school systems persist, as they did in my childhood, in the fiction that sexuality simply does not exist.

ATTITUDE OF THE SCHOOLS IS THE WORST

At present, in my opinion, the attitude of the schools does the worst damage. In the first place, there is a terrible waste of opportunity -- as is true, of course, also with the rest of the schooling. At the elementary level, it would be a great thing if the wasted physical training would include psychosomatic exercises and eurythmics to unblock and harmonize the anger, grief, and sexuality that are dammed up in the average child; but this is impermissible because of the school board, the mayor, the church, and the yellow press. High school and college would in principle be ideal environments for exploration in the risky field of sex, under the protection of benevolent teachers; but that will be the day! I have even found it impossible to get a college to adopt a course of group psychotherapy for seniors, so that they can gain some awareness of themselves and one another before they graduate, to marry or not marry, to choose careers, to vote.

But the worst damage is done by the school's denial of the existence of sex, for this creates a schizophrenic unreality. Since sex does exist for the children, the schools become in so far unreal environments; there is no doubt that this is a chief cause of inattention and dropout. More important, since the school is overwhelmingly the unique public and official environment of the young, children and adolescents begin to take their sexuality itself as not quite real, for a chief property of reality is to be publicly expressible and to affect and be affected by other realities.

FOR THE YOUNG: TIMIDITY, CONFORMITY

The consequences are evident in the quality of American life and the sexuality that is part and parcel of it. For the young, sex exists only in their own peer-group; it is therefore ignorant and insulated. It must not interfere with homework, nor can it energize writing, art, sport, career, or any other cultural pursuit. But as part of the youth "sub-culture," divorced from community or grownup meaning, it necessarily becomes stereotyped. False privacy results in timidity and conformity, and prevents true solitude and individuality. Instead of each youngster developing according to his own disposition, situation, and luck, and eventually learning to cope with the demands of society, all are forced into conformity to an uncultured and jejune peer-group.

Conversely, insulated from the rest of life and yet obviously tremendously important, sexuality becomes a glamorous big deal. As Freud pointed out, sexuality is co-equal among half a dozen other major human functions, like knowing, making a living, art, citizenship, God, being a parent, to all of which it contributes a color and value. But if it is either inhibited or isolated, it becomes destructive or trivial; it is over-rated or it vanishes.

EVALUATION . . . A FINE UNIVERSITY

Is a fine university a place where graduate training is supported by undergraduates? Should introductory courses -- often taught by incompetent or marginally competent graduate students -- run into the hundreds in some sections while graduate courses manage with as few as one student per teacher?

WHO ARE ADMINISTRATIVE LEADERS?

Who are your undergraduate deans; the putative leaders of your colleges? Are they outstanding educators whose leadership carries us forward or are they men whose weak dedication to teaching found them easily lured away to positions of greater cash reward and pseudo-prestige? Should they be replaced by state civil service workers, and the money saved applied to true educational purposes? And who are higher echelon administrators? Are these men of broad humanistic training whose policies and decisions reflect a deep concern with higher education? What percentage of their time is given to educational matters and how much to "administrative" problems? What, in terms of money and prestige, are their rewards as compared to those received by the faculty? Do these men serve the faculty and students or do they serve themselves?

AND MONEY . . .

How is university income spent? What kind of education costs the most? What the least? Does the largest college receive the greatest share of income? Which students' tuition is most deeply committed to which programs? Should the trustees establish the policy that all undergraduate endowment and tuition income be used to finance undergraduate education? Should each college receive all the income it earns?

PROFESSORIAL REWARD

And what are the various levels of professorial reward? Do men of equal rank, training, and merit in the arts, social sciences and humanities obtain rewards equal to those received in the sciences and vocational programs? Are our faculty content with their lot? Is morale high in reflection of wise fiscal administrative policies? Or do we lose promising young men because they cannot be held?

You should also look beneath the surface of your rating forms to your teachers. Are they broad men of understanding and scholarly attainment? What do they know outside their fields? Are they willing to discuss ideas with you or are they masters of shallow technique and empty form? Do they publish too much, spend too much time in the research laboratory and too little in the library? What do they urge you to do -- get an education or swell the ranks of majors in their department with an eye toward graduate school? What do they emphasize in teaching -- facts, techniques, categories or perspectives, ideas, thoughtful searching? Do they speak of the joys of philosophy, music, the arts, of reading and debate? What do they contribute that makes you think?

AND NOW, WHAT ABOUT YOU?

In turning toward yourselves, you must ask equally searching questions of your own motives and aspirations. Should you have honestly been admitted to college? Are you here for the purpose of obtaining an education or to amass hours and credits toward a degree so that you may enjoy greater material rewards

SCEPTIC

By M. Minsky

Every historical age has its own characteristics and more often than not that age is known by its most obvious characteristic. The twentieth century is the age of bureaucracy. One cannot function well unless one has an adequate knowledge of the nature of that great American institution. Of course one cannot function adequately even if one has an adequate knowledge of the bureaucratic way. Like everything else a bureaucracy has its laws and an understanding of the laws which govern a bureaucracy will help anyone understand what is being done to him.

In every American university the freshmen class assembles on a particular day toward the beginning of the semester to hear an address. The address is always the same and consists of Cardinal Newman's definition of a university. Like most definitions spewed forth by administrators, it is pretty innocuous. But everyone nods his head -- very slowly to be sure. And everybody applauds the speaker. The occasion demands the applause just as much as the speaker demands the occasion.

The doctrine proclaimed by the administrator is that a university is "a community of scholars." But he never tells you what a scholar is. One learns by the end of one's first or second semester that a scholar is some one who does not cut gym. A scholar is some one who will not walk out of class when that occasional inept professor mumbles incoherently. One soon learns that the true scholar according to the big-deck men is one who, when the instructor writes the freezing point of water on the blackboard, will write the same with bold strokes of a pen in his notebook. Have you ever noticed that the best students are often those who use the best trots?

The first law of bureaucracy has just been demonstrated. Any idea proclaimed by a bureaucrat is opposite of the one he means, although he himself is not aware of this fact. Another law or theory states that any valid idea once adopted by an organization becomes a false idea. These two laws are contradictory and therefore both must be true if one accepts paradoxicalism as a valid philosophy.

Recently the government of some obtuse nation decided to reduce its bureaucracy so they held a convention. The convention however decided to form a special branch of the government to study the reduction of the bureaucracy. Needless to say this new organization was very soon absorbed by the old one and the bureaucracy was further swollen. Fortunately a dynamic new leader came along and fired half the officials. Taxes were then cut in half and everyone was happy. But very shortly the national economy collapsed. The paper clip and staple industry which had been the most productive industry had failed. So a new bureaucracy was formed to curtail depression. Which it did. But after the depression the bureaucracy shrivelled and the government was left with ten billion tons of surplus paper clips. Which it melted down into coins. Of course a new bureaucratic department was formed to supervise the minting . . .

Any attempt to curtail a bureaucratic system thus enlarges the system. It's like poison ivy or chicken pox; the more you scratch the more it itches. But something must be done. Write a letter to your congressman. But he's one of them. Join the underground. Bend, Fold and Mutilate for freedom. If LBJ can do it so can you. Long live dynamite. If you agree with these principles and if you are young with fresh new vigor-creative dynamo ideatums please contact our organization at its Agency for Organizational Spirit and Creativity Department.

Uncle Ub wants you.

in the hereafter? Are those of you who are in the fundamental disciplines in "reality vocational trainees on the road to graduate school? Do students really care about a general education for life, or should we pioneer in abolishing undergraduate education in the arts and humanities?

Do students demand enough of themselves and of their teachers and administrators? Does any educational event generate the enthusiasm of a Kake Walk, a winter carnival, two weeks of girls and liquor in Florida, a drunken fraternity party? Do students challenge the ideas that are doled out to them, or do they memorize them for availability on the next examination? Do they protest to administrative officers when they believe sincerely that they have been shortchanged, or do they, like so many of their teachers, submit quietly to intellectual humiliation out of fear?

Do you ever ask yourselves if there is any connection between the state of education at colleges and universities and such disturbing social phenomena as drug addiction, drunkenness, beatnikism, cheating, cynicism and apathy that are found on American campuses? Is one set of factors a possible causative agent in the genesis of the other set? Indeed, do you relate what you learn to life in anyway? Is God dead? Is education dead?

Are you and your university spiritually and intellectually moribund? Can you answer these questions for yourselves or must you have a panel of skucj experts do it for you and leave you with the same questions you had when they came?

Have you inquired whether debate about the old slogans about war and peace, love and sex, art and science, education, values, religion and the meaning of life and death have any place in a university? Or is a university a place for furthering faith in unbounded Scientism and Technocracy? Does your president, your dean, your teacher speak to you about such matters?

INDEPENDENCE?

Are you, indeed, the independent young man or woman that you think you are? Or do you seek the safe sanctuary of a college where ideas are not challenged, where there is a conspiracy of silence laid over a multitude of educational sins, where you lose yourself and your integrity in a search for extrinsic rewards? Do you demand the truth of yourself, or does it frighten you?

I cannot answer these questions for you. No superficial panel discussion, no hurried conversation in the hall, no two-page professors' evaluation form, no spate of sonorous administrative platitudes can do it for you. Perhaps in the final analysis such questions are best left unasked and unanswered. Perhaps we should agree with William James that habit is the great flywheel of society -- a flywheel that is best undisturbed. If the analogy holds, its spokes are surely fictions held together by the glue of cant and hypocrisy. But it is also an explosive wheel that sometimes may fly apart and hurt. Do you want it to?

Conversation Among Friends

McCune Talks With War Buddies

Three editors of national publications with whom Dr. Shannon McCune worked with the Board of Economic Warfare during WW II will join him for an informal "Conversation Among Friends" on the eve of his inaugural as the 18th president of the University of Vermont.

The inauguration will come on Saturday, April 16.

On Friday evening, April 15, John Fischer, editor in chief of Harper's; John R. Fleming, directing editor of the International Staff of U.S. News & World Report; and Max Ways, an assistant managing editor of Fortune, will join Dr. McCune for an 8 p.m. "conversation" in the Ira Allen Chapel on the Vermont campus.

OPEN TO PUBLIC

Like the Saturday morning inaugural, the "conversation" will be open to the public as well as to faculty, students and inaugural guests.

Fischer, Fleming, Ways and McCune were involved in economic intelligence and analysis work for the Board of Economic Warfare in Washington during WW II. They occasionally had luncheon and dinner discussions together.

ORIGIN

Their "Conversation Among Friends" arises out of that wartime service and will mark a reunion after 24 years in which the four have not met as a group.

THE BOARD

Fischer served with the Board of Economic Warfare in various positions during WW II and in 1943-44 was the Board's chief representative in India. A graduate of the University of Oklahoma and Rhodes Scholar at Oxford, he has served as a free lance reporter in Europe, with the United Press, the U.S. Department of Agriculture, and joined the staff of Harper's in 1944, becoming editor in 1958.

Fleming served as chief, Office of Special Areas Branch of the B.E.W. during WW II. A Cornell graduate, he served as a reporter on the Springfield, Mass., Union; as editor for the Extension Service at Ohio State, with the U.S. Department of Agriculture, and joined U.S. News & World Report following WW II.

Ways served as chief of the Enemy Branch of the B.E.W. during WW II. An alumnus of Loyola College in Baltimore, which conferred upon him an honorary LL.D., he served as a reporter and editorial writer for Baltimore and Philadelphia papers prior to WW II, and joined the staff of Time as an editor in 1945, serving as chief of the Time-Life London Bureau from 1956-58. He joined the staff of Fortune in 1959.

McCune's Background

Dr. McCune was named President of the University of Vermont effective July 1, 1965. During WW II, he was an economic intelligence officer for B.E.W., serving in Washington, India, Ceylon, and China. A graduate of the College of Wooster, he earned the Ph.D. at Clark University. A geographer and educator, he has also had government service with the Economic Cooperation Administration, with UNESCO, and as civil administrator of the Ryukyu Islands.

History Surrounds The Inauguration

When Dr. Shannon McCune is inaugurated on Saturday, April 16, as the 18th president of the University of Vermont, the ceremony will be, consecutively, the third of its kind to take place in the month of April.

His predecessor, Vermont's 17th president, Dr. John T. Fey, was inaugurated on April 4, 1959. The 16th president, Dr. Carl W. Borgmann, who will attend Dr. McCune's inauguration, took office almost exactly 13 years ago, on April 11, 1953.

SUMMER FAVORED

The summer months were favored for Vermont's presidential inaugurations in many of the years of the past when the University's academic year ended with commencements in July or August.

Inaugurated in July ceremonies were the second and seventh presidents, Samuel Austin, D.D., and Worthington Smith, D.D.

McCune Speaks Out

Dr. Shannon McCune shared his impressions of the University of Vermont after a month at its helm with members of Burlington's Rotary Club on August 2.

"The first major impression I have is a sense of pride in the heritage of the past," he said, citing the founding of the University in 1791 "as a bold accomplishment of a tumultuous period in Vermont history."

He counted as milestones the University's becoming one of the nation's Land-Grant institutions in 1865, when the College of Agriculture was established and, "10 short years ago, the amalgamation of the University's two boards of trustees which clearly established the University as the state university of Vermont."

A HERITAGE

President McCune noted the University shares with some older colleges and universities "a heritage of being both public and private," and said that today more institutions are becoming both public and private as they seek both public and private resources to meet their responsibilities.

He told Rotarians that "perhaps the basic element of pride in the University's heritage" is derived from "the solid character of quality" of its education research and service programs.

He also said the University traditionally has sought to meet the needs of the citizens of Vermont. "Thus we long ago developed a medical college, the College of Agriculture, later the College of Technology. More recently, heritage of the past has resulted in the development of the programs of our Graduate College."

VIGOROUS PROGRAM

The new UVM President said a second impression he has after a month "is of vigorous programs of the present."

"Just last week, the diversity of activity on our campus included students performing in the Summer High School Music session; talented high school students taking courses at the same time as students working toward the Ph.D.; a visit by 10 students from India seeking to learn more about American education; the opening of the Champlain Shakespeare Festival."

RESEARCH

At the same time, he said, laboratories of the University were in use by faculty and staff members working under government or private grants "or out of their own interest."

During the week "I had the privilege of meeting with several different leaders of state government to discuss ways in which the University and the state may work together," President McCune said, adding "because the University can be and is detached from politics, we can provide objective research."

He called the opening of bids for the third phase of the University's medical college building program "a happy milestone because bids for this, our largest single building project ever, were well within our estimates."

IMPORTANCE OF STUDENT

The Korean born author of Korea: Land of Broken Glamour, Dr. Shannon McCune, will officially become the 18th President of the University of Vermont tomorrow. From the first day Dr. McCune entered the doors of this University to the present day, he has maintained one concern: the importance of the student. In his first speech to Vermont students, the 1965-66 convocation address, Dr. McCune expressed this concern when he said, "this is a student-centered campus, and the voice of the student will be heard and heeded."

DEFINES ROLE

During the same address Dr. McCune defined the American university president in the words of Clark Kerr:

He "is expected to be a friend to the students, a colleague to the faculty, a good fellow with the alumni, a sound administrator with the trustees, a good speaker with the public, an astute bargainer with the foundations and the federal agencies, a politician with the state legislature, a friend of industry, labor and agriculture, a persuasive diplomat with honors, a champion of liberal education, a vigorous supporter of the professors, a skillful spokesman with the press, a scholar in his own right, a public servant at the state and national levels, a devotee of opera and football equally, a decent human being, a good husband and father, an active church member, and (to paraphrase for Vermont) a lover of skiing and of Morgan horses. Above all, he must enjoy traveling in airplanes, eating his meals in public, and taking part in academic ceremonies."

HIGH GOALS

Dr. McCune has cited this definition as his final goal. To use his words:

"We have set our goals high. We recognize . . . that hitching one's wagon (or in modern paraphrase one's capsule) to a star is difficult, that 'astronomical harnessing' will cost us 'infinite climbing and struggle'."

THE FUTURE

Turning to the future, Dr. McCune said the University's ambitions include "solid commitment to continued quality of programs" and "moderate growth."

He said growth is "a necessity forced upon us by two curves -- one the increasing number of young men and women of this group seeking the opportunity to continue their education."

He said that Vermont, unlike some states, will not require that its state university "mushroom" to meet its responsibility, and he suggested that the University's growth might be more accelerated at the graduate level than at the undergraduate.

UVM GROWING

He also said, in noting UVM will take more students this fall than last and more the year after, "if we can find the resources to make this possible," that the number and per cent of Vermonters would increase, but that the University would always seek to reserve a place for well-qualified nonresidents.

Dr. McCune said the University "hopes to help develop and

The 18th president of the University of Vermont, Dr. Shannon McCune, will be the first Vermont president to take the oath of office in the University's Patrick Gymnasium.

The ceremony, to take place on Saturday, April 16, at 10:30 a.m., is the 12th of its kind in the University's history, and is open to guests, faculty, staff, students, and the general public.

CARLSON AT IRA ALLEN

Dr. McCune's three predecessors, Dr. John T. Fey, Dr. Carl W. Borgmann, and Dr. William S. Carlson were inaugurated in the Ira Allen Chapel.

The Chapel itself was dedicated in January, 1927, eight years after the University's 13th president Guy Wingred Bailey, began his duties as acting president.

No ceremony attended his accession to the presidency. Between one opening convocation, in September, 1919, and the next, in September, 1920, President Bailey took over the duties and responsibilities of the full presidency. His convocation address of 1920 was titled simply, "The Day's Work."

ELABORATE INAUGURAL

By contrast with his predecessor, President Bailey, the 12th president, Guy Potter Benton, had the most elaborate inaugural of any in the University's history.

President Benton took office in 1911, after the 40-year reign of President Matthew Buckham.

President Benton's inaugural, Strong Theatre, the hub of processions from the Hotel Vermont, to the University Gymnasium for luncheon, and back again.

The first day was devoted to a symposium, called "A Conference on Education," attended by prominent educators participating and listening. The first speaker was John Dewey, UVM '79, nationally known educator and philosopher and professor at Columbia University.

The roster of delegations attending the inauguration contained 89 names, and many of the representatives of colleges near and far brought greetings. In addition, 21 honorary degrees were bestowed.

Committees Plan McCune's Inauguration

Committees play an integral role in the life of an academic community.

Some committees are busy throughout the college year while others are more active at certain periods. Falling in the latter category at UVM is the ceremonies committee.

The committee, whose name pretty well explains its function, normally has to concern itself with three events -- the opening convocation in the fall, honor's day in the spring, and baccalaureate and commencement. Members are appointed to serve five years.

Now, the committee is busily engaged in preparing for the inauguration on April 16 of Shannon McCune as the 18th president of the University.

For the general public, the inauguration of a university president probably appears as an academic procession, a few speeches and that's it. But there is much more.

There are the invitations, the actual installation ceremonies, luncheons, receptions, housing, and scores of other small but important details.

In charge of registering all the delegates will be Mrs. Constance Zolotas and Donald Mosher. Jack Little, Mr. Mosher and Rose Forgiore are in charge of the installation ceremonies while luncheon arrangements are being handled by Mrs. Zolotas and John Tampas. Miss Forgiore and Frank Lidral are responsible for the reception following the luncheon, and Dean Raymond Phillips and John Bushey are in charge of housing for delegates and for general liaison of the over-all operation.

Brady Gilleland will be the first to march down the aisle at the inauguration, heading the group as the University marshal. He also will introduce all of the speakers at the ceremonies. Hans Murbe has been in charge of arrangements for the "Conversation Among Friends" which is scheduled for Friday evening (April 15) in the Ira Allen Chapel.

Following the inauguration, there won't be much time for the ceremonies committee to relax. Honors day looms around the corner on May 2 and three weeks later is commencement.

IFC Initiates New Rush Policy

Right to Left: Pres. Fred Brown - Rush Committee - Bill Finger, Bill Young, Ed Norris, Jeff Zinn and Larry Roth.

Emphasizes Freshmen's Academics

At last Tuesday's meeting the Interfraternity Council adopted a new rushing policy for the coming academic year. The policy encompasses the new emphasis which the fraternities are placing on academic advancement. It is designed to remove excess burdens of time and stress from the freshman rushee in order that he may perform at his peak in the academics and the adjustments of college life.

1.7 AVERAGE WILL BE NEEDED

The Council has raised the average needed to pledge from a 1.5 to a 1.7. This will greatly help those freshmen who find themselves faced with the problem of low academics. It is intended to give the freshman rushee an added incentive to do well in his scholastic life. It also will prevent those who are in scholastic trouble from pledging a fraternity and thereby adding responsibilities which they will be unable to handle.

BASICALLY AN OPEN RUSH

The policy adopted is basically an open rush. The Council feels that specific dates and times give no latitude to the freshman. With an open policy the freshman will be able to rush at his convenience. He will be able to develop a better conception of the fraternity system in general and each house in particular by this informal type of rush.

GREEK WEEK UVM OPEN RUSHING

The Greek Week Convocation will open next year's rushing period. Dr. Gregg will be the speaker. The actual rushing will not begin until the Greek Week activities are finished, when two formal rushing smokers are planned to get things under way. During the semester the rushee must get a signature from eight different house presidents. This will prevent the rushee from making a hasty decision by insuring he is acquainted with the fraternity system. Also new this year is that bids will be given in an area where no fraternity men will be allowed. This will

"PASS IN REVIEW"

It will be just a few short weeks before these words ring out at Centennial Field and the ROTC brigade will pass in review putting the finishing touches on another successful year.

Maybe it would be a good idea to review the ROTC brigade this year. The key word to use in describing the Brigade would be change, for this year has indeed been marked with change for ROTC at the University of Vermont.

The major change being of course the voluntary ROTC program. We personally are a little disheartened at this change even though it makes for a better ROTC program. We feel, and with much justification, that many young men just out of high school don't know enough about the program to realize the benefits that it provides. The Department of the Army has compensated for this somewhat, however, by instituting a two year program, whereby a young man may take an accelerated course and finish the program in two years.

Another major change has been the institution of the junior drill. For the first time the junior cadets have drilled separately from the rest of the brigade. Most of the juniors will spend a "glorious" six weeks at Fort Devens this summer practicing what they have learned at the University. By drilling separately the junior cadets can be better prepared for their summer training. The MS III's have their work cut out for them, however, because UVM Cadets traditionally rank high in leadership ability at Summer Camp.

CO-EDS BECOME COMPETENT WITH RIFLES

Speaking of rifles and rifle teams etc., maybe we should give the girls equal time. We were quite surprised one evening to see a bevy of co-eds walking around in the depths of the Military Science building. Our curiosity being somewhat aroused we grabbed our notebook, put on our official I've-got-business-here look, and trotted off to investigate.

WOMEN'S PHYS. ED.?

We had known for quite a while that Girls Rifery was offered through the Women's Physical Education Department, but we never knew the extent of the course and this was our second surprise of the evening. The course is taught by SFC Richard Domingue and SFC Thomas Oviatt of the Military Science Department. As one might expect, the co-eds learn safety, marksmanship, and care and cleaning of weapons; but, surprisingly, they also learn target identification, map and compass training, survival training and first aid, in order to round out their association with the normal environment for weapon usage. All in all, it looked like a great program to your reporter. More power to our co-ed rifles!

"Encounter" Opens

Coffee House Features Simple Menu, Varied Entertainment

Encounter Coffee House opened this past weekend with a one-act play reading in St. Anselm's on Redstone Campus. A small crowd of students and a few faculty members were on hand for the opening, which was not widely announced.

This weekend a full schedule will begin -- Thursday through Sunday nights at 7:30 p.m. The Coffee House is held in the Lounge of St. Anselm's. Small tables decorated with candles provide the setting. The Menu is simple American Coffee, Tea, and Donuts, although the management promises more will be offered in the near future.

Performers will be mostly UVM students and faculty members. Like the volunteers who wait on tables, they are not paid. Although at least one "planned" program is planned for each night, there will also be ample opportunity for spontaneous performances -- music, poetry readings, and even soap-box speeches. A faculty debate on Vietnam is planned tentatively for April 23rd. Persons interested in the evenings' entertainment can call the coffee house office ext. 669 after 7:00 p.m. for information.

Conference Of Arts

& Science Held

On Saturday, April 23, five UVM students will travel down to Castleton State College to present papers at the first All-student Conference sponsored by the newly-formed Vermont Academy of Arts and Sciences.

The Conference, an event never before attempted within this state, is open to the public, and Academy officials are in hopes that a sizeable portion of the student bodies from all Vermont colleges will take advantage of the experience. Through this conference, both students and faculties will have an unprecedented opportunity to see firsthand the creative thinking and research in which students from nine Vermont institutions are engaged. Middlebury College, Bennington College, Norwich, St. Michael's, Windham College, the University of Vermont, Johnson, and Lyndon State College have all joined hands to put together a program that should appeal to a variety of interests. In addition, the Conference will sponsor an art show and an afternoon concert. Everything, with the exception of the midday meal if it is desired, is completely free of charge.

The Conference will open for registration at 9 a.m. Vermont Governor Philip Hoff and Conference Chairman C. Leonard Hoag, from the Political Science Department of Middlebury College, will deliver a brief welcome at 9:30, and then the panels themselves will convene for the morning session.

A 2-s rating is not "due" each college student. It is given "in the best interests of the nation," and may be removed when such action will better serve the nation. As long as one remains in good standing at the university, the law protects him from the draft. He can only be called at the end of the academic year.

UVM grades to be sent to the selective Service will be compiled for male students, by college, for the academic year just completed.

Tests will be given on May 14, May 21, and June 1. Each student must select a place to take the test on each date. It may be taken anywhere. The Selective Service Testing Service will make assignments. UVM students should, under the date May 14, write, "taking final exams," so the Testing Service will not assign the test for that date. Applications must be procured at the local draft board and returned by Sat., April 23.

These tests are optional. They will not be the sole criteria for draft status. The test will be weighed along with grades, class standing and other factors.

To be stressed is the necessity to keep the local board informed of all changes in status. The university is required to notify the board upon a student's leaving school. Failure on the part of the student to also give such notification can result in a classification of "delinquent" and priority draft status.

The panel discussion will afford an opportunity for those who are confused on any points related to the draft to receive definite and reliable answers. However, the Selective Service will not undertake to advise any person to take or not to take the test.

will be brought by Vermont's former president Carl W. Borgmann; by Lawrence H. Marvin, '28, for the University Trustees; Stuart P. Washburn, '51, of Worcester, Mass., for the alumni; Dr. Samuel N. Bogorad, chairman of the English Department, for the faculty and staff; Walter M. Pressey, '66, for the students; Dr. Francis H. Horn, president of the University of Rhode Island for sister institutions; and Mayor Francis J. Cain of Burlington, for the Community.

The inaugural address will follow, and at its conclusion the recessionary will begin.

Invited guests will attend the luncheon at 12:30 where Mrs. Mildred McAfee Horton, cousin of Dr. McCune, will be the speaker. She is a former president of Wellesley College and during World War II was commander of the WAVES. Her husband, the Rev. Douglas Horton, will ask the blessing and give the benediction.

From 3 to 5 p.m., an informal reception for President and Mrs. McCune will take place in the Marsh Room of the Billings Center.

Greetings, certificates, and telegrams will be on display in the south end of the rotunda, while a piano and string quartet provide music in the north lounge.

Frank Lidlal, chairman of the music Department, is in charge of the reception and of music for the inauguration.

Roy A. Whitmore, Forestry, is chairman of the ceremonies committee. Assisting him, in addition to Dr. Lidlal, are Donald Moser, Mathematics, John Tampas, Radiology, Jack Little, director of resident instruction in the College of Agriculture, Dr. Gilleland, Mrs. Dean Zolotas, Alumni Director, Hans Murbe, English.

HUNT NAMED TO HEAD READING CENTER

BURLINGTON, Vt., April 2 -- The University of Vermont has named a native Vermonter and alumnus to become professor of education and director of the University Reading Center effective next September.

He is Lyman C. Hunt, Jr., who followed his father, former Burlington Superintendent of Schools Lyman C. Hunt, into a career in education. His appointment came at a meeting of the UVM Board of Trustees today to succeed Stanley I. Mour, who will resign the UVM reading center post to join the faculty of the University of Louisville.

A 1941 Vermont graduate, Dr. Hunt earned his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Syracuse, where he taught. He joined the faculty of the University of Akron in 1962, where he has served as professor and chairman of the department of elementary education and, since last September, as director of the reading center. Prior to joining the Akron faculty, he taught for 10 years at Penn State.

NEW ASSISTANT ARTS, SUMMER DEANS

The Board of Trustees named two staff members to assistant deanships. Dr. Marvin L. Durham, assistant professor of political science and foreign student advisor since 1964, will become assistant dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, effective July 1, succeeding Dr. Norman T. London, who has asked to return to his teaching appointment in the department of speech on a full-time basis.

A native of Seattle, Wash., where he graduated from the University of Washington, Dr. Durham earned the M.A. and Ph.D. degrees at the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy at Tufts University. Prior to joining the Vermont faculty, he was a counselor and social studies teacher at Bellevue, Wash., High School, and taught and served as Dean of Students at Wanatchee Valley College in Washington.

The Board also approved establishment of the position of assistant dean of summer session and Dr. Jack Little, presently director of resident instruction in the College of Agriculture and Home Economics to fill the new post.

Dr. Little is a graduate of Rutgers and earned his Ph.D. at Columbia. He joined the Vermont faculty in 1945, becoming director of resident instruction in 1957. Since 1961, he has also served as the University's Peace Corps liaison.

UVM President Shannon McCune said summer session enrollment and programs have increased in each of the past 10 years, from 623 students in 1955 to more than 2,000 students last summer.

In addition, he said the University had asked Summer Session Dean Raymond V. Phillips to accept responsibility for planning and development of the statewide educational television network established by the past special session of the Legislature.

NEW MILITARY PROFESSOR

Col David L. Longacre, currently Chief of the Army Section, Military Assistance Advisory Group for the Republic of China, Taiwan, will become professor of military science at Vermont this summer, succeeding Col. Leonard G. Robinson, who will retire at the end

Harris leave us. However, we are delighted with the honor and the responsibilities which have been offered to her. We wish her every success and will miss her gracious presence on our campus."

Walter Pressey, the past president of the Student Association, felt "that it is a great loss to the University because of her insatiable desire to work closely with all the students." He added that "it is a great honor to the University that she was chosen for this newly created position, but this will not fill the gap which she leaves behind."

When asked to comment, Fred Brown, President of the Inter-Fraternity Council, said that "this campus will miss her sparkling character and her utmost concern for the welfare of the students at U. V. M."

Working more closely with Miss Harris has been Deborah Whittaker, the past president of the Women's Student Government Association. She made this comment upon hearing of the dean's resignation:

"During the last 2 years I've grown to know Miss Harris both as an advisor and as a friend. As an advisor she proves her sincere interest and concern for each individual student. As a friend, her quick humor, wisdom, and true "Southern hospitality" destroy the imaginary wall that surrounds the administration. I am most grateful for the opportunity to have worked with her. I regret that she is leaving Vermont, for many women students will miss the opportunity to benefit from knowing her."

Plans for a replacement for Dean Harris are being discussed. A necessary step in replacing an individual at the University is a review of the entire structural setup of the office in which the position was vacated. Therefore, the Student Personnel Division of the Administration is now under scrutiny to determine the effectiveness of the present setup. Upon completion of this evaluative study, recommendations for a New Dean of Women will be made and presented to the proper authorities for final approval. The administrators have committed themselves to the fact that they are investigating the qualifications of those already on campus as well as other sources in order to find the person who will most effectively fill the role as Dean of Women at the University. From the above statements, it is suggested that this will not be an easy task.

of the current academic year. Col. Longacre, a graduate of Cornell, with the M.A. in international relations from Yale, served during WW II in the China Burma India Theatre, in China from 1946-48; and in the Far East from 1950-52. He has been assigned in Taiwan since 1962.

TRUSTEES ELECT MARVIN

The meeting marked the reorganization of the Board and the election of Lawrence H. Marvin of Essex Junction, a director of the Howard National Bank and Trust Co., as chairman. He is a member of the Class of 1927.

Sanborn W. Patridge of Proctor, geologist and educator, who has served in the Vermont House in 1961, 1963, 1965 and the special session of 1966, was named vice chairman.

A new member of the Board, Burlington attorney Leon Latham, was named secretary and clerk, with Bartholomew F. Garrity of Burlington named assistant secretary. Both are alumni of the University.

QUESTION -- Should the infirmary make available to girl students birth control pills?

Gary Lawson, '67, Wallingford, Vt. -- "No, because any University is a leader in the thinking of the times and because they are 'I don't think they should encourage something that has not been fully approved by society. The fact is that Universities hold from the population a certain respect which might be jeopardized if they encourage something which hasn't been approved."

Suellen Botsford, '69, Hyde Park, Vt. -- "If individuals are so inclined, facilities should be available whereby birth control pills could be dispensed. As human nature predicates that each individual has a mind of his own, those who choose a certain path should be able to follow it safely."

Sue Fick, '67, Wyckoff, N.J. -- "I definitely don't think it is up to the school infirmary to give girls birth control pills. If they want them they should get them from their own resources. I don't think it is part of the university's duty."

Bob Resnick, '66, Manchester, N.H. -- "No, although I believe UVM and other colleges should be rather liberal in policy. I also feel they should keep in tune with the times. And as yet this isn't Gary Veasey Lawson, '67, Keeseville, N.Y. -- "Yes, I think they should because it gives the girl a chance to make a decision without being under pressure. It gives the girl the freedom of determining what her own morals will be without the fear of pregnancy."

Susan Elizabeth Fick, '67, an issue readily agreed upon. I think there are many more unsettled issues the university should decide first. I am not saying I don't favor birth control, but I think this is the responsibility of the individual student and not the university."

Be on guard as to what you say and to whom you say it because the next time it might be you who will be put ON THE SPOT.

Student Ambassador Program Explained

PCIL RUNS PROGRAM

Many of you have doubtlessly wondered who is running the Student Ambassador program. The answer is the PCIL. What is the PCIL? It is short for the President's Council on International Living which consists of all your class officers. The senior class coordinates the program, the junior class charge is publicity, the sophomore officers are responsible for fund raising, and the freshman are selecting the reviewing committee for applicants.

ITS ORIGINS

How was the Ambassador Program at UVM born? Mrs. Laura Twitchell is assistant to the foreign student advisor at UVM and is intensely interested in any type of exchange student program. One day last semester, she and the head of the Experiment in International Living in Putney, Vermont, Mr. John Ludlam, and Dr. M. V. Perrine, of the psychology department, and also very interested in exchange programs, had a meeting concerning the possibility of establishing a Student Ambassador program at UVM. Walt Pressey, then the President of S.A., listened in, became interested and presented the class presidents with the challenge of forwarding the Student Ambassador program. The presidents, feeling the necessity to do something really constructive for this University, accepted the challenge and a new opportunity was born for UVMers.

HEADQUARTERS IN PUTNEY

You might be interested to know that the headquarters for the Experiment in International Living is in Putney, Vermont, and that there are several past Experimenters on campus. The main difference between an Experimenter and an Ambassador is that the Experimenter must support himself while the Ambassador's trip is financed, but the Ambassador has obligations upon returning.

WORLD-WIDE Cynic

By Marion Robinson

THE COLLEGE PLAYS THE ROLE OF "IN LOCO PARENTIS"

The Administration has finally recognized the fact that students over 21 are adults and capable of the responsibility of life. For this I praise the Administration of the University of Vermont, but regulations and rules still hover over the head of the average Vermont student.

By means of the mass media of newspapers and a survey sponsored by the MIDDLEBURY CAMPUS, it is apparent that other colleges are not as fortunate as we in the definition and reliability of a college student. Maybe this is incorrect, but it seems as if administrations enjoy placing limitations, no matter how sensible, on the student body. For example, the students of UTAH STATE CANON can not lounge on the lawn facing the main highway because "it does not promote the public image." And if caught in the off-limits area, the criminal will be subject to disciplinary action. Further information about KENTUCKY STATE, which is a predominantly Negro school and increasing in the number of White students, leads one to believe, as do many students, that the executive council is concerned about: "what some white citizens of Frankfort will think if they see Negroes and Whites sitting together on blue-grass soil."

Issues such as this naturally leads to the question of social reform on the US Campus. It is for this reason that the results of the Middlebury Survey are reprinted here.

QUESTIONS ON ADMINISTRATIVE ATTITUDES

The questions covered women's hours, parental hours, punishments for social code infractions, men's regulations, the role of the Dean of Women and House Mothers. Questions also asked for the editor's opinion regarding administrative attitude toward social reform, outmoded or ridiculous rules, and progressive rules.

The first question asked, "What are the women's hours?" Of the twelve colleges applicable, ANTIOCH had no curfews for women of any class, BELOIT has hours only for freshmen, ROCHESTER only for freshmen and sophomores, KALAMAZOO allows unlimited hours to seniors and women over 21, BATES to seniors, ALLEGHENY to seniors on weekends, and LAWRENCE to residents of "honors" dormitories. All these colleges used the "key" system or the night watchman system. The others had curfews for all women.

Freshman curfews ranged from 10 to 12 on weekdays and 12 to 1:30 on weekends, the modes being 11 and 1, respectively. Seven colleges distinguished to some extent between first and second semester freshmen. At least five made some provision for extra late hours; SWARTHMORE allows unlimited freshmen signouts to 12:30 first semester, 2 second semester on weekdays, and 1:30 and 3 on weekends; upperclasswomen may sign out to 2 on weekdays, 3 on weekends. The others are more restrictive.

IS MOMMA WATCHING?

The fourth question: "What means, if any, does the Dean of Women use to keep check on each woman? Do the house mothers keep close watch? Are reports on each individual made out periodically? Is there much prying into the women's personal (i.e., sexual) affairs?"

ALLEGHENY, ANTIOCH, and ROCHESTER have relatively liberal methods of checking. At ALLEGHENY, there are no house mothers, and no immediate jurisdiction for the deans. A student resident advisory board makes and enforces the women's rules. At ANTIOCH, there are neither deans, housemothers, nor reports. Undergraduate hall advisors are not obligated to report offenses to the dean of students, and may discuss problematical women without mentioning their names. ROCHESTER also has no dean of women, while the housemothers act in a purely advisory position.

Five colleges amidst to limited administrative interference. At GWU and POMONA, the editors believe that only indiscreet girls get caught. At GRINNELL, "the house mothers do little except play bridge with each other. The dean of women is nosy but generally ignored." At BATES, offenses are reported by "grapevine and housemothers, but the girls don't feel watched by Big Brother." POMONA and SWARTHMORE feel that their deans do not actively pry.

BELOIT, WOOSTER, and LAWRENCE all have some formal reporting, at least for freshman women. The BELOIT editor reports that "both housemothers and junior counselors keep tabs and report on freshmen when they get drunk, etc. There is not too much prying into the girls' sex affairs. However, we have had trouble with a psychiatrist reporting to the deans things told them in confidence, with resulting disciplinary action." At LAWRENCE, "housemothers keep some watch; freshman counselors make formal reports; but there is relatively little prying except about freshmen; we had a big deal on those reports which approach attempted psychoanalysis by unqualified people." At WOOSTER, a "very close watch is kept by housemothers and junior counselors."

IS THERE SOCIAL REFORM?

The sixth question concerned social reform: "How easy is it to get social reform on campus? Do the deans listen to and act upon student suggestions? Only seem to listen? Or not listen at all and admit it?"

Five editors seemed dissatisfied with the methods of reform on campus. The SWARTHMORE editor commented: "It is very difficult -- reform will proceed as quickly as our president pleases. The deans listen politely and explain, but most of their statements are to a few students and off the record. GWU also felt that the deans only pretended to listen to suggestions. The BELOIT answer: "The deans are very conservative -- I doubt if BELOIT will ever have open dorms. They feel that they have the responsibility of the parent." WOOSTER felt that the deans do not listen at all to student protest unless the students are willing to put forth a great deal of effort for minimal revisions of rules. The LAWRENCE editor felt that "they (the deans) are only too happy to listen, but they have a wonderful trick of never taking action and letting student feeling die out

Summer Session Catalogue Boosts Shakespeare Festivals In U. S. And Canada

The University of Vermont is distributing over 15,000 Summer Session catalogues boosting 10 North American Shakespeare Festivals.

The 100-page catalogue which lists summer programs at the University is illustrated with 51 photos of the comedies, dramas and histories of The Bard.

FESTIVALS

The photos were provided by the 10 North American festivals which include the Champlain Shakespeare Festival at Burlington, Vt.; the American Shakespeare Festival at Stratford, Conn.; the Stratford, Ontario, Shakespearean Festival, New York City's Shakespeare Festival; the New Jersey Shakespeare Festival at Cape May; the Southern Shakespeare Repertory Theatre at the University of Miami.

Also, in the west, the Colorado Shakespeare Festival at Boulder; the Oregon Shakespearean Festival at Ashland; the San Diego, Calif., National Shakespeare Festival; and the Utah Shakespeare Festival at Cedar City.

The Royal Shakespeare Theatre Festival at Stratford-upon-Avon in England is also included.

MARKS CHANGE

Use of scenes from Shakespeare Festival plays marks the third straight year the University has departed from use of campus scenes in its summer catalogue.

Three years ago, the Vermont catalogue reproduced art pieces from the University's Fleming Museum. "We had so many favorable comments that last year we reproduced art pieces from the Fleming and eight other Vermont museums," Summer Session Dean Raymond V. Phillips reports.

REASONS FOR CHOICE

Choice of Shakespeare Festival scenes for this year's issue was made "because our own Champlain Shakespeare Festival is one of the attractions of our summer campus, and because vacationers often make it the middle stop between visits to the Stratford, Conn., and Stratford, Ont., festivals," he said.

TWENTY-TWO PLAYS

Twenty-two of Shakespeare's plays are represented in the 51 photos. Henry IV, Part 1, with six photos, appears most often; with Macbeth and The Taming of the Shrew each represented four times.

Henry IV, Part 2, Romeo and Juliet, Love's Labour's Lost, The Merry Wives of Windsor, The Tempest, Much Ado About Nothing, and Coriolanus, are all represented by two photos in the catalogue.

OTHER PLAYS

Other plays represented include Timon of Athens, Hamlet, Antony and Cleopatra, The Merchant of Venice, Henry V, The Winter's Tale, King Henry VIII, King Lear, Julius Caesar, The Comedy of Errors, King John, and Richard III.

BODIAN CASTLE

The catalogue also features a four-color photograph of Bodian Castle, located in Sussex County, England. It was constructed at the end of the Fourteenth Century. The photo was taken by Dean Phillips during a trip overseas last year when he was an invited participant in an international symposium on continuing education.

-- apathy, you know. Once in a while the proposed legislation goes to committee, but still it often gets lost. This does not eliminate the element of surprise -- they toss us an occasional bone."

The POMONA editor largely blamed the students for the failure of student reform. "Policies are defeated because they are not well-organized or thought out. All of the attitudes you describe are applicable to the deans, depending on how the proposals are formulated. The deans give the students all the freedom they need, not all they want." ALLEGHENY and BATES felt that more is achieved through dialogue cooperation, and mutual respect than through protest, and that responsibility is given to students who accept it responsibly. The GRINNELL editor felt that the deans would listen to student agitation but would not themselves initiate reform.

At KALAMAZOO and ROCHESTER, the editors see reform as easily gotten. At the latter, the rules are enacted by the students with the deans merely advisory.

OPINION WANTED

Question Seven: "Do any rules seem especially outmoded, ridiculous, sadistic, or otherwise undesirable?" Five editors saw none as being such. However, LAWRENCE saw reports on freshmen as fitting all of these descriptions. "Too much in loco parentis, especially with unqualified people dealing with a dean of women who cannot possibly know every student to check the accuracy of the reports. And admits that, too." KALAMAZOO commented: "Campus seems rather barbaric." Other editors' complaints included dressing for class in skirts, no sale of cigarettes in the student union, the campus pregnancy policy, senior curfews, suspension for sexual violations, no liquor in rooms even for those over 21, members of the opposite sex not being allowed in the bedrooms of coed dorms, and freshman study hours (8-10) for the first six weeks.

PUNATIVE POWERS

With regard to punishments, most editors simply stated that they ranged from "campus" to expulsion, which indicates that there is little difference in punitive methods. KALAMAZOO, however, was more graphic: "Infractions include not signing in or out, talking back to the housemother, or making noise. There are two free warnings, then women's permissions are reduced. 'Campus' (being restricted to dormitory rooms, from 7 P.M. to 7 A.M., with no phone calls) after three warnings, social probation after three campusings, and then suspension." BELOIT demands that late minutes be made up at a 5/1 ration weekdays, 10/1 weekends. At ANTIOCH "The rules make little discrimination between men and women; there is no dean of women. Thus, 'Social rules refer to 'rules of sexual conduct.' Sexual intercourse is punishable by expulsion." However, the administration admits that there is a difference in the level of enforceability and thus of responsibility, between on- and off-campus students. It states that any sexual relations involving exploitation of a college student is a cause for expulsion. GWU describes its punishments as "ostensibly social probation, or maybe removal from school, but no one really knows. They rarely enforce them."

Netmen Face St. Lawrence Monday

The University of Vermont tennis team -- defending Yankee Conference champion -- will play a seven-match schedule this spring.

The Catamounts haven't lost a dual match since 1964. They open the campaign at home on April 18 against St. Lawrence University and conclude the regular season on May 4 at Middlebury, the last team to inflict a defeat on the Vermont netmen.

In addition, Vermont will defend its Yankee Conference laurels, hosting the meet on May 6-7.

Michael (Brud) Humphreys has replaced the late Dr. Fred Marston as coach.

The schedule: April 18, St. Lawrence; 19, Clarkson; 23, Middlebury; 26, Union; 30, Rhode Island, May 2, at New Hampshire; 4, at Middlebury; 6-7, Yankee Conference meet at Burlington; 13-14, New England, at Yale.

Golfers Open Thursday

The University of Vermont golf team will play eight dual matches this spring and take part in the state, Yankee Conference and New England tournaments.

Coach Ed Donnelly's linksmen will play all eight dual matches within an eight-day period. The team opens against Massachusetts and Amherst at South Hadley, Mass., on April 21, plays at Williams on the 23rd, against Clarkson and St. Lawrence at Canton, N.Y., on the 25th, is home to Norwich on the 27th, meets St. Michael's at the Burlington Country Club on the 28th and travels to Middlebury on the 29th.

The state meet is at Middlebury on May 4, the Yankee Conference championship at New Hampshire on May 6-7, and the New England at Portland, Me., on May 12-13.

Donnelly is hoping his veteran squad can pick up where it left off in the fall. The Catamounts won two dual matches, took top honors in a Canadian tourney, and finished fourth in the New England qualifying round of the ECAC tournament.

On the recent trip south during the spring vacation, Vermont dropped its first two practice matches to George Washington University and the Naval Academy but then came back with a 3 1/2 - 3 1/2 tie against Navy and a win over American University.

Team members are Lloyd Hier, Bob Nadler, Joe Donnelly, Captain Jim Nixon, Art Shields, Pete Sargent, and Tom Chiota.

McCord Expected To Start In Regular Season Opener

By Bob Bloomenthal

SPRING SPORTS GETS UNDER WAY

This week marks the beginning of all four major spring sports at UVM. This Saturday the track team swings into action, the baseball and tennis seasons start Monday, while the golf team opens Thursday. Following are a few of the individuals who should play important roles on these teams.

On Saturday's track meet senior Don Mayland should be the man to watch. He dominated the indoor track season at UVM. Other important names should be Larry Perlmutter, Jim Dedman, Vin DeCesaris, Walt Stowell, Pete Jones, Pete Stickney, Paul Ardell, Ed Childs, Pete Nolan, and Tom Fyles.

In the baseball game on Monday, pitcher John McCord, John Packard, and Captain Bobby Cronin should be the big names. Baseball is the hardest of the spring sports to single people out since it is the one requiring the most teamwork. Maybe it would be better to say all nine men who play are just as important.

Paul Ryan should be Vermont's ace-in-the-hole on the tennis team this year. He won the ECAC individual title last fall. The defending ECAC and Yankee Conference champs must do it without their top three players of last year. They also have a new coach in Bud Humphreys.

Thursday, when coach Ed Donnelly's linkmen take to the course, he will be depending mainly on the experience of Lloyd Hier, Joe Donnelly, Art Shields, and captain Jim Nixon. The best-looking sophomore should be Bob Nadler.

Would You Believe . . . This Saturday will be a big day for scrimmages at Centennial Field . . . The varsity baseball team will take on the promising freshman squad of Coach Fuzzy Evans . . . Coach Ralph Lapointe sets the ground rules as a nine inning game, or until the varsity takes the lead, if they do not have it at the nine innings . . . The football team working hard at their spring practice, will also have a scrimmage this Saturday . . . This should not be confused with the big spring intra-squad game on April 30 . . . John Rorke, currently head coach at Drury High School in North Adams, Mass., will take over the end coach position vacated by Less Leggett . . . Rorke is on a two-week leave from Drury High to take in the Vermont spring football sessions . . . Being the big anti-Celtic fans that we are, the CYNIC would like to offer a valid excuse for Philadelphia '76ers poor playoff showing against the Celts . . . Before their series opened, Oscar Robertson stated that the playing of the first game at the Philadelphia Arena instead of at Convention Hall ('76ers' real home court) because of a circus would help the Celtics immensely . . . Robertson explained that the manner in which the rims were attached to the backboard would benefit the strong outside shooting attack of the Celtics and help them against the more powerful inside attack of the '76ers . . . It seems that outside shots are easier to make at the Arena than at Convention Hall, but close shots come no easier . . . As it stands now, we'll go with the Los Angeles Lakers to defeat the exhausted old guard of Boston in the Championship series . . . In hockey we see the smooth skating Montreal Canadiens taking all the marbles from the Black Hawks in the final . . . As for the barely started major league season, we go with the San Francisco Giants in the National League and look for the New York Yankees come back to take home the flag in the American league.

Sophomore John Packard, who can pitch as well as play first base, has been Ralph Lapointe's most impressive hitter in pre-season practice sessions.

The University of Vermont baseball team will open its 74th regular season this Monday against Norwich at four o'clock at Centennial Field. This will be the first of but seven home games on the Cats' seventeen game schedule.

The Catamounts will be out this year to defend their title of co-champions of the Yankee Conference. This should be an extremely tough task this season since both Connecticut and Massachusetts recently returned from undefeated Southern Trips and Maine is supposed to be loaded. In State Series play coach Ralph Lapointe sees St. Michael's as the team to beat.

The probable starting pitcher for Monday's opening game should be junior righthander John McCord of Wayne, Pa. Last season McCord, a side-wheeling stringbean, gave up but four earned runs in the 34 innings he worked to head the pitching staff with an ERA of 0.99. He finished with a 2-1 won-lost mark.

This spring McCord has looked very effective. He was the best pitcher on the Southern Trip, and last weekend, in a practice game at Springfield, Mass., he shut out Springfield College, 2-0, in a masterful five-hitter. Coach Lapointe said "he was in complete control of the situation, walking only one and showing real good consistency."

The results of last weekend were quite encouraging to Lapointe. Junior Len Sheffott also did a good job as he struck out twelve batters although losing a 2-0 decision to Springfield, Sunday, against weaker opposition at MIT. Ron Gondek, Bruce Bovenizer, and John Packard pitched good ball. Lapointe was especially pleased with the progress shown by Packard's arm which has been ailing. The sophomore pitcher first baseman also was the top hitter for the weekend.

The Cats, although still quite a young team, finally seem to be coming around and playing with more of a semblance of unity. There have been vast improvements in the defense and base running and the pitching looks good. The weak spot on the team is still the hitting, though. Nevertheless, in 14 previous campaigns, Lapointe has never had a losing season, and this year should not be his first.

The probable starting lineup:

P - John McCord
C - Rick Aldrich
1B - John Packard
2B - Bruce Lombard
3B - Bill Leete
SS - Bobby Cronin
LF - Don Fitts
CF - Dave Wayne
RF - Brad Stevens

FROSH TEAM TRAVELS TO ST. LAWRENCE

The freshman baseball team opens its season Monday with a doubleheader at St. Lawrence. Although at press time the Kittens had yet to practice outside, coach Fuzzy Evans could not help but be optimistic about the coming season.

The frosh have one of their strongest pitching staffs in history. Heading the staff are righthanders Charlie Brucato and Tom Suchanek, former teammates at Deerfield Academy. Behind these two are Walt "Mac" Adams, Dave Geiser, and Glen Vaillancourt (all righthanders) and Terry O'Leary, a southpaw.

Infield candidates include Lou Constantinople, Steve Kunken, Doug Watkin, Dave Lapointe, Jim Wood, Matt Ferriter, Jack Berry, and Bob Fehette. Lapointe played with Brucato and Suchanek at Deerfield. All three, along with O'Leary performed on the Southern Trip with the varsity.

Art Ziener is the top outfield candidate, with Kunken or any of the pitchers who aren't working filling the other spots. The catchers are Bob Graham and John Burgess.

The freshman schedule consists of seven doubleheaders, with each game going seven innings. For the first time in the school's history the Kittens will face Middlebury, which has never fielded a freshman baseball team before this year.

Sandy McLeod could make the javelin one of the Cats' top events.

Although the Cats should score well in the YC meet, it falls during the final exam period and this will limit the number of representatives UVM will send. Nevertheless, this Saturday should be the start of a successful season for Coach Post.

FROSH TEAM INCREASES IN SIZE

Of the 160 boys in the freshman class who claimed track experience on their college application, Coach Post has corralled five more to build the team number up to sixteen. Top performers in the weight events for the frosh should be Jim Betts, Rod Whittier, and Avery Seaman. Dick Catron and Rich Kabat will handle the dashes with Wayne Crown in the 440 and 880. The best in the jumping events should be Kabat, Weston Cate, and Bob Ciulla.

Coaches To Talk

The fourth annual University of Vermont football clinic for high school coaches will be held on April 29-30.

The clinic has been switched from a one-day winter affair to a two-day spring event to tie in with the spring scrimmage game.

Coaches Bob Clifford and John Coons will offer six hours of instruction and exhibitors will show their 1966 line of equipment.

Track Team Starts Here Saturday Against Bowdoin

By George Passage

The varsity and freshman track teams are winding up their final week of preparation before the opening of the outdoor track season this Saturday at Centennial Field at 1:30. The team concluded the indoor season last month with a fifth place finish in the Yankee Conference indoor meet.

Coach Archie Post has hopes that the team will improve upon that performance on May 14, the date of the conference outdoor meet at Rhode Island.

MULTI-EVENT MAYLAND

Multi-event captain Don Mayland will close out his collegiate career this spring and should be the top pointgetter as usual. Mayland will compete in the pole vault, the 100 yard dash, and the high hurdles. Having adjusted to his new fiberglass pole and recovered from a shoulder injury, Don should once again be clearing 14 feet by May. Another one to keep an eye on in the pole vault is Tom Fyles who placed ahead of Mayland in the YC meet this winter.

Coach Post is always pleased when it is high jump time at a meet because that is where YC champ Ed Childs goes to work. Childs cleared 6'4" indoor this year and greater heights loom in the near future.

RUNNING EVENTS STRONG

In the dashes, Post has three fine competitors in Jim Dedman, Dean Kent, and Larry Perlmutter. These three, along with Mayland should break their share of first place tapes. Perlmutter's status is unknown at present, but it is hoped that his schedule permits him to compete this spring.

It might be added here that an outdoor track meet has four more events than the indoor meet (17 as apposed to 13). This usually spreads the talent out pretty thin.

The top Catamount hurdlers, besides Mayland, are senior Vin De Cesaris, junior Argie Economou, and fast improving sophomore Jim Bahrenburg. Senior Walter Stowell will once again handle the half-mile and mile with strong support from Richard Dombal in the 880. Soph Pete Jones is the top prospect in the two mile.

DEPTH IN WEIGHT EVENTS

UVM record holder Pete Stickney (47'6" in the shot) plus sophomores Paul Ardell and Steve "Cookie" Bernadini give the Cats plenty of depth in the weight department. Also, Keith Keiderling seems to have recovered from a foot operation and should be counted on for points in the discus.

Vermont should be strong in the javelin with three men capable of distances of over 175 feet. Paul "Gino" Giardi, Stan Griffin, and

Tranh Van Dinh Gives Press Conference

Tranh van Dinh visits
Tau Epsilon Phi.

At a press conference held Wednesday afternoon in the Marsh Lounge in Billings, the Honorable Tranh van Dinh, past acting ambassador to the U.S. from Vietnam, answered questions put to him by students and one Free Press reporter. Other local news media invited to attend the conference did not.

At an informal chat before the press conference, Mr. van Dinh was asked which of his names should be used when addressing him. He replied that "All three are right. That's why the war in Vietnam is so confusing."

Once underway, the conference covered many areas. When asked if the Vietnamese wanted U.S. participation, Mr. van Dinh's comment was, "Have you seen any country which wanted foreign troops?"

In response to the question as to whether this was a U.S. war, he replied, "If you say that U.S. does not belong to SE Asia, you must say Russia does not belong to Poland . . . This is the power system -- that a power must have interests elsewhere, and in this way its influence . . . I know that the U.S. has very good intentions in Vietnam, but you can't convince me that they are too concerned about the Vietnam people. We must be realistic."

He further stated that the U.S. is anti-Communist for personal interests, but it is possible to convince a Vietnamese to this way of thinking, "when he has been betrayed in the last 35 years by everybody."

"Man wants to be free. You can not oppose totalitarianism by democracy; you can only oppose it by freedom . . . The U.S. wants Vietnam to have a representative government, yet we wish to exclude the Communists. It is the U.S. which objects to the Vietnamese choosing their own government, then why are we there?"

Mr. van Dinh said that he felt that our commitment was too deep to allow an immediate withdrawal. There are only two alternatives for the U.S. now: 1) send one million troops--in which case we would be defeated; 2) devise a rational long term plan of withdrawal, probably to take as long as three years.

One last comment worthy of note here: "I never saw a country fight such an important war with such ignorance of background, but I don't blame America for that . . . Really sometimes we don't know what's going on . . . Ask the man on the street about the Buddhist in Vietnam. How could he know?"

Two-Auto Crash Fatal To Junior

Accident Injures 4

Wednesday morning, at 12:36, a Mustang sedan and a Volkswagen convertible collided on Main Street near Morrill Hall. One UVM student was killed and three others injured as a result. The driver of the other car was also injured.

The driver of the Volkswagen, Edward J. Lockwood, was pronounced dead on arrival at Mary Fletcher Hospital. Ed was a junior, 20, in the college of Arts and Sciences from West Haven, Connecticut. He was an active pledge in Delta Psi Fraternity. The passengers in his car were Donald Murphy, 25, of Bennington; who suffered a concussion with severe lacerations of the scalp and chin; Colin P. Hurd, 20, from Lowell, Maine, suffered from internal injuries and laceration on the left side of the face; and Earl Russell Boardman, 21, from Mattapoisett, Massachusetts, who had slight lacerations of the scalp, but was released from the hospital. Colin underwent an abdominal operation Wednesday afternoon.

The UVM students were traveling west on Main Street when they were struck by a car driven by Ernest H. Chamberlain, 27, of Essex Junction who was headed east on Main Street. According to the reports, Chamberlain ran the light at Main and Prospect and continued until the collision near Morrill Hall. He was listed in satisfactory condition at the hospital, after walking there from the scene of the accident. According to witnesses, he disappeared behind Morrill Hall after the accident. He arrived at the hospital shortly before 1:30 a.m.

This is the second accident which has occurred on Main Street between Prospect and University Place in two days. On April 18, a UVM custodian was hit and is now at Mary Fletcher Hospital in critical condition.

The first people to arrive at the scene of the accident were two members of UVM's Security Police. One was standing near the Wasson Infirmary at the time of the collision. Any charges to be made will come from the Burlington Police and, until that time no further details are available.

University officials and the Security Police have been concerned in the past with the possible danger of the traffic lanes and the curve in the area of the accident but it remains for the city of Burlington to rectify the situation.

Signs; Eggs Mark Campus Peace Move

UVM students opposing U.S. policy in Vietnam staged a two hour demonstration Wednesday morning at the fountain on the Green. The demonstration began at 10:30 a.m. and by 11 about two hundred spectators had gathered to watch and occasionally heckle the 35 member group. The protestors carried signs saying "Make love, not war," "Peace is patriotic," and "Wars solve problems, also people," and tried to pass out literature advocating peace in Vietnam.

Shortly after 11 the crowd of spectators began to grow unfriendly; some eggs were thrown and placards destroyed. The demonstrators called the police for assistance. According to a spokesman for the group, Peter Collins, "The police were helpful -- once they came," but he regretted the necessity of their being summoned.

Rev. John D. Perry called the behavior of some of the spectators "disgraceful," and went on to say that "At least 20% of the spectators should be expelled for conduct unbecoming a student."

By noon the number of spectators was estimated by the police to be about 300. The demonstrators dispersed at noon claiming that they had made their point. According to one spokesman, the purpose of the protest was to encourage intellectual discussion about our nation's policy in Vietnam.

The group, called the Ad Hoc Committee of Students Concerned About War in Vietnam, is contemplating a teach-in and expressed the hope that this may become a "Freedom of Dissent Movement."

Players Offer "Shoemaker's Holiday"

The University of Vermont Players offers "The Shoemaker's Holiday" as their second production of the spring semester.

The play opened Thursday evening (April 21) in the Arena Theatre and runs through Saturday. Performances start at 8:30 p.m.

Directed by Fred LaBelle, a senior at the University, "Shoemaker" is an Elizabethan comedy by Thomas Dekker and centers around two young couples and the age-old foes -- wars and fighting parents.

Add a group of fun-loving shoemakers to the script and the end result is anything but ordinary.

Paul Jellinek is Simon Eyre, the "mad shoemaker of Tower St." Other shoemakers are Phil Brown as Hodge and Craig Bovia as Firk. Other key roles include Sue Noble as Jane, Forrest Bowman as Master Hammon and John Moriarty as Ralph.

Deans, Draft Official Explain Class Standings

Draft Tests Discussed

The draft test and the Selective Service System were discussed by Col. Wm. Burke, area Selective Service Head, and the Deans on Mon., April 18, at 7:30 p.m. in the Ira Allen Chapel.

First to be discussed were the purposes and organization of the Selective Service System and the college qualification tests. Col. Burke defined the purpose of the Selective Service System as "the utilization of the manpower resources of the nation in the best interests of the health and safety of the nation."

A student may appeal a classification to the State Appeals Board. The Colonel spoke specifically in the area of student classifications. A student may be deferred if the local board feels that he is more vital to the community as a student than he would be in the armed forces.

Criteria for deferral: 1) the tests given on May 14, May 21, and June 1 - passing grade for undergraduates is 70, for graduate students - 80; 2) class standing.

To qualify by class standing, a student at the end of his first academic year should be in the upper one-third of his class; second year, in the upper two-thirds; third and fourth years, in the upper three-fourths. In order to go on to graduate school, he should be in the top one-quarter.

The board still does not have to defer a qualifying student. Col. Burke felt, however, that so long as the manpower needs don't increase greatly, students will probably be deferred.

The board based decisions on whatever it chooses, including one's "behavior as a U.S. citizen."

If the student does not take the tests, the board will not hold it against him. The choice is completely up to each individual.

The most important thing which each student should do is to make sure that his local board has any information which he feels will enable them to make a fair decision in regard to his classification.

AIFC-IFC Hear Dean Patzer

Last Tuesday the Alumni Interfraternity Council and the Interfraternity Council held their annual banquet at the Cupola. Dean Patzer was the speaker. The banquet brought together the alumni and undergraduate fraternity men in order to promote good working relations between groups.

At the banquet gifts and awards were given for recognition of service in the past year. Ross Fuller, last year's IFC President, received an engraved gavel and a pewter mug in recognition of the fine job he did. Dick Bingham, last year's Council representative from Sigma Phi Epsilon, received the award for the member of the Council who contributed the most to the IFC in the past year. Dean Patzer and Dean Eycke received gifts for the help and guidance they have given to the IFC. Their help has been essential to the improvements in the fraternity system on the UVM campus.

Senior Week Schedule Planned

As this school year draws to a close, the climax approaches for the class of 1966.

After the initial Senior Day, which will be on April 21 this year, the seniors look forward to May, for May 19 marks the launching of this year's graduation activities.

The announced schedule is as follows:

May 19--a picnic and senior talent contest and dance to be held in a barn near Burlington.

May 20--the annual banquet and ball at the Towne and Country Inn, Stowe.

May 22--commissioning of ROTC cadets in the morning graduation in the afternoon.

The picnic is not "just a picnic". This picnic begins at 4:00 p.m. and lasts far into the evening. It is a final informal get-together of the class as a whole a chance to relax and relieve some of the tensions built up by the heavy study load of spring.

Class Day this year will include presentation of the class gift followed by short speeches. The Class Walk winds up the day with a walk across the green, interrupted by short speeches by selected faculty members.

On graduation day the ROTC cadets will receive commission as officers in the U. S. Army. This year the class will receive the commencement address from UVM's newly inaugurated President Shannon McCune.

The class of '66 is reminded that each student will receive only four tickets.

Dr. Gregg Speaks To IFC-Panhell

On April 14 the Interfraternity Council-Panhell banquet was held at the Hi Hat Restaurant. Dr. Gregg was the guest speaker. He congratulated the group for the work they had done and pointed out a few of the major goals for which they should strive. He also praised the past officers of Panhell and IFC for the fine jobs that they had done.

Kappa Alpha Theta was awarded the cup for the outstanding sorority on the UVM campus for the past year. Fred Brown, President of the Interfraternity Council, closed the banquet by thanking the participants and honored guests.

UVM Janitor Is Critically Injured

A longtime University of Vermont employee was critically injured early Monday when he was hit by a car on upper Main Street.

John C. McGrath, 60, of 149 Cherry St. was admitted to Mary Fletcher Hospital at 6:30 a.m., minutes after he was struck by a 1962 sedan operated by UVM junior Richard Buchheim, 20, of Marsh Hall and Malvern, N.Y., police said.

The unconscious pedestrian was taken by Fire Department rescue wagon to the Mary Fletcher Hospital, where he underwent surgery for nearly five hours. A spokesman said, McGrath suffered a possible fractured skull, severe head bruises, compound fractures of both lower legs and deep cuts.

Police said McGrath, a janitor in the home economics building, had just gotten out of a bus and was crossing Main Street near University Terrace when he was hit at 6:22 a.m.

Capt. Kenneth Pecor said McGrath was carried on the front of the Buchheim vehicle a considerable distance before he fell off.

Why did Armco Steel hire Joe Harrison?

B. C. Huselton

Director of Personnel, Armco Steel:

"We find that the man with active duty experience as an officer has a long lead over the field. Given scope to develop his talent for leadership, he gains maturity, forms the habit of sound judgment and reasoned decision. He is at ease with responsibility. In short, he's pretty sure to be the kind of man we want."

Four years after graduation from college, he's doing a bigger job, and earning a better salary than most men in his class. What made the difference? Experience. Joe Harrison planned for his success, made his college years count double. By taking Army ROTC, he got the training that won him an officer's commission along with his degree. His military service wasn't just a two-year gap in his career. As an officer, he was a leader of men. He had two years of hard experience in organizing, motivating, directing men. He already knows the feel of responsibility, and he likes it.

Companies like Armco know, from experience, that men who have served as Army officers are sound bets. Because they have moved ahead of their peer group, their chances for success are greater than those of ordinary new men.

Think it over. If you've got the chance, and if you measure up, Army ROTC should be in your program.

You owe it to your future. Take ARMY ROTC

Brigade Prepares For Annual Review

The Cadet Brigade Staff and Band pass the reviewing stand.

GRAND FINALE

In just one short week the ROTC Cadet Brigade will put the icing on the 1966 cake at 4:30 PM on Friday, April 29, at Centennial Field at the 98th Annual Military Review. The Cadets have spent the entire Spring semester preparing for the Review. It is open to the public and has always received enthusiastic support. Members of the University Community are urged to attend. The opportunity to view military pageantry comes infrequently to Vermont. During the cadet Brigade will be inspected by the Honorable Philip H. Hoff, Governor of the State of Vermont, President Shannon McCune, Colonel Leonard G. Robinson, and First Army Inspector General's Team which will be on campus to inspect the ROTC Detachment.

LAST UVM REVIEW FOR COL. ROBINSON

The 98th Military Review will be the last military parade that UVM's Professor of Military Science will attend while on active duty. Colonel Robinson, who has been the PMS for the last three years, will retire as of June 30 of this year and has accepted the position of Superintendent of Peekskill Military Academy, Peekskill, N. Y. The Military Review will be the Cadet Brigade's way of honoring Colonel Robinson for his distinguished military service, a long standing Army tradition. Because of the importance of the occasion, the 18th Army Band from Fort Devins, Massachusetts will travel to the campus to provide music for the Review.

The 1966 Military Ball Queen and her court will also participate in the Review. The Co-eds, who hold Honorary command positions, will present the colors to the Honor Company which is chosen on a basis of superior performance during weekly drill periods throughout the second semester. Each of the Honorary Commanders will receive a bouquet of roses and a miniature silver saber from their cadet counterparts.

Other awards will be presented to outstanding cadets by Community and University leaders and visiting personnel. These will include both national and local awards provided by governmental, military, patriotic and fraternal organizations.

Governor Hoff and Colonel Robinson await the start of the ceremonies.

"Sloppy Slalom" Is Featured At Lodge

Catamount snarls from above mantle at Outing Club Lodge.

The Outing Club took advantage of excellent Spring skiing this weekend to hold their Sloppy Slalom at Madonna Mountain in Jeffersonville. Red faces and shorts testified to the beautiful weather. The slalom was indeed "sloppy." Most of the contestants snowplowed or fell down through the course. Bob Schumacher and Judy Burgess were the most agile at jumping up after spills and so carried home the trophies for the Outing Club. The gate keepers spent more time throwing snowballs than checking to see that the racers made all the gates.

Charter members and invited guests numbered about 75 at the buffet on Sunday evening. Vice-President Rowell spoke on the history of the lodge and commended members of the Outing Club for their determined and enthusiastic efforts.

Roger Ketcham then presented a history of the efforts and progress made by interested Outing Club members. Ketcham and Mr. George Saunders, advisor to the Outing Club, were presented with gold invitations as reminders of the occasion.

The Lodge will be open this weekend to everyone. Reservations will be taken at the Lodge

EDITORIAL...

In the course of last Friday night's "Conversation Among Friends" President McCune remarked that he felt the University of Vermont would benefit from some sort of demonstration or protest, provided it was in the name of a legitimate cause. We agreed.

Last Wednesday a group of UVM students staged an on-campus demonstration of sorts in protest of the United States' action in Viet Nam. We were terrified. Yes, we were terrified, not by the protest, but by the student reaction to it. The demonstrators were expressing a political and moral conviction, which was their right. As with any demonstration, there were dissenters among the onlookers, which was both healthy and to be expected. But it is out of the manner in which this dissention took form that our disgust arises. Many in the crowd heckled the speakers who represented the demonstrators, hurling a masterfully devastating blend of obscenity and raw eggs. While other spectators tried patiently to listen to what was being said, the hecklers brought in to sharp and bitter focus what is wrong with this campus.

What is wrong? We will tell you. These people (students by virtue of the fact that they pay tuition), who throw eggs and scream democracy in the same breath, represent a hideous breed of intellectual vermin, a cultural sub-species of the sort that infests and pollutes the UVM environment. They come to demonstrations such as this with nothing in evidence but their vocal chords and their ignorance. They scream democracy without understanding it; to them democracy is merely a vehicle for the suppression of those who dare to disagree. Their mode of expression smacks of a brand of bigotry which threatens to rock genuine democracy to its soul.

Are these people representative of the general intellectual tenor of this campus? When this thought first occurred to us we were frightened. Now we see hope for a negative answer to our own question.

To the hecklers, perhaps there is one of you who can read this and relay our sentiments to the rest. Briefly, they are: learn to channel your energies in a more constructive direction, or get off of our campus. There is no room for you here.

Klonsky Rebutted

Misunderstands Philosophy

To the Editors:

We are glad to see that Mr. Klonsky agrees with us on at least one point — "Sing Out '66" was "musically brilliant". We are also glad that this is the only point on which we agree. To our mind Mr. Klonsky implied Philosophy is "... personally repugnant and positively dangerous..."

The real point here however is that we believe Mr. Klonsky is a little mixed up as to the philosophy preached by Sing Out. I refer him to the song, "up with People" which starts like this: "Inside everybody there's some bad and there's some good... No one is trying to cover up the evil that is innately part of himself with... super-patriotic unthinking rubbish." Rather they are saying let's try to control the evil within us and work with the good that is in us to improve ourselves and the world.

MAY SOUND IDEALISTIC BUT...

We must admit that at first this all sounds idealistic, optimistic, and unrealistic. We even had our doubts. It seems to be working however. Japanese students, who two weeks previous to the performance had booed Senator Robert Kennedy off their stage and who had come to the performance with protest signs, responded with, "If this is America, then we're all for it." Were they emotionally overwhelmed by the exuberance and the music? Maybe they were, but let us remind you that they started their own Sing Out which has played from Tokyo to Hong Kong and it is still going. If Mr. Klonsky still has doubts then we ask why has Chancellor Ludwig Erhardt and the West German Cabinet extended an invitation to Sing Out for an all expenses paid month long tour of Germany? Is the show that "Musically brilliant"? Why are there over thirty Sing-Outs in the United States and even more springing up throughout the world? We contend that there are many, many people who join with us in disagreeing with Mr. Klonsky. We are thankful because the Sing Out group expressed something that clearly hits home. We feel that their philosophy is constructive enough to put a damper on those people who find it easier to stand still wallowing in their own negativism and criticism.

Sincerely,
Helen H. Keith, '66

Sing Out
A "Fine Idea"

To the Editors:

I am addressing my comments at Kenneth Klonsky and anyone else who agrees with his article "A Moral Rearmament". I realize that everyone is entitled to their own views and I respect his right to express his; however, I think that he is wrong and that something should be said in reply to his article. I attended

"Sing Out '66" and I think it is one of the few really fine things I have seen on this campus or anywhere else.

IT IS A FINE IDEA

I do not think the "terror of our condition" is that we are all innately evil, whether a person desires to make love, smoke, drink and curse is his business and nobody else's. The real terror is that not enough people give a damn about anybody but themselves. How can you call what they are doing, "super patriotic rubbish"? I think it is a fine idea; something that for once is constructive and not destructive or apathetic. When I graduate, I have a three year tour of duty in the Marine Corps. I am sure that within that time I will go to Viet Nam, I don't want to go over there any more than the next guy; there is a chance that I won't come back. I will go though, and with a good reason. I will fight not for draft card burners, Vietnicks, and draft dodgers, but for my parents, my brothers, my friends, and people like them. I ask you, Kenneth Klonsky, do you care enough about your parents and friends to die for them or do you just care about yourself? It is because you are a man that you must fight, not for a man who killed 6,000,000 innocent people, but against him and others like him. It is not time to worry about recognition of your inner self, but time to start caring about others.

EVERYONE HAS A RIGHT TO EXPRESS HIS OPINION

I repeat that everyone has his right to express his feelings; that is the "great American way". If you really believe what you wrote, I think you are in for a big disappointment in life. I also hope that the "bearded youths" of America stay in their coffee houses and keep their great knowledge to their great but unimpressive selves.

A Glorious Experience

To the Editors:

The performance of the "Sing our '66" ensemble last week at the Patrick Gym was to me a glorious experience. It left the vast majority of it's audience with a refreshing and spine-tingling realization that there really are food, happy, people in this world and, most important, in this country—

There was, however, in our midst a minority, a very, very small minority. He was in fact the Drama Critic of our University Newspaper. (He struck me as being a Hedda Hopper covering the Clay-Chuvalo fight). He did however add a bit of color to the event, in fact his "cross-examination" of various members of the cast after the performance, proved to be quite humorous. (But please don't feel flattered, Mr. Drama Critic, we weren't laughing with you). He made many ridiculous statements such as "man is basically evil." He was too weak to recognize all the good that surround him. (Either that or he felt more at home talking about evil).

His critique in the last edition of the Cynic added the crowning touch to this character's crusade for evil. He tells of asking questions "tongue-in-cheek" but fails to mention his reactions to the answers. (He blushed constantly). In his final sentence he lowers the boom and calls the "American Dream" a "black labyrinth of disillusion". Mr. Drama Critic, don't you realize that it's this "American Dream" that allows you to live your own life as you wish, to choose your own leaders, your own God. In fact it was this "Dream" that prevented that "German" from coming over here and murdering 6,000,000 more innocent people. Don't throw this "Dream" away, Mr. Critic! You need it more than anybody.

Counselors Selected For Personal Qualities
Not Wealth

Editor's note: This letter is written in reply to the letter which appeared in last week's CYNIC, entitled "Why?"

Dear Interested Freshman:

This is to inform you that there is little unrest amongst the counselors' screening committee concerning the appointment of any of our floor counselors. Deserving candidates were passed over the more competent persons. The counseling program is not a general financial aid program. We chose those candidates that possessed most, those qualities we felt necessary for a successful floor counselor to have. Personal integrity is by far the most important of those qualities you mentioned. High grades cannot be equated with good candidates. Grades are of course important but heavily outweighed by other factors.

The screening committee was under no pressure to hire candidates of considerable wealth, and low college grades. This committee and I am sure that anyone on the committee would be glad to discuss the selection process with all interested students.

Library Announces

To the Editors:

Recently the situation with respect to the opening of Bailey Library on Sunday was reviewed with the University Council and recommendations made to the Library on this.

For the present year the all-night room will be open at ten o'clock on Sunday morning for students who wish a place to study.

Due to the present limitations of staff and inability to fill some vacancies on the staff because of the lack of qualified personnel in the country, it is not possible to extend the hours of the Library at present. However, it is an item that is being considered and will be worked on in the future.

The Editors... Demonstration- Success? A Poor Mode Of Expression

To the Editors:

THE SITTERS VS. THE SHOUTERS: A DEMONSTRATION OF NON-COMMUNICATION

I saw a demonstration Wednesday. It was both a failure and success. If its purpose was to prove that the United States should "pull-out" of Vietnam or even to persuade us that this is the only direction to Peace—it failed. If, however, its purpose was to demonstrate that Americans have no single sense of Patriotism—it succeeded.

MAIN ELEMENTS WAS NON-COMMUNICATION

The main element of both its failure and success was the same: non-communication. It must have been obvious to all who were there, that the "sitters-in" had very little chance of expressing their opinions other than by simply sitting and holding placards which really said nothing of any consequence other than the fact that G. Hamilton, in all probability, is a lousy citizen. The few Sitters who seemed concerned enough, thought it more appropriate to stand and soon learned that sitting was indeed the more feasible method of expression.

3% HAD GOOD QUESTIONS

But the Shouters demanded more. About 3% of them raised some very good questions (between their snickers, of course) and wished to hell that a Sitter might take the initiative, stand and logically proceed to answer it. That left 97% of the Shouters shouting, bitching and egging, and no Sitter—standing and answering . . . to any degree of effectiveness.

WHAT IS PATRIOTISM?

The most vocal of the Shouters, and at times the most sincere, kept insisting that the Sitters were: a) not really Americans at all and b) giving our country a bad image abroad, all of which leads to my point about Patriotism. We might all ask ourselves if our attitude should be "my country right or wrong." If it is we had no justification to assume that Eichmann, one of many, was indeed morally wrong for following his government's demands on him. If we don't agree, then what should our attitude be?

RIGHT TO DISSENT IS NOT "UN-AMERICAN"

I don't agree, however, that a man who utilizes his by Law guaranteed right of either dissent or expression of dissent is un-American or "spreading a bad image." Isn't this "right" part of the image we wish to spread? If not, then we ought to take that "right" away! Since so many Shouters insisted upon points a. and b., and since none of the Sitters agreed with them . . . a difference of opinion on just exactly what comprises Patriotism . . . is obviously present . . . even on this sheltered campus. Is this healthy? More nations have been destroyed from within than from without. We'd better begin to communicate with each other . . . while it's still a right!

THE DILEMMA

The dilemma is best exemplified by the fact that both the Shouters and the Sitters sang: "My country tis of thee, sweet land of Liberty — of thee we sing . . ." as they walked away.

Hecklers Criticized

To the Editors:

On Wednesday, April 20, an anti-Vietnam demonstration was held at the fountain in front of Waterman beginning at 10:30. There were admittedly far more hecklers than demonstrators. The demonstrators were UVM students, Goddard College students, and UVM professors. The hecklers were lead by a strange militant group on campus called the red-jackets. If this demonstration accomplished nothing else it did manage to show that a majority of students at UVM are not the least bit interested in democracy or the democratic process.

By eleven o'clock there had been two speakers. Professor Berger and Reverend Perry. Their speeches were totally drowned out by the red-jackets and totally ignored by most of the crowd. Some of the comments in the group of hecklers are recorded here for posterity sake. "What the hell are they just sittin' there for?" or "Shut the hell up." Fortunately the school does contain some sensible people who were willing to stand and listen and criticize from a rational point of view. One student leader felt that the "proposals are good but there is no plan to carry them out, for instance the guarantee against future military intervention." However, opposition viewpoints were expressed more by eggs and mob yelling than sensible debate.

In a democratic country, all viewpoints are entitled to expression. Reverend Perry called it the "right to dissent." Drowning out the opposition, however small, is the first step to dictatorial fascism. Why don't the red-jackets give a counter demonstration next week expressing their viewpoints? They might be of interest to much of the confused student body who rely on mass media for their opinions instead of their own hearts. If the red-jackets have something to say about our stand in Vietnam, it merits and deserves expression. They hinder their own cause by asinine displays of barbarism which are supposed to be reserved for the athletic field.

Sincerely,
K. Klonsky

The "In" Crowd

To the Editors:

Upon the demonstration held here Wednesday:

Among those who seemed to be leading the demonstration, I noticed three young men who I distinctly remember as leading the "Support Johnson in Vietnam" march last semester. Now they are wearing "Ban the Bomb" buttons and carrying Anti-Administration posters. In these three people, we have the professional demonstrators, those who demonstrate for or against whatever is in fashion. Right now, it is the fashion to demonstrate against Johnson's stand in Vietnam.

It is these sort of people, the professional demonstrators, that I despise as hypocrites. I suppose they have their function. As the sign carried by one long-haired, sanded, UVM co-ed said: "It is not unpatriotic to criticize." Criticism is O.K., and it is good for the country. But please, let us have it from people who really believe in what they say, not from those who believe what is currently the "in" theory.

As for the poor dog that was tied up in the fountain, I'm surprised that the ASPCA wasn't called in.

Sincerely,
Bruce Hutchinson, '69

Why No Turnout?

To the Editors:

Last Saturday morning I went to Dr. McCune's Inauguration at the Patrick Gym. To be blunt, it was the worst display of the lack of student spirit I have ever seen here at UVM. Only about 150 students cared enough to attend the ceremony which is about 4.2% of the student body.

The lack of students at the Inauguration will have repercussions if they haven't already occurred. First of all UVM's image in the eyes of 140 colleges and universities across the country who were represented has suffered a serious blow. That is self-explanatory. The other repercussion is that it ridiculed the attempt to foster close student-Administration relations. Dr. McCune has come to Billings Center every Wednesday afternoon to talk to students in an attempt to have a more smoothly run university. What does he receive in return? Almost nothing.

The University of Vermont exists for us so let's do our part.

Sincerely,
Peter A. Novak, '68

Blood For Our Boys

To the Editors:

I was unfortunate enough to miss Kake Walk this year but pleased to have received the Kake Walk CYNIC.

My purposes for writing are to compliment you on a fine publication and to tell you a story.

THE BEST OF BEST

By James J. Best

Some Thoughts on the President's Inauguration

While this was my first Presidential Inauguration (academic or otherwise) I was impressed with several aspects of the day's activities. To see so many of my colleagues and so few students was indeed awe-inspiring. The welcoming speeches were given by men who looked a trifle uncomfortable giving speeches. The President's Inaugural Address was a pleasant, non-offensive affair, with something in it for everyone, — a king of university "Great Society" speech, Recognizing the university's three basic functions — teaching, scholarship, and service to the community — he pledged expansion of all three. Perhaps the most innovative idea in the address was his proposal to create Dewey Scholars, Marsh Fellows, and Torrey Teachers (say that fast three times). Along with these innovations I might recommend the following:

1. Make social drinking an undergraduate major. A Harvard professor has recommended that children be taught to drink at an early age. Perhaps we could expand the idea and institutionalize it at the college level. The purpose of the course would be to teach the joys and techniques of social drinking. Drunkenness would result in automatic failure and a student would be allowed to take the final exam without having taken the course.
2. Establish a senior seminar in each department to allow senior majors to integrate four years of knowledge within a given subject area. Unfortunately, we give our survey courses as introductions rather than as conclusions and it is the professor rather than the student who integrates the material.
3. Establish faculty and student lounges at key points on campus. While the faculty dining room and lounge in Waterman is small and intimate the hours are limited. For coffee some faculty have to fight students for available seats in the Den.

My congratulations to President and Mrs. McCune and best wishes for a long and happy career at UVM.

Perception

A LETTER TO THE STUDENT BODY OF UVM

Carnalities,

No matter how you slice it, God is alive . . . Man, if not already dead, is well along Cemetery Road. Just as my spaghetti dinner last night was composed of two elements: noodles and sauce, so is a man composed of Human and Animal; each in proportion to his own choosing of course. And just as spaghetti cannot be if one component is without the other, so is it with a man. The answer to your question, then is quite simple: Man is extinct because one of his elements has decidedly been done away with . . . and we all know which one it is.

What happened to our human element? Know what I think? I think that Man got tired of being Man so he up and did away with himself. That's all! It was just, too damn hard to live-up to his "being" so he changed it, the easiest way possible. All he had to do, was Stop-doing . . . a few of those "little" things; like opening a door for a girl or letting the motorist make a left-hand turn and even like rescuing a man being attack by his counter-part. The few who were (and some still may be) silly enough as to try and preserve their humanness, soon fell victim to the Law of Diminishing Returns.

How does God relate to all this? Through a definition of the term: humanism. I know we have courses in ethics to do the task, but let's just see what Webster says. Ah yes: "any system or way of thought or action concerned with the interests and ideals of people." In other words, my own of course, to be human is to care about folks. Do we care? I don't mean just another Johnson barbeque, either. If you do, you're a "specimen."

One assumption, I believe, a valid one, must be made at this point: in order to know God, any God, we must first love him, Her or It! And Care . . . is the seed of Love.

Since, therefore, we no longer care, how can we love God? How then can we know of Him? Since we cannot, and since He used to be known (when Man was around), we proclaimed: God is dead!

But is He? Isn't it rather, as I suggest, that we have simply lost our ability to know him? Rather to attempt to make what cannot be known . . . more "meaningful" to us, let's concern ourselves with fulfilling our destination of being Man . . . in the process, the meaningfulness of the Being of God will be apparent.

To become a fulfilled Mankind, is to encompass every bit of Love, and in every religion on Earth, God is the epitome of that Love . . . only the demonstration of it varies. He . . . is not dead, friend . . . only our willingness to Love.

Yours in transient,
Jan Quackenbush

I am on the Class of '63, not very far removed from any students now in attendance at UVM. After my college days terminated I went into the Army Reserve program. After my release from active duty I got a job and settled down, almost. In my class there was a fellow by the name of Don Noble, Sigma Nu, I myself

TEI, Don and I were good campus acquaintances.

Last December I read that Don, a Lieutenant with the First Infantry Division, was wounded during the battle of the Michelin Plantation; he lost twenty-two of his men in an ambush. The impact of realizing for the first time what was happening in Vietnam was tremendous. All of a sudden the war seemed real. The familiar name of Lt. Donald Noble transformed the celluloid silhouettes we see in the movies, to bleeding flesh. I sent Don a Christmas card and wished him God's speed.

Because I was in the Special Reserve Forces I pictured the soldiers in Viet Nam with familiar faces and then projected myself into their situation; it was an orgy of fear. I felt the need to do something for the men like Don in the way of moral support.

In January I began an informal movement by the name "Veins For Viet." It is a blood drive. Working with the Department of Defence and the American National Red Cross I ask for blood donations, to support our troops in Vietnam. This is strictly non-political ... It makes no difference whether or not anybody supports our policies in Vietnam. The fact remains that fellows like Don and myself, you and your classmates, could very easily bleed our lives away in a jungle swamp.

I received a letter from Don yesterday; he was wounded again. This time he was taken off the front lines for good. He will be back in the States, with luck, in September. I will see him then.

I wonder; how many classmates of mine have died in Vietnam? How many of yours will die?

I donate blood in support of our soldiers. If you, or anyone else who reads the CYNIC that this letter is published in, wants to donate blood, in support ... Give to the American National Red Cross and designate the blood for ... "VEINS FOR VIET."

Sincerely yours,

Arnold I. Wexler, '63

Lane Series Praised

To the Editors:

When the curtains descended Tuesday night at Memorial Auditorium at the end of 'Barefoot In The Park', it marked the closing of the 1965-66 Lane Series season. As the previewer for Lane Series, I can truly say that the Lane Series has been successful in providing both enjoyment and cultural enrichment to the UVM student body and Burlington residents. As we look back, we can remember the standing ovation for the virtuoso violinist David Oistrakh, the outstanding performances of Al Hirt and Pete Seeger, the beautiful spectacle of The Royal Marine Tatro and The Rumanian Folk Ballet along with the many other excellent performances.

COMMITTEE LAUDED

Those who worked behind the scenes all year and who made it possible for us to take advantage of the program must receive the credit they deserve. Through the efforts of Mr. Jack Trevithick, executive secretary of Lane Series and the Lane Working Committee, headed by Richard Pearson, the University has been provided with one of the finest cultural programs possible.

Sincerely
Judy Beeber

Ambassador Program $154 Short Of Goal

To the Editors:

Earlier this semester, it was suggested to the four sets of class officers that they initiate a program beginning this summer which would enable at least one UVM student each summer to enrich his cultural and educational understanding of foreign peoples and lands by travel abroad.

The class officers realized it would be a difficult task to raise the required funds in such a limited time, but with Dr. Perrine's guidance, we enthusiastically accepted the challenge for the University Community.

To send a student to India this summer, it will cost $975. To date we have received:

- $250. - India
- 250. - Experiment in International Living
- 267 - UVM's Tag Day
- 52 - Late Curfews

$819

In short, we need another $154 to meet our first year goal.

All individuals and organizations who are interested in assisting the P.C.I.L. in reaching its goal and thus enabling a UVM student to live and travel in India this summer, are encouraged to contribute dollars to the P.C.I.L. funds.

Contributions may be either mailed or delivered in person to Dr. M.W. Perrine's office, 223 Waterman Building.

In conclusion I feel that I should point out that in the future, the P.C.I.L. will be able to direct its energies toward fund raising, rather than organization, and it will have two semesters, rather than one, to raise the necessary funds.

For the P.C.I.L. and Dr. Perrine, I graciously thank all those people who have already contributed and those who will also contribute in the future.

Sincerely,

Arthur M. Brink
P.C.I.L. Chairman

Panhel Plans New Rush Policy

UVM sororities, in recent years, have not attracted as many women students as they previously did. From responses to a questionnaire passed out to freshmen who rushed, it was hoped to find out how, if at all, rushing could be improved. Only thirty three were returned, but they followed a definite pattern in their answers.

A large majority, according to the compiled results, had attended the mass meeting at Southwick and had been encouraged by it to continue rushing. They also sound the informal rushing in Nov. was beneficial, but suggested these parties ought to be fifteen minutes longer. Many, however, felt that they still did not know enough about the houses to eliminate three houses in their Jan. choice. Those who went through formal rushing in Jan. displayed little dissatisfaction with the present program.

Many who dropped out felt they hadn't the time to give to both sorority and academic pursuits. Others were not able to continue because of financial problems. Of those who had listed undecided, most were unsure either whether they wanted to pledge any sorority or whether they had enough time for sorority.

These facts and opinions are to be used by Panhellenic Council in evaluating the past year's rushing and in planning next year's. On the whole, the large majority who responded were quite satisfied with the present rushing system, and only minimal changes were suggested.

Vermont was the first state admitted to the Union after its formation by the original fourteen. She gained the status of statehood in 1791.

Students And Faculty Comment On Evaluation

Many Do Approve Concept; Some Doubts Expressed

By John Bickford

and Marion Robinson

Concerned about the professor evaluation inertia, CYNIC reporters questioned several students and faculty members, during the past week.

For the most part, students and faculty expressed favorable opinions in regard to an evaluation. The results of this query appear below.

Anonymous: I think something should be done because I have sat through some courses and obtained nothing and not because the professor was poor, but because his notes had not been revised for the past 20 years.

Anonymous: I don't think it will have any effect on the poor professors, where it is most needed but the already good and the conscientious ones will take the unneeded criticism to heart.

Anonymous: I don't believe that the students can evaluate professors in the manner it should be done. I would suggest that someone from the College Boards, New York system or Canada system of testing be allowed to monitor classes and evaluate the professor and his content. I feel that the students here think that no one will really listen to their suggestions, which is the basic problem in getting the evaluation going. I do not believe that it should directly affect tenure, but it should have an indirect effect.

WOULD IT BE TAKEN SERIOUSLY?

Sue Rasser: I think it should work, but there are students and professors who would not take it seriously enough to get the most out of it.

Nancy Nicholson: I don't think that a student-teacher relationship is such that the evaluation would materially damage the general situation.

Dan Heath: I think it will be helpful for the instructor because the greatest problem is the barrier of understanding between the student and the professor. When an instructor thinks he is getting the point across, he may well not be. If he hears students' opinions through channels avoiding the embarrassment of personal contact, it will be helpful for the instructor.

EVALUATION - YES!

Dave McGovern: I think it is a good idea because professors should be subject to some evaluation from the people who know them the best. Students are in the best possible position to tell whether a professor is communicating his ideas.

Pete Tomasi: I think it is a good idea because if they can evaluate us, we should be able to evaluate them.

BETTER TO TEACH THAN PUBLISH

Cindy Quimby: It is good because it is a better standard for judging a professor's qualifications than his publications.

IT IS NEEDED IN THIS SCHOOL

Larry Goodman: It is needed in this school where the student-professor relationship is almost static, and it will only be good if the constructive criticism is heeded. It would improve both class and personal relationship.

STUDENTS ARE NOT QUALIFIED

Betsy Cronk: I am not for it because I don't feel that I've had enough education courses to judge my instructors. Also, I don't think that UVM students can get "fired up" enough to make it work.

Betty Lacillade: I think it is a good idea as long as the evaluations are not used as a means for a student to get back at a professor.

Virginia Metayer: I think it is a good idea, but I do not think you can get a satisfactory cross section of the student opinion.

Elbert Nyquist, Economics: Although the evaluation itself is a good idea, the problem is one of structure. I don't believe it could succeed, for the average student is ignorant of the qualities found in a competent professor. Also, evaluation among members could not succeed because there are conflicting personalities and methods of teaching.

EFFECTIVENESS DEPENDS ON USE

James Best, Political Science: My reaction is ambiguous, since I'm not sure which form it will take. The results should be used only by the professor. But if tenure, promotion, and they were based on these results, my opinion would differ. This would put doubt upon the ability of a professor. A good educator would consider student opinion seriously, while the ones at which the system is aimed would disregard them as unqualified.

IS IT WORTH THE TROUBLE Norman Slamecka, Psychology: If the students are really interested, the system could be effective. I'm for anything that students want to do; however, the multitudinous paperwork might be a considerable waste of time for someone. Is it worth it? Basically, the evaluation of students would be inaccurate because the student lacks a knowledge of the professor's field. Also, the student does not realize that the evaluation of professor must include his contributions in his field, I feel that students as well as faculty can benefit from the results.

Mr. X: I don't have the time to comment on it.

ROOMMATES REVISITED

This morning's mail brought a letter from a student at a prominent Western university (Princeton). "Dear Sir," he writes. "In a recent column you said it was possible to get along with your roommate if you try hard enough. Well, I'd like to see anyone get along with my roommate! Mervis Trunz (for that is his name) practices the ocarina all night long, keeps an alligator, wears knee-cymbals, and collects airplane tires. I have tried everything I can with Mervis Trunz, but nothing works. I am desperate. (signed) Desperate."

Have you, dear Desperate, really tried everything? Have you, for example, tried a measure so simple, so obvious, that it is easy to overlook? I mean, of course, have you offered to share your Personna® Super-Stainless Steel Blades with Mervis Trunz?

To have a friend, dear Desperate, you must be a friend. And what could be more friendly than sharing the bounty of Personna Super Stainless Steel Blades? Who, upon enjoying the luxury of Personna, the nickless, scrapeless, tugless, hackless, scratchless, matchless comfort of Personna, the ease and breeze, the power and glory, the truth and beauty of Personna—who, I say, after such jollies could harden his heart against his neighbor? Nobody, that's who—not even Mervis Trunz—especially not today with the new Personna Super Blade bringing us new highs in speed, comfort, and durability. And here is still a further bonus: Personna is available both in Double Edge style and Injector style.

No, dear Desperate, your problem with Mervis Trunz is far from insoluble. In fact, as roommate problems go, it is pretty small potatoes. Compare it, for example, to the classic case of Basil Metabolism and E. Pluribus Ewbank.

Basil and E. Pluribus, roommates at a prominent Eastern university (Oregon) were at an impassable impasse. Basil could study only late at night, and E. Pluribus could not stay awake past nine p.m. If Basil kept the lights on, the room was too bright for E. Pluribus to sleep. If E. Pluribus turned the lights off, the room was too dark for Basil to study. What to do?

Well sir, these two intelligent American kids found an answer. They got a miner's cap for Basil! Thus, he had enough light to study by, and still the room was dark enough for E. Pluribus to sleep.

It must be admitted, however, that this ingenious solution had some unexpected sequelae. Basil got so enchanted with his miner's cap that he switched his major from 18th Century poetry to mining and metallurgy. Shortly after graduation he had what appeared to be a great stroke of luck: while out prospecting, he discovered what is without question the world's largest feldspar mine. This might have made Basil very rich except that nobody, alas, has yet discovered a use for feldspar. Today Basil, a broken man, squeezes out a meagre living as a stalagmite in Ausable Chasm.

Nor has E. Pluribus fared conspicuously better. Once Basil got the miner's cap, E. Pluribus was able to catch up on his long-lost sleep. He woke after nine days, refreshed and vigorous—more vigorous, alas, than he realized. It was the afternoon of the Dean's tea. E. Pluribus stood in line with his classmates, waiting to shake the Dean's hand. At last his turn came, and E. Pluribus, full of strength and health, gave the Dean a firm handshake—so firm, indeed, that all five of the Dean's knuckles were permanently fused.

The Dean sued for a million dollars and, of course, won. Today E. Pluribus, a broken man, is paying off his debt by walking the Dean's cat every afternoon for ten cents an hour.

Debaters Win At U Of Nevada

By Robin Frost

Seven debaters flew to Reno, Nevada, to compete in the national Delta Sigma Rho-Tau Kappa Alpha tournament hosted by the University of Nevada April 11-13.

Seniors Norman Snow and David Webster, both of Burlington, alternately defended both sides of the question, "That law enforcement agencies in the United States should be given greater freedom in the investigation and prosecution of crime." In preliminary competition, they defeated the universities of Wyoming, Idaho, and Nevada, losing to Alabama, Brigham Young, and Southern California. Advancing to the octo-finals, they lost a split decision of three judges to Denver University.

The UVM four man unit won a fourth place trophy with an 11-5 win-loss record. The affirmative team of senior Mike Schoenfeld (NYC) and sophomore Nick Danigelis (Burlington) won six and lost two. They won over Utah State, Pacific, Utah, Nevada, Southwest Missouri, and Kentucky and lost to Texas Tech and Grinnell. Danigelis was awarded a certificate for fourth place affirmative speaker.

Debating the negative of the proposition, sophomore Robin Frost (Haydenville, Mass.) and senior Dave Waite (Springfield) won five debates, lost three. The team defeated Nevada, Stanford, Whittier, Pacific, and Montana, and dropped decisions to Oregon, Southern California, and South Carolina.

Senior Bob Brooks (Trumbull, Conn.) participated in the Congressional Session. As a member of the "Conservative" party, he was elected by his colleagues to the position of Committee Chairman.

Brooks also participated in extemporaneous speaking. Miss Frost and Waite competed in persuasive speaking. In addition, Miss Frost, Brooks, Schoenfeld, and Danigelis were initiated into DSR-TKS, the national forensic honorary.

Accompanying the debaters as coach on the trip was Dr. Robert Huber.

PERSHING RIFLES HOLD ELECTIONS

For the second year in succession, a Burlington student has been elected to lead the Pershing Rifles, UVM's Company L-12 will be commanded by Norman J. Boyden through the next academic year. Boyden, recently initiated into the Ethan Allen Rifles, is also a member of Theta Chi Fraternity.

Assisting Boyden as Executive from Gales Ferry, Connecticut. He is a brother in Phi Mu Delta. The Finance and Supply Officer will be James B. Mitchell from Greensburg, Pennsylvania. He is pledging Sigma Phi Epsilon. Both cadets will be juniors next year. Other staff members will be chosen by these newly elected officers at a later date.

PR'S ON THE FIRING LINE

Saturday afternoon, two weeks ago, sixteen Pershing Rifle members moved to the firing line at Bolton, a rifle range operated by the Vermont National Guard.

The cadets fired the M-1 rifle as a part of the counter-guerilla program being conducted within the unit. The M-1 is also the weapon cadets use in learning the manual of arms during drill.

The PR's received instruction from Captains Philip Medenbach and Jack Rives and Sergeant Louis Hines, all members of the Military Science Instructor Group at UVM.

ANNUAL GENERAL INSPECTION

An inspection team will arrive at the Military Science Department on the day of the Military Review. This group, composed of five officers from First Army will conduct the Army's annual inspection of the Department's operation and administration system.

They will attend classes, inspect on cadet company prior to the review, and attend a noon luncheon in the President's dining room at Waterman. They will close the day by attending and participating in the review.

Ground Is Broken For New Sci. Building

The University of Vermont broke ground Friday (April 15) for its new $2.1 million life science buildings.

Ground breaking ceremonies took place at 3 p.m. at the site which is located in the area of the Hills Building and Bailey Library.

The building is scheduled for occupancy for fall semester of 1967 and will house botany and zoology departments.

Linde-Hubbard Associates of Burlington are architects while H. P. Cummings Construction Co., Ware, Mass., is the general contractor.

Students Participate In Administrative Decisions

Albuquerque, N.M. - (I.P.) -

Student participation in administrative level decision-making commenced recently at the University of New Mexico. A special committee of Student Council now meets monthly with University President Tom Popejoy and other administration officials to discuss up-coming decisions.

At the monthly meetings, the student committee members are briefed by administration on the top administrative decisions being considered. Students have the opportunity to ask questions on administrative problems and make suggestions concerning the student point of view.

"Although students have some power to regulate affairs of the Associated Students, they are left out in the cold when major decisions affecting the university as a whole are made," commented Carrol Cagle, author of the proposal and a councilman.

He noted that the proposal had been well received by Dean of Students Harold Lavender. He also stated that Student Council had stipulated that the Constitutional Revision Committee include the special committee within the framework of student government, when and if revisions are made in the Associated Students Constitution.

Deans' List

More than 700 undergraduate students at the University of Vermont have earned the honor of being named to the dean's list for the first semester.

The total figure is 731 students, the largest number to ever earn dean's list honors. Of the 731 students, 415 come from within the state. A dean's list student must have earned an average of 3.0 or higher (85 and above) and carried 12 or more hours.

Students on the dean's list hail from 20 different states, Canada, and the District of Columbia.

The over-all University average was 2.3. Women students compiled a 2.4 semester average, men 2.2. All three figures are higher than last spring's total.

The senior class had a 2.6 average (women 2.8, men 2.5), juniors 2.4 (women 2.6, men 2.3), sophomores 2.2 (women 2.4, men 2.0) and freshmen 2.0 (women 2.2, men, 2.0).

Alpha Epsilon Phi earned the top sorority average with its 41 members having a 2.9. Pi Beta Phi was second at 2.77 and Alpha Chi Omega third at 2.76.

Phi Sigma Delta with 66 members, earned first place honors among fraternities with a 2.54 average. Tau Epsilon Phi was next at 2.53 and Alpha Epsilon Pi was third at 2.52.

Netmen Start On Winning Note

By Mike Wool

The University of Vermont varsity tennis team will be seeking its third straight home victory Saturday, April 23, when it tangles with the Panthers of Middlebury College.

The Catamounts in defeating St. Lawrence won 5 of 6 singles matches, and 2 out of 3 matches in doubles.

UVM Captain Paul Ryan started things off by defeating St. Lawrence's Bruce Buckalew in straight sets, 7-5, 7-5. Ryan earlier this year won the ECAC small colleges tennis singles championship.

Other Vermont winners were Laddie Cook, Don Henson, Bruce Hanna and AlSecunda.

Bruce Coxo registered St. Lawrence's lone single victory in a come from behind effort against Vermont's Dutch Curtis.

Curtis and Rich Sachs, Cook and Henson teamed up to give UVM its 2 doubles victories.

The Cats were equally impressive in the subsequent shut out of Clarkson University.

Singles victories were recorded by Ryan, Cook, Henson, Curtis, Hanna, and Secunda.

The doubles matches were also swept by Vermont.

The Vermont Doubles victors were Cook and Henson, Sachs and Curtis, Ted Joslin and Don Miller.

WANTED: Volunteers to pioneer a new, unique sport. We call it Sport Parachuting. We, Parachutes Incorporated, brought this space-age sport to the country in 1957 solely on the premise that you, the most gifted and potentially productive of your generation, desire to live life as intensely as possible, to develop mental and physical self-discipline, and to meet and associate with others who work hard and play hard.

The premise has been proven correct. To date, over 71,000 sport jumps have been made at our Sport Parachuting Centers, over 7,000 of which were first jumps. A large percentage of our first jump students have been collegians, both male and female (the ratio is usually 5:1).

Our Centers are staffed and equipped to put you out on your first sport jump immediately following a time-tested four hour period of instruction ($35 for everything involved in making your jump). Safety is insured through the use of automatically opening main parachutes. FAA approved ten-place jump aircraft (your entire class jumps together), radio communication directly to the student, all sand drop zones, and constant, overall supervision by professional instructors both in the aircraft and on the ground.

Allow Parachutes Incorporated to introduce you to a sport tailored entirely to your specifications; a sport that, in addition to all else, generates camaraderie, pride, and a new presence of mind.

Cats At UMass For Vital Pair

CAT-NIPS

By Bob Bloomenthal

This weekend's two game set at Amherst, Massachusetts will let coach Ralph LaPointe and his baseball team know just where they stand in their attempt to defend their share of the Yankee Conference crown.

Massachusetts, co-favorite for this year's championship, has already knocked off Connecticut, another prime contender, 7-2 earlier this week. At press time, the Redmen had a 3-0 season's record after going 6-0 on a very impressive southern trip.

The top two UMass pitchers both of whom should see action against Vermont, are juniors Carl Boteze and Bill Smith. Both are righthanders and have looked good so far this year. Smith owns a two-hit shutout win over Amherst. Last year Smith beat UVM here, 3-1, while the Cats defeated Boteze, 4-2.

The overall series lead is held by Vermont, 37-23. Since the Redmen's present coach Earl Lorden took over, though, UVM holds a slim 16-14 edge. Last year Mass tied for third in the Yankee Conference.

Would You Believe . . . The baseball team will be facing a familiar double play combination in their game against Massachusetts . . . Both 6-3 Jim Babyak and 6-4 Frank Stewart, the shortstop and second baseman, respectively, were starters on the UMass basketball team . . . Pitching, the strong point of this year's UVM baseball team, should be even stronger next year with the addition of Freshman Tom Suchanek . . . Suchanek lost a tough one Monday to St. Lawrence, 1-0, despite striking out 13 and allowing but two hits . . . He may even help the hitting which is the big weak spot of this year's squad.

Varsity Lettermen Feted

The 26th annual lettermen's dinner was held Thursday evening (April 14) at the Ethan Allen Club in the honor of the 1965-66 varsity lettermen at UVM.

The featured speaker was Edward (Ted) Dunn who coached Springfield College to an undefeated football season last fall. In his speech Dunn mentioned the "ABC's of athletic competition," Ambition, Becoming, or growing into combat, and Control, that which makes a man out of a boy, are what make a true athlete, said Dunn.

Various awards were made in recognition of outstanding athletic and scholastic achievement. These included:

The Russel O. Southerland Memorial Trophy for a senior who has exemplified those qualities of character, leadership, and persistence in overcoming obstacles to Don Mayland.

The Wasson Athletic Prize for a senior who has maintained the highest standard of academic scholarship and athletic achievement to Layne Higgs.

The Athletic Council Managerial Prize for the varsity manager, who in the judgment of the Athletic Council, has shown the greatest proficiency in performing the work of his office to Dave Mount.

The Fred Donald Carpenter Tennis Award for the member of the tennis team who has demonstrated the greatest progress during the season to Vassar "Dutch" Curtis.

The Semans Trophy, presented by the local chapter of Tau Epsilon Phi Fraternity in memory of Henry Semans, '24 for a senior with outstanding qualities of leadership, loyalty and service to the University, active participation in athletics, and who has won the respect and regard of his fellow students to Bobby Cronin.

For the first time a Floyd James Plaque was awarded for outstanding contribution to the gold team to Jim Nixon.

Highlight of the evening was the presentation of the Letter in Life Plaque to Floyd James, '27, an alumnus who as an undergraduate was a letterman and has had superior accomplishments in life.

Frosh Tennis Buffs Behold

The freshman tennis team is suffering from a problem which seems to be getting a little too common for any kind of athletic team -- student apathy. As it stands now, only six freshmen have turned out for this year's team. Obviously the team is in desperate need of more members. This year's varsity has a good chance to keep the Yankee ships it is defending, but with such poor interest shown by the freshman, the future looks dim. What is the story? All those interested in the frosh tennis team can contact the coach, Art Loche, on extension 574 or at the gym. The opening match for the frosh will be Wednesday, April 27, against Burlington High School.

McCord One-Hits Norwich In Opener

The Catmount baseball team faces two crucial test this weekend against the University of Massachusetts. If UVM plans to remain in the race for the 1966 Yankee Conference crown, these two games are a must since U Mass is a prime contender.

Coach Ralph LaPointe is expected to use two righthanders for the games in juniors John McCord and Len Sheffott. McCord will be our for his second win of the young season after throwing a one-hit, 2-0 shutout at the Norwich Cadets here last Monday. Sheffott had a 3-1 record last year, his lone loss coming against these same U Mass Redmen.

MCCORD SHARP IN OPENER
In the Norwich game on Monday, McCord retired the first 15 men to face him before yielding a double to open the sixth inning. He ended a potential Norwich rally in this inning by retiring two batters with runners on second and third, in no other inning did the junior sidearm allow a baserunner. He finished the game by walking one and striking out five.

UVM got its runs in the fourth and sixth innings. The first run came when second baseman Bruce Lombard's fielder's choice scored John Packard, who had singled, from third. Packard was advanced to third by Brad Steven's single. Captain Bobby Cronin, who led the Cats at the plate with two hits, blasted one over the right fielder's head for a homer for the second run.

MIDDLEBURY
HERE THURSDAY
Vermont will have another important Yankee Conference encounter next week on Tuesday at New Hampshire. Last year UVM took the Wildcats twice by 6-1 scores. Thursday the Cats return home for a State Series game against Middlebury.

FROSH SPLIT OPENING PAIR

The freshman baseball team split the first two games of the season at St. Lawrence. In the first one, Tom Suchanek struck out 13 batters and allowed but two hits and still lost a heartbreaker, 1-0, to the Larries. In the second game the Kittens bounced back to take a 10-4 win with Charlie Brucato getting the decision. The top hitters were Suchanek with three hits and John Burgess, Dave LaPointe and Terry O'Leary with two apiece.

"Fuzzy" Evans' charges are in action twice at home this week. Saturday the Kittens host the Norwich Plebes for a pair and Tuesday the Dartmouth Frosh will be here.

CINDER TEAM VICTORIOUS

Walt Stowell provided much of the punch in the distance running events.

By George Passage

The track forces of Coach Archie Post are on the road this weekend to engage the cindermen of Southern Connecticut. The team opened the season last Saturday with a convincing 80-69 win over Bowdoin.

The Cats will not perform at home again until May 7 when Vermont will host the state meet. Coach Post predicts the state meet should really be a dog fight this year. If Saturday was any indication of the remainder of the season, however, UVM should once again be state champs.

DEPTH IN DISTANCE

One of the most pleasing notes for Post in Saturday's meet came in the three distance running events in which the Cats scored 21 out of a possible 27 points. Peter Jones and Walt Stowell tied for first place in the mile. While Rick Howard, Jones and Renier Chantreuil swept the two mile event.

Howard appears to have recovered from the leg injury which hampered him this winter. A successful campaign is expected from this sophomore.

UVM managed another sweep in the javelin with Sandy McLeod, Paul Giardi, and Ed Childs capturing the maximum nine points in that order. Childs also placed

CATS 1-2 IN THREE EVENTS

The pole vault was one of several events in which the Cats took first and second place. Captain Don Mayland, with a winning vault of 13'6", and Tom Pyles provided the punch in this event.

First place in the broad jump was captured by Pete Nolan with a 20'5" jump, one inch better than teammate Jack Farley who took second place honors.

In the high hurdles, Jim Bahrenburg broke the tape in the fine time of 15.7 seconds. Junior Argie Economou was a close second.

DEDMAN SHINES

The usual fine performance was turned in by sophomore Jim Dedman as he placed first in the 440, second in the 220, and was on Vermont's winning mile relay team. Nolan, Dombal, and Vin DeCesaris ran the other legs of the relay. DeCesaris also led the pack across the finish line in the quarter mile hurdles in the fast time of 55.9 seconds.

Paul Ardell, Keith Kelderling, and Pete Stickney collected valuable points in the weights events, but as expected, Bowdoin's All-American Alex Schutten made his presence known. Schutten was the meet's only double winner with victories in the hammer and shotput.

Intramural Scoreboard

By Mick Kropsky

With the intramural sports season drawing to a close, Delta Psi is still tenaciously holding on to its lead in the contest for the All Sports Trophy. Sigma Alpha Epsilon is in second place with Sigma Phi Epsilon holding on to the third spot. Sigma Nu and Phi Sigma Delta are in fourth and fifth places respectively.

The intramural softball competition got under way last week with a full slate of games being played almost every weekday. Four leagues are entered in the competition which will run until May 2. On May 2 and May 4 playoffs will be held and on May 5 the All Campus Softball Championship will be decided.

Intramural Highlights . . . By press time the intramural swim meet was still in progress . . . Racing and diving events make up the meet . . . Intramural wrestling preliminary matches will take place on Tuesday, April 26 . . . The final matches will be held the following Thursday . . . The All Campus Volleyball Championship playoff is down to three teams - Sig Ep, SAE, and Delta Psi . . . The winner will be decided within the next two weeks . . . Senior Larry Perlmuter, of Phi Sigma Delta, was recently named to Sigma Delta Psi, a national honorary athletic fraternity.

KITTENS BOMBED

The UVM Kittens were out-manned by the Bowdoin frosh as they were defeated by a 103 to 45 score. There were some fine individual performers for the Kittens, though, especially in the dashes. Rich Kabat placed first in the 100 and 200 while Bob Kate took a first in the 440. Other winning performances were turned in by Bob Edelman in the javelin with a throw of 164'7 1/2" and big Rod Whittier with a good toss in the discus.

Athletes Honored

John McCord and Paul Ryan have been named co-winners of the first CYNIC Athlete-of-the-week award.

McCord is cited for his outstanding pitching performance in the Norwich game. Ryan, the fall ECAC champ, and the number one player on the tennis team, paced his team to two victories early this week.

98th Annual Cadets Hold Review Today

The ROTC Cadet Brigade puts its best foot forward today into its final show of excellence for the year. At 4:30 PM at Centennial Field, the 98th Annual Military Review steps off under the watchful eye of such dignitaries as Governor Philip H. Hoff, President Shannon McCune and UVM's Professor of Military Science, Colonel Leonard G. Robinson.

The Review will honor the approaching retirement of Colonel Robinson. Army Tradition provides a parade for all retiring personnel. Colonel Robinson could have elected to be honored by a Review at Fort Devens, Mass. or at the First US Army Headquarters at Fort George G. Meade, Maryland, but instead chose the Cadet Brigade's Final Review, an honor, indeed, for the cadets.

Outstanding cadets to be honored during the ceremonies will receive numerous awards and medals presented by attending dignitaries.

Also highlighting the Review will be the participation of the oroughly. Directions for the party and the banquet and ball will be included. This booklet will be available to sororities and fraternities.

Also Note:
Graduation ticket information in this issue.

Outstanding cadets honored by awards.

1966 Military Ball Queen, Miss Barbara Bigelow, a freshman from Madison, N. J. and her Court, the Misses Jeanne Hansen, Jill Taylor, Brooke Taylor, and Laurel Monti, all students at UVM. The Pershing Rifles sponsor, Miss Carol Anne Jenne, will represent that unit. As the Honorary Brigade Commander, Miss Bigelow will present the colors to the Cadet Color Guard. All will receive bouquets of roses from the Brigade Commander and Company Commanders.

A chance to see full military pageantry is rare in this area. Students are invited to attend. In the event of inclement weather, the ceremonies will be held in the Ira Allen Chapel.

Students Honored Monday

Honors Day Convocation will be held on Monday, May 2, at 10:15 a.m. in the Ira Allen Chapel. Classes at 10:00, 11:00 and 12:00 will be cancelled. The purpose of the convocation is to honor the senior class and all those students who have achieved scholastic distinction or have won prizes during the year. The senior class will join the academic procession in cap and gown. The procession will form at 10:00 a.m. in front of Billings Center, or inside in case of rain.

A 1925 graduate of the University of Vermont will return to his alma mater on May 2 to deliver the Honors Day address.

He is Donald A. Gannon. Gannon is president of Stop and Shop Inc., a 170-unit supermarket and department store firm. He has been associated with the firm his entire career.

Gannon was a member of the University's Board of Trustees from 1954-1960 and served two years as its chairman. He was the recipient of the Alumni Distinguished Service Award in 1958 and of an honorary degree in 1961.

He and his wife, the former Dorothy Ellis, are both natives of Richmond.

The new President of Student Association and the new Chief Justice of the Student Court will be inaugurated. Students on the honor roll and members of the honorary societies will receive recognition.

The music will be provided by the University Band, the Organ and the Carillon.

Dinh Advocates Social Reform

Addressing an audience of over 100 last Thursday in Billings, Tran Van Dinh, present Washington bureau chief of the Saigon, Post, said that any lasting solution to the Viet Nam conflict must come about through social reform.

NEED BETTER IDEAS, NOT BOMBS

He said that in a year we may start thinking of a social revolution in Viet Nam. The problem in Viet Nam, he said, stems from an idea. "You can't kill an idea with a bomb. You must kill an idea with a better one . . . The Vietnamese must implement that idea."

"The result of 300,000 American soldiers fighting in Viet Nam is a military stalemate . . . The people in Washington agree that the U.S. can't be defeated militarily in Viet Nam, but can be defeated politically . . . The tragedy of war is that all of us are victims."

Dinh said that "Communist itself is not inspiring. Communism is very dull. So we can't say that the whole problem in Viet Nam is one of Communism vs Democracy. This is the problem of man's freedom." The Vietnamese have only one desire in life: to remain independent. But "sometimes we confuse freedom with Western democracy. As a human being, the Vietnamese wants to be free . . . He is entitled to be free."

He expressed confidence that "no matter what regime we have in Viet Nam in the next ten years, it will be 1) non pro-China, and 2) independent."

Mr. Dinh pointed out the irony of our bombing the Vietnamese. "We say that we are fighting the government, not the people." Yet we see a flag and drop a bomb," and it may be a school down there."

He said that we have turned the political issue into a moral one, one of "the good guys must defeat the bad guys." It is possible to "back down from any political situation, but when you change it to a moral one, how can you back down?"

CALLED FOR GRADUAL TROOP WITHDRAWAL

Advocating a plan of gradual withdrawal of troops, he said that the "Vietnamese know how to handle the Chinese."

Commending the students who took part in last Wednesday's demonstration, Mr. Dinh said, "I much prefer to deal with a man committed to something, than with someone who says, 'What can I do for the war?' From a piece of wood you can make no man at all."

Canadian Diplomat Visits UVM

The Secretary of State of Canada was a guest speaker at the final lecture of the Area Studies Series on Education which was held Monday evening. The Right Honorable Judy LaMarsh "spoke about education in Canada and about the role of the federal government in this field." Her main theme was that Education in Canada is a highly sensitive subject because of two problems. Education is given to the provincial governments by the British North America Act, however, the federal government feels that higher education is a natural resource and therefore of major concern and responsibility to the federal government, especially in the field of higher education. The second problem is the "two basic cultures, French and English each with its own traditions, rights and privileges." Examples of federal government programs are veterans' loans, and the development of the Massey Commission.

ing Act and Student Loan Plan are two other examples of federal aid to higher education. These programs "which we have evolved at the federal level in Canada, bear a close resemblance to the proposals outlined by President Johnson's education message to Congress last year."

The Right Honorable Judy LaMarsh presented President McCune with the centennial flag, adopted for Canada's one hundredth birthday 1967.

Miss LaMarsh was graduated from Toronto Law School and was later distinguished into the Queen's Council. In both 1963 and 1964 she was chosen "Canadian Woman of the Year", and in 1965 "Canadian Woman of the Year in Public Affairs." In 1963 she was chosen Minister of National Health and Welfare, and held this office until accepting new duties as Secretary of State in 1965.

UVM Grad Joins Vista

Burton B. Bryan, 1965 graduate of the University of Vermont, with a degree in zoology, is now a VISTA Volunteer who acts as counselor, teacher and friend to several underprivileged boys at the Tillamook Job Corps Camp, Tillamook, Oregon.

This rural conservation center, located in the Northwestern corner of the state, 10 miles from the Pacific Coast, is designed to bring up the Educational level of 16-21 year old drop-outs and at the same time, have them work on useful conservation projects on public land.

Byran assists in the camp's mathematic class and teaches reading classes on his own. "I also run the mail service, sell stamps and write letters for those who can't write their own." "I'd like to go away thinking I've done something positive and good."

Governor Hoff Speaks On Law

The Student Law Association will present a lecture by Philip Hoff this Mon. at 7:30 p.m. in North Lounge of Billings Center. He will speak of an aspect of the legal profession. A question and answer period will follow. All students and faculty are welcome.

Burlington Looks At UVM

By Dick Matheson

What do they think of us? Do most Burlington residents find UVM students welcome additions to the community for the cultural or invigorating influences they bring? Or do they dislike us for dangerous driving, excess noise, and impolite or drunken public behavior?

90% EXPRESS FAVORABLE ATTITUDE

Actually, neither is the correct answer. About 90% of Burlington people questioned expressed a generally favorable attitude toward UVM students. But a great part of these people were also more or less ignorant about UVM and unaware of UVM students.

They thought that students "do get out and do things," they "help out with our community affairs"; an attorney said that he believed the attitude of all thinking people in Burlington is to regard students as a "wonderful asset to the area."

"QUITE A GOOD BUNCH"

Again and again townspeople said they found UVM students a "very fine group," "very nice," "average young people," "very polite," "highly dependable," "quite a good bunch," and "always well behaved to my knowledge."

Judge Costello said that anyone would be "grossly in error" to think there was any sort of unfavorable attitude in town towards UVM students.

NOT PERFECT - "KINDA LOUD"

Various people thought that "some of them drive a little too fast"; "too many autos cause some congestion -- they are able-bodied, healthy kids and physical activity would be an asset to them." One person noted laconically that students are "kinda loud."

BERKELEY IS ATYPICAL

The Reverend George Lawrence said that students in some respects are like airplanes: you only hear about the ones that crash. He believes students have "as much integrity and moral value as they ever did." He sees UVM as no different from other colleges and states that "Berkeley is not typical."

NOT AN INTELLECTUALLY ACTIVE CAMPUS

Vic Maerki of the Free Press, on the other hand, said he thought that the "UVM student on the whole contributes less to the nation than the average college student." He discovers "no sign of meaningful intellectual ferment" at UVM.

Judge O'Brien, however, believes that "the great majority of students reflect credit to the institution." He thinks that the willingness of UVM students to assist in political and fund-raising campaigns is "very good."

A UVM sorority house mother made a good point when she didn't object to drinking in itself, but did "wish that young people didn't feel that they had to bring."

MOST LOCAL PEOPLE ARE RELATIVELY IGNORANT ABOUT UVM

Despite some valid comment and criticism, most Burlington residents were favorable to UVM students yet without much knowledge about them. A few people apparently don't even realize that UVM is coeducational!

BURLINGTONIANS ARE APATHETIC TOO

Students will be interested in a comment made by the Reverend Robert Ker, which sounds strangely familiar. He noted that the Burlington attitude toward students "is unfortunately indifferent," characterized by "a great deal of apathy."

Family Associates Benefit University

A Burlington couple, Mr. and Mrs. William Cronin, were named presidents-elect of the University of Vermont Family Associates at a weekend meeting of the Executive Board of the organization.

$2500 GIFT TO UVM

Their election came at a meeting which also saw the Associates vote a gift of $2500 to the University's annual giving program, bringing the total contributed to the program by the Associates to $11,500 in four years.

Charles Lyman of Burlington, past president of the organization of parents and current gifts committee chairman, reported that the Associates have also given a variety of gifts to enrich student life, one of the purposes for which the organization was formed.

These gifts have included sets of encyclopedias, magazine subscriptions for Billings Center, silver tea services, china, lace tablecloths, drapes, and funds for art acquisitions, records, and an emergency loan fund.

UVM Dean of Women Anna Rankin Harris, who will be leaving Vermont to become executive director of the National Association of Women Deans, reported that funds from the emergency loan fund were awarded to a woman student to buy books. "She simply didn't have a penny left from her own resources, and this fund helped make it possible for her to stay in college."

DEAN HARRIS GIVEN VOTE OF THANKS

Miss Harris, who has served as one of the advisors to the parent's organization since it was formed, was given a standing vote of thanks by the executive board members.

The parents were guest of UVM for a Symposium on the Biography of the University.

ROWELL DELIVERS KEYNOTE ADDRESS

In a keynote luncheon address, UVM Vice President Lyman S. Rowell told the parents that "a lot of examination has gone into studying the question of who runs the university."

He said that people have the notion that authority in a college or university flows "from the top down." It is just the reverse, he said. "The college president who hands down an order on Monday morning probably won't be a college president on Friday."

Rowell said that the top control of the educational instruction is vested in a lay board which sets policies and delegates re-

Leadership Conference Held At Yale

By Paul Shambo

On April 15-17, three UVM students attended the National Student Leadership Conference at Yale University in New Haven, Connecticut. Of the several students recommended by the Deans, one Greek and two independents made the trip.

SPONSORED BY REPUBLICAN PARTY

The Conference was sponsored by the National Republican Party. The purpose of the Conference, as expressed, was to provoke concern and discussion in National problem areas and policy matters. The goal was to open the eyes of the young collegians who were there, to the projected plans of the G.O.P. Although the Conference, on the whole was completely objective, in that both sides of every question were presented about all discussion topics, most of the conferees were National Young Republicans. One hundred and sixty students from 31 different campuses attended the Conference.

NOTABLES SPEAK

Republican Notables addressing the Conference were: Governors Caffee of Rhode Island and Volpe of Massachusetts, Senators Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania and Dominick of Colorado, Senator Goldwater's campaign manager F. Clifton White. Also in attendance were William Booth, Commissioner of Human Rights in New York City, and Professor Rowe of Yale University.

UVM REPRESENTATIVES

The three representatives from U.V.M. were: Paul Shambo, a Brother in Delta Psi and a member of the Billings Center Governing Board; Richard Flood, a floor counselor in the MAT complex; and Daniel Barden, President of the Independent Kake Walk Committee. Collectively, they thought the Conference very enlightening and extremely educational. Although not pulled to one side or the other of the political spectrum, they feel that their views of National Politics and policy matters are now more open and knowledgeable.

The three Conferees are available for comment and would entertain any questions pertaining to the activities of the Conference.

sponsibility for carrying them out to the administration. But he noted that the faculty are "the life-blood of the University," and noted that they are specialists in their subject field and loyal first to their specialty.

Following the luncheon, the parents heard the academic, financial and student personnel structure of the University described by Graduate Deal William Macmillan; UVM treasurer George C. Clerkin; and Dean of Men Roland Patzer.

OTHER OFFICERS

In addition to the Cronins, next year's Family Associates officers will include Mr. and Mrs. Harold Warner of Eggertsville, N.Y., first vice presidents; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Graham of New York City, second vice presidents; Mr. and Mrs. Burton A. Paquin of Burlington, secretary; and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Oliver, also of Burlington, re-elected to the office of treasurer.

CRONIN'S SUCCEED RONEY'S

The Cronins, who have served as first vice presidents this year, will succeed Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Roney of Burlington, as presidents of the Associates effective with the start of the 1966-67 college year next September.

DATELINE... ROTC

By Walter Pressey

CADET OF THE MONTH

On 22 April Michael R. Kelley, a freshman at the University of Vermont, received from Colonel Leonard G. Robinson the citation for being selected the UVM Cadet of the Month. He was selected on the basis of outstanding appearance and drill proficiency from among 300 freshman and sophomores in the ROTC program. He is a member of the Pershing Rifle Society and a pledge at Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald P. Kelley of 95 Lakewood Parkway in Burlington.

MOOT COURT-MARTIAL

Recently, the senior cadets enacted a moot court-martial as a part of their classroom training in Military Justice. Each cadet played his role, varying from defendant, trial counsel, witness, to judge, as the hypothetical court-martial involving an assault and battery case was acted out. Asked to comment on the value of the instruction, one cadet observed that "Military Court-martials were conducted in a very formal atmosphere emphasizing the value of the strict military procedures." Another cadet felt that the enacted court scenes brought forth the necessity of thorough investigation to determine completely valid evidence before one can be convicted of a violation of the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

BEST PLATOON RECEIVES GOLD RIBBONS

A heightened air of competition was evident during recent drill period at the Gutterson Field House. On one selected day each platoon was judged by Captains Howard Fraser and Kenneth Haas and Cadet Colonel Peter McGregor to select the best platoon in the brigade. Under the watchful eye of the inspection team each cadet strove for perfection in close order drill procedures learned in previous leadership laboratories. When notes were compiled at the end of the day the First Platoon of Company C emerged as the winner.

The recognition of outstanding performance is presented in two ways. The leaders of the platoon, Cadet Lieutenants David Matte and Neil Day were presented with the Best Platoon Trophy at the Military Ball. Each member of the platoon, having played an equally important role in the competition, receives a gold ribbon to be worn on the uniform. These ribbons were presented on April 22 by Captain Alton R. Sparks, Drill Advisor of C Company.

LEADERSHIP CLASSES FOR JUNIORS

The Junior Class is now undergoing classroom training on Military Leadership with emphasis on the platoon level. This has included listening to taped skits and discussing mistakes and problems young Lieutenants often encounter. These skits concern problems such as becoming an instructor of a weapons training section, only to find you must supervise the grenade range and set up proper safety procedures; and trying to explain to the Company Commander how you managed, by reading the map upside down, to arrive in the wrong place. A correct solution is provided with which the cadets can then compare their own solutions. Problems presented are of the type the cadet can expect to meet upon going on active duty as Second Lieutenants.

PCIL Given Recognition

This week the Student Association has officially recognized the constitution of the PCIL, Presidents' Council on International Living.

PCIL CONSTITUTION

You might be interested in a quick description of what is involved in the PCIL constitution.

Its first article states the name of the organization. Secondly, the purposes are spelled out: to raise funds to send as many students as is possible to foreign countries; to cooperate with other organizations interested in international living; and to provide an intensive cross-cultural experience for each participant in the Student Ambassador program.

Thirdly, membership is considered. Membership consists of the sixteen class officers and a faculty advisor, selected by the council biennially.

The basic officers for the PCIL are the chairman, assistant chairman, the secretary and the treasurer. Their respective duties are obvious.

FOUR COMMITTEES

In the PCIL are four committees: the application committee which plans and organizes application procedures and selects the preliminary selection committee; the preliminary selection committee, which consists of one person from the community, two faculty members, two members from the PCIL, and others, if deemed necessary; the publicity committee which stimulates interest and provides information; and the fund-raising committee, which provides the financial means to send at least one ambassador per year from UVM to a foreign country.

Acting as coordinators are the senior class members.

These are the fundamental features of the PCIL's organization. Others are involved.

WINNER ANNOUNCED NEXT WEEK

Next week the winning applicant will be known and his or her name will be published in the last issue of the CYNIC.

IFC Stops Sign Stealing

Fred Brown and Lt. Bane

Demonstrate Loyalty To Community

Last Saturday the Interfraternity Council collected all the traffic signs from the University living units. The project was undertaken with the cooperation of numerous other student organizations. The student intend this to demonstrate their loyalty to the community. The signs were returned to the Burlington police, who will distribute them to their owners.

They were collected by the sophomore representatives and the IFC officers. The project was very successful, with a large number of signs being collected.

Two member fraternities, Phi Delta Theta and Alpha Tau Omega, were also involved in community help projects. Phi Delta Theta cleaned up the Municipal Beach. Alpha Tau Omega cleaned up the Burlington Boy's Club camp in Jonesville.

The IFC hopes this will improve relations between the University and the community.

Nothing can take the press out of Lee-Prest slacks

Not that it's on his mind right now. And it needn't be. Those Lee-Prest Leesures can't help but stay crisp and neat. No matter what you put them through. They have a new permanent press. So the crease stays in. The wrinkles stay out. Permanently. And that's without ironing. No touch-ups, either. They're made from Lee's special blend of 50% polyester and 50% combed cotton. For wash and wear... with conviction.

Incidentally, that permanent press is the only change we've made in Leesures. They still have that lean, honest look... smart, tailored fit. New Lee-Prest Leesures. Test their permanent press yourself. It isn't necessary, but it's a great way to spend an evening. From $5.98 to $7.98.

EDITORIAL...

We have often praised the effectiveness of the Student Association. There comes a time, however, when we must express our feelings as the voice of the student organizations under the economic iron hand of the SA.

In the past few weeks, the budgets for over thirty groups on campus have come to the attention of SA for approval or denial of necessary funds. SA takes a unique stand. It recognizes and approves the formation of new clubs but is unwilling or unable to finance these organizations.

At the present time, SA charges each undergraduate a fee of $15 per year. This comes to a total of about $60,000 which is $17,000 less than the amount asked for the coming year by the clubs and organizations supposedly supported by SA.

We are told that we may approach outside sources for additional funds. What sources? Moone comes throwing money at our feet. We will thus leave this possibility open for further speculation.

The basic problem can be solved with present funds in one of two ways. SA may continue to give insufficient amounts to a gross number of clubs or it may reduce the number of clubs under their power, thus enabling effective allocations for these select organizations. Neither is a very satisfactory solution to the problem in our opinion.

There is one other factor which we might mention. The original income to the SA funds could be increased by raising the fee required from each student. It may be noted that the university enrollment is higher than before so that, at present, SA already obtains more money than in the past.

SA represents all of the undergraduates on campus. The funds which they allocate are our funds. And yet, what say do we have and what stand do we take in solving this dilemma?

It is with deep sorrow that we convey this message to the university—the once highly frequented and popularly scenic spot outside Burlington, Shelburne Point, is herby closed to all but conscientious fishers. This order has been handed down from the Shelburne Selectmen. We doubt that they are aware of the sentimental value attached to this "fishing point" but we feel compelled to make you aware of the request.

Letters To The Editor

Readers Comment On Demonstration

Outbursts Deplored

To the Editors:

As the faculty adviser to the Ad Hoc Committee of Students Concerned About the War in Vietnam, I am writing to express my deep dismay and profound astonishment at the wild outbursts which took place on the campus of the UVM between 10:30 a.m. and noon on Wednesday, April 20.

I had always believed that a University was a community of scholars—both young and old—interested in the search for truth, no matter how disagreeable and unpalatable that quest might be. In searching for truth it is essential that all ideas be heard, debated and discussed. To shout down your opponents, as took place on the campus last Wednesday, is the mark of intellectual bankruptcy, since it would seem to indicate that the shouters and screamers were unwilling to listening to criticism of U. S. policy in Vietnam because they had no answers. We—myself and the other participants in the demonstration who, incidentally, do not always agree as to the precise course that should be charted in Southeast Asia—had hoped to deliver speeches, answer questions and debate with interested student and faculty. Instead we were shouted down (of what value is the right of free speech if, when you attempt to exercise this precious privilege, you are unable to) and not permitted to discuss the reason behind our disagreement with the policies of President Johnson.

As I looked out at the small group—within the large crowd—which was primarily responsible for most of the noise, and saw those contorted, hate-filled, angry faces, I was reminded of an incident which has been eloquently described by Hugh Thomas in his splendid study, The Spanish Civil War. At the University of Salamanca in October of 1936 the distinguished Spanish philosopher and Rector of the University, Miguel de Unamuno, found himself on the same platform as General Millan Astray—one of General Franco's associates in the destruction of the Spanish Republic and Spanish freedom. General Millan Astray was particularly fond of shouting, "Down with Intelligence" and "Long Live Death". After the General had completed his speech which included his odd (to me anyway) solgans, the aged philosopher rose to speak:

"All of you are hanging on my words. You all know me and are aware that I am unable to remain silent. At times to be silent is to lie. For silence can be interpreted as acquiescence. I want to comment on the speech—to give it that name—of General Millan Astray, who is here among us . . . just now I heard a necrophilous and senseless cry: 'Long live death.' And I, who have spent my life shaping paradoxes which have aroused the uncomprehending anger of others, I must tell you, as an expert authority, that this outlandish paradox is repellent to me. General Millan Astray is a cripple. Let it be said without any slighting undertone. He is a war invalid. So was Cervantes. Unfortunately there are all too many cripples in Spain just now. And soon there will be even more of them if God does not come to our aid. It pains me to think that General Millan Astray should dictate the pattern of mass psychology. A cripple who lacks spiritual greatness of Cervantes is wont to seek ominous relief in causing mutilation around him. This is the temple of intellect. And I am its high priest. It is you who profane its sacred precincts. You will win, because you have more than enough brute force. But you will not convince. For you need to persuade. And in order to persuade you would need what you lack: Reason and Right in the struggle. I consider it futile to exhort you to think of Spain. I have done."

Sincerely yours,
Thomas J. Spinner, Jr.
Asst. Prof., History

Active; Not Productive

To the Editors:

Concerning the demonstration of Wednesday April 20: It is encouraging to see UVM students actively participating and expressing their feelings. The egg throwing was the most encouraging sign of life that has been seen on campus.

However it is extremely unfortunate that the demonstrators idly neglected the greatest opportunity that has presented itself since the beginning of the controversy.

They failed to utter the one accusation that could have raised the demonstration out of the idiocy of slapstick and cause something constructive and stimulating to come from their action. What more obvious accusation to chant in the faces of hecklers than that they are too cowardly, for a debate.

Paul A. Dodge
Bill Burling

P.S. you must be commended for printing news that occurred so shortly before production.

Klonsky Clarifies

To the Editor:

I would like to clarify a few statements I made last week in a letter about the demonstration. First, I have in no way been intimidated to do this, rather this letter can be considered a matter of conscience. Last week's letter was written in a moment of extreme anger and I did not think about the detrimental effect that it might have on the uninvolved members of a certain fraternity who would in no way condone the actions of their fellow members. However, I must also bring to light that this fraternity is looked to by many students as campus leaders. Their members hold the highest offices at UVM and respected by myself and others. In this capacity, they exert a powerful influence on many of their fellow students and when certain of their members openly flout the Constitution they encourage others to do the same. I am convinced that these other people would have behaved themselves had the brothers of this fraternity done likewise. Again I am sorry for the overall slander and any criticism of me on this point is certainly justified.

Sincerely,
Kenneth Klonsky

A Soldier Tells Why

To the Editor:

After watching our anti-Vietnam demonstration on Wednesday I can't help but feel that the letter I received today from Marine Lieutenant Paul Hurley (U.V.M. '65), who is stationed in Danang, Vietnam, might help to answer the question of why we are there. He writes: "We went by a village today on the river where a couple of weeks ago the village chief and his whole family were shot by the VC as an example. And there are back in the states asking why we are in this war? Send them over and I will show them."

Thank you,

Mike Ingham

"Sing Out" Denied Reality

To the Editors:

In response to Helen Keith and Walter Pressey, who claim that I am "wallowing in (my) own negativity and criticism," I would say that they have grossly misinterpreted my article on "Sing Out '66." It is hardly negativity to call for a recognition of man's evil instead of the repudiation asked by "Sing Out '66." Keith and Pressey are correct when they say that the group asks us to "try to control the evil within us and work with the good that is in us to improve ourselves and the world." What I object to is the conception of evil shared by the members of "Sing Out '66." Sexual desire, drinking and smoking do not even begin to skirt the issue of evil. One must make a tremendous effort to understand that he, in the words of C. G. Jung, is a "potential criminal." Sing Out '66 does not want to face the fact that even they themselves are capable of the most heinous of crimes. Until this fact can be absorbed and understood, "Sing Out '66" will remain products of the American Puritan psyche, which seems to believe that self control is the only requirement for human perfection. I find this thinking unaware if a whole world of repressions and neuroses that have populated psychiatric couches all over this country.

TRUSTEES GREENLIGHT LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL APPOINTMENT

The Board gave its blessing to acceptance by UVM Vice President for Financial Affairs, Melvin A. Dyson, of an appointment to the Legislative Council as a member of the Canadian power study group.

Placement Barometer

What Is An Executive?

By Douglas O. Hanau, Director, UVM Placement Service

WHAT IS AN EXECUTIVE? An Executive not only receives the highest wages of any man in America he also is largely responsible for our high standard of living. Executives have been, and are, in demand, and will be more in demand in the future, not only for the welfare of this country, but to maintain our position in the free world.

Hopefully by the time a student at UVM reaches the point of graduation, he has an idea of what it takes to become a doctor, lawyer, engineer or scientist, but I don't recall any talk to a senior on what it takes to make an executive.

With this in mind, I have borrowed from another, a man by the name of Cason J. Callaway, an entrepreneur, an executive. Following are his twenty-four points which are listed for self-analysis, applicable to women as well as men. Of course an Executive has to have absolute integrity, or it does not matter what else he has. Of course he has to be willing and able to work, or it does not matter what else he has. Of course, he has to be objective. If an Executive could be described in one word, this would be it. Of course, he has to have leadership, which is hard to define, but may be described as that quality in a man which makes other men want to do what he wants them to do.

1. COURAGE. I don't want to get courage and bravery mixed up. If you are afraid, but go in the yard anyway, this is courage. Courage is what makes a man buy natural resources for his company's use in poor times when acreage or leases are cheap. 2. IMAGINATION. Most of the good things civilization has achieved are the results of somebody's seeing, in his mind's eye, how to do something better, or make something better. Without imagination an executive cannot foresee the good things the future may hold. Without imagination he is not able to put himself in another man's place, which he must do. 3. HE MUST DELEGATE AUTHORITY AND RESPONSIBILITY. If he does not do this, there is not enough time to accomplish a great deal. 4. HE MUST CHECK, AFTER THIS DELEGATION, TO SEE THAT RESULTS ARE OBTAINED. He must have progress reports not only for his own information, but also to gauge personnel in preparation for his next delegation of authority. 5. HE MUST EVALUATE HIS TIME. A busy man, a busy man, does not have time not to explain carefully a directive to a subordinate, and in most cases tell him the reason why he wants it done. Otherwise, it is likely to get all snarled up and he has to handle it twice, which a busy man does not have time to do. 6. HE DOES THE IMPORTANT IN MOST CASES, INSTEAD OF THE URGENT. It is so easy to decide and handle the easy ones. So often the temptation is to put aside a difficult decision until the easy ones are finished, in the hope that some additional easy ones come up to further postpone the important. 7. HE MUST PLAY NO FAVORITES. A man can do what he wants to with his own money. With his company's money he has no right to play favorites. The man who should be promoted is the man who is doing the job he happens to be on at the time better than others are doing theirs. If the word gets around that the executive plays no favorites, the personnel will naturally take pride in doing their job well, no matter how rarely they come in contact with the boss. 8. HE RECOGNIZES HIS OWN WEAKNESSES, AND SEEKS OR EMPLOYS ASSISTANCE IN THESE RESPECTS. The Great Creator has rarely produced a man without weakness. What often makes a strong corporation is men of different but special talents accomplishing together, and with the assistance of each other, more than any individual could accomplish by himself. 9. HE TRIES TO HELP A MAN OVERCOME HIS WEAKNESSES, AND COMPLIMENTS HIM ON HIS GOOD TRAITS. The success of a company is based to a large extent on loyalty and cooperation. A man might be the best coxswain in the world, but without the cooperation of the other men in his crew, the race could not be won. 10. IF SOMETHING TURNS OUT ESPECIALLY GOOD, HE FINDS SOMEONE IN HIS ORGANIZATION TO SHARE THE CREDIT. IF SOMETHING ESPECIALLY BAD, HE FINDS SOME WAY TO SHARE THE BLAME. You tell me who takes the responsibility for the errors and I will tell you who is the boss. 11. HE MUST BE A GOOD LISTENER. I have prayer, "Oh Lord, let me know that I do not have to speak on every subject that is broached." 12. HE MUST NOT TAKE HIMSELF SERIOUSLY. I have never heard a man criticized for taking his business too seriously. If he can do this, and not take himself too seriously, he and his associates have a happier life. 13. HE MUST NOT ALLOW HIMSELF TO BECOME DISCOURAGED. Even the inevitable can change from day to day, and persistence often accomplishes the seemingly impossible. 14. HE DOES WHAT HE SAYS HE IS GOING TO DO, EVEN IN A CASUAL STATEMENT. This separates the men

Some Thoughts on Spring.

It's spring and the end of the semester. Students are beginning thirty-page term papers due next week, trying to do a semester's reading in one week, and perusing members of the opposite sex in the hope of picking up a few tips for the anatomy final. The faculty, on the other hand, spend their time in flower planting, faculty-administration politicking, and the more genteel aspects of the scholar's life. But then spring isn't much different that any other season for the university community.

PERILS OF AN ART TEACHER

Paul Aschenbach of the Art department recently recounted the perils of being Art teacher. He learned, much to his amazement, that a number of pre-dental students were taking his course in sculpture so they could master enough manual dexterity to pass the part of the pre-dental exam for dental school. Picture the Dilemma of the student who finds he likes sculpture and must make the choice between shaping molars or marble. Another student, during pre-registration for next fall, told Paul he wanted to major in Art. Paul was ecstatic (they don't have many majors) but noted that Art was the twelfth major for this student. The student blithely replied that he had tried and failed all the others and subsequently he must have some talent in Art.

GRADES & STUDENTS

Spring is also the time when students become expert mathematicians. They can quote a figure, correct to three decimal places, which will enable them to pull that D up to a C. One student asked me what he needed to get a C for the course and when told a high B, he responded, "That means I'll have to study a half hour longer." Obviously he had his study programmed; an A demanded six hours, a B five hours, a C four hours, etc. Such confidence only the young can have.

It must be a cold spring when I can't even give away $500. The Summer Political Party Internship Program has a notable lack of candidates, even though it pays a stipend of $500 for eight weeks work, (there are two internship - one with each party). Consequently, I am extending the deadline for submitting applications until May 9th in hopes that we can unearth some well qualified, interested students. Applications may be obtained from myself or Mr. Monahan, both of the Political Science Department.

REQUISITION A TREE?

Next time your favorite faculty member balks at holding class of the the green remind him that Buildings and Grounds will reserve favorite trees for faculty members who wish to hold classes or merely sit. A small placard is placed under the appropriate tree although after 6:00 P.M. the trees are a first come, first served basis. B & G promises service with a smile.

FACULTY BASEBALL

To see how baseball should not be played, plan on seeing the faculty baseball team square off in the summer intra-mural league. See such favorites as Gould, Potash and Lewis romp gayly around the base paths.

SPRING BEAUTY

(commentary of a minor miracle)

I saw a ray of hope today...

It filled my heart with... well, you know...

Of really being - I guess that's what it is.

That Ray? - It was a tiny bud - the promise of... so much...

There it was, night underfoot: so delicate... yet real...

I stood and gazed upon its form...

"God is dead"? I asked myself.

No! there came the bold reply - it simply cannot be!

Eleven months we cannot see this flower's fragile beauty - So what's that prove? That we are blind! - just that - and Nothing More. It is not dead! This, the miracle of Spring affirms!

And so it is with God...

(I felt the need to reply to Mr. Quackenbush - and - to thank him.)

STUDENTES

By Dick Matheson

It all began when 53 out of 54 members of the advanced Frog Anatomy class based their annual research papers on quotes from The Happy Age, a first novel by James L. Squinch.

It seems that all the books that were supposed to be in the library on from anatomy were for some reason or another not on the shelves. Prof. Ranapip immediately began an investigation. First, he had Snick see him in his office. Snick had been the only student to hand in a paper based on the usual scientific sources.

Snick had also been the only student to pass his term research paper. The Happy Age was a novel that someone had found, about a boy who, among other things, treated his pet frogs rather harshly, thereby revealing their anatomy. Prof. Ranapip felt that this novel was not sufficiently objective in the accrument of data.

"Snick," began Prof. Ranapip, "Please tell me where you got the sources for your excellent research paper. But Snick, being a sincere, dedicated young scholar, knew he could not tell a lie.

"Professor Dr. Ranapip, sir," said Snick respectfully. "My paper couldn't have really been that excellent," he added humbly. "At least according to the frat's files, you gave my Dad a D- on it in '42," he explained. "1942," he added, remembering the prof's love of accuracy.

"Oh," retorted the goodly professor. And he dismissed Snick from the questioning and headed for the library. He concluded that there must lie the source of trouble. First, he looked in the card file and made a list of the 63 books named under "Frog anatomy". Then he went to the book shelves. He found that there were only one or two books on many of the shelves.

He quickly found Squinch's novel, The Happy Age. But no books on frog anatomy. He went to the desk. He asked someone if they knew where the books were that he had on his list. "Why, certainly," the person behind the desk answered cheerily. "Everyone's been asking that recently."

He then read off a list he had handy: "Twelve books are at the bindery, nine are missing, four have been taken out within two weeks and can't be called in, eight are on permanent loan to the psych department where someone is doing advanced research on a character in some book called The Happy Age, and eleven can't be found. If enough people request them, we'll have a search done on them and declare them officially missing," he pointed out.

A PEACEFUL VIETNAM

Students Protest Vietnam Involvement By U. S.

Spinner Gives Main Speech

Spinner answers spectator's query. (Credit: Roberts, CYNIC)

What good does it do to demonstrate?

The CYNIC questioned two representatives of the demonstrators about the purpose and plans their group had made before the demonstration yesterday.

Peter Collins, a graduate student from Maplewood, N. J., and head resident of the freshman men's dorms said that the purpose of the demonstration was "to bring the fact that there are alternatives other than all-out war in Viet Nam to campus."

SECONDARY PURPOSE -- FREE SPEECH

He said that a secondary purpose was to assert the right of free speech which had been denied the demonstrators at the first demonstration. He said he thought the demonstration was more a "questioning" than a protest -- a means to re-examine and re-evaluate, to "open up and continue debate on policy in Viet Nam."

TOO MUCH APATHY TOWARD POLITICAL AFFAIRS

Charles Rostkowski, a senior from Burlington, finds that there is too much apathy on campus in relation to political affairs, and he thinks there "should be at least some sort of discussion on this issue." He said the demonstrators were "exercising their rights as citizens by 'dissenting from the consensus of opinion" on the proper policy for Viet Nam.

When asked how the demonstrators had planned to cope with hecklers, he said, "There is no sense in even attempting to answer most of the questions; they are irrational -- they don't expect answers." Both he and Peter Collins expressed a willingness to let someone from an opposing viewpoint get up and express it during the demonstration, just as long as spectators permitted demonstrators to state their own beliefs.

Demonstrators planned to maintain "a silent vigil" if hecklers did not permit them their rights to free speech. Peter Collins said that "a majority of students misunderstood our purpose last time."

UNSUCCESSFUL DEMONSTRATION IS ONE THAT HAS NO EFFECT ON SPECTATORS

He defined an unsuccessful demonstration as "one that has no effect on the people who witness it." He saw the first demonstration as a good example of what a successful demonstration should be because "it did get the campus talking about the war."

"I feel we were successful last week, in that we excited," Charles Rostkowski said. "We got the students to at least consider." Examples given by the two students of results of the demonstration were the successful turnout to hear Tran van Chinh and to hear the debate on Viet Nam between Professor Berger and Schomkel at Encounter.

Charles Rostkowski noted that "everyone comes to these things with preconceived notions" but people should "look into both sides of a situation."

"I think this sort of stuff is healthy," he stated. "That's really what a university is about -- exchanging ideas" and not just in the classroom."

TEACH-IN SCHEDULED

There will be a teach-in next Wed. evening, May 31, at which time six professors, three in favor of U.S. policy in Viet Nam and three opposed, will present their views. After the panel discussion, there will be a question and answer period.

THE SCEPTIC

By M. Minsky

Whether you realize it or not, and most of you do not, your country is at war. We are at war against certain people in Viet Nam. Better them Red than us dead. Victory is almost ours. Our glorious nation is gloriously fighting for democracy in a war like all wars -- glorious. Those who deny this had better shut up. America has no room for such people.

I am proud to live in a nation which will assure a lesser race pure democracy -- whether they want it or not. Of course Democracy's prerequisite is Capitalist Based Economy. Only after we pave the roads, put up telephones and install television so that the people can enjoy the sweet fruits of Modern Science, are FREE ELECTIONS possible. Free elections are those in which the sanctity of the ballot box is not violated by the obscene ballots of Communists, Buddhists, and other totalitarians of the Intellectual LEFT. The Left in this country is determined to SUBVERT the war effort.

WHAT WOULD A VIET CONG VICTORY MEAN TO YOU? The hungered yellow hordes shall descend on America. They shall sail across lake Champlain. They will se loose Ralph Ginzburg, Tom Leary and others of that ilk. They will make America TOTALITARIAN. They will abolish fraternities and when the fraternities fall, only the shambles of American Colleges will remain. They will do away with THE AMERICAN WAY OF EDUCATION.

WITHIN OUR GOVERNMENT, there are agents whose warped minds have concocted a hideous plan. These so called Americans gleefully announce that one half the defense budget would suffice to pave both South Viet Nam and the "Republic" of "North" Viet Nam. These traitors plan to carry out this plot (OPERATION WATERBUFFALOV) PAVE THE TWO NATIONS AND SELL THEM AS PARKING LOTS TO RED CHINA!!!! This dark scheme was first contrived by one C. R., an employee of an INTERNATIONALIST organization, WHO SPENDS HIS WINTERS IN MIAMI BEACH.

Even more dangerous are those bearded RADICALS of the UN-American LEFT who defile our streets with their greasy sandals and leave in their riotous wake a pollution of garbage, broken eggs, and RED PAINT. Not content with simple protest RIOTS these pinks are right at the VERY MOMENT working out a NEW plan to dump munitions into Boston HARBOUR, THE CRADLE OF AMERICAS WAY.

AWAKE, AMERICA, AWAKE. FOR THINE GATES LAYETH OPEN WIDELY AND THINE WATCHMEN SLEEPETH DEPTHFULLY. And in Viet Nam your sons are dying. They are dying for UNCLE SAM and JESUS CHRIST. They are dying for apple pie, motherhood and Saturday night baths. They are dying for those things which made America AMERICA -- those vast unsung heroes of our way of life -- the gigantic super big corporations. How proud they must be to carry a gun for GENERAL MOTORS, RCA or GE. They are dying regardless of race creed or previous condition of servitude. And they are dying for you regardless of the color of your skin or your religion. They are dying for chicken soup as well as water mellon. BUT WHAT CAN YOU DO, JOE CITIZEN, TO SUPPORT OUR BOYS IN THEIR NEVERENDING STRUGGLE AGAINST ALL FORCES OF EVIL????????

First listen to reason. Don't listen to the radio; don't read magazines; don't watch the news on television -- these are all controlled by sympathizers of RED FACISM. Just Remember: In your heart you know what's right. And also remember those stirring words of GEORGE WASHINGTON, LINCOLN, ROOSEVELT (TR), HARDING, GOLDWATER upon quoting those vibrant lines of EGAR GUEST and you can't go wrong.

Support your local police. They are your first and last line defense against COMMUNISM. Report all suspicious strangers. Keep an eye on your neighbour. Eternal Surveillance is the price of liberty. Pray twice a day and buy H. L. Hunk Canned Products. Don't let your children masturbate. Masturbation is COMMUNIST.

But even in these days of blackness amidst the dark perils which which like a thick shroud surrounds us, I see the fateful glimmer of hope flickering far upon the far distant, the, shall we say, opposite side of the sea. For, every actual Viet Cong we slay we kill at least 10 potential Viet Cong. For every civilian village we bomb, we bomb one potential Communist hide out. Who knows what the womb of a Vietnamese woman might contain -- there is only one way of finding out.

THE DAWN OF VICTORY RISES LIKE THE THUNDER AND THE AMERICAN EAGLE STREAKS ACROSS THE BRIGHT NEW SKY ALL THE WAY WITH LBJ TO HEAVEN OR TO HELL MY COUNTRY RIGHT OR WRONG GOD SAVE THE KINE WE CANNOT BE WRONG HE STILL LIVES IN MISSISSIPPI JESUS IS ON THE SIDE OF THE RIGHT SO KEEP THEM BOMBS DROPPING THEM VILLAGES BURNING THEM PEOPLE DYING GOD IS ON OUR SIDE.

Worship this week the gods of your choice.

DEMONSTATION STAGED

Why Demonstrate?

Organizers Explain Purposes And Plans

A demonstration protesting the war in Viet Nam yesterday afternoon at the Fountain was marred by snow, sleet, and freezing weather, but not by incident of disorderly conduct. Present were approximately thirty demonstrators, two hundred onlookers, and, for purposes of protection in the case of violence, about twenty-five Burlington policemen and UVM Security men. The demonstration was organized by the University of Vermont Ad Hoc Committee, a loosely-knit organization of persons whose purpose is explained in a published statement which was issued to members of the crowd. The statement reads as follows:

"The Purpose of this Demonstration is to Call Upon Our Government to work Toward Peace and to exhibit a modicum of reason toward the War in Viet Nam."

"As citizens we consider it our duty to dissent from the consensus supporting what we consider to be the untenable position of the present administration."

"As a group we advocate no specific policy because we believe that there are a number of alternatives. One need not know a cure for cancer to be against it."

About eight of the demonstrators held signs, bearing such slogans as, "Peace and reason in Viet Nam and toward our fellow man." One sign announced a teach-in on the war in Viet Nam, in the North Lounge in Billings on May 4th.

Prof. Spinner explains rationale of demonstration.

(Credit: Oliver, S.P.S.)

The major speech of the demonstration was delivered by Professor Thomas J. Spinner of the History department. Spinner said that the war is senseless, "both morally and politically."

An onlooker asked Spinner if he thought the United States doesn't have an obligation to combat Communist expansion. "You've got to be very careful what you mean by Communist expansion," he replied. "At one time, when 'Communism' meant Stalin's Russia, the issue was more clear cut. Today there are many different brands of Communism." He said that the war can hardly be thought of as any type of expansionism, because at present "the United States is the only foreign power in Viet Nam." He pointed out that this country is interfering in what is basically a Vietnamese civil war, and quoted former President Kennedy, who said that this is a Vietnamese war, not an American one.

Spinner said that the reason the National Liberation Front is so powerful is because it has the support of the people "in fifty to sixty per-cent of the area of Viet Nam." He said that Ho Chi Minh holds a great deal of influence among the peasants of Vietnam because "He is a nationalist before he is a communist."

Spinner warned of the danger of future involvement by the Chinese and Russians if we continue the war. "I'm sure you all support the Monroe Doctrine," he told the crowd. "If we have the right to keep aggressors out of the western hemisphere, isn't it logical that Russia and China should be concerned about their neighboring countries?"

He went on to say that "every view concerning the war should be discussed freely, and this is what has been done today. Because this is a democracy, we are all responsible for the actions of our government." He said that "today's peaceful demonstration had made up the disgraceful, deplorable exhibition a week ago Wednesday", referring to the previous, similar demonstration which was marred by egg-throwing hecklers.

The demonstration was heavily covered by reporters for all the mass media, both local and national. However, because there were no incidents, very little publicity is expected. One disappointed reporter from Life magazine commented that "peaceful demonstrations are common throughout the country," and are therefore not very newsworthy.

"Shoemaker's Holiday" Receives High Praise

L. to R.: Jeff Freeman, Esther Sundell and Paul Jellinek rehearse for the production.

By K. Klonsky

Fred La Belle's production of The Shoemaker's Holiday was one of the most delightful theatre experiences I have ever had. A combination of superior acting and a rare assortment of lovable characters made this Elizabethan comedy by Thomas Dekker both absorbing and hilarious.

The play moves through all strata of society, from Simon Eyre, a prideful and mad shoemaker, and his wild entourage of merry-makers, Pirk and Hodge, to the sedate but not overly satirized world of the court. Its theme is the age old and timeless "love conquers all."

Paul Jellinek as Simon Eyre was sheer perfection in character and gesture but his booming voice was often garbled in the confines of Arena Theatre. Craig Bovia, a visiting student from Carnegie Tech, played Pirk. Bovia turned in the most outstanding performance I have ever seen at UVM as the carousing drunkard "Sheet shaker." Philip Warren Brown, in the role of Hodge, played very well opposite the talented Bovia. Judith Guernsey was simply great in the role of the saucy Sybil. Michael Mermelstein was excellent in the role of the reserved Roger Oteley. Peter Covette carried himself regally as the King. Elizabeth Ingoldsby, as the stunning Rose, spoke and acted beautifully. Esther Sundell was effective and effervescent as Mistress Margery. The remainder of the large cast performed admirably.

The Shoemaker's Holiday was a triumph for director Fred La Belle and for costumes designer Louise Rieger. This bawdy and charming play, with the help of Craig Bovia, was an outstanding success.

"Barefoot In The Park" Called "Sheer Nonsense"

Yet Acting Was Actually Good

By K. Klonsky

It is unfortunate that the last Lane Series presentation in a truly outstanding year was such a crashing bore. It would have been sweet to end on a high note, but Barefoot in the Park, presented on Tuesday night April 19, was not that high note. Despite the general approval and enthusiasm of the large audience, I found the play to be as trite and was funny as a T.V. situation comedy, and I am at a loss to know how it has ever become the top running show on Broadway.

The acting was actually good. I feel that Joan McCall, Joel Crothers, Edythe Wood, Woody Romoff, and Alan North played the parts as well as anyone could. Crothers, reminiscent of Dick Van Dyke, offered some delightful moments. But how much can really be expected from a script totally lacking in sophistication and spiced with rehearsed jokes?

The story concerns a newlywed couple in a five story walkup on the East side of Manhattan. The wife, (Joan McCall) would like very much to see her mother (Edythe Wood) get out into the world and live it up. Much to the husband's (Crothers) dismay, the mother is matched up with a local "Bluebeard" of the neighborhood, (Romoff) In the end, everyone concerned has learned a little lesson on how to live, and frankly I couldn't care less.

If one is interested in sheer nonsense I suppose Barefoot in the Park could make for an enjoyable evening. I viewed it as a sheer waste of time.

Inspiration Comes From Living Arts Conference Held

The Vermont Academy of Arts and Sciences, under the leadership of Dr. Lucien Hanks of the University of Vermont, sponsored a symposium at Castleton State Teachers College on Saturday, April 23rd. The purpose of the Academy and the Conference is to increase interest, participation, and excellence of achievement in the Arts, the Humanities and the Sciences; or, as Dr. Hanks explained the purpose of the "party" - to give the students a chance to meet and talk with students from other campuses about art and literature, to exchange ideas and to encourage an enjoyment of learning and a love for creating.

The conference was opened by C. Leonard Hoag of Middlebury College, Vice President of the Academy. The welcome was given by Dr. Richard Dundas, President of Castleton St. College, Host of the symposium and by Dr. Hanks, of whom Dr. Dundas said, "The Academy owes its existence to his indefatigable energy and his creative charm."

ADDRESS ON "ART AND MAGIC"

The address "Art and Magic in Higher Education" was delivered by Dr. Robert Babcock, Provost of the Vermont State Colleges who spoke of the need for art and magic to prevail above the constant departmentalization, red tape and prerequisites of college life, for "It is in the art field that one becomes humanized."

ORIGINAL PAPERS PRESENTED

Two sessions were held during the day at which original papers were presented by undergraduate students from nine Vermont Colleges. In the morning session there were three papers presented by UVM students. The Tattered Sparrow, a dramatic dialogue created by Jan B. Quackenbush and skillfully enacted by William Dixon and Larry Sargent got the whole "party" off to roaring start with an exciting conflict of character versus performance.

In another building on the campus, Judith Burgess was presenting her Political Science paper entitled, The Green in the Granite: Portrait of a Vermont Political Boss, and Theodore F. Kinerson was reading his paper, The Spread of Islam in Southeast Asia, in which he discussed the political, religious and economic motives.

READINGS OFFERED

During the afternoon panels, more exhilarating reading and discussions went on. Robert Williams presented his short story, Some Bones for Music Perhaps, assisted by the able cast of Sue Parker, Judy Watson, Michael Patterson and Jan Quackenbush. The audience was divided as to whether the story came to life due to the tremendous dialogue or the strength of the imagery in the narrative.

In the Social Sciences Field, Charles Noyes presented his paper entitled, Some Observations on the Little Big Horn.

The participants were well rewarded for their efforts by the responsive comments and questions of the audience in the discussions following the presentations. Many wanted to know how the respective writers found their inspiration. To one of them Jan Quackenbush answered "I think that inspiration comes from just living."

Paintings were displayed by Trent Anderson, Ann Babcock, Susan Tebbets, Norma Sherk, and Paul Jedzinek. Sculpture was exhibited by Florence Schonbrun and H. Brown.

A concert of original music by the Bennington College String Ensemble added a lovely ending to the lovely day.

The thanks to all of the students involved are extended to Dr. Babcock, Dr. Dundas, Dr. Charles R. Anderson, Prof. of Art at Castleton, and to the members of the Academy, including C. Leonard Hoag of Middlebury, Francis X. Gohey of St. Michaels, and especially to Dr. Lucien M. Hanks and Dr. Edward J. Miles of UVM.

HE MUST NOT MAKE AN UNQUALIFIED STATEMENT UNLESS HE IS SUFFICIENTLY INFORMED ON THE FACTS. A statement may often be the basis of important action. If based on incomplete information, results may be disastrous. 16. HE MUST LET HIS STAFF KNOW THAT HE MEANS WHAT HE SAYS WHEN HE TELLS THEM THAT HE WANTS THEM TO DISAGREE WITH HIM WHEN THEY DO. Nearly every executive tells his staff he wants them to speak out when they disagree. He must convince them that he means what he says when he makes this statement for it is their duty to give him the benefit of their best judgment and experience. At the same time, disagreement does not absolve a man from giving his best efforts once a course of action is decided upon. 17. HE LIMITS HIS NUMBER OF REASONS. One reason for a decision is better than several. If several reasons are given, and one of these, though not controlling, is disproved, it can make awkward or tear down the whole presentation. 18. HE MUST NOT GET MAD UNLESS HE DECIDES TO. These are times, like a boxer working himself up to a fighting pitch, when an executive has to show a flash of fire to carry a point or arouse people out of their apathy. But this must be a deliberate, and not impulsive, action. 19. HE RECOGNIZES THE UNUSUAL FROM THE ROUTINE, AND HANDLES THE UNUSUAL IN A SPECIAL MANNER. Many men adequately handle the routine every day, and the business gets along all right. Sometimes even a casual request, due to its source, merits unusual handling. 20. HE MUST NOT OVERLY SUBJECT TO FLATTERY. Star dust blinds more people than sand. 21. HE MUST STEEP HIMSELF IN THE FACTS, BUT HE MUST RECOGNIZE THAT A TIME COMES WHEN HE MUST DEFER RESEARCH AND MAKE THE DECISION. So often voluminous research is acquired. For what purpose? To acquire additional voluminous research. The difficult, which is the decision, is postponed. 22. HE MUST LIKE PEOPLE. A man who does not like people multiplies his work and minimizes his effectiveness. 23. HE SHOULD HAVE A SENSE OF HUMOR. Without this I doubt if a man can endure, with good grace, the rugged path that accompanies accomplishment. 24. HE HAS AN OBLIGATION TO GUARD HIS HEALTH. Regular exercise is essential; even if he just takes a 15-minute walk before breakfast every day. If a man maintains a sound body, he may, in the years after his "three score and five," accomplish his greatest service. His country — as well as his family, associates and friends — needs him.

"Aha," said the wily professor. "That still leaves 14 books unaccounted for!"

"Nineteen," corrected the young man behind the desk. "and every one of them — oh, there may be hundreds, of thousands of missing books in all, right within these doors — yes, all of them are out there somewhere." He gave a magnificent sweep of his arm. Then he added humbly, "Probably."

Prof. Ranapip was stunned. He sank into an easy chair nearby; what did he see on the table next to him but five books labeled "Frog Anatomy." He suddenly had an idea. He looked on other tables and then on all the shelves. Every once in a while he would find a "Frog Anatomy" book or two and add it to his pile.

Three hours later he returned to the desk with a stack of 17 books and he went back and got almost as many more. "I'm astounded said the librarian. "I just don't know what to say."

"Reserve," said the professor. "Put them all on reserve. Permanently. And whenever any other 'Frog Anatomy' books show up, put them on reserve."

The, with great professional pride he added, "While you're at it put every zoology book you have on reserve!" And he strode out.

Soon the word got around that the zoology department had begun a new program and that its students were learning astounding new things and had a deep yearning for more knowledge and were producing brilliant and novel research reports and, in short, were becoming model, inquisitive, confident, sincere, well-rounded, intelligent scholars, now that they could be assured of getting any book they wanted any time.

The art department was the next department to put all its readings on reserve. And then the history, physics, and home economics departments. And then the rest.

Of course, the librarians had a bit of a time rearranging things, but soon they were very pleased they knew where all the books were at all times, which was a source of great professional pride to them, not to mention relief.

At first, Dr. Porqua made quite a fuss because he liked to consider deeply the books he read, but after a little work at the Reading Center and after being told that he could take home his philosophy books overnight, the great philosopher began to like the new system.

Of course, UVM students became known all over the land for their academic prowess and success in later life, and everyone on campus studied happily ever after.

"Saucer" sighted over Votey? A picture is worth a thousand words!

Question for the Week: What do you think of the recent UFO scares? Do you think any of the reports may be real?

Stuart Shapiro; A & S, 1967, New York, N. Y.; No, I don't think any of these sighting are of flying saucers. I think a great deal of all these scares have come as a result of spring fever and educated college pranks. With all the current emphasis on outer space, reporting UFO's is the "in" thing to do. I think it's just a passing fad.

Rubi Minkin; A & S, 1968, Clifton, N. J.; The fact that so many people saw them leaves the possibility that they may be real, but people tend to exaggerate their visual experiences, and unless some lasting physical proof can be found I don't feel that they could be flying saucers. There are too many phenomena in science that are not yet understood and therefore the UFO's may merely be unexplained natural occurrences.

Karin Ringdahl; Med. Tech., 1967, Rome, N.Y.; If life can exist on this planet with the advanced technology it possesses, there is no reason why there can't be another civilization on another planet in the universe which is too far away for us to observe that has a technology even further advanced than ours. In this sense I feel that since there are so many UFO's that cannot be explained, I think that it is quite possible and maybe even probably that some of these reports are of saucers from another planet. But I don't feel that there is any reason to fear them. They are here to observe us and are probably just as afraid of us as we are wary of them.

John McLaughlin, Jr.; A & S, 1967, Boston, Mass.; No, I do not think they are real. They are just figments of the imagination. Actually, they are gases in the air and the people who report them are frightened publicity-seeking neurotics. These people say they saw them one hundred years ago and they will say the same thing one hundred years from now.

Editor's Note: A word to the wise; Be careful what you say and to whom because you too may be put "On the Spot."

Golfers Prep For State Meet

By George Passage

Coach Ed Donnelly's golf team had four matches in five days this week in hopes of sharpening its game for the State Meet scheduled for May 4 at Middlebury.

On Monday Vermont split their matches with Clarkson and St. Lawrence at Canton, N. Y. The Cats defeated Clarkson easily, but lost a close 4-3 decision to the Larries. This brings the linkmen's record to 2-4 on the year.

Joe Donnelly remained undefeated this season by posting victories in both matches. Other winners were Art Shields and Bob Nadler, Captain Jim Nixon, George Van Tassal, and Tom Chiota split their two matches.

Nixon believes the team's fine balance should contribute to excellent finishes in the medal play of the State and Yankee Conference tournaments. The Cats have finished second in the state tournament the last three years, but have a good chance to come out on top this year.

IVCF Attends N.E. Meeting

This past weekend five members of Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship Attended a New England Missionary Conference in Boston.

The purpose of this conference was to acquaint college students with what is happening in the mission field today and to cause students to consider carefully their role in this world-wide enterprise.

Special emphasis was placed upon the changing role of the missionary today -- how the church mission has failed in the past; how the methods and techniques of the missionary must be revamped to meet the needs of the future. Of special concern is the effect of Communism upon the church and missionary in Red China, Korea, and other parts of the Far East; and how do we explain the fact that many of the leaders of Communist countries today were educated here in supposedly "Christian" America, and became Communists while here.

Other areas dealt with concerned the reaction of native people to the foreign missionary -- do they want him?

These and other questions will be discussed by those attending the conference on Mon., May 2 at 7 p.m. in Marsh Lounge Billings.

Departure Issued

The second edition of Departure, new literary magazine, will be available on Mon., May 2, at the book store and at the main desk of Billings.

This issue will be distributed free as was the first. Starting in the fall, however, each issue will sell for 25 cents in an attempt to put the magazine on a more independent financial footing.

The second issue will contain about 60 pages, the layout has been revised, and some humorous material has been included.

New officers for Departure are Richard Miles, editor in chief; John Moriarty, associate editor; Kenneth Klonsky, fiction editor; Michael Minsky, poetry editor; Majorie Morton, secretary-treasurer; Judith Watson, corresponding secretary; Cora Stimpson, publicity editor; Robert Katz, layout editor; Rebecca Marshall, business manager; and James Howe of the English department, faculty advisor.

Attention: Seniors

Guest tickets for the Commencement Ceremony will be available in the office of the Registrar, room 158, Waterman Building. May graduates (except College of Medicine) may pick up their tickets during the period May 2 - May 6 between 10:00 a.m. and 3:00 p.m.

Each graduate will be limited to four tickets. Those desiring extra tickets (limit of two) may fill out a slip at the time the allotted tickets are picked up. A drawing for the limited numbers of extra tickets will be held on Mon., May 9.

The names of those individuals selected to receive extra tickets will be posted on the Registrar's bulletin board on the lower floor of Waterman on Wed., May 11. Those selected to receive extra tickets may pick them up at the Registrar's Office during regular office hours on that day only.

May graduates of the College of Medicine may pick up their tickets at the office of Student Affairs of the College of Medicine.

No tickets will be required for the Baccalaureate Service on Sun. morning, May 22.

To be returned to S.A. desk at Billings Center by Friday, May 6.

Cats Host UConn In Must Win Game

CAT-NIPS

By Bob Bloomenthal

Vermont spring sports suffered a disastrous week of action last week, but all teams have opportunities to redeem themselves in important contests this week.

The baseball team got off on the wrong last weekend by losing two big ones at UMass. Ralph Lapointe's crew has five games this week, all against first-class opponents. A sweep of these tilts would be somewhat similar to having the Boston Celtics lose five in a row, however.

The tennis team hopes to get revenge against the team which stopped their two year long winning streak when they travel to Middlebury for a rematch Wednesday.

Both the golf and track teams expect to bounce back from defeats this week. The big one for the golfers will be Wednesday at Middlebury in the State Meet. The cinder-men will have their chance here Saturday against URI.

Would You Believe . . . Ski Coach Bob Stone has been elected secretary-treasurer of the Eastern Intercollegiate Ski Association for 1966-67. . . Former pro basketball coach and player Alex Hannum says "the home team has a seven point advantage in pro ball. Five of these points are due to the fact that the fans are cheering for the home team". . . Speaking of pro basketball, only 15 years ago the Fort Wayne Pistons outscored the Minneapolis Lakers 19 to 18 with each team hitting on four field goals. . . Today, the 24-second rule and the tremendous improvement in the overall shooting allows each team to average about 110 points a game. . . JOHN McCORD - The junior righthander will probably get the starting nod Saturday against Connecticut. He has a 2-1 record on the year and has pitched complete games in all three of his previous starts.

If the baseball team has any hopes at all of staying in the race for the Yankee Conference championship, the game against Connecticut this Saturday is a must win for the Cats. This situation arose when Vermont dropped a pair last weekend at Massachusetts. The team came back Tuesday to beat New Hampshire, 4-2, but the Cats will probably have to win the remainder of their conference games in order to catch the two undefeated YC leaders, Maine and Massachusetts.

In the first game at U Mass three Catamount errors opened the way to a 4-2 loss to the Redmen. John McCord was the loser despite allowing but one earned run. Saturday the Cats opened up a 4-1 lead after six innings only to blow the goods and lose, 5-4, in the bottom of the ninth. Sophomore John Packard was tagged with the loss in relief of starter Len Sheffott.

The brightest spot in otherwise dismal weekend was the hitting of shortstop and captain Bobby Cronin. The quiet senior banged our six hits in nine trips to the plate against Mass. With this performance Cronin moved to the top in the Yankee Conference batting race with an astounding .615 average.

The New Hampshire game was highlighted by two Vermont home runs. Senior Dave Wayne hit an inside-the-park homer in the third inning. Sophomore Don Fitts seemed to regain the hitting touch he showed on the southern trip when he got two hits including a 400-foot blast over the left field fence.

McCord went the distance for the third time this season, yielding seven hits in gaining his second pitching win of the season. Through the New Hampshire game Cronin led the team with a .500 batting average while Wayne was the best in runs batted in with four.

Thursday the Cats sought their second State Series win in a home game against Middlebury.

TOUGH WEEK AHEAD

Besides the U Conn game Saturday, Vermont will have four other extremely important games this week. Sunday the Cats face always rough St. Michael's. The team travels to Maine the following day for a two game set with the Black Bears, co-leader of the Yankee Conference. Thursday St. Michael's will be at Centennial Field for a return match. By the end of the week the Cats should have a good idea of their chance in both the YC and State Series races.

FROSH STAND 4-2

Coach Fuzzy Evans' freshman diamond crew upped their season's mark to 4-2 last week. The Kittens swept two from Norwich and split a pair with Dartmouth Tuesday. Dave Geiser, Mac Adams, and Charlie Brucato all won pitching decisions. The team's hitting has been supbar as they were twice held to one hit. Dave LaPointe clouted a two-run homer against Norwich however. Friday the Kittens again face Norwich in a pair. St. Lawrence will be here Tuesday and the frosh travel to Dartmouth Thursday.

Bobby Cronin lead the baseball team at bat last week.

Don Fitts smacked a 400-foot homer against New Hampshire is not very enthusiastic about the manner in which college coaches go about it. . . The competition is so great that the coaching seems anti-climactic to the Couz compared to the recruiting. . . Baseball captain Bobby Cronin has been named CYNIC Athlete-of-the-Week for his hitting feats last week. . . The annual spring football intrasquad scrimmage will be held this Saturday at 2:30 on the Centennial Field gridiron.

Track Team At Trinity

By George Passage

With the state meet on May 7 just a week away, the track team of coach Archie Post hopes to regain its winning form against Trinity College at Hartford, Conn. Last Wednesday the freshman and varsity teams traveled to Schenectady, N. Y., to do battle with the Union Dutchmen.

This past Saturday in New Haven, Conn., the cinder-men lost a heartbreaker to Southern Connecticut by a slim nine point margin, 79-70. The loss left the Cats with a H mark.

CATS DOMINATE HURDLES

As usual the Cats dominated the two hurdle events, but this was not enough to offset subpar performances in the other running events.

Captain Don Mayland, Jim Bahrenburg, and Argie Economou made it a clean sweep in the high hurdles. Vin DeCesaris and Economou place one-two in the 440 yard intermediate hurdles.

In the six other running events the Gats were able to salvage only one first place. Jim Dedman usually guarantees UVM first places in the 440 yard dash and last Saturday was no different. Dedman broke the tape in the time of 51.5 seconds.

Yankee Conference champ Ed Childs and sophomore Jack Farley captured first places in the high jump and broad jump, respectively. Farley's leap was an excellent 21'5".

MAYLAND LONE DOUBLE-WINNER

Mayland was the meet's lone double winner as a result of a 13'6" pole vault with Tom Fyles taking second. Fyles, one of the hardest workers for the Post-men, is the first Vermont resident ever to clear 13 feet.

Consistent pointgetter Pete Nolan and Farley placed on-two in the triple jump. Nolan's winning leap was 39' 9 1/2".

Paul Ardell collected eight points with a first in the shot put and a second in the discus. Pete Stickney and Keith Keiderling also collected points in the weights event.

FROSH SECOND

The Kitten track team placed second in a triangular meet last Tuesday by belting Brattleboro, but falling victim to Rutland High. The frosh traveled to Union Wednesday and are at Norwich Friday.

Bob Criulla had two firsts and a second Tuesday, being victorious in the 220 and the pole vault. Richie Kobat had a first in the broad jump and three seconds, thus contributing 17 points to the UVM cause.

Other Kittens who captured blue ribbons were Ralph Edelman in the javelin, Ralph Coleman in the two mile, and Weston Cate in the high jump.

Intramural Scoreboard

by Mick Kropsky

Four records were set last week as Sigma Nu swam its way to a first place in the all-campus swim meet. Sigma Nu only captured two first places in the meet, but they also placed second in the five events en route to winning the meet.

Sigma Phi Epsilon came in a close second, while the third spot in the meet went to Delta Psi. Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Sigma Phi came in fourth and fifth respectively.

New records were set in the 100 yard free style, the 100 yard breaststroke, and 150 yard medley relay.

By winning the meet, Sig Nu picked up a total of 60 all-sports trophy points. Second place Sig Ep received 55 points. The overall leader in the competition for the All Sports Trophy is Delta Psi with 605.5 points. SAE is in the

Netmen Upset

The UVM tennis team suffered its first defeat in three years last week, but then bounced back for a win which could start another streak. Last Saturday the Cats saw a skein dating back to 1964 snapped by a tough Middlebury College team in the Gutterson Field House.

Don Henson, Bruce Hanna, and Al Secunda gained singles victories, but Middlebury swept all three doubles matches for a 6-3 win. UVM captain Paul Ryan lost his first singles match of the season when he was upsetsby Middlebury sophomore John Mallouk.

On Tuesday the Cats rebounded from the surprise loss with an 8-1 trouncing of Union, Ryan, Laddie, Cook, Henson, Hanna, and Ted Jaslin won singles matches. The teams of Ryan and Rich Sachs, Cook and Dutch Curtis, and Hanna and Don Miller swept the doubles.

Brud Humpherys' netmen hope to keep their winning ways this week in Yankee Conference meets Saturday here against Rhode Island and Monday at New Hampshire. The team will have an opportunity to gain revenge against Middlebury Wednesday in a big away meet.

runnerup spot with 551 points.

Intramural Highlights . . . With only two weeks remaining in the intramural schedule, Delta Psi appears to have the All Sports Trophy sewed up for the second year in a row. . . The wrestling championship will be determined this week. . . A full schedule of softball games are being played almost everyday as time draws near to determine the all-campus softball champions.

Torrey Teacher Awards Initiated

President Shannon McCune has announced the creation of Joseph Torrey Teacher Awards, to be given to ten UVM teachers for the academic year 1966-67, named for one of the most illustrious teachers at the University 125 years ago.

The Joseph Torrey Teachers will be restricted to those full-time faculty members holding appointment as Instructors, Assistant Professors, and Associate Professors, regardless of tenure. They will hold these appointments for one year and not be eligible for reappointment for four years.

The ten selected will work informally with the John Dewey Scholars, the James Marsh Fellows and other undergraduate students during the year.

Pres. McCune has requested that the students assist him in making these appointments, by nominating teachers who they think to be deserving. Teachers should be nominated who have made a significant impact on the intellectual development of undergraduate students at UVM. Student nominations will be reviewed by a faculty committee.

It is tentatively planned that each Joseph Torrey Teacher will receive some small stipend to be used at his discretion, in the hope that it will be used to promote closer relations between members of the faculty and their students.

WSGA Announces New Curfew Policy Juniors And Seniors Given Extended Curfews

WSGA Council passed a new rule concerning curfews for junior and senior women. The new curfew regulations will go into effect in Sept. 1966. The reason for the change was partially brought about as a result of the University's new off-campus housing regulations. The women students expressed the desire for more privileges, and after much consideration and investigation, WSGA Council passed the following curfew changes:

Junior women (those women students having been at the University for three years and/or have junior academic standing) will now be granted four extended curfews per semester. This is the privilege that is at present granted to seniors.

The new senior privilege will be an unlimited number of extended curfews, the extension being to 3:00 a.m. the following morning.

The women students will have to notify their Head Residents before 8:00 p.m. the night the extended curfew is taken, and will be responsible for making arrangements for someone to let them back into the residence hall.

WSGA Council sincerely hopes that these new privileges will be used with discretion. They also hope that the women students will, in the future, continue to express themselves freely as to what they feel might be more satisfactory to them as far as the rules and regulations of women students are concerned.

Outstanding ROTC Cadets Receive Honors Students Honored

On Monday, Honors Day, many UVM students were rewarded for their achievement in scholarship, athletics and leadership. This was the 72nd year that such recognition of achievement has been made.

After the Carillon recital by Francis A. Weinrich, the Overture, Processional and National Anthem by the UVM band, the invocation was given by Rabbi Max B. Wall. Then President McCune gave a welcome and introduced the speaker of the day, Donald A. Gannon, '25, B.S., L.L.D., former Trustee of the University and present President of Stop and Shop.

In his address, "Frontiers" Mr. Gannon pointed out the major frontiers or areas of concern to college students today.

After Mr. Gannon's address, there was the recognition of Students for Highest Scholastic Achievement. Then Milton E. Goggans, outgoing Chief Justice of the Student Court, gave the oath of office to Carl H. Lisman, inaugurated as Chief Justice and Again this year, beautiful weather provided the setting for UVM's 98th Annual Military Review, held last Friday at Centennial Field. Cadet Colonel Peter J. McGregor of Burlington was the commander of troops and Lt. Governor John J. Daley was the Reviewing Officers. Other members of the Reviewing party were University President Shannon McCune, Colonel Leonard G. Robinson, PMS, and Colonel Pierre D. Boy, PMS at the University of New Hampshire.

Closing out this year's drill activities, the Review capped a busy day which began in mid-morning with the inspection by Representatives of the First United States Army Annual General Inspection Team, and culminated in McGregor's command to "Pass in Review" shortly after 5:00 PM.

During the Review, the presentation of Colors saw Miss Barbara Bigelow, honorary cadet colonel and 1966 Military Ball Queen reintroduced to the Brigade. Queen Barbara presented the ROTC Color to the cadet color guard. The Cadets reciprocated with a bouquet of Red Roses presented by Cadet Captain Michael Sherman. Each of the honorary company commanders also received a bouquet from their cadet counterparts.

Student Ambassador Announced

Roth "Looking Forward To Experience"

By Gary Lawson

During the Honors Day program, it was announced that Lawrence Roth will be the First UVM Ambassador to India. Larry is a junior and president of his fraternity, Alpha Epsilon Pi. He is a political science major from New Rochelle, New York and plans to attend law school after graduation from the University. He has been a Kake Walker and a member of the Freshman swim team and was on the track team this past year.

In a recent interview, I asked some questions pertaining to the trip to India via the Ambassador program. The interview brought out Larry's feelings. He said that he was "looking forward to the entire experience, meeting and living with the people, seeing the country. I hope it will make a few things about life clearer - it may make them more complex - but that's precisely what I want to find out!"

Larry's older brother is now in the Peace Corps in Tungama, Africa. From his brother, he acquired the idea that participating in a program such as the Peace Corps should be a dynamic part of one's education.

Larry Roth
(Credit: Rochester, S.P.S.)

His reaction to being selected was one of being "happy and honored. The other applicants were all well qualified and I feel fortunate to have been chosen."

Before leaving the United States, Larry plans to do a lot of background studying on India. He also plans to acquaint himself with the world-wide issues in which the United States is involved.

Dr. Levy Awarded Fellowship

A University of Vermont College of Medicine heart specialist has been awarded a five-year teaching fellowship in cardiology by the American Heart Association and the Vermont Heart Association. He is Dr. Arthur M. Levy, assistant professor of medicine.

The teaching scholarship program was established by AHA as an added step in a long-range program to improve the level of education in clinical medicine in the field of cardiovascular diseases. The new teaching awards are an effort to upgrade the status of clinical teaching by providing recognition for younger men who have already demonstrated exceptional ability as medical teachers.

State heart associations contribute half of the fellowship for recipients in their state.

Dr. Levy was one of two New England physicians honored and one of less than two dozen in the United States.

Dr. Levy first came to the University of Vermont in 1958 as an assistant resident and then as a fellow in cardiology. He served two years in the Army and then spent a year as a trainee in cardiology and assistant in medicine at Boston Children's Hospital before returning to Vermont in 1963.

Spring: Season Of Life!

By Marianne Martin

Spring!! It is not so much her personality as it is her position. After winter, anything is welcome! So, in tribute, convertible tops fold back and cycles drone a constant litany.

No one can ignore Spring as time jumps ahead and grass appears to re-establish the "verd" in Vermont. Even our own U.V.M. acknowledges Spring. Ground maintenance crew spears litter piece by piece while Redstone campus girls sport swimsuits piece by piece and egg-be-spattered demonstrators protest "peacefully." Even the faculty acknowledges Spring! Hmmmmmm Would you believe half the faculty? No matter, the point is, once again Spring has arrived.

Glorious, come-alive, live-it-up Spring! But don't get overly enthusiastic for, as Ferlinghetti says, "Right in the middle comes the smiling mortician."

There is nothing quite as incongruous as patches of bright blue sky peeking in on the yellow-green fluorescence of the gymnasium. It seems one of life's ironies that, while, through knowledge we are equipping ourselves for life, that very life is floating by and over our heads.

"A typically shortsighted student view," scoffs Mr. I.M. Wisdom, and, he is correct ---but sometimes, exam time, don't you wonder?

Spring is a fascinating season, always pushing crocuses same time, same place, always prodding a young man's fancy same emotion, same direction. A college campus is suddenly alive with gay prints and sandals and sunglasses walking to and from classes.

And with the change of dress, comes a change in attitude. While Spring holds sway, it is difficult to believe that God is dead or that there is a place called Viet Nam. For a few short weeks, the world seems incapable of an evil thought, innocent of ugly occurrences.

As nature undergoes her annual face-lifting, humans experience a similar "lift." (Do we dare call it "spiritual?") Anyhow, it is a good feeling . . . this thing called Spring.

$4,000 Granted For Improvements

The Interfraternity Council at last Tuesday's meeting voted to set aside the sum of $4,000 from this year's Kake Walk profits for a new sound system in Patrick Gym. The recommendation for this was made by last year's Kake Walk directors. The IFC feels that these profits should be put back into improving Kake Walk. The system will be installed by graduation. It will also be available for the numerous activities held at the Gym.

The new system is greatly improved over the old one. It will give clear and fine tone to all parts of the Gym. Kake Walk needs a flexible system in order that the different activities may be thoroughly enjoyed by the audience. This will be fulfilled by the new system.

The system is being dedicated to the memory of the late Professor Frederic C. Marston for his outstanding contributions to the University.

What is Honors' Day? I think it is safe to say that it is an occasion for the expression of personal and collective pride in a job nearly finished; for most of us, it is an opportunity to laud the considerable merit of a few students. It is, or should be above all, a moment of dignity which does indeed honor those students (or members of the community, for that matter) who have done extraordinarily well in one

In this particular case, I think the ninety-five percent of the university who did not choose to attend were absolutely right. To the outstanding students, I extend many more congratulations and much more honor than I feel were expressed this morning! It is deplorable that so few students feel it necessary to support this type of function; however, it is equally disturbing to do so, time and again, and depart from the hall feeling that the ceremony just witnessed really was a mere mechanical tradition which expressed nothing and should be deleted from the calendar. If, in the future, the members of this community who organize such occasions desire a spontaneous, enthusiastic reaction from a large section of the student body, the least they can do is make it worthy not only of the attention of the large group, but also to

By Professor James J. Best

This will be my last regular column for the CYNIC. As of September I will terminate my employment with UVM and join the faculty of the University of Washington (Seattle). I am one of a bevy of young faculty members who are leaving (to be replaced by a younger, but equally talented faculty) and my reasons may be typical enough to be instructive.

Since this was to be my "first" job I intended to spend only two or three years here before moving on; for this reason I was looking for a spot where I could finish my dissertation and try out my wings as a fledgling academician. Then I could move on to a bigger and better institution. UVM has filled the requirements for a first job; the dissertation is completed and I have battle scars to show for two years of teaching. With my new degree I can no longer afford to stay at UVM, even if I wanted. I can make substantially more money elsewhere, excluding scenery which UVM includes as part of its salary schedule.

If salary and desire for improvement were the only reasons for moving my case would not be unusual. Any school can expect to lose a certain number of faculty for these reasons. Administrators call it "normal attrition." Students and colleagues also play an important role in my decision to leave. I find most UVM students to be pleasant but unimaginative blobs who expect to be spoon fed information which they can regurgitate on exams under the guise. They are learning something. Most of the faculty, on the other hand, play the student game, thinking that spoon feeding is the essence of the intellectual process. The resultant intellectual dry rot has, from time to time, paralyzed whole departments. There are departments and individuals within departments from whom students can learn - if they desire. The administration did little to make my decision to leave more difficult. While there is growing pressure for scholarly research there is no corresponding easing of teaching loads or availability of research funds. Untenured professors are expected to teach twelve hours per week and produce books and papers at the same time. Even if the professor desires to do research the university has only eight $1500 summer research grants for the entire faculty.

Is UVM unusual? I doubt it. But academicians must continue to search for their Valhalla - wherever it may be. For some it may be UVM; it was not for me.

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT

Before I leave, however, I wish to leave a last will and testament, as is the fashion in high school year books.

To the University of Vermont I leave fond hope that it may someday find its place in the world of academic institutions.

To President McCune I leave the reminder that Vermont is now more important than Korea.

To Mrs. McCune I leave the impression of her charm and quiet humor which makes her the ideal First Lady of the university.

To Vice-President Rowell I leave my best wishes for a bright career as academician-politician. Remember what happened to Professor Babcock.

To Vice President Cook I leave my endorsement for his dream of a university faculty which is both excellent and well paid.

To Dean Kidder I leave the disillusion of being a "lame-duck" dean, after many years of faithful service.

To Dean Patzer I leave the fulfillment of his wish to become Dean of Women.

To the members of my own department I leave a fervent wish for better things to come. To Professor Hilberg, promotion and a pay raise; to Professor Gould, the Virgin Islands; to Professor Staron, skiing in September; and to the rest, bigger and better dreams of the future.

To Professor Miles I leave the continuing role of communicator within the academic community.

To Professor Daniels I leave my sincere thanks for his efforts to keep me at UVM.

To the rest of the faculty I leave you in favor of a more favorable "balance of trade."

To the students of the university I leave you your desire that the university be a relatively painless maturation process which ends with the diploma as a passport to the "good life."

To the students who have labored in my classes I can only hope that the ordeal was not too great, as unprepared as we both often were.

To the students who took time to talk to me in my two years I leave my thanks for the good impressions I have of UVM. To the members of Phi Delta Theta and Alpha Delta Pi I leave the task of finding a new chaperone; my service in this capacity was a genuine pleasure.

To the officers and members of the CYNIC and Pre-Law Club I leave my thanks for allowing me to sit in.

To the Library I leave all the books which I have not returned.

To the Infirmary I leave my gratitude that I am not a student. To Freeman, French, and Freeman I leave the opinion that after experimenting with UVM they should now know how to design academic buildings. But one can never be sure.

To the entire academic community, both mentioned and unmentioned, I leave my warmest thanks for making my stay in Vermont a pleasant one. It is with genuine sadness that we leave. From you I take my leave.

University Vs. College

Harold Taylor, former President Sarah Lawrence College

"In my own experience with the structure of the big university I have found that the factor of size is not the controlling one in the quality of education provided by the mass institutions. There are literally, countless ways of re-organizing the internal structure of the large institution to control the effects of size on the quality of education. In fact, the sheer size of many of the larger institutions is one of their major assets, since they provide for a life in a community of approximately the size of a small town with a much greater variety of experience than is available in the small residential institutions for the liberal arts."

THE SCEPTIC

By M.G. Minsky

Last Monday students and faculty of the American College of 'Pataphysics convened in the Alfred Jarry Gymnasium and Cafeteria for the purpose of bestowing various awards on people and institutions which had somehow managed to distinguish themselves. Speaking at the convocation were Otis G. Forbisher, manager of a local grocery; Clifton Otis George, an automobile mechanic (ret.) and well known poetess Mrs. Saxon Wordly. Mrs. Saxon has published verse in such well known magazines as The Devout Christian Weekly Inspirer, Bugle Trumpet Drum and Harp, Will and Testament, He is Coming, and also, He Has Arrisen. Mrs. Saxon Wordly is of course the mother of our president.

Mr. Forbisher declared in no uncertain terms that the local grocery store "a basic element of our dynamic way of American life." He hoped that "more young dynamic college graduates would go into the retail business because we need you." He added that if there was "a grocery store available for every man starvation would be wiped off the face of the earth and the black tenacles of communism would be replaced by the soft green nourishing tendrils of dynamic Capitalism."

Clifton Otis George, automobile mechanic (Ret.) spoke on the importance of the automobile. He declared "that all of us know that the automobile is, and I do not mean to exaggerate, very, very, very important." Mr. George remarked "If every automobile were to disappear from the roads, highways and thruways of America, traffic would come to a grinding halt." Concluding he declared that "pedestrian deaths could be reduced if everyone were to drive." Mrs. Saxon Wordly read a poem titled "There is no more Hay, Now!"

The first award was the Goebbels Reward for Creative Journalism above and beyond the scope of Reality and was given to Frankless Lostone editor of The Vermont Sunday Muckraker (circ. 31) for his story "Bearded Veitniks disrupt education and spark near rioting at UVM during Anti-American Egg-Throwing Hootenanny." The Benedict Arnold Award for Patriotic Display went to an anonymous heckler at a recent demonstration who after being restrained from attacking a fifty year old woman carrying an American flag screamed "You goddam f--- Gooddard where why did you come here to disgrace My Campus."

The Hiroshima Award for Scientific Achievement went to Strappa Jok Fraternity for developing a twenty megaton egg. The James Joyce Award for Incoherency went to Mr. Rusk and the Pentagon was given the Jakob Lind Award for Making the Works of Franz Kafka more real. The U. S. Army was given the Best Rationalization Award for explaining after a massive bombing mission which destroyed several thousand acres had failed to kill a single Viet Cong. "The mission had psychological value."

By Alice Dee

Well the effects of spring have affected everyone. Good luck to Maggy Griefe, Sherril Coffee of DMT and Leslie Chaste who will not be here next semester for all too obvious reasons which soon will be all too obvious. Best wished to Purity Lamb of DDT who broke up with Galib Firki of POT. It's about time. Here's to Roger Anglo and Mary Sipply who "got" married last week. You deserve each other. Molly Bloom of KKK is pregnant again. But tests proved negative for Helen Butter. May God be with Jane Chased, Sarah Breen and May Dedalus. There were no faculty divorces this week but Dr. and Mrs. Raven Gassly had one helluva fight. So tata now see you all in the Den or at The HOUSE.

Plans for the 1966-67 Lane Series season have already been made and many of the top performing artists have been obtained. A Hollywood movie orchestra, a comedian and a Broadway comedy will lead next year's popular attraction: Henry Mancini and his orchestra, Victor Borge, and The Odd Couple. Classical greats include the Cleveland Orchestra, conducted by George Szell and the Metropolitan Opera National Company in an English version of La Boheme. Jazz will be represented by Stan Getz and musical comedy by George Gershwin's 'Foggy and Bess' in an all-star version.

Henry Mancini, the composer conductor, won three academy awards for his songs 'Moon River' from Breakfast at Tiffany's, 'Days of Wine and Roses', and the theme song from Charade. He has made many recordings and appeared at major universities throughout the country. Stan Getz, who is known throughout the nation for his jazz and the bossa nova, has won innumerable jazz polls in the past several years. The Broadway comedy, The Odd Couple was written by Neil Simon, who also wrote this year's Lane presentation of Barefoot in the Park. Still running on Broadway to sold-out audiences, it has been acclaimed as one of the funniest plays of our generation. The second show on the Lane Series will be the heart warming folk musical Porgy and Bess which will be accompanied by a choir and orchestra. In the classical field, The Cleveland Orchestra and the Metropolitan Opera National Company will make their first appearances in Burlington. One of the top pianist-comedians in the field, Victor Borge will highlight the series. His last appearance here was the Lane Extra of 1963.

Another performer to appear will be John Browning, a pianist, who played on the 1961 Lane Summer Series. Other attractions will be the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra, conducted by William Steinberg and the D'oyly Carte Opera Company with orchestra in a Gilbert and Sullivan

"Departure" Reveals Happy Occasion

By Jan Quackenbush

The University of Vermont, and not enough of us are aware of the fact, is maintaining a distinguished position among not only its fellow Vermont colleges, but among all the New England educational institutions as an active cultivator of the Arts and Sciences. A good share of the responsibility for this is due to the "unapathetic" portion of our student body, to certain groups and individuals who continue to produce outside the classroom. Two such groups which I am familiar with, are the University Players in the field of Drama, and that group concerned with creating and exposing to our eye good literature.

An excellent example of the sincerity and achievement of the latter group, lies within the pages of this semester's issue of Departure. The quality of content, from the cover to the last page, and created for the most part by undergraduate students, can be no less than commended. There are, to be sure, typographical errors. Yet these do not detract from this fine creation, but rather, I believe, accentuate it through contrast.

"The Ill Begotten Son" by Peter Collins, which is not a portrait of a specific man, but a modern rendition or arch-typical pattern skillfully orchestrated in its ballad form, is an example of such excellence.

"March As It Happens" by Richard Miles, successfully demonstrates a search for order in "chaos" and its tone suggests the uncomfortable when order does not appear to an intellect which demands it.

"The Creation of Danae" by Ann Pantas, which expresses the insatiable attraction between Creator and Created, is again an example of fine art. From Danae's birth to her final submission to the master, the movement is painted live imagery.

"Some Bones For Music Perhaps" by Bob Williams, is a beautiful skillful portrayal of the human quest for the meaning of Life in short story form, and is no less than splendid.

These four literary creations, as well as those for which there is no room to glimpse at, reveal a happy occasion on our campus: Departure!

We would like to join the corps of Cadets, the Pershing Rifles, the Ethan Allen Rifles, and the Military Science Instructor group in expressing our congratulations to Colonel Leonard G. Robinson on a fine career as an officer in the United States Army and wishing him and Mrs. Robinson the best of luck at Peekskill Military Academy.

R.O.T.C. CADETS TO RECEIVE COMMISSIONS

For fifty-five Seniors at the University of Vermont, 22 May 1966 will hold a double memory. On that day these fifty-five Seniors will step from the ranks of cadets to the ranks of commissioned officers in the U.S. Army. Also on that day each of the fifty-five cadets will receive diplomas from the University of Vermont.

Each of these ceremonies represents four years of hard work and each cadet will look upon them with a little different feeling. Whatever the individual feelings might be, we are sure that the new 2nd Lieutenants will all hold a feeling of pride at having accomplished a double goal.

An additional twenty-six senior cadets will receive their commissions at later dates. Of these twenty-six, thirteen will be commissioned at Fort Devens, Massachusetts, in July after having completed their Summer Camp requirements. The other thirteen will complete academic requirements in September of '66, January or June of '67 and will be commissioned in those months.

Most of the eighty-one cadets will enter the service within a year after receiving their commissions, although those who wish may be deferred for graduate study. Of those not wishing to continue their studies, entry dates will vary from a few days to a few months. Each officer will first complete a nine week basic course of instruction in the branch in which he has been commissioned and then will receive orders for permanent duty stations located all over the world.

PR'S SPONSOR RULES AGAIN

Following the Review on Friday, UVM's Company L-12 of Pershing Rifles departed for the Regimental Drill meet at Boston. Saturday morning the unit participated in drill competition and marched in the Regimental Review that afternoon.

Saturday night the Regimental Ball was held in the Bradford Hotel Ballroom. Miss Carol Jenne ('66), Company L-12's sponsor, was selected Queen of the Regiment. This is the fourth year in succession that this honor has come to Company L-12. The unit also received the Trophy for the most improved unit in the 12th Regiment. The unit is commanded by Peter J. McGregor of Burlington. Accompanying the unit to Boston was Captain and Mrs. H. D. (Jack) Fraser of the Military Science Department.

PRESENTATION IN INFIRMARY

On Friday morning, Cadet David Peura of Peabody, Massachusetts, entered the Wasson Infirmary with a high temperature and was informed that he would be unable to attend the Military Review. Peura was to be awarded the Daughters of Founders and Patriots of America Medal. Not to be left out of the day's activities, Mrs. C. Durrell Simonds of Burlington, Past President of the awarding society, came to the infirmary at 11:30 a.m. and made the presentation to Cadet Peura.

Since this is the last issue of the CYNIC for this year, we wish to thank the editors of the CYNIC and the readers of "Dateline... R.O.T.C." for their continued interest and cooperation. If members of the Military Science Department or Corps of Cadets can be of any help in the future they may be contacted through the Military Science Department.

THE COLLEGE PRESIDENT: HIS CAUSE AND CURE

Oh, sure, you've been busy, what with going to classes, doing your homework, catching night crawlers, getting married, picketing—but can't you pause for just a moment and give thought to that dear, dedicated, lonely man in the big white house on the hill? I refer, of course, to Prexy.

(It is interesting to note that college presidents are always called "Prexy." Similarly, trustees are always called "Trixie." Associate professors are always called "Axy-Pixy." Bursars are called "Foxy-Woxy." Students are called "Algae.")

But I digress. We were speaking of Prexy, a personage at once august and pathetic. Why pathetic? Well, sir, consider how Prexy spends his days. He is busy, busy, busy. He talks to deans, he talks to professors, he talks to trustees, he talks to alumni. In fact, he talks to everybody except the one group who could lift his heart and rally his spirits. I mean, of course, the appealing, endearing, winsome group in the entire college—delightful you, the students.

It is Prexy's sad fate to be forever a stranger to your laughing, golden selves. He can only gaze wistfully out the window of his big white house on the hill and watch you at your games and sports and yearn with all his tormented heart to bask in your warmth. But how? It would hardly be fitting for Prexy to appear one day at the Union, clad in an old rowing blazer, and cry gaily, "Heigh-ho, chaps! Who's for sculling?"

No, friends, Prexy can't get to you. It is up to you to get to him. Call on him at home. Just drop in unannounced. He will naturally be a little shy at first, so you must put him at his ease. Shout, "Howdy-doo, sir! I have come to bring a little sunshine into your drear and blighted life!" Then yank his necktie out of his vest and scamper goatlike around him until he is laughing merrily along with you.

Then hand him a package and say, "A little gift for you, sir."

"For me?" he will say, lowering his lids. "You shouldn't have."

"Yes, I should," you will say, "because this is a pack of Personna Super Stainless Steel Blades, and whenever I think of Personna Super Stainless Steel Blades, I think of you."

"Why, hey?" he will ask curiously.

"Because, sir," you will say, "though you are no longer a young blade, still you gleam and function. Full though you are of years and lumps, rheumy though your endocrines and flaccid your hamstrings, still you remain sharp, incisive, efficacious."

"Thank you," he will say, sobbing.

"So it is with Personna," you will continue. "Naturally you expect a brand-new blade to give a close, speedy shave. But how about a blade that's had hard and frequent use? Do you still expect a close, speedy shave? Well, sir, if it's a Personna, that's what you'll get. Because, sir, like you, sir, Personna is no flash-in-the-pan. Like you, sir, Personna abides."

He will clasp your hand then, not trusting himself to speak.

"But away with gloom!" you will cry jollily. "For I have still more good news to tell you of Personna!"

"How is that possible?" he will say.

"Hearken to me," you will say. "Personna, in all its enduring splendor, is available not only in Double Edge style but also in Injector style!"

He will join you then in the Personna rouser, and then he will bring you a steaming cup of cocoa with a marshmallow on top. Then you will say, "Good-bye, sir. I will return soon again to brighten your dank, miasmic life."

"Please do," he will say. "But next time, if you can possibly manage it, try not to come at four in the morning."

Debate Club Honors Huber

The man who has made the University of Vermont debate program one of the most successful collegiate programs in the United States went to the annual debate banquet Sunday evening and found himself in the spotlight.

Nearly 100 persons, including former debaters, members of this year's team, and colleagues, gathered at the Hotel Vermont Sunday evening to pay tribute to Dr. Robert Huber who this year rounded out his 20th season of coaching debating.

Edwin Lawrence of Rutland, Class of 1901, and benefactor of debate and speech at Vermont, praised Dr. Huber for the "wonderful work he has done in the field of debate, not only at the University but nationally as well."

Dr. Huber was presented with a stereo radio - phonograph console.

FORMER DEBATORS SPEAK

Four former debaters spoke briefly about their coach and teacher and of his many contributions. The four were Michael Cronin, who has been teaching at Waterbury High School; Thomas Hayes and Richard O'Connell, who won first place in the national debate tournament in 1950; and John Burgess, now a Montpelier lawyer. Hayes, administrator assistant to Senator Winston Prouty, and O'Connell, a Hartford, Conn., lawyer, announced that they were establishing the Robert Huber Award, to be given yearly for excellence in debating and for possessing the spirit and philosophical qualities of Dr. Huber.

TOURNAMENT STARTED 1946

The national debate tournament was started in 1946, the same year Dr. Huber arrived at the University, and in these 20 years, Vermont ranks second in the total number of times qualifying for the national tourney, having missed out on only four occasions. And in 13 of the nationals, Vermont has placed among the top 16 teams, winning the national title in 1950 and placing third two other times.

It is estimated that Vermont debate teams have traveled nearly 250,000 miles in the last 20 years, taking part in 2862 debates and winning more than 65 per cent of them.

In expressing his thanks, Dr. Huber cited the importance teamwork has played in making Vermont teams so successful. "I may get the credit but it is all the coaches and students working together that has actually made possible our great record."

Summer Program Offered High School Students

UVM has found over the past three years that high school juniors who enroll in freshman-level college courses do "remarkably well." One year, when 76 high school students were enrolled, 17 per cent earned grades above 90, 33 per cent earned grades of 80 to 89, 32 per cent earned grades of 70 to 79, 12 per cent earned grades of 60 to 69, and only six per cent received grades below the minimum passing level of 60.

Grads To Take Draft Exam

The following interpretation of the relative importance of the Selective Service Test as it would apply to graduate students has been received by the Graduate College from The Council of Graduate Schools in the United States:

FEW GRADS REGISTERED

"We are informed that very few graduate students already residence registered for the Selective Service Examinations, relying on the assurance that their deferment would be continued as long as they maintain good scholastic standing.

"Since decisions on deferment are the primary responsibility of the Local Draft Boards and since many of these interpret directives very literally, it is likely that some Boards will insist that even graduate students in residence must qualify by passing the test if they cannot establish their rank-in-class in which they graduated.

TEST ON JUNE 24

"The Office of Selective Service has therefore set another test on June 24 and will announce a new deadline for registration within a few days.

ORIGINAL PRINTS FOR SALE

There will be an exhibition and sale of original prints from "The Ferdinand Roten Galleries", Friday, May 6th at 12:05 p.m. in the Wilbur Room of the Fleming Museum.

"Deans are requested to inform their students of these facts and urge them to register for the examination unless they can clearly establish their rank-in-class."

s/Gustave O. Arlt
President

CONTINUATION BASED ON RANK

"Continuation in graduate school after the first year will be based either on class rank in the upper quarter of his last undergraduate class or a SSCQT score of 80 or more, plus certification from his school that he is satisfactorily pursuing a full-time course of instruction leading to his degree."

PERSONAL DECISION

Graduate Students should be reminded that the ultimate decision as to whether or not they should take this examination is theirs.

Further to the above, the following statement from the Scientific Manpower commission focuses upon the significance of the Selective Service College Qualification Test:

If she doesn't give it to you...

Weiss ('67) of New Rochelle, N. Y.; the American Legion Award for military excellence to Robert P. Thoresen ('66) of Riverside, Conn., and Fredrick B. Brown ('67) of Woonsocket, R. Also recognized as recipients of the U. S. Army Two-year Scholarships were Walter R. Cooper ('68), Paul W. Lewis ('68) of Townshend, Vt., David A. Keenan ('68) of Essex Junction, and David C. Coletti ('68) of Troy, N. Y.

Colonel Leonard G. Robinson, who will retire on June 30 was presented with a citation from the University by President McCune. Parts of the citation read: "The University of Vermont takes the occasion of the 98th Annual Military Review of honor Colonel Leonard G. Robinson for his service to the University and to the Nation. His term of service as Professor of Military Science has shown those high personal and professional standards which have marked his long career as an Officer in the United States Army. He has been a good friend of the University and its students. He will continue to hold the friendship and respect of the University. On behalf of all his friends and colleagues at the University, we delight to honor Colonel Robinson and to wish him well as he embarks on a new career of service to education as Superintendent of Peekskill Military Academy."

The 18th Army Band provided the appropriate calls and music for the Review. It was estimated that a crowd of between 400 and 500 people attended the Review.

Senior Cadets immediately breathed a sigh of relief after an outstanding effort and began to think of May 22nd, the day some three weeks hence on which they don the gold bars of Second Lieutenants. The Juniors, however, started to tense noticeably for now the 1966 Fort Devens ROTC Summer Camp is just around the corner and, following that, they will take their place next year in the key command slots in Vermont's "Green Line."

History Of Honors Day

In 1894, Professor John Ellsworth Goodrich originated the tradition of setting aside the first day of May each year as Founder's Day, to honor past deans and presidents and to present the student awards.

For many years, Founders Day was an all day celebration. It started out in the morning with a military exhibition by the University Battalion on the front campus, and was followed by scripture readings, addresses by professors, and alumni and special speeches prepared by undergraduate honor students.

Later in the day there were the announcements of the elections to Boulder and Key and Serpent societies (the only honor societies up until 1917). On the front campus near the Lafayette statue, they held an interclass singing contest for the Elias Lyman Cup awarded for proficiency in singing college songs.

Honors Day Procession.

(Credit: Oliver, S.P.S.)

In the evening the Julia Spear Prize Reading was held at the Billings Library. The day was traditionally closed by group singing. And in 1916, the school song, written by A. Seaver, was first introduced.

Gradually over the years Founder's Day came to be called Honors Day and the large number of speeches and readings gave way to more and varied awards and Honor Societies.

the Senior Class together for one last time before Graduation Day and to observe some of the local tradition of the UVM campus.

Class walk consists of a campus tour with stops at various tradition laden places. The Seniors will assemble in Caps and Gowns in front of Billings at 10:00 a.m. on Sat., May 21. Parents and friends are invited to follow along with the seniors. Highlights of the Walk include a trip through Presidents McCune's home and "Advice to Seniors," (orations from the steps of the Bailey Library by faculty representatives of each of the four undergraduate colleges). This year, there will be a fifth speech, by Dean of Women, Miss Anna Rankin Harris, honoring her for her long term of service to the university.

At 2:00 p.m. that same afternoon, the Seniors will once again assemble on the steps of Billings and proceed to the south side of the Ira Allen statue where chairs have been set up. There will be eight brief orations by senior class members and the Senior Class Gift will be presented at this time.

Fair Weather Greets Canoeists

Undaunted by Thursday's snow, the Outing Club wound up their year's trips with a weekend canoe trip to Lake George. Fourteen canoeists left Friday afternoon for Bolton Landing on Lake George from which they made a three-quarter hour paddle to Turtle Island to camp Friday and Saturday night.

Cold and rain made the nights somewhat less than comfortable for some of the campers who were sleeping under the leaks of the tarp. However, the weather during the days Saturday and Sunday couldn't have been more perfect. Saturday morning everyone paddled to a nearby waterfall on the shore of Lake George to have lunch. A high wind and big waves on the return trip to the island made for some very exciting canoeing.

Saturday night's showers dampened the campers but not their spirits. All rose Sunday to a sunny day and warm weather. Persons climbed a nearby ridge for the view, fished, paddled among the islands, or lazed in the sun, depending on how energetic they felt. Two daring (or crazy?) campers even went for a brief swim in the cold lake water.

Sunday afternoon the group regretfully broke camp and paddled back to Bolton Landing to return to Burlington. Sunburned faces and tired muscles remind everyone of an exciting and fun trip.

Thursday evening at the Outing Club meeting Prof. David Nutt gave a very interesting talk and showed films of his oceanography work off the coast of Labrador. He spent two summers on a 100 ft. schooner doing oceanographic research.

The Outing Club is holding its final picnic this Saturday afternoon at a camp on Lake Champlain.

Guaranteed Tuition At Westminster

Fulton, Mo. - (I.P.) - A guaranteed tuition plan has been adopted by Westminster College which insures parents or students entering into an agreement with the college that tuition and fees will not increase during four consecutive years.

Under the tuition plan, the college guarantees that the yearly cost for tuition and fees will continue for four years at the rate of $1400 per year. In order to complete the agreement, the student or his parents agree to pay $1600 the first year; $1500 the second; $1300 the third; and $1200 the fourth. This is a total of $5600.

Once the agreement is entered into, these yearly tuition rates will stand whether a student completes the four full years or not. The proposal is entirely voluntary. The plan automatically applies to students entering college this year who would graduate in the Class of 1969. If tuition is increased from the present $1400, then freshmen entering subsequently will be bound by a new schedule.

Westminster's tuition rate has increased twice by $200 in the last three years. Like most colleges beset by rising salaries, equipment and expenses, there is no guarantee that tuition will not be raised periodically.

Tinnervin, Dave Modzelewski - John Berry, and Mo Belden - Rich Dombal led them to a big victory in this event. The top three teams and their point totals were Sig Ep 90, Alpha Epsilon Pi 46, and Delt Psi 40.

PADDLEBALL DOUBLES -- Sigma Alpha Epsilon edged out consistent Delt Psi for the doubles championship. The top three were SAE 85, Delt Psi 71, and Phi Sigma Delta 50.

WRESTLING - The individual winners in each weight class were:

- 130 lbs. - Bob Steffens (Phi Mu Delta)
 - 137 lbs. - Spencer Pratt (Phi Delta Theta)
 - 147 lbs. - Bill Watson (Sigma Nu)
 - 157 lbs. - Steve Broderick (Phi Delta Theta)
 - 167 lbs. - Ken Geluso (Delta Psi)
 - 177 lbs. - Bill Lawrence (Sigma Nu)
 - 191 lbs. - Gene Carruthers (SAE)
 - Heavyweight - Jeff Kuhman (Sigma Nu)
- The top three teams were Sigma Nu 63, Phi Delt 52, and Delta Psi 40.

Intramural Highlights -- As was mentioned in this column last week, four new records were set in the Intramural Swim Meet. Below is a listing of the swimmers who set these records:

- 100-yd. Freestyle - Barry Anton (Sigma Nu)
- 100-yd. Breaststroke - Tom Abernathy (SAE)
- 100-yd. Backstroke - Tom Sandretto (Sig Ep)
- 150-yd. Medley Relay - SAE (Al Goedecke, Abernathy, Hugh MacArthur)

At press time the all-campus softball championship was not yet determined.

The top ten teams should finish in the following order for the All Sports Trophy. The points indicate the totals as of Tuesday, May 3.

1. Delta Psi	878.5
2. Sig Ep	767.9
3. SAE	759
4. Sigma Nu	659.9
5. Phi Sigma Delta	533
6. Sigma Phi	500
7. Lambda Iota	442.9
8. MAT	402.5
9. TEP	370.5
10. Phi Delta Theta	344.8

Netmen Top YC Opponents

By George Passage

The UVM tennis team traveled to Middlebury Wednesday in an attempt to revenge their only loss of the season. This was the final meet before the Big Yankee Conference Tournament May 6-7 at Gutterson Field House. The Cats will be heavy favorites to defend their Yankee Conference title.

The netmen had little trouble with their last two opponents, devouring Rhode Island and New Hampshire by perfect 9-0 scores. Last Saturday in Burlington against the Rams, Paul Ryan, Laddie Cook, Don Henson, Bruce Hanna, Dutch Curtis, and Al Secunda all had singles victories in straight sets. Cook and Henson, Ryan and Hanna, and Rich Sachs and Don Miller made a clean sweep with their doubles victories.

Monday at Durham, N. H., it was exactly the same story with the Cats showing no mercy to the Wildcats.

At this time we would like to salute the tennis team and coach Bud Humphreys on their outstanding performance this season and wish them luck in the YC meet Friday and Saturday.

Lastly, the presentation of prizes and a plaque was presented to D.A. Gannon for Honors Day at UVM. This was followed by the announcement of the student selected to go to India under the Experiment in International Living, which was Lawrence Roth. The honorary societies were introduced. President McCune gave a short address and the program closed with the school song "Champlain," the benediction by Rabbi Wall and the Recessional.

Essays will weigh heavily before the faculty committee selecting the first ten Torrey Teachers. After this, the current ten will select their successors.

Here are 7 knotty problems facing the Air Force: can you help us solve one?

6. Space propulsion. As our space flights cover greater and greater distances, propulsion—more than anything else—will become the limiting factor. New fuels and new propulsion techniques must be found, if we are to keep on exploring the mysteries of space. And it may well be an Air Force scientist on his first assignment who makes the big breakthrough!

7. Pilot performance. Important tests must still be made to determine how the pilots of manned aerospacecraft will react to long periods away from the earth. Of course not every new Air Force officer becomes involved in research and development right away. But where the most exciting advances are taking place, young Air Force scientists, administrators, pilots, and engineers are on the scene.

Want to find out how you fit into the Air Force picture? Contact your nearest Air Force representative, or mail the coupon today.

1. Repairs in space. If something goes wrong with a vehicle in orbit, how can it be fixed? Answers must be found, if large-scale space operations are to become a reality. For this and other assignments Air Force scientists and engineers will be called on to answer in the next few years, we need the best brains available.

2. Lunar landing. The exact composition of the lunar surface, as well as structural and propulsion characteristics of the space vehicle, enter into this problem. Important study remains to be done—and, as an Air Force officer, you could be the one to do it!

3. Life-support biology. The filling of metabolic needs over very extended periods of time in space is one of the most fascinating subjects that Air Force scientists are investigating. The results promise to have vital ramifications for our life on earth, as well as in outer space.

4. Space orientation. The orbital problems of a spacecraft, including its ability to maneuver over selected points on the earth, are of vital importance to the military utilization of space. There are plenty of assignments for young Air Force physicists in this area.

5. Synergetic plane changing. The ability of a spacecraft to change altitude can also be crucial to space operations. Where but in the Air Force could Sc.B.'s get the chance to work on such fascinating projects right at the start of their careers?

Cats Host Rams In Pair Saturday

CAT-NIPS

By Bob Bloomenthal

With the close of another year in sports, most people think about the outgoing seniors who will no longer be carrying the colors of the Green and Gold. Not to be forgotten, however, are the upcoming sophomores who hold the key to the future of UVM athletic fortunes. Next year's football squad should be bolstered by the addition of Sophs. Jack Stroker, Paul Simpson, John Hains, Pete Clifford, Bill Lawrence, Steve VuKovich, and Tom Dexter.

Basketball Coach Art Loche is expecting big results from newcomers such as Dave Lapointe, Jeff Plunkett, and Terry O'Leary.

Ralph Lapointe can hardly await the arrival of next year's second year men to bolster both his hitting and pitching attacks. Top prospects are his son, Dave, Tom Suchanek, and Charlie Brucato.

These are just a few of many promising athletes who should help improve all Vermont teams in the major sports. Just as much credit is due to participants on the soccer, cross-country, skiing, hockey, track, golf and tennis teams.

Would You Believe . . . Former UVM athlete of the mid-1950's, Herb Brown, is now both the baseball and basketball coach at Stony Brook State University. . . The University of Connecticut baseball team which defeated Vermont last Saturday was ranked 14th in the Collegiate Baseball poll at the time. . . Other New England powers Holy Cross and Massachusetts also received votes. . . U Conn belted U Mass in their rematch last Tuesday. . . Pete Sargent and Scott Leake have been elected co-captains of the 1967 UVM ski team. . . Don Mayland has been named CYNIC Athlete-of-the-Week for his double wins in both track meets last week.

home. Bovenizer and Wansiewicz were scheduled to meet again in the rematch of the two state rivals Thursday.

Monday and Tuesday the Cats traveled to Orono, Maine, to face the Black Bears. In the first game, Maine came up with two runs in the last of the ninth to edge Vermont, 3-2. John McCord was the losing pitcher for UVM in the heartbreaking defeat.

Senior centerfielder Dave Wayne was the hero of the next day's game when he connected for his second home run of the year in the eighth inning to give the Cats a 4-3 win. Wayne's blast traveled about 380 feet and gave him seven runs batted in for the year, the best on the team. Don Fitts had two hits in the game. Shefflott went the first seven innings for UVM with John Packard finishing up to save the win.

Through the first eight games this season, Vermont has yet to score more than four runs in any game.

The leading hitters are:

	AB	H	BA
Bobby Cronin	83	13	.394
John McCord	15	5	.333
Dave Wayne	31	8	.259
Bill Leete	28	7	.250
Don Fitts	29	6	.207
John Packard	25	5	.200

feated the White team in the game by a 27-9 score.

Outstanding for the winners offensively were quarterback Dave Shumate and halfback Dick Herbert. Shumate had close to 160 yards in total offense for the day, while Herbert was the leading ground gainer with 83 yards and two touchdowns.

Other highlights of the game included a 38 yard field goal by Joe Soldano, a key pass interception by Bill (Face) Dorozenski, and a fumble recovery in the end zone by Jack Schweberger. Other defensive standouts were Dave Lucaroni and Soldano.

The White squad was quarterbacked by freshmen Jack Stroker and Paul Simpson. The two combined to complete eight passes, but never really got an attack generated against the strong Green defense.

A 15 yard run by Leo Pfeiffer and Simpson passes to Petri Clifford and Pfeiffer set up the lone White touchdown of the game.

Golfers Win

By Gordy Lawrence

The strongest performance of the year by the Catamount golf team proved to be the deciding factor Tuesday as UVM licked the "Michaelmen", 4 1/2 to 2 1/2, in State Series golf at the Burlington Country Club.

The wind was definitely a factor in the "Michaelmen's" game but was of little consequence in the final scores of the Vermont linkmen. The hard driving Cats won 25 holes as opposed to 22 picked up by St. Mike's. This was another indication of the Cats' strength on the fairway.

Joe Donnelly and Art Shields were tops for UVM with low 70's while their teammates were close behind. Only one member of the Catamount seven did not score in the seventies.

The individual matches went as follows:

Shields (V) over Cokey (SM)
Sorenson (SM) over Sargent (V)
Sullivan (SM) over Chiota (V)
Nadler (V) tied Welsh (SM)
Hier (V) over Yelensky (SM)
Donnelly (V) over Schrumberg (SM)

Nixon (V) over Duffy (SM)

In a practice match which took place at the same time, the "Big Green" of Dartmouth were left far behind the two opposing state rivals.

Track Team Hosts State Meet In Last Home Date

Don Mayland makes his final home appearance for UVM Saturday.

By George Passage

The University of Vermont track team is at home for the second and last time Saturday when it plays host to the State Meet on the track next to Gutterson Field House. The Cats will go into the meet with a 2-2 record, the result of coming out on the short end of a 75-65 decision against Trinity last Saturday.

MAYLAND'S LAST HOME APPEARANCE

For the second time in a week, Captain Don Mayland was a double event winner and thus remained undefeated this season in both the pole vault and the 120-yard high hurdles. The state meet will be Mayland's last collegiate meet at home and for most of us the last chance to see this fine athlete in action. (Both the Yankee Conference and New England meets are away this year.)

Last Saturday also marked the fourth straight time that Tom Fyles has placed second to Mayland in the pole vault. The opposition has had to settle for no higher than third place in this event all season.

Sophomore Ed Childs captured first place in his specialty, the high jump, but with a subpar leap of five feet, eight inches. Childs also placed in the javelin.

UVM's ace jumpers, Pete Nolan and Jack Farley, met stiff competition at Hartford. Nolan had to settle for second place in the broad jump, and a tie for third in the triple jump with teammate Farley. You can be sure that both of these fine competitors will make their presence known at the State Meet, however.

ARDELL, STICKNEY 1-2

Paul Ardell and Pete Stickney placed 1-2 in the shot put. Ardell came a mere 2 1/4 inches of Stickney's UVM record with a winning heave of 47 feet and 3 3/4 inches. Ardell also captured second place honors in the discus behind Trinity's Trybken.

For the third time in four meets, Rutland's Sandy McLeod used his powerful right arm to chalk up five points in the javelin. McLeod's distance has improved tremendously since the first meet, and a throw of 180 feet or better Saturday will surprise nobody. McLeod's winning distance at Trinity was 173 feet, 2 inches.

HURDLES VERMONT'S BEST

Mayland, Jim Bahrenburg, and

Argie Economou combined to make the high hurdles Vermont's best event. Last Saturday this trio swept the event for the second time this season. Mayland's winning time was an impressive 15.7 seconds.

In four meets, Vermont has captured 34 out of a possible 36 points in the high hurdles. The only two points they lost (both third places) came as a result of entering just two men in the event.

In the quarter mile hurdles, Vin DeCesaris was deprived of first place for the first time this year. DeCesaris and Economou placed second and third respectively.

RUNNING EVENTS A NIGHTMARE

The running events proved to be a nightmare for Coach Post as the Cats were unable to salvage a single first place. (Vermont did win the mile relay). The best UVM could do in these events were seconds by Jim Dedman in the 220 and the 440, and a second by Walt Stowell in the mile.

We look for the Cat runners to fare much better when they return to the home quarter-mile oval and to be a major factor in Vermont's retaining of the state track crown. The order of finish should be something like this: UVM, Middlebury, Norwich, and St. Michael's a distant fourth.

Varsity Club Officers 1966-1967

Elections for Varsity Club officers were held April 14 at the annual Letterman's Banquet. The newly elected Varsity Club officers for 1966-1967: Thomas Mills, '67, co-captain of the swim team, was chosen as the president. Joseph Soldano, an All-Yankee Conference guard this past fall, was selected as the vice-president. William Librera, '68, a forward on the basketball team, is the new secretary. Another of coach Leggett's swim forces, James Harrod, '68, was picked as treasurer.

Medical College Awarded Grant For Regional Medical Program

UVM Medical College Given $294,770 Grant

Washington, D.C. — The University of Vermont College of Medicine has been awarded a one year grant of $294,770 to plan for a regional medical program for heart disease, cancer and stroke.

Major goal of the national program is improved diagnosis and treatment of heart disease, cancer and stroke, according to Dr. Robert J. Slater, dean of the College of Medicine.

The regional medical program to be planned under the grant will be directed toward strengthening health services at the local level throughout Northern New England by improved educational and training programs for both lay people and health personnel.

Due to the backing of the Vermont Legislature and Vermont Governor Philip H. Hoff, and major support from the Vermont Medical Society, the College of Medicine was one of the first medical schools in the U.S. to apply for program funds authorized by Congress in the Heart, Cancer, Stroke legislation passed by Congress last year, Dr. Slater said.

The Vermont Legislature appropriated $10,000 for initial planning and named an advisory board to work with the Medical College in overseeing development of a program.

While the College of Medicine will have responsibility for managing the regional program the planning will involve professional and allied health groups and individuals within the state and region, including the Vermont State Medical Society, the Vermont State Department of Health, the major health organizations, nurses' associations, hospital staffs, and voluntary and lay health associations.

The federal grant of $294,770 to the College of Medicine will support a year of "intensive planning that hopefully will culminate in a design for better care of patients with heart disease, cancer, and stroke who live in the area served by the medical center in Burlington."

The grant to the UVM Medical College will enable a program staff to concentrate on developing more effective ways to apply these new diagnostic and treatment advances to all persons suffering from heart disease, cancer, or stroke.

For example, studies will be conducted to determine the extent to which heart attack patients living in Burlington and those living in outlying communities now receive the most up-to-date care. Such studies may highlight where improvements may be made, and hopefully may suggest new ways to organize both services and facilities to offer better care.

"We feel confident that federal funds will be available to support long-term operations of the regional medical program if we can demonstrate in our planning phase that joining all interested medical resources in this kind of program can produce better care for the people of our region," Dr. Slater said.

McCune Bows Out

Lyman Rowell Is UVM President

The UVM Board of Trustees has granted former President Shannon McCune an appointment as research professor for study in the far east.

The action was taken at the Board Meeting August 6. At this meeting, in less than ten minutes of open session, the Trustees accepted the resignation of Dr. McCune as president and named Lyman S. Rowell, former vice president of administrative and student affairs, to succeed him.

This followed two executive sessions including a 30-minute board. The letter, dated August 1, read:

"It is with regret that I resign my position as President of the University of Vermont, effective August 6, 1966. I take pride in the fact that during my period of service the University has continued to develop its firm foundation in teaching, research and public service. Especially gratifying to me and Mrs. McCune has been the close and satisfying relationships we have had with the students and faculty of the University.

"In view of my scholarly work and my activities as Chairman of the Education Committee of the United States National Commission for UNESCO and as Chairman of the Education Committee of the Asia Society, I plan during the coming months to undertake a study in the activities of selected universities in the Far East and the geography of the areas they serve. In these fast changing and tension filled days, such a study would furnish some basis for comparison between Far Eastern institutions and those of the United States, such as the University of Vermont."

According to Burlington news media and campus rumors, President McCune was fired, but in a statement to the CYNIC, Dr. McCune emphasized he did resign. Although he said he did not initiate the idea himself, he declared "I did make the decision. One thing that the Burlington Free Press fails to understand is that the Board of Trustees is in charge of the University and when the President and the Board do not see eye to eye, there is only one thing to do and I made the decision."

He continued, "I am proud of what I did and all seems to have worked out well." He stressed he was pleased with what he was able to accomplish on the campus.

Concluding he referred enigmatically to the old Vermont expression that "Water goes under the covered bridge."

ROWELL APPOINTED

Lyman S. Rowell, former vice president of administrative and student affairs, was named president of the University by the Board of Trustees, August 6. The action was taken after the acceptance of Dr. Shannon McCune's resignation. Lee O'Brien nominated Rowell and he was accepted unanimously by the Board.

Rowell brings to the presidency a experience with the affairs of

UVM Senate Affirms Right Of Free Assembly

The University of Vermont Senate has passed a resolution affirming the right of all persons, regardless of their opinions, to gather in free, orderly assembly. UVM President Shannon McCune, who presides, said he was "glad the Senate has passed this resolution. The University of Vermont is an institution in which freedom of speech is a precious heritage, and one we must work hard to defend."

The resolution passed by the University Senate follows:

Whereas the faculty of the University of Vermont affirms the right of all persons, regardless of their opinions, to gather in free, orderly assembly in order to express their views as guaranteed by the United States Constitution and,

Whereas the faculty of the University of Vermont affirms such right to free speech and assembly without intimidation and violation of basic American liberties, and Whereas such a lawful assembly was specifically permitted by the Administration of the University of Vermont,

Therefore, be it resolved that the Senate of the University of Vermont condemns the actions of all persons who engaged in acts of intimidation, physical abuse, and personal misconduct against the peaceful demonstration held on the campus of the University of Vermont on Wednesday morning, April 20, 1966."

Patzer Dean Of Student Personnel

Roland Patzer, Dean of Men since 1961, has been promoted to the newly created post of Dean of Student Personnel Services, effective July 1.

Dean Roland Patzer

In his new position, Patzer will be in charge of the offices of the Dean of Men, Dean of Women, Testing Service, and the Financial Aid Office.

UVM Students Face Overcrowded Dorms Few Choose Off-Campus Housing

Less than one percent of the students who were given the opportunity to cancel dormitory contracts in favor of off campus housing did so.

This will necessitate increasing the normal residence hall occupancy - generally from double to triple - in about 20 percent of the rooms for both men and women. There will, however, according to Dean Roland Patzer be "no living in lounges." Students need these areas for relaxation, he said. Patzer announced in a letter mailed to all upperclassmen on July 15, students were given the opportunity to cancel their dorm contracts if they could find other housing. Upperclassmen would be allowed to live off campus as "a temporary move to better accommodate all of our students for the coming academic year.

"It is our desire," he continued, "to provide other alternate solutions to our housing problems over the long range period by... we are not able to provide these alternatives in the short time before classes begin in the fall.

The University has purchased the former Officers' Club at Fort Ethan Allen to provide housing for 41 men.

To alleviate study problems caused by increased room occupancy, there will be supervised study areas in dining halls and class rooms.

Dean Patzer said the University expects about 150 more

Miss Gribbons, a native Ohioan, is a graduate of Bowling Green and earned the M.A. at Western Reserve. She has served as assistant dean of women at Bowling Green since 1960. She joins the Vermont staff Sept. 1. Eycke has been assistant dean of men at Vermont since 1961. He is a graduate of Ohio University where he also earned the M.A. His background in student personnel services includes work at Ohio and at Stevens Institute of Technology.

The Board also named as assistants to the deans of women and men Miss Maria W. Dean and Bruce L. Hewitt. Miss Dean is a 1954 graduate of the University of Vermont, and the daughter of Emeritus Associate Professor of English Leon Dean. Hewitt is a graduate of Cornell and comes to the University from Columbia where he has been doing graduate work.

Miss Jacqueline M. Gribbons, assistant dean of women at Bowling Green State University, was named to succeed Anna Rankin Harris as Dean of Women at Vermont. Miss Harris had tendered her resignation to accept the post as executive director of the National Association of Women Deans and Counselors.

The Board also named current Assistant Dean of Men Carl O. Eycke to serve as Acting Dean of Men, succeeding Roland Patzer who was named Dean of Student Personnel Services at the University at the May meeting of the Trustees.

5000 Enrollment Forecast for UVM

Total enrollment of 5,000 by 1967 and an in-state, out-of-state student mix of 60-40 are forecast for the University of Vermont by former President Shannon McCune in his first formal President's Report now in the mails to more than 20,000 Vermont alumni, parents, and friends.

"Expectations are that the University must continue to grow," The extent, he said, "will depend in large measure on patterns of cooperation now only beginning to be worked out within Vermont's system of public higher education."

He said the Vermont State College Board, with significantly increased state support, has provided leadership to bring the four State Colleges, "at Castleton, Lyndon, Johnson and Randolph, "up to the point where they are in the process of vigorous physical plant development."

"This development has properly been accompanied by development of the academic resources of the four colleges," Dr. McCune said, adding UVM's Trustees, administration and faculty have been working closely with their colleagues of the State Colleges to develop cooperative programs.

Aim is to provide "the best possible educational opportunity for all qualified young Vermonters; and to avoid needless duplication or competition."

He said the University also will continue to work with Vermont's private institutions through the Vermont Higher Education Council, to provide for Vermonters who will be seeking admission to college in the future.

In the section of the report dealing with enrollment, Dr. McCune noted that UVM has grown "slowly but steadily" since 1950, and from a total of 2800 students ten years ago to 4400 this past fall.

This can be attributed to two factors, he said.

First, the number of Vermonters going on to college and the number entering the University increased after the action of the 1955 Legislature "finally and clearly establishing UVM as the state university."

"It is a pleasure to mark the anniversary of this significant event in the history of the University and specifically to acknowledge the work of former President Carl Borgmann in helping bring this about."

The second factor in UVM's student growth, he said, is the increasing number of young men and women qualified for and seeking an opportunity to attend college.

He said the University will continue to offer admission to every qualified Vermont applicant, and to continue to maintain places for substantial numbers of non-residents - aiming at keeping the present enrollment ratio of about 60 per cent Vermont with about 40 per cent chosen from applicants from other states and countries.

Four Sophomores Awarded ROTC Scholarships

David A. Keenan of Essex Junction, Paul W. Lewis of Townshend, David C. Coletti of Troy, N.Y., and Walter R. Cooper of Galea Ferry, Conn., sophomores, have been awarded two-year ROTC scholarships by the Department of the Army.

The scholarship program was authorized by the ROTC Vitalization Act of 1964. Each of the two-year awards pays full tuition, books and fees, and provides the recipient with a subsistence allowance of $50 a month. The scholarship covers the junior and senior years.

A total of 251 scholarships were awarded to students enrolled in ROTC programs at 89 colleges and universities in the 15-state First Army area. Each school submitted its nominations to Department of the Army.

Keenan is an industrial management major. He is a cadet corporal, a squad leader, and has been awarded two basic course achievement ribbons.

Lewis holds the achievement ribbon. He is a political science major.

Coletti has received two achievement ribbons. He is a zoology major.

Cooper received the Douglas MacArthur Medal at last week's military review. The award is given to a sophomore cadet for high academic achievement and outstanding leadership potential. A math major, Cooper is executive officer of Pershing Rifles.

UVM Melosira

Research Vessel Launched

The UVM Melosira was put back into Lake Champlain, August 1, and by the end of the week she was ready for work.

The 47-foot former private fishing charter boat was purchased in Brooklyn last fall. She has been refitted at the Shelburne Harbor Marina for her role as a floating laboratory in the University of Vermont's broad research program on Lake Champlain. Skipper of the Melosira is Richard Furbush.

Slow deliveries, due in part to Defense Department priorities, delayed use of the ship. One item, a 12 1/2-kilowatt power generator, was delivered late because the Defense Department required such generators for the operations in South Viet Nam.

While the University of Vermont scientists cooperating on this first major study of the lake have wanted the Melosira in operation, lack of the 10-ton vessel hasn't halted the many projects. The scientists have been using three 16-footers and a 12-foot craft.

PARKING: FEES AND FINES

500 Additional Parking Areas To Be Constructed

Discussing a perennial problem, Rowell told members of the Board of Trustees that a survey by a consultant had confirmed what faculty and students already know -- "the University needs new parking places drastically."

The Board authorized expenditure of $30,000 from plant funds to add about 500 additional parking areas; and the Board also authorized establishment of registration fees for parking stickers and fines for both staff and students who violate campus parking regulations.

Registration costs will be $2 for the first, $1 for the second car. Fines for parking offenses will cost $2 each, with $5 fines for students parking in areas designated for staff.

Nelson Wins $500 Scholarship

William H. Nelson, '68, received the Ralston Purina Scholarship Award for 1966-67.

The $500 scholarship is awarded each year to an outstanding junior or sophomore in the state universities and land-grant colleges in each of the 50 states, and in three Canadian agricultural colleges and one in Puerto Rico.

Winners are selected at each college by a faculty Scholarship Committee on the basis of their scholastic record, leadership, character, ambition in agriculture and eligibility for financial assistance.

Zeltzerman Visiting Lecture Fund Endowed

The name of a University of Vermont graduate killed in an accident will live on in a lecture series endowed in his memory by his parents, Dr. and Mrs. Morris Zeltzerman of Berlin, N.H.

Their gift will establish the Michael Zeltzerman Visiting Lecturer Fund. Income from the fund will be used to invite visiting lecturers, with emphasis on speakers dealing with development of sociological and humanistic ideas and activities in a world of science.

Zeltzerman was a 1963 graduate of the University's College of Arts and Sciences and enrolled in the graduate college here at the time of his death Jan. 3 in an automobile accident.

VOLUME 84 SEPTEMBER 9, 1966 NUMBER 9

EDITORIAL...

At the end of last semester, the housing situation was apparently settled by declaration that off-campus housing would be permitted to all seniors and others who had reached age 21. The administration, whether by plan or by a unavoidable quirk, was forced to revise the rulings in an even more lenient direction. Surprisingly, statistics indicate that not as many students as expected have taken advantage of the liberal off-campus housing policies. This leaves the University with much the same problem of over-crowded dormitories and it leaves some hardy individuals out in the street. Along with this new housing arrangement goes the change in curfews. We choose to allow the conglomeration of rules regarding curfews to remain without comment at the present time. It is sufficient here to say that the housing-curfew regulations were made out of necessity: the University grew faster than it could facilitate growth. These are only two of the many experiments being initiated this year. We surmise, however, that administration-campus "scientists" will do further research, followed by more experimentation in these areas before the panacea is found.

No, this first editorial is not without its greeting to the Freshmen. You will not get the "Pap Talk" from us too. You should know, however, that The CYNIC is the voice of the University community and we hope that together we can prove it to be a strong and clear voice.

We would like to take this opportunity to welcome Mr. Rowell in his new but somewhat familiar office as President of the University. We are sure that his experience at the University will prove invaluable for the progress we foresee.

L. S.

NOTE

Dr. Shannon McCune plans to visit many Far Eastern universities during his year as research professor. He will be conducting a geographical comparison between these institutions and those in the United States.

At the same time, Dr. McCune will also be associated with the VERMONT CYNIC as a feature writer. In his articles he will express his thoughts about these nations and their universities in relation to UVM and Vermont.

President Rowell Welcomes Students

It is good to welcome new and returning members of the University community at the start of a new academic year, and to wish for each member of our community of scholars a productive and stimulating year.

This year provides an extra sense of incentive for us because it marks the 175th anniversary of the chartering of The University of Vermont.

It is consistent with the character of Vermont and its people that we have planned no major celebration of this anniversary; but rather wish to take the occasion of the regular and special events of the coming year to remind ourselves of our heritage and the trust we have received from the men and women of Vermont who have preceded us in the opportunity we share here.

Sincerely
Lyman S. Rowell
President

Perception

By Jan Quackenbush
Scene:

P. meets S. on the subway, one minute later:

P: ... lost at last! Little need be said about that now; we know it's over with. Yet my friend told me that the taste of it somehow lingered on like the mystery in a dream, causing him to reflect upon its passing. (pause)

I believe I said he was a fool for wasting time on ancient things; for becoming useless. I believe I told him that our friendship ... had to end. I believe ... Well, I think he's dead.

S: Better he went before we got to him. We won't tolerate that "living in the past" bit; our Age of Sense doesn't need any ... sentimentalities.

P: I tried to put it nicely; explaining that Reflection took up time.

S: Now we got Action!

P: I told him that we're really moving ...

S: Really going fast!

P: ... that what is artificial now, will be natural tomorrow ...

S: Yipeeee!

P: ... and fails again the next day.

S: Hey?

Trustees Approve 1966-67

BURLINGTON, Vt., May 20 - University of Vermont Trustees approved the University's operating budget for the 1966-67 (July 1, 1966 - June 30, 1967) fiscal year, and former president Shannon McCune said it gave the University one of its "tightest" budgets in recent years.

It includes $12,399,000 for the general University operation; $2,364,000 for operation of agricultural Extension, Experiment Station and Related Agricultural Services programs; and an estimated $2,000,000 in sponsored research funds. The total estimated budget of $16,763,000 marks an increase of a little more than $1 million over the budget for the current year.

The budget is based on income resources expected to be available for the coming fiscal year which begins July 1, 1966; and on Budget requests which originate with individual departments of the University, "move up" through deans and directors, and come to the Board of Trustees as a proposed budget after the requests have been balanced with expected income.

SA Asks Support

In a system of education such as that of the United States where a prime responsibility of the educational institutions and their educators is to perpetuate our democratic way of life, it is imperative that we have an instrument capable of relaying that citizenship responsibility that goes beyond the classroom lecture. The most common instrument of this type on the University level is the Student Senate, or the Student Association Senate, as the case may be. While the Student Association Senate cannot legally be the governing body of the University of Vermont, it can participate in the governmental aspect of the University to an extent that is in accord with the philosophy of our University and to the extent the Senate and the student body are prepared to assume the responsibilities that accompany an active participation in such circumstances.

The Student Association Senate has much to do with the smooth and efficient operation of the University system. However, it should be easily apparent that, no matter how lofty the ideals nor how practical the objectives of the Senate, nothing much can be accomplished without the heartfelt and enthusiastic cooperation of the entire student body.

It is your responsibility to insure the proper employment of your Student Association Senate. The Senate's activities will give you many opportunities to do independent thinking on many issues, to make decisions on university matters, and to accept responsibilities for your actions.

The Student Association needs your consistent support and participation, not for a few months but for the remainder of your college careers.

NASA Awards $150,000 to UVM For Space Research

Washington, D. C. -- The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has awarded a grant of $150,000 to the University of Vermont for space-related research.

The NASA research program at Vermont supports nine projects involving basic questions in space related science. The Vermont projects call for a close working arrangement among university scientists in several fields, particularly in bio-medical engineering research.

Dr. Clinton D. Cooke, vice president for academic affairs, directs the space science program under the NASA grant, serving with an executive committee headed by Howard M. Smith, Jr., associate for institutional programs, and an advisory committee headed by Dr. Donald G. Forgy, chairman and professor, department of psychology.

Projects cover a broad field, from x-ray, the problem associated with man's isolation in space, and the effect on the brain of current from external electrodes, to the problems involved in the sudden heating of rocket nozzles in the first seconds after a rocket is launched.

This Summer
'Patterns of Communism' Topic Of Warren R. Austin Institute

"Patterns of Communism" was the theme of the 13th annual Warren R. Austin Institute in World Understanding at the University of Vermont this summer. Four distinguished scholars participated in the Institute. Opening the series of lectures on July 18 was Dr. Alexander Dallin, Director of the Russian Institute at Columbia University. His topic was "Communism in the Mother Country."

Dr. Frank Trager, professor of international affairs at the Graduate School of Public Administration, New York University, spoke on "Maoism." On August 1, the subject under discussion was "Fidellismo." Dr. Robert J. Alexander, professor of economics at Rutgers University, was the speaker.

The final lecture in the '66 summer Institute took place August 8 when Dr. Robert F. Byrnes, director of the International Affairs Center at Indiana University spoke on "Titoism."

The Institute was founded in 1954 to provide a forum for discussion of great international issues and world events. It honors the late Warren R. Austin, UVM Class of 1899, who served as the United States' first ambassador to the United Nations.

Dr. Nuquist, Wife
Co-Author Book On Government

Professor Andrew Nuquist, political science professor, and his wife are co-authors of a book which represents the first major attempt to describe the operation of the several state agencies and to trace their development.

The book is titled, "Vermont State Government and Administration" and is the fourth publication in the Government Research Center's State Series.

The work will provide the lay reader with information not otherwise available except through major research. The Vermont General Assembly and its work is presented, as is the court structure. The recent changes in representation and the proposed court revisions are both presented.

Professor Nuquist has served as chairman of the department of political science and is McCullough Professor of Political Science. Mrs. Nuquist, active in many civic organizations, began research in Vermont state government as a member of the League of Women voters.

Gould, Nadworny Named Department Chairmen

Lyman J. Gould and Milton J. Nadworny will serve as chairmen of their departments in the 1966-67 academic year. Dr. Gould will be chairman of the political science department. Dr. Nadworny, chairman of the commerce and economics department.

Dr. Nadworny joined the Vermont faculty in 1952. Dr. Gould in 1953.

Dr. Gould received his Ph.D. degree from the University of Michigan. Dr. Nadworny received his Ph.D. degree from the University of Wisconsin.

Both have published extensively in their respective fields. Dr. Nadworny has written much about the labor movement in Vermont. Some of his works are "The Labor Force and Industrial Structure of Vermont," "A Survey of the Labor Movement in Vermont," and "A Director of Trade Unions in Vermont." He is co-author of "The Tourist and Recreation Industry in Vermont" and "Labor Force-Vermont."

Dr. Gould was co-editor of "People, Power, and Politics," a widely adopted political science textbook, and contributed one of the articles in the book, "The Politics of Religion." Another work, "La Ley Foraker," was published this spring by the Editorial Universitaria of the University of Puerto Rico.

Medical College Participates in New Scholarship Program

The UVM College of Medicine is one of 11 medical schools in the U.S. and Canada invited to participate in a new scholarship program established and financed by New York Life Insurance Company.

Starting this fall, the program will provide one scholarship for a member of each new medical class who needs financial aid. The amount of each grant will depend on a budget worked out by Dean Robert J. Slater of the College of Medicine with the scholarship recipient. Each scholarship is intended to cover tuition, room, board, fees, books and equipment.

According to the terms established by New York Life, the College will be solely responsible for the selection of scholarship recipients.

For Frosh Only
How To Get Around in Burlington

Students invade Church Street.

If you came by car, you already know that Burlington may be reached from the south via Route 7; from the north via Routes 2 and 7; and from the east via Route 2 and Interstate 89; and by ferry coming from the west across Lake Champlain. There are beautiful views of the Adirondack Mountains to the west across Lake Champlain, by the way, from Battery Park in downtown Burlington. Battery Park may be reached by driving west on Pearl Street, which begins at the north end of the University's lovely college Green. One of those community oddities also turns Pearl Street into Colchester Avenue as it runs west from the north end of the College Green, Main Street also changes its name -- to Williston Road and Route 2 just east of the University campus.

JUST LIKE MASON-DIXON

Many of the major streets running north and south through Burlington are divided into North and South at Pearl Street. For example, South Prospect Street -- on which the Waterman Building is located -- becomes North Prospect Street where it crosses Pearl. The same holds true for South Willard Street (which is Route 7), South Union Street, and South Winoski Avenue.

It is a relatively easy walk or drive from the campus to downtown Burlington, via Pearl, College, or Main Streets. In every case, the direction is west or toward the lake. And downhill. The downtown shopping area offers several banks, movies, restaurants, laundry and dry cleaning establishments and a variety of general and specialty shops and stores.

In addition, there are shopping centers located to the east on Route 2, and to the south on Route 7, and in the north end of Burlington.

SPLendor TO THE EAST

We have mentioned the views which may be found looking west from Battery Park to the Adirondack Mountains of New York State. There are equally lovely views looking east to Vermont's Green Mountains from many points on the University's campus at Redstone, and the area along Spear Street where Marsh, Tupper and Austin Halls for men and the Patrick Gymnasium and Gutterson Field House are located.

Burlington is one of the lovely old communities of New England which preserves today much of the charm of its colonial heritage. With a population of about 40,000, it is the largest city in the Green Mountain State. The University's total student enrollment of 4,000 (not counting nearly 2,000 in the summer), and its annual operating budget of more than $15,000,000 makes the University one of the major assets of the community.

The University of Vermont is the state and land-grant institution of Vermont, and is unique among state universities in that it has always drawn and found room for a substantial number of students from beyond Vermont's borders. A majority of the buildings on the Vermont campus came from alumni and private philanthropy and of the current total operating budget of more than $15,000,000, about 28 per cent comes from the state.

ATTENTION:

The Outing Club will hold a picnic this Sunday at Mount Philo. Everyone is welcome. Buses will be running from Waterman and Southwick. Also, there will be a $1.00 charge for food. If you want further information, contact Chris Rosencrantz, Ext. 725.

HALF-MILLION IN GRANTS GIFTS, SCHOLARSHIPS

The UVM Trustees acknowledged gifts, grants and scholarships -- mostly for restricted uses -- valued at more than a uses -- valued at more than half a million dollars.

The total included over $509,000 in research and training grants, over $79,000 in gifts -- including a number of additional gifts to the Outing Club Ski Lodge Fund -- and scholarships valued at over $3,100.

Elizabethan Arts Institute Called 'Resounding Success'

Highlighted by Shakespeare Festival

The Champlain Shakespeare Festival, in its eighth summer of professional repertory operation, opened its 1966 season of three plays on the University of Vermont Campus July 25th.

First presented was "The Comedy of Errors", one of Shakespeare's earliest works and the shortest play in the canon. Borrowing literally from the old Roman comedy by Plautus, "The Menæchmi," Shakespeare embroidered his version with the addition of a second pair of twins, the Dromios, to serve Antipholus of Syracuse and Antipholus of Ephesus whom he had found in his source, thus compounding the comic possibilities of mistaken identity. J. Christopher Wines appeared as Solinus, Duke of Ephesus. Etheon, father of the Antipholus twins, was played by Charles Faranda. John Dobbs played Antipholus of Ephesus, while Earl McCarroll portrayed Antipholus of Syracuse. The two comic servants were played by Robert Spanabel and Ted Pritchard.

"HAMLET" OFFERED

"Hamlet" offered Festival patrons a second opportunity to see perhaps Shakespeare's most famous work. It had been presented during the 1961 season. An entirely new production directed by Edward Feidner, Festival producer-director, "Hamlet" featured Jeff David in the title role. Key roles of King Claudius and Queen Gertrude were taken by John Dobbs and Betty Smith, with Michael Burne as the ghost of old King Hamlet. Joy Spanabel's rich and colorful costumes set the play into the historical perspective of the Renaissance, and William Schenk's handsome setting of level and stairs permitted the action to move freely through this tale of revenge, intrigue, and lust.

This summer's repertory closed with the unfrequently performed play, "Henry VI, Part I." Directed by Jeff David, the play continued Shakespeare's chronicle of tumultuous wars for control of the crown which dominated England's history for nearly 200 years. Cast as the young king was James Carter, a 15 year old Burlington Student. Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, the King's uncle and official protector, was portrayed by Earl McCarroll. Michael Byrne played the Bishop of Winchester, leader of the opposing factor. Betty Smith appeared as Joan of Arc. An early work - very likely Shakespeare's first attempt at the history play form - its production continued the young Festival's tradition of producing a comedy, a tragedy, and a history each season. This season's productions brought the total number of Shakespeare's plays presented to 23.

THE ACTORS

Among those who made their first appearances here were John Cranford Adams, President emeritus of Hofstra College and noted authority of Shakespeare's Globe Playhouse; William H. Burdick, dancer and choreographer for the Metropolitan Opera Ballet and authority on period dance; Robert Conant, harpsichordist and authority on Renaissance and 17th century music; Jeff David, actor and director with the Shakespeare Festival company; Alfred Deller,

Teachers Study Shakespeare

For the director of the Institute on Elizabethan Arts and Literature at the University of Vermont, this summer has been "a resounding success."

Thus Ippocrates Pappoutsakis describes the Institute he heads. Subsidized by the Federal government under terms of the National Arts and Humanities Act, the Institute brings the top international authorities in their fields together with a group of 60 eager high school teachers, all of whom deal with the era in their own classrooms, to study the period in depth - its literature, theatre, art, music, manners, government, economy, history - with the idea that the sharing of keen minds on both sides of the lecture table ultimately yields enrichment to the education of American youngsters.

FOCUS ON FESTIVAL

With the Champlain Shakespeare Festival as its focal point, the Institute was organized last summer under a grant from unrestricted gifts of University alumni, and earned Government subsidy this year. "It is quite an honor to be one of only eleven Institutes nationally to receive Federal monies," Pappoutsakis points out. "The UVM Institute is the only one in the East, and we are proud to be included."

The Institute's format is designed in such a way that the members gather each morning for lectures on some aspect of the period. In the afternoon, they form smaller groups for discussion and questions.

BEST PEOPLE ATTRACTED

"We have been fortunate in attracting the best people in their fields," Pappoutsakis explains, "and the give and take is a tremendously exciting experience. It is always a privilege to be able to have on one's faculty even a single leading authority; we have had several key people - they are more than just knowledgeable, they are considered the leading experts available."

A list of visiting faculty reads like an international "Who's Who?" One panel on Elizabethan music, for example, consisted of Richard Dyer-Bennet, Alfred Deller, and Robert Conant, all concert and recording artists of the first rank. Shakespearean scholars James McManaway and John Cranford Adams came to lecture, as did theatre experts Maurice Evans and Duncan Ross.

ROY STRONG SPEAKS

Roy Strong, assistant keeper of the National Portrait Gallery in London, came to "the colonies" to talk about art. In spite of a list of achievements and degrees which one would expect from a counter-tenor and authority on Renaissance vocal music; Maurice Evans, famed actor-director-producer; William M. Schenk and Joy Goodman Spanabel, Champlain Shakespeare Festival designers; and Roy Strong, art historian, authority on Elizabethan pageantry, and assistant keeper of the National Portrait Gallery, London.

Only 60 participants were selected from over 350 fully-qualified applicants and 1500 inquirers. They came from 26 states, the District of Columbia, and Puerto Rico.

man twice his age, Strong 31, sports a Beatle haircut and wears a Conrad's sweatshirt with as much aplomb as he would wear morning coat and striped trousers.

William Eurdick of the Metropolitan Opera Ballet brought a group of actors, dancers, and musicians to recreate an Elizabethan court spectacle.

HIGH SCHOOL TEACHERS PARTICIPATE

Seven Vermont high school teachers were among the 60 participants selected for the Institute on Elizabethan Arts and Literature at the University of Vermont. The Institute, under the direction of Ippocrates Pappoutsakis, ran from July 11 through Aug. 5.

Prof. Pappoutsakis said he received 1551 inquiries from teachers in 47 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and from four foreign countries. Of the number, 357 applicants were fully qualified for the 60

LIVELY ARTS

Shakespeare Reviewed

By K. Klonsky

The eighth annual Champlain Shakespeare Festival had mixed success in dealing with the awesome scope of the great English playwright. Henry VI, Part I, a spectacular but cumbersome history, and Comedy of Errors, a staccato farce, were handled more than competently, sometimes brilliantly. However, Hamlet, Prince of Denmark failed to emerge as the deep and cathartic tragedy it can sometimes be.

Henry VI, Part I, thanks to costumes by Joy Goodman and special effects by John Thesing, Trent Anderson, Steve Carlson and Ward Whitting, was a colorful and exciting production. The play depicts the feuding between the English nobles York and Lancaster at the death of Henry V and the crippling effect the internal quarreling had upon England in the war with France. The most interesting parts of this poorly-written play are the side plots that the young Shakespeare could not resist using. Here one can see examples of the genius and humanity that Shakespeare would eventually refine in his later plays. One of these moments is between the Master Gunner (David Brune) and his son (Dana Lavigne) which was handled professionally by the two actors. Another such example is the classic encounter between Lord Talbot (Robert Spanabel) and his son (Forrest Bowman). This scene was acted so well that it rates special mention. Much credit should be given to director Jeff David for not deleting these scenes and for cutting off at other more appropriate places. Best acting performances in the play were lead by Con Roach as the Duke of York whose handsome features and powerful voices dominated the stage. The interplay between James Carter as the timid King Henry VI, and Earl McCarroll as the doting Gloucester, was another acting highlight of the play. Ted Pezzulo played the minor roles of Edmund Mortimer and James Lucy with feeling and brilliance. Despite Mr. Pezzulo's failure to land a major role in any of the plays, he won the unqualified admiration of all the players and of the entire audience. Betty Smith as Joan la Pucelle, Carol Gutenberg as the Countess of Auvergne and J. Christopher Wines as Suffolk also shone among a talented group of young professionals.

Comedy of Errors, on its better nights, can be Shakespeare's funniest play. It is a pure farce with very little philosophy and it describes that results between two sets of twins, one set masters the other servants. Capably directed by Edward J. Feidner and extremely well handled by all involved, Comedy of Errors was the most successful play of the festival. Robert Spanabel and Ted Pritchard were particularly good as the two Dromios.

The final production, Hamlet, was directed by Feidner and starred Jeff David as the young prince. It seemed that David both knew and understood the role and was able to handle the lines. The interpretation of Hamlet as the misplaced actor-philosopher was both a real and effective one. However the tragedy lacked the dark and somber mood which is essential to the play's success. Hamlet's confrontation with the ghost was almost ludicrous at times, never very frightening, which failing points to the great weakness of this interpretation. The play of gigantic emotion lacked anything of emotion. Whether this was due to inexperience among the actors or poor direction is anyone's guess. One felt nothing of Hamlet's great confusion and compassion. Earl McCarroll shone brightly as Horatio, his mellifluous voice the strongest contribution to the festival. J. Christopher Wines was forceful as Laertes and Robert Spanabel turned in his third good performance as old and doddering Polonius. But Hamlet was the center of the stage and it may be that Jeff David was a bit too powerful as the bemuddled Danish prince. He made a most noble attempt to grasp the elusive role and one must wish him future success.

The Shakespeare Festival was good enough to be a satisfying intellectual experience. The fine young players from around the country, lead by Earl McCarroll, Con Roach and Jeff David, and the Minstrels, Jeanne Kelley, Roy Kelley, and David McArthur of Harvard, son of Dean McArthur, providing delightful entertainment with olde English folke tunes, brought Shakespeare to the richness of its tradition and, at times, to the brink of its brilliance.

Jazz Combo Gives Concert

One of the outstanding jazz combos in the United States opened the 11th annual season of the University of Vermont's Lane Summer Series. The group was George Wein's Newport Jazz Festival Quintet, direct from the Newport Jazz Festival. Wein, founder of the famous festival, also directs the quintet and plays the piano. Other members of the Quintet are Morel Feld, drums; Bud Freeman, saxophone; Jack Lesberg, bass; and Ruby Braff, cornet.

The host of Canada's "Let's Sing Out", Oscar Brand, appeared second in the Summer Series. He has recorded 52 LP's and a number of popular records which explain his repertory of some 3000 songs.

Alfred Deller, counter-tenor and third in the Series, was accompanied by Robert Conant, harpsichordist. Deller, who is an acknowledged world authority on the music of the Renaissance and Baroque eras, sang a program of English madrigals of the Elizabethan period. He also resided on campus for three days following his concert, as a staff member of the Institute on Elizabethan Arts and Literature.

One of the great dancers of the world, Melissa Hayden, and a leading ballerina of the New York City Ballet closed the Lane Summer Series. She was accompanied by premier danseur Conrad Ludlow and Carmen De Lavallade in an evening of classic ballet and contemporary dance.

Lane Series

Borge-Mancini Headline

Triple academy award winner Henry Mancini and his forty-piece orchestra, jazzman Stan Getz and his Quartet, and comedian Victor Borge will head the popular attractions on this year's Lane Series.

Among the classic concerts are the Metropolitan National Opera Company in an English version of Puccini's opera "La Boheme," the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company in "The Mikado," and the Cleveland Orchestra, conducted by George Szell.

"THE ODD COUPLE"

Other concerts include the Martha Graham Dance Company, the Pittsburgh Symphony conducted by William Steinberg, The Royal Winnipeg Ballet, pianist John Browning, the Broadway comedy "The Odd Couple" and George Gershwin's folk musical "Porgy and Bess."

The Lane Series, now in its twelfth season, is rated as one of the leading university concert series in the United States. In

Victor Borge

New England there is no other college or university that offers such a diversified series or concerts of greater magnitude.

The Lane Series began as a gift of Mrs. George B. Lane in 1954 in memory of her husband, George B. Lane, '83. Formally inaugurated in 1955, the Lane Series was so enthusiastically received that a Summer Series was immediately begun in 1956, and another winter series added in 1958. A fourth program the Lane Chamber Arts Series, was started in 1961.

PREVIOUS CONCERTS

Some of the major concerts on previous series have included Harry Belafonte, Al Hirt, Joan Baez, the Philadelphia Orchestra, the Chicago Symphony, Arthur Rubinstein, Van Cliburn,

"Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?", The Royal Ballet from London, and many, many others. It would be hard to name a top-ranking solo artist or group attraction which has not played at the University of Vermont under Lane auspices.

Students and staff-faculty members are given tickets priority provided they mail or bring their order to the Lane Office, 54 Waterman, on or before Sept. 12. Such orders should be enclosed in the special green envelope sent to every student and staff member.

Students are urged to mail their orders immediately; tickets are allocated on a first-come, first-serve basis.

All seats for the concert are reserved; and no seats for individual concerts are sold.

The Lane Series has been sold out nearly every season since its inception, and many orders have had to be returned unfilled. You can get tickets, and in the series and price category that you specify, by ordering now. (Tickets will be sent to your college address.)

This year's Student Lane Committee include chairman Judy Al-lard, production manager Peter Covette, treasurer Sandra Batease, publicity director Whitman Wheeler, house manager Wanda Turfboer, and secretary Esther Sundell. Assistants are Melvin Hebel, Judith Gladstone, Christina Maniatty, Diane Hoffman, and Ellen Bookstaver. Other members include Sharon Peloquin, Lorraine Kretschman, Patricia Myers, Aloyse Fraga, Mary Brisbin and William Perry.

The number of returning upperclassmen will also be larger. "A lot of variables go into predicting enrollments, and the pressures nationally have made it harder and harder to make accurate forecasts," he explained.

He also said more upperclassmen than expected have elected to live in residence halls though eligible to live off campus.

openings. Those selected came from 26 states, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico.

The Institute was started last year and supported by the President's Fund from alumni giving. This year, the program was supported by the National Foundation on the Arts and Humanities Act of 1965.

The Institute combined study of the literature, arts, and manners of the Elizabethan period with in-depth study of the three plays offered in the Champlain Shakespeare Festival.

Fleming Museum Features William Davison's Graphics

The Fleming Museum's fall program promises to be strong. Continuing through September 15 is a show of graphics by William Davison, a Vermont printmaker just out of The University of Michigan who is starting to make the national shows. Scheduled for September 24 through October 16 is "National High School Prints," a selection of the best work done in high school art programs in the U.S. There'll be a lecture-demonstration of simple print techniques that require little equipment in connection with the show, October 29 through November 20, two shows: "Early Chicago Architecture" on Louis Sullivan and other greats who preceded Frank Lloyd Wright; and joined the faculty in the department of zoology following graduation. He became a director of summer session in 1950; to add the directorship for adult education division in 1955; and, in 1956 on the call of then President Carl Borgmann, was named to the post of Dean of Administration.

"The Jester's Throne" a color lithograph by William Davison is his current exhibit of graphics at the Fleming Museum.

"Edwin Orr —Drawings," on another young newcomer to the Vermont scene will be presented. "Something to Please," November 27 through December 23, is a Christmas show of inexpensive works to give to yourself or the loved one.

The film series starts with "Shoot the Piano Player," September 28. "The New Film," follows on October 12 with work by four Ford Foundation winners. The films include: "Science Friction" and "Breathdeath" by Stan Vanderbeek; "A Movie" and "Cosmic Ray" by Bruce Conner; "Scrambles" by Ed Emshwiller and "The Squeeze" by Hilary Harris. Also shown will be "Football as it is Played Today" done at Ohio State University.

"Rowell, who has been acting president of UVM twice in the past while the school was searching for a new president, is expected to serve as permanent president until his retirement in about three years." (Burlington Free Press).

In December of 1965, he was designated vice president of the University for administrative and student affairs, and named senior vice president by the Board which also established vice presidents for academic and financial affairs at the same meeting.

He was born May 8, 1904 in Colebrook, New Hampshire, and his family moved to Vermont shortly thereafter. He and Mrs. Rowell currently make their home in Shelburne. They are parents of a daughter, Marjorie, (Mrs. Bruce Norcross) who graduated from the University in 1955.

Rowell is the fourth alumnus of the University of Vermont to ascend to its presidency. The Rev. Calvin Pease, who served as eight president from 1855 to 1861, was the first. He was followed by Matthew H. Buckham, and Guy W. Bailey. Buckham, the 11th president, served from 1871 to 1910; Guy Bailey from 1920 to 1940. He was the 13th president.

Rowell becomes the 19th chief executive of Vermont's oldest institution of higher learning.

He stated, in reference to his new post, "It is a great honor because I have great respect for the men and lady who make up the Board of Trustees. It is only that which gives me courage to accept the post."

The post, vice president of administrative and student affairs, was not filled by the trustees, but Rowell said, "I think it is a good time to take a good look at (that) vice presidency to see if it is necessary or needs reshaping."

"To Die in Madrid," the greatest documentary on the Spanish Civil War is scheduled for November 16; "Blood and Sand," Rudolf Valentino's smasher of yesterday, on December 7. The Museum is also planning a special family program suitable for children. The spring schedule will be announced in December, but includes exhibition of the new instructors, painter Hanlyn Davies and potter George Seachard, as well as a Canadian avant gard show. The film series will also be strongly Canadian featuring "Nobody Waved Goodbye" and a program on the new Montreal film makers. Admission to the films is by Museum Membership: Students $3., Active $4., and Family $10.

Cats Scrimmage Springfield Saturday

Football will be in the air over Centennial Field beginning September 10 with an exhibition game with the powerful Springfield eleven. This tilt with the Maroons of Springfield should kick off the season in good style; Springfield scored 252 points last fall while holding their opponents to a meager 87... their record, a neat 9-0. Following this pre-season scrimmage will be the eight ballgames which will be for all the marbles. American International College will be the opening opponents for the Catamounts at Centennial Field on September 17 (State Day). Last year, the Cats out on an auspicious display of power as they ran over the Aces from Springfield, Mass., 42-19.

Following the game with A.I.C., Vermont will travel to Storrs, Connecticut to tackle with the Huskies of U Conn., a highly regarded eleven. This game on October 1 will be of great significance as it will be the first meeting between the two clubs since 1933 (which Vermont won 36-6). Also, this is the first year we are able to witness a full Yankee Conference schedule; each Yankee Conference team will face one another in football for the first time in history. On October 8, the Cats will again be on the road... this time at Kingston, R.I. against the Rams of Rhode Island. A year ago, against the same Rhode Island club, Vermont put on its greatest defensive show since Coach Bob Clifford has been at the helm. Vermont held the highly regarded Rams to 74 yards on the ground and 61 yards via the air, and won the game 26-6, before a homecoming crowd of 7000.

UNH FOR HOMECOMING

Vermont will return home on the 15th of October against the Wildcats of New Hampshire. This will be the homecoming game for the Catamounts and will be against a much improved New Hampshire team. Last year Vermont won easily, 23-7. After the N.H. game Vermont will once again take to the road, visiting the Norwich Cadets at Northfield. Coach Joe Sabol is still feeling the 7-0 defeat suffered at Vermont last year on a rain-soaked gridiron. Vermont can expect another rough game on the 22nd of October. October 29th is the game... the game against the powerful Redmen of Massachusetts from Amherst. Centennial Field will be packed to the limits for this all-important Yankee Conference tilt. Vermont was smothered 41-6 at Amherst last fall and seek revenge... at least, revenge to tighten up the score. Looking into the crystal ball we can see a "tall order facing the Cats"... but, what are football seasons made of? Yes, upsets!!

The first weekend of November, Vermont will play hosts to the Panthers of Middlebury. Norwich and Middlebury always provide Vermont with all they can handle, and this year should prove to be no exception. Last year, Vermont pinned a 7-0 defeat on Middlebury. Everyone has heard the expression, "finish with a bang"; Vermont will be doing just that as they take on the University of Maine, the Lambert Trophy winners of last fall (this trophy is presented to the outstanding small college football team in New England). Maine defeated a stubborn Vermont club 35-6 at Orono early last season; the halftime was 7-6. Because of the new schedule, Maine has been moved to the last game, instead of Middlebury; this will be two seasons in a row that we have played U Maine away (playing Maine at Alumni Field in Orono makes the Black Bears especially tough).

CLIFFORD'S 5th YEAR

Now that we have taken a brief look at the 1966 schedule, let us take a look at the personnel of the University of Vermont football team. Robert E. Clifford is the head coach, and will begin his fifth year in that capacity. Coach Clifford has a 22-10 record at Vermont, and has won 19 out of the last 24. Assisting Clifford will be John Coons, the highly regarded line coach. John was an All New England guard as an undergraduate at Springfield. Also assisting Clifford will be Dan Rorke (Williams '59), backfield, and Jim Fox (Colby '60), end coach.

Let us now look briefly at the personnel who will be supplying the action on the field... action which should bring another winning season for the University of Vermont Catamounts. The 59-man squad will be boasted with

CAPTAIN BILL VAN BENNEKUM

26 lettermen and only 11 seniors... they are young. There are gaps to be filled, especially offensively up the middle. Missing will be stellar performers like "Rusty" Brink, Scott Fitz, Mike Burke, John Sullivan, Terry Lynn, Joe Albanese and Harvey Bazarian. However, Coach Clifford and his associates have a nice nucleus to work with. They will have their strong running back of last fall, Dick Hebert. Dick will be at flankerback this fall, and fits very nicely in Coach Clifford's passing game. Dick was the leading groundgainer for the Cats last fall and was tied for scoring honors with the departed Mike Burke. Another Vermont native will get the nod at Quarterback... Dave Shumate, a junior from St. Johnsbury will try to step into the shoes left vacated by Scott Fitz. Coach Clifford says, "if he wants the job bad enough, he can have it." The end positions are very solid with veterans. Jack Schweberger and Jeff Kuhman, the offensive line, from tackle to tackle, will be the question mark. Underclassmen will hold the key to success; Steve Vukovich and Dave Lucaroni will probably be at the offensive tackle positions; Bill Crudo, Jim Gallipo and Dan Martin will play a lot at guard; offensive center is wide open between Dave Capman, Marty Conlon and Steve Cutala.

Vying for the fullback slot will be Peter Clifford, son of head coach Bob Clifford. Last year's starting fullback, Bob Mitchell, will be moved to shot back (running back). Coach Clifford says, "Bob has fine speed and size to pick up that 7-8 yards, and run with great power." The offensive line, the quarterback and the fullback will be the keys to a successful season... and these keys which will open the door to a winning season are all underclassmen. Once again, as in 1965, the weight of the load will be placed on the back of youth!

DEFENSE STRONG

Defensively, real strong. Veterans make up the defensive unit. Heading the formidable crew will be Captain Bill Van Bennekum, a senior from Hoboken, N.J. Bill was selected to the All Yankee Conference team as a defensive end last fall; and Bill will again anchor down a defensive end position. Up front we have Joe Soldano, a senior from West New York, N.J.; second team, Mr. Z's All New England dream team and first team All Yankee Conference. Also, we have Don "Tuck" Nelson at the other end position. Joining Soldano in the middle of the line will be the likes of Bill Dorozenski, Jim Guerrieri, and Rick Farnham. Vying for the linebacker spots will be Colin Hurd, a junior from Lovell, Me., Bill Wolff, a junior from Stamford, Conn., Tom Dexter, a promising sophomore from Braintree, Mass., and Pete Ambrose, a senior from Fairfield, Conn. The defensive backfield include a number of veterans from last fall's club, including Paul Malone and Bill Leete (Yankee Conference All Academic) and two outstanding prospects who were on the disabled list last year: Leo Pfeiffer and Jim Krause.

GOOD PROSPECTS

Prospects? Bright! The University of Vermont should have another successful campaign... possibly, a shot at the Yankee Conference Beanpot. A fine season could be decided early in the year with the tilts at Connecticut and Rhode Island. Victories there would set up the game with the Redmen of Massachusetts. (But, let them take one at a time.) Maine, the co-favorite with Massachusetts to win the Yankee Conference title, is no soft touch at the end of the schedule. Massachusetts and Maine again present Vermont with the most formidable competition... as they do everyone else in the Conference. The "M & M" clubs don't melt in your hands... they are real hard-nosed football teams. Once again, youth holds the key to success for Coach Clifford and his Staff. This youth, and the seasoned veterans, should bring another winning season for the University of Vermont Catamounts.

TENNIS COURTS NAMED TO HONOR MARSTON

The UVM Trustees voted to name the Centennial Field tennis court in memory of Dr. Frederic C. Marston, Jr., professor of English who also served as varsity tennis coach at Vermont from 1956-65.

GOLFERS SIGN UP

All those interested in trying out for the golf team should report to Coach Donnelly's office at the gym to sign up as soon as possible.

Soccer Squad Seeks Second YanCon Title

Jeff Taft, Captain; Harold Greig, Coach; Bill Willey, last year's Captain

The University of Vermont, Co-Champions of the Yankee Conference in soccer with Massachusetts, have high hopes of repeating in 1966. They have a veteran lineup returning under the able auspices of second-year coach Harold Greig. Lost from last year's fine club is Bill Willey from Essex Jct., Vermont. Bill was a fine center forward, and will be greatly missed on this year's defense. Bill served as captain last fall. Also missing this fall will be the team's fine goalie, Timmy Madison. Tim alternated with George Abbott, a senior from White River Jct. Vermont. Lastly, the Catamounts top point-getter Dennis Linneham, a left-footed kicker from Upper Darby, Pennsylvania.

Although the Cats will be missing three top members of last year's co-champions, who were 5-1 in the conference and 7-2 overall. They will have a fine nucleus of returnees. Included among the returnees will be Captain Jeff Taft, a junior from Essex Jct., Vermont. Jeff a center halfback was named to the first team All Yankee Conference, honorable mention All New England, and Vermont All State Team. Coach Greig says, "Jeff has remarkable control of that soccer ball, and can be counted on to play the entire game if needed. Also, he is a fine team leader." Also returning will be Peter Baldwin, a left inside from Hinesburg, Vermont; Jack Bitter, a fullback from West Hartford, Connecticut; Jack Semlar, a left inside from Salisbury, Connecticut; Bill Burling, a senior who plays outside right from Toronto, Canada; and Peter Giroux, a senior from Northfield, Vermont who plays left halfback; Also Donald Carlson '67, Essex Jct., Vermont; Jeff Hyman '68 Trinity Pawling, New York; Thurston Sumner '67, Milford Pred, Connecticut. With this nucleus and many other valuable boosters returning, the catamounts should again be vying for the Yankee Conference soccer title.

Vermont will again be under the capable guidance of Hal Greig, the '65 Yankee Conference Coach of the Year in soccer... a great honor for Hal, a graduate of Springfield College. He played varsity soccer, hockey and co-captained the tennis team at Springfield.

Rowell Discusses Rumors

By President Lyman S. Rowell
Richard Berk, Editor of the CYNIC, has suggested the possibility that from time to time there might be certain items of consideration for the University that I might wish to discuss in the columns of the CYNIC. I appreciate this invitation and privilege.

Mr. Berk has told me of certain rumors in connection with the resignation of Dr. Shannon McCune as President which might well be clarified. I am pleased to address this to these rumors. Rumor No. 1, that the resignation was stimulated by the fact that there was a desire on the part of the President to continue and strengthen the relationship of the College of Medicine to the rest of the institution and that this was contrary to the majority thinking.

I feel fully qualified to discuss this point for it was part of the special assignment given me by Dr. McCune during part of last year. At the University of Vermont, we have always emphasized the fact that we had a very special kind of advantage with our Medical College located on the campus. The association of the faculties of the College of Medicine and of the undergraduate colleges produce benefits which are not possible with physical separation. A great deal was made of this during the drive for funds for the new Medical Building when the plans for inter-divisional programs between the College of Medicine and the Colleges of Technology, Arts and Sciences and Agriculture were being formulated.

The past year has been devoted particularly to studies for closer cooperation of the University, the College of Medicine and the hospitals in the State. Dr. McCune believed in the integrity of the institution, and I have no fear of contradiction in stating that with minor exceptions the staff of the entire institution concurs that there is greater strength through integration of the programs that there would be through separation. I shall continue to work for this.

Rumor No. 2 deals with channeling of responsibility through the newly created offices of the vice president. This, it is alleged, tended to cause frustration in some administrative offices which had previously had direct channels to the President.

Fresh Dance To The Vistas

By Jon Schechtman

One thousand Freshman beanies bobbed to the music of the Vistas last Saturday night at the 70th annual mixer. The dance, which lasted from 8 to midnight, was termed a great success by all involved.

The Freshmen had full reign of the Patrick Gym until 10, when the doors were opened to approximately 400 Upperclassmen and Co-eds. Shortly, the number of available Freshmen girls dwindled drastically, the females having been enticed from the dance by car-owning, pin-dangling fraternity members.

This social event was conducted under the auspices of the Student Association's Mixer Committee. The eight-members are: Gordon Josephson, '67, Chairman; Kay Rock, '68; Mark Stine, '67; Mel Hebel, '68; Chris Maniatty, '68; Frank Sills, '68; Eric Stutt, '68; and Richard Kabat, '69. The Key and Serpent supplied the ushers, while the campus security police maintained decorum.

Dance Chairman Josephson said that the dance proved to be the most successful Freshman mixer in several years. This was a result of a large Freshman turn out, and the enthusiastic response of the paying Upperclassmen. The funds collected will be put back into the Student Association treasury to pay for the dance.

Sgt. Thomas Ovitt

Sgt. Ovitt Wounded In VietNam

Chelsea, Mass. - Sgt. Thomas Ovitt, recently of the UVM ROTC Department, is recuperating in Chelsea Naval Hospital here from injuries suffered in Viet Nam Aug. 25.

The sergeant was with the First Infantry Division and had been with the company for only three weeks before suffering a serious eye wound. He has been relieved of active duty.

Sgt. Ovitt is expected to return to his home in Burlington following his recovery.

Rowell Meets With Press

Vermont press and radio representatives will hear Lyman S. Rowell, president of the University of Vermont, when they meet on the University campus Sept. 17.

The two groups will attend the opening University of Vermont football game, against American International College, at Centennial Field at 1:30 p.m. Separate meetings of the two will follow. The Vermont Press Association session will include the election of officers.

President Rowell will address the dinner meeting of the two groups.

Canadian Lectures Presented

Vermont's neighbor to the north will be the subject of a series of seminars and public lectures at the University of Vermont this fall as part of the Canadian Area Studies Program. Prof. Marie Leland of Smith College, a leading student of French-Canadian history culture and literature is conducting five seminars for University faculty and students from Sept. 13 and Dec. 6, and will give public lectures on Sept. 27, Oct. 25 and Nov. 15.

The Sept. 27 lecture will be on "The Quiet Revolution in Quebec," on Oct. 25 the subject will be "Contemporary French Canadian Literature" and on Nov. 15, "French Canadian Immigration to the United States: The Franco-American." Each lecture will start at 8 p.m. in the lower lounge of Waterman Building on the Vermont campus.

The Canadian Area Studies Program was inaugurated at the University in 1964 in recognition of Vermont's close ties with the historical birthplace of Canada, the Province of Quebec. Headed by Edward J. Miles, professor of geography at the University and a native of Canada, it is one of the few studies program devoted to Canadian affairs in U.S. institutions.

UVM Receives $109,000 Under Higher Education Act

The University of Vermont has been awarded a grant of $109,000 under Title I of the Higher Education Act of 1965.

Title I provides Federal financial assistance for aiding in the solving of community problems through college and university extension and continuing education programs.

Under the program, the University serves a dual role - that of a participant and also that of the state agency administering the program. UVM was designated as administrator by the 1965 Legislature. All instructions of higher learning in the state (as listed in the Vermont Directory of Education prepared by the State Department of Education) were invited to participate in the program. UVM and Goddard College are the only participants for the 1966 fiscal year but it is expected that other schools may take part next year.

The state plan, as set in Title I, shall set forth a comprehensive, coordinate, and state-wide system of community service program designed to assist in the solution of community problems in rural, urban, or suburban areas (with particular emphasis on urban and suburban problems) such as housing, poverty, government, recreation, youth opportunities, transportation, health, and land use.

Goddard's program falls under the poverty category while UVM has scheduled programs to include poverty, youth opportunity, health, and communications.

Under poverty, the University's program will be to attack problems in housing, health, rehabilitation and any other related

Naval Opportunities Available

The Navy's Officer Selection team will be on campus Sept. 22 and 23 in lower Waterman to discuss the opportunities available as a commissioned Naval Officer. Officer programs are available to all undergraduates, freshman thru senior. Select the field of your choice.

Mental examinations given without obligation will be given on campus to determine your eligibility.

areas. Under youth opportunities, UVM will seek to assist the greater Burlington community in expanding opportunities for disadvantaged youth.

The health program offers, in the words of Dean Raymond Phillips, "one of the most interesting challenges." Among several projects in this area is one involving the use of two-way television for community service and continuing education programs. Plans call for the operation of two-way microwave television facilities between Burlington (DeGoesbriand and Mary Fletcher Hospitals) and the hospitals in Middlebury and Morrisville.

The communications program will involve the use of ETV for community enrichment.

Dean Kidder To Represent UVM At Rutgers

Dr. George V. Kidder, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences of the University of Vermont, Burlington, Vt., will represent his university in the academic procession of the Rutgers University Bicentennial Convocation. (Dr. Kidder replaces Dr. Shannon McCune, president of the University of Vermont, who had earlier been designated as the delegate.)

About 20,000 persons from all over the world are expected to attend the 200th anniversary convocation, which will highlight the year-long celebration of the Rutgers Bicentennial. It will be held on the Queen's Campus, New Brunswick, on Sept. 22.

Rutgers, the State University of New Jersey since 1945, dates its origin to 1766 when New Jersey Royal Governor William Franklin issued a charter in the name of King George III of England creating Queen's College. The college was renamed Rutgers in 1825 in honor of Col. Henry Rutgers, a New York philanthropist and benefactor of the struggling college.

Senate Communism Report Book Store's Bid Termed Uses Research By Dellin High By UVM Trustees

Doctor Lubomir Dellin

A portion of a recent Senate report on Communism relies heavily on the definitive work of a UVM professor.

The report is entitled "A Study of the Communist Party and Coalition Governments in the Soviet Union and in Eastern European Countries." The section dealing with Bulgaria uses the writings of Dr. L.A.D. Dellin, associate professor of economics, as its principal source of information.

The report was prepared for the Subcommittee to Investigate the Administration of the Internal Security Act and other Internal Security Laws.

Dr. Dellin is presently at work preparing a contribution to "World Communism: A Handbook, 1918-1965", to be published by the Hoover Institution at Stanford University, with the participation of leading scholars in the field of Communist studies.

The Board authorized the University to enter into a contract with the apparent low bidder, H.P. Cummings Construction Co., for a new University Store. Mr. Rowell said the low bid for construction and fixed equipment $587,000, was higher than the original budget and the University will explore alternatives with the contractor.

Mr. Rowell also reported on a plan, approved by the State Building Council, to relocate main studios for the Educational Television Network authorized by the special session of the Legislature, from a site just west of Spear St. and upper Main St., to property at Ethan Allen.

The new UVM President also reported that the Phase III medical building is currently behind schedule, and that the carpenters strike makes doubtful the prognosis for catching up.

Work on the new life sciences building, he said, has not yet been delayed. He noted that the striking carpenters had given permission for unloading and installation of boilers, and that this had helped keep the building on schedule. He said if the strike continues very much longer, however, the schedule will be affected. This would be critical, he said, since the University is already very pressed for space for classrooms and offices.

Referring to Governor Hoff's tour of offices in Montpelier last week, he told Trustees "I wanted to invite him over here. Our story is equally difficult."

He said the University had had to make plans to discontinue using some of its houses in the campus area for faculty housing because it needs space for offices for faculty and staff.

Resignations

The Board also accepted the following resignations: Gary Devino, assistant professor, agricultural economics, July 1; Wilfred Dudevolt, assistant professor, electrical engineering, June 10; Patricia Smith, assistant professor, home economics, June 30; Sei Tokuda, assistant professor, medical microbiology, Aug. 1; Danielle Schwartz, instructor, romance languages, June 30; N. Edward Stevenson, romance languages, June 30; and Loren Disque, County Extension Agent, June 1.

"Shop On Main Street" Brilliant

By K. Klonaky

Opening at the Strong Theatre this weekend, in its Burlington premiere, is Academy Award winning "The Shop On Main Street." This film from Czechoslovakia is the first attempt by movie-makers to take a sober and human view of the atrocities of World War II. Instead of the monsters and super-heroes offered in the past, "The Shop On Main Street" depicts the lives of two incredibly real human beings caught in the terrible dilemma of the Nazi occupation.

One of these people is an old Jewish woman (Ida Kaminska) who owns a button shop on the main street of town. The shop, having long ceased to be of any business value, is supported by the wealthier Jews of the community out of their reverence for the woman. Through their generosity, the old woman gives the outward appearance of mild prosperity.

THE "PROTECTOR"

The second major character is a Czech citizen (Josef Kroner) who is directed by the Nazis to become "protector" of the old woman's shop. As she has been scheduled for deportation to a concentration camp, the "protector" is given enough time to learn the business and then take it over. He and his selfish wife are at first delighted at the prospect of new found wealth.

THE OLD WOMAN

In her tragicomic naivete, the old woman treats the "protector" as an apprentice. In his attempt to make the old woman understand the desperation of her plight, the richness of his heart falls victim to her irresistible old-world charm. As the story moves inexorably toward its horrifying conclusion, the relationship between the protagonists reaches the heights of frustration and compassion.

IT WILL LONG ENDURE

"The Shop On Main Street" stands as the most human and hence the most tragic movie to come out of World War II. Brilliantly acted, casted, and directed, it will long endure as a testament to the power of the human heart.

ANYONE HAVE A FILLER?

Flicks

FLYNN THEATRE - Sean Connery and Joanne Woodward in "A Fine Madness". Connery and Woodward are excellent in a movie with good scenes spoiled by a ridiculous conclusion. Also "Modest Blaise" so so in parts; awful in others.

STATE THEATRE - "A Patch of Blue" - good performances by Elizabeth Hartman, Shelley Winters and Sidney Poitier in a touching little film. Also - "The Unsinkable Molly Brown" - plenty of corn and color with lively musical score.

SOUTHWICK - "The Cardinal" - Otto Preminger, in tackling too much, leaves the view with nothing to hold on to. Overlong, with a good performance from John Houston.

Players Give Open House

University Players are having an open house - 2:00 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 18 - at the Arena Theatre (basement of the Fleming Museum). All interested students are invited.

THE SCEPTIC

By M. Minsky

A few days ago a somewhat fatigued student entered the Bookstore in order to purchase his weekly supply of No-Doze. To his dismay he discovered they had none and upon inquiring learned that the university doctor had requested that they withdraw No-Doze from sale. The student then purchased 4 cartons of cigarettes, hopped into his covair and drove to Church Street. There he obtained a money order of $19.87 and sent it for a genuine World War II tank complete with extra ammunition supplied by Oswald, Whitman and Johnson Texas Arms Inc. He then bought several bottles of cough syrup for some of his fraternity brothers who were under eighteen.

BIGGER THINGS

Upon inquiring further about No-Doze, the students learned that No-Doze in itself was not dangerous. But it could lead to vaguely ambiguous "bigger things", which were either better or worse depending on your point of view. Furthermore, as any friendly policeman would tell you many criminals use No-Doze to keep them awake as they undertake their dastardly crimes. Then, too, as sale of No-Doze increased coffee sales in the Den decreased. The Den in order to make more money would be forced to raise its prices once more secretly in the summer. The problem was complicated; whenever the Den had raised its prices the university found an administrative purge necessary to keep the students mind occupied with a non-economic diversion.

STONE-THROWING

Soon there appeared certain dubious characters who spent their time leaning against walls offering nickle bags of No-Doze. Many students did not object to No-Doze so long as it was used by responsible people (they and their friends) in order to ease intellectual activities but disapproved of its use for kicks. Many students were publicly disturbed (privately envious) of rumors of No-Doze parties held in dingy basements and secluded groves. At one such party held in the woods, the drug-incited people began throwing stones at each other and several were affected for days. No doubt such parties were attended by - dare we say it - Communists.

BUCKHAM'S GARDENS

Later that year two students were expelled for growing coffee plants, which contained the basic ingredient of No-Doze on the roof garden of Buckham Hall. These roof gardens were the latest scheme to beautify the campus. "Sort of like the hanging gardens of mmmmm, errrrr, Babylon," declared Lynda Bird who had just been selected Miss Vermont Maple Syrup. Her fiance famed actor George Hamilton, was selected Mr. Vermont Maple Syrup. And, then, one day some one discovered that by mixing maple syrup and milk and main lining it, once could achieve results even more spectacular than No-Doze.

MAPLE SYRUP

This placed the ministers of Vermont in a fearful dilemma. Being Christians they were of course terrified to speak against the drug because it would mean some of their church members might suffer an economic loss. But when some college student took the drug and claimed to have seen an experienced god, the state, put him away, and the ministers, being true Christian ministers spoke up. They were against maple syrup and milk. Quote of the Week

There can be no doubt that with the creation of any new office there are times of misunderstandings. Careful delineation of the appropriate channels is of great importance. Dr. McCune referred to the offices of the vice presidents appropriate business for them to prepare information and reports for his perusal. It is thus true that the new office of vice president was interposed between a previously existing office and that of the President. However, this is the procedure that was planned in the establishment of these offices is an endeavor to relieve the President's Office of masses of administrative detail. This practice will, most assuredly, be continued under my administration. Frustrations existed, no doubt, but it should be noted that even with the delegation of authority to a subordinate officer, the final decision rests with the President and his responsibility is to the Board of Trustees. He may delegate the responsibility and authority to a subordinate officer but in so doing, he must make it clear where the final decision will be made and be prepared to support this. I believe that these appropriate channels were understood by the various administrative officers.

"Newest" Men's Dorm Is In Winooski Park

The Main Lounge at Ethan Allen House

The residents of Ethan Allen House, our new men's dormitory, invite everyone to an open house, Saturday night from 7-11. The building is located in Winooski Park at the former Ethan Allen Air Base. Presently, there are 35 students residing in the Old Officer's Club.

The "newest" dormitory accommodates 41 students, each room having its own bath. Despite the restful atmosphere, and spacious interior, the boys do have one complaint: the distance from campus. These positive points have encouraged some to request placement in Ethan Allen House. All male students interested in this dormitory are cordially invited to attend the open house and form their own opinion.

Booters Continue Practice Sessions

By Ted Ryan

A strong scoring attack and a nucleus of veterans will be the mainstay of the 1966 edition of the University of Vermont soccer team.

UVM coach Hal Grieg is seeking to conduct his charges to a second straight Yankee Conference title. Last year the Cats shared the championship rung with Connecticut and Massachusetts.

Coach Hal Grieg

"Our team is still a young squad, although it wouldn't seem to be because of returning veterans," Grieg stated. "But we are going to have to fill some key positions with sophomores."

Grieg's front line is virtually intact with veterans. Captain Jeff Taft will hold down the line from his center forward position. Taft is a sure-footed booster who looks even sharper since playing in the Vermont summer league.

Pete Baldwin returns to the line and lends plenty of scoring ability. Last season Baldwin shared the team scoring leadership with the graduated Dennis Linnehan. Each booted nine goals. Jack Semler, an inside, and Jeff Hyman, an outside left who played behind Linnehan, figure to be in the starting lineup when the Cats face Connecticut in October for the Yankee Conference opener. The final line position is a tossup between letterman Bill Burling and sophomore Jimmy Wood.

While the line is experienced and steady, the secondary is not. Grieg lost ace goalie Timmy Madison, captain and last year's most valuable player fullback Bill Willey, and fullback Ted Manning. Grieg will be forced to fill these vacancies with sophomores who must mature rapidly if the Catamounts hope to challenge for the Conference title.

The sophomores who will be heavily relied upon are halfback Pete Myer, fullback Lester Velez, and halfbacks Joe Noss and Dan O'Brien. The key to the defense will be among these players, Grieg stressed.

Soph Jimmy Wood

Finding a talented goalie to replace Madison is another problem but Grieg has two experienced netmen and one surprising aspirant. Gerry Abbott, who played about 50 per cent of the time last year, and Dave Hutchinson, the goalie of the freshmen team last year, have looked good in practice. Attempting organized collegiate soccer for the first time, junior John Hilton has impressed Grieg despite his lack of experience.

The Catamounts scrimmaged a Burlington area team Saturday but, Grieg said, "It looked as if we needed work. It was a good team we played."

"We have a problem of getting a system to fit our personnel. But basically I wanted to see the sophomores under fire," he continued.

"We don't have the reserve strength to be a contender as yet. We just don't have the scoring potential in the reserves," last year's Yankee Conference Coach of the Year stated.

Goalie Gerry Abbott

Grieg expects Connecticut and Massachusetts to be the primary contenders in the YanCon but with quick development of key sophomores, Vermont might once again be the Cinderella team of the league.

All three state opponents pose as powerhouses this year. An excellent group of sophomores has boosted Norwich into contention for state honors although Middlebury, despite the loss of last year's first team through graduation, is still the favorite. The St. Michael's unit has lost only two or three players from the 1964 team.

Harriers Open Workouts

By Mick Kropsky

Veteran varsity and freshmen cross country coach Archie Post has officially begun holding practice sessions in anticipation of the harrier's October eighth opening meet against R.P.I. and Williams. Having lost only one man to graduation, Coach Post is looking forward to a good season.

Leading the cross country squad is this year's captain Renier Chaintreuil, a senior from Pittsford, New York. Other top men on the team include Sid Young and Rick Howard, both juniors. Mr. Post also indicated that he had some promising sophomore runners.

Coach Post emphasized that it is not too late to try out for cross country. Anyone interested should report to the cage or the outdoor track at 4:20 p.m. The squad will be working out at one of these two locations Monday through Friday. Mr. Post also urges anyone interested in participating in track and field who is not active in another fall sport to come and work out with the cross country team.

Gridders Open Season Against AIC

The INSIDER

by Leo Pfeiffer

The prospects looked bright after last spring for the 1966 edition of the Vermont football team. The players' summers were cut short on August 22 and they practiced until they met Springfield, a team which is ranked among the top 3 in New England mainly because of their 9-0 record last year with 30 lettermen back . . . and soundly whipped them.

Of course there is a background to all this. There are strong representations from each class, particularly the Junior Class. Dave Shumate appears headed for an outstanding year. In fact this reporter has seen some moves by this Q.B. which the fine 3 year veteran Scott Fitz never had. He is backed credibly by Paul Simpson, who broke several big records of Shumate's at St. Johnsbury High, and Jack Stroker, noted for his 60 yard bombs. Bob Mitchell and Jim Culhane, the starting halfback and fullback, have impressed with their hard running and blocking this pre-season. You can be sure that when you see Mitchell, a converted fullback, making one of his frequent 6 or 7 yard gains, it will be Culhane, or possibly his substitute, Pete Clifford, making the key block. Dick Hebert, back from a great junior year, has many things expected of him this year.

The offensive line is young but will do the job. Soph Billy Crudo and veteran Dan Martin have both looked good at the guard slots, giving the team hefty support there, weighing 220 and 215 respectively. Jim Sullivan, who last year was hampered by an injury, decided last spring he was going to make people notice him and went home for the summer. He came roaring back at 230 lbs. and is now Dave Lucaroni's opposite at the starting tackle position. At end Jeff Kuhman and Jack Schweberger, both come back from outstanding years last year and cause nothing but smiles on the coaches' faces. Schweberger, starting his third campaign, was also a defensive specialist in his sophomore year, but will concentrate only on offense this year. Kuhman may draw the attention of some scouts if he continues the way he is going. This leaves us with one position . . . center. Somehow, somewhere, the team has lost all 7 centers this past year, so the coaches looked over the material and came up with 2 capable men, neither of whom had ever centered a ball before - Dave Capman and Gene Curruthers. Both are doing such a fine job it appears the position is now secure.

Judging by Saturday's scrimmage, the defense, in shutting out powerful Springfield, appears set. John Gurrieri (who just got married prior to the season) and Bill Dorzynski anchor the defensive line and have possibly one of the best pass rushes in New England. Captain Bill Van Bennekum and Tucker Nelson rarely let anybody get around their ends, even if double teamed, while Lefty Harrington and Ron Martins, playing for the injured Joe Soldano, are surprising many with their fine playing. Harrington incidentally is the young man who received the "Unsung Hero Award" last year and has made a great comeback from an almost fatal car accident. What he lacks in size (he's only 5'6") he makes up for in speed and strength by going under his man.

Linebackers Bill Wolff and Colin Hurd both have 2 great years ahead of them and may even outdo the famed duo of George Oelze and Rusty Brink of 2 years ago. They are very adequately backed by Pete (the Fly) Ambrose, a legend for his spirit and hustle, and sophomore Tom Dexter.

The defensive secondary, leaky the last 2 years, has been working hard to correct this. Men like Ed Kiniry, Bill Leete, soph Bill Lawrence, Jim Krause, Paul Malone, among others seem to have the situation well in hand. If Saturday's scrimmage is any indication, this could turn out to be one of the top secondaries in the east.

Outside of the 2 platoons, we have a third team hovering between these two ready to go in anywhere, anytime. The coaches picked out the smartest men on the squad and told them they would have to practice both ways because only they had the intelligence to keep the offensive and defensive maneuvers straight. On this team are such fine players as Bob Florczak, Steve Vukovich and Rick Farnham, 2 very promising sophs, Art Brown, the punter, Pete Clifford and Ed Foye, both versatile backs along with Ray Hadeka and others. This team is very important, indeed, because as Coach Clifford once pointed out, "The most important wheel in the car is the one in the trunk."

Defensive back Leo Pfeiffer makes clean tackle of Springfield receiver after short gain on the play.

The 1966 football season will officially open at 1:30 p.m. this Saturday for Vermont as the Catamounts play host to the Aces of American International College. Vermont will be seeking its fourth consecutive victory over the Aces, including a 42-19 thrashing of the Springfield, Mass. institution last year.

The Cats will be coming off an excellent showing in last week's scrimmage against Springfield College, the 14-0 victory over the Maroons has Coach Clifford looking with greater ease at a few previously untested areas.

One question mark before the scrimmage was the center position, but fine performances by soph Dave Capman and Gene Curruthers indicate that this position should be cause for little worry as the season progresses.

Also the quarterback position which was vacated by Scott Fitz who set three career records for the Green and Gold including the total offense mark, seem to have a capable replacement. Junior Dave Shumate and hometown counterpart Paul Simpson both looked sharp in completing nine of eighteen passes.

It should also be noted that at least five other passes were on the mark, but the intended receivers had trouble finding the handle. Consequently, Coach Clifford designated the week of Sept. 12-17 as National Pass Catching Week. By game time Saturday one can be sure that the UVM receivers will have remedied their problem of last week. Ends Jeff Kuhman, Jack Schweberger, and flanker Dick Herbert should guarantee a potent aerial attack for UVM against AIC.

Intramural Scoreboard

By Mick Kropsky

A variety of events are just getting under way as intramural athletics begins for another year. Fraternities and Independents will again be competing for the All Sports Trophy emblematic of intramural sports supremacy at UVM. Delta Psi has won the All Sports Trophy for the last two consecutive years and will be trying to make it three in a row.

Following is a list of upcoming events:

Tennis (singles) starts Monday, September 19 . . . Swim meet entries open Tuesday the twentieth . . . Faculty tennis (singles) start Wednesday Sept. 21 . . . Handball (doubles) entries open on Thursday the twenty second . . . Touch football has already begun and touch football officials are needed. The pay is a $1.25 per hour - if interested, contact Mr. Strassburg at the gym.

SWIM CLUBS FORMED

Swimming clubs in the women's physical education program are now being formed. The two clubs offered for participation are the "Catalina Club", for synchronized swimming and the Competitive Swimming Club. The Catalina Club will meet for the first meeting of the year on Wednesday, Sept. 21 from 7:30 - 9:30 at the pool. The Competitive Swimming Club will hold its first meeting on Thursday, Sept. 22 from 7:30 - 9:30 at the pool.

The sponsor for both groups is Miss T. Brusstar whose office is in the Southwick building on Redstone Campus. Everyone interested in either or both clubs is invited to attend. Come and bring an interested friend.

Halfback Bob Mitchell turns the corner on the way to another long run in the Springfield scrimmage.

Mitchell, Jim Culhane, and an occasional effort from Hebert the Vermont ground game will provide a good threat to balance the passing attack. Mitchell was the star of the Springfield scrimmage, gaining 135 yards and 25 carries along with scoring both touchdowns.

Many of Mitchell's runs were through the wide holes opened up by the quick and agile Catamount offensive line. Veterans Dave Lucaroni and Danny Martin, and newcomers Jim Sullivan, Bill Crudo, and Steve Vukovich can be counted on to do a consistently good job in protecting the quarterback as well as blocking for the runners.

The defensive backfield, a perennial weak spot on Catamount elevens in recent years, also looked more than adequate in last week's scrimmage. The secondary which included Bill Leete, Leo Pfeiffer, Jim Krause, and Paul Malone held the Aces to 8 completions in 31 attempts for a meager total of 64 yards through the air.

The defensive line, anchored by Captain Bill Van Bennekum and Don Nelson at the ends, again appears strong. The middle of the line is bolstered by Bill Dorzynski, John Gurrieri, Ron Martins, and Joe Soldano. Soldano missed the scrimmage last Saturday and was replaced capably by a 190-lb. Lefty Harrington, but the burly Soldano should be ready again this Saturday. The linebacking corps of Bill Wolff, Colin Hurd, Tom Dexter, and Peter Ambrose provides size, speed, and experience for Clifford.

strong passing attack which could mean trouble for the still unproven in game condition Vermont secondary. The Catamounts will have all intentions of starting the season with a win, but may need a tremendous team effort to hold back the Aces.

Quarterback Dave Shumate talks the situation over with Coach Clifford.

Greek Week Program Announced

Fraternity and sorority members are busy preparing and practicing for the 66 Greek Week Activities. On September 28 a Convocation will be held in Ira Allen Chapel at 8:30 P.M. This will be the official opening of fraternity and sorority rushing programs. All freshmen should attend the Convocation in order to receive introduction to the fraternity and sorority systems at UVM. Dr. Gregg and Dean Gribbons will be the guest speakers. This Convocation will be invaluable to the freshman rushees.

The Greek Sing will be held on September 30 in the Patrick Gymnasium at 8:00 P.M. All the fraternities and sororities will be there to compete for trophies. Also the Greek Week Queen will be announced and last year's intramural sports trophies will be awarded. This will be an enjoyable evening and we hope all will attend.

On October 1, the Greek Games will be held on the green, in front of Redstone Campus. The games will be an inter-fraternity chariot race, an interfraternity tug of war, sorority bicycle race, a co-ed three legged race, and a co-ed pie eating contest. The games always prove to be very exciting and this year should be no exception.

The 66 Greek Week will be the biggest and best ever held. We hope all will attend, especially freshmen, because this is the beginning of their rushing season.

$45,860 Grant

Bailey Library Studies Regional Library Cataloguing

The Bailey Library is currently taking part in a study project aimed at Regional Library Cataloguing and Processing Center for New England state university libraries. Under a grant of $45,860 from the Council on Library Resources, Inc., of Washington, D.C., the New England Board of Higher Education has enlisted the libraries of the six New England state universities in the study.

Paul B. Kebabian, director of Libraries at Vermont, says the study could lead to "computer-aided acquisition, cataloguing and book processing services to participating libraries."

He notes that the size of a library catalogue index card, 3x5 inches, belies its importance: "File number, title and author are a matter of course in cataloguing. But the summary of contents on the file card is critical, especially when you're providing material for research that may involve scanning dozens of volumes."

"In fact, the preparation of these summaries is becoming so highly specialized that in some major libraries cataloguers will have advanced degree in a specific subject and a degree in library science before they go to work cataloguing books in their field."

Kebabian calls the cataloguing process "the creation of a major bridge between book and reader. At the Bailey Library, for instance, we have some 340,000 volumes and have added roughly 45,000 a year for the past two years.

"If these books weren't properly catalogued they would, to all intents and purpose, be lost."

The NEBHE study project will evaluate the usefulness of a regional processing center. If the study indicates such a center to be practical it could result in a central computer connected to the participating libraries by a telecommunication network. It would serve primarily as an information exchange for the important content summaries of new books and related information.

In Kebabian's words, "If the center idea becomes a reality it will give the state university libraries access to the kind of professional specialization that, individually, none of us can afford." He added that cataloguing would continue to be done locally and participating libraries would contribute their information to the center.

Since virtually all U.S. libraries subscribe to the Interlibrary Loan Code, Kebabian remarked, "other libraries would have access, indirectly, to the benefits of such a center. They would turn to us for specific information and we, in turn, would contact the center and relay the information back."

Kebabian arrived at Vermont in mid-July from Florida, where he was Associate Director of Libraries at the University of Florida in Gainesville.

Rowell Answers Questions Of Campus Leaders

At a comparatively formal and extremely informative conference Wednesday afternoon in Billings, President Lyman S. Rowell answered questions put to him by student leaders invited to attend. President Rowell first explained that while he is very eager and willing to meet and talk with students, he will not make a practice of informal visits to Billings. He will, however, be at all times available to students who wish to arrange an appointment.

PERPETUAL PROBLEM

Mr. Rowell addressed his next remark to the parking dilemma.

Last winter a landscape architect was called into assess the situation; he in turn called in a parking consultant from Chicago who has solved such problems at other universities. Their study thus far has resulted in two suggestions: 1. Limit student parking on central campus, the facilities available to be used primarily by staff and faculty. However, President Rowell did say that "We do not believe it is necessary for each faculty member to have a parking space beneath his window," but that faculty members do deserve "someplace nearby to park." Student facilities ideally would be within a "reasonable distance." 2. Construct a multi-level parking garage, possibly on the land near Chittenden Hall which is owned by Mary Fletcher Hospital. The problem here, as seen by President Rowell, concerns the expense to the university and to those using the facilities.

The use of a parking lot behind the agricultural engineering building was held up due to construction difficulties, and should be gravelled over soon and paved next spring.

Parking consultants will return the week of Oct. 3 to survey faculty, staff and students in relation to parking. Questionnaires will then be distributed.

PROTESTED COSTS

The question was posed as to the prices charged by Buildings and Grounds for various construction and other work. Would it perhaps be less costly if individual bids were accepted for specific projects? Mr. Rowell's response was that he had himself protested costs on occasion and had returned bills asking "Was all this justified?" He has found that although the cost of individual jobs may be higher, in general and taking the over-all view, the costs are sufficiently lower to make the present system worthwhile. He added that sometimes competitive bids are taken to insure that the prices are in line.

EXPANDED LIBRARY

Pres. Rowell outlined plans for an extension of Bailey Library which should be under construction by 1970. The direction which this extension will take is not known. Suggestions for expansion include the building-on of a tower-like structure where closed stacks might be kept, allowing the present facilities to be used exclusively for studying.

BOOSTED ENROLLMENT

Present figures show an enrollment of 5004, which serves as evidence to the administration that if the present system of acceptance is adhered to with the same ratio, enrollment should be limited to approximately 7000. If it is not held at this figure, either out-of-state enrollment will have to be cut back or facilities expanded to accommodate the increase. If admission requirements remain constant and if there is a change in the current 70-30 in-state, out-of-state ratio, it is conceivable that enrollment may rise as high as 10,000. If this should happen, an entire new cycle of major construction would be necessary to accommodate the increase.

LANE SERIES EXTRA

The Smothers Brothers, Oct. 5, Tickets 2.00 - 2.50 After nationwide record-breaking performances, the Smothers Brothers have been booked for their Burlington debut. This is neither Red nor Blue series and tickets are available on first-come first-serve.

FINE ARTS CENTER

A fine arts center has been planned by a committee which is presently seeking an architect. Although some endowments designated for this purpose have been received, it would, according to Mr. Rowell, probably be difficult to acquire state funds for such a project.

HOUSING POLICY

When asked whether the present lenient off-campus housing policy would be revised upon completion of the new dorms, President Rowell was definite. "If I'm still calling the shots, no!"

UVM Man Is Honorary Consul From Honduras

With a "Letter of Patent" (Carta Patente) from the Honduran Government, William W. Stone of the University of Vermont Extension Service is now an Honorary Consul of the Republic of Honduras to the people of Vermont.

Stone was honored for his role as Chairman of the Partners of the Alliance-Honduras & Vermont, Inc., a private and growing group of Vermonters formed last October at the urging of the Alliance for Progress and the Agency for International Development (AID) of the U.S. Department of State.

The Honduran Partners will reciprocate by sending a folk-dance group to Vermont this winter, and a travelling art exhibit during the summer of 1967.

He and a Middlebury College faculty member, Samuel Guarnaccia, professor of Spanish, will attend an international partners conference in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, Sept. 19-22. With them will be William B. Wright, vice president of the Marble Savings Bank in Rutland. At the conference, Stone will be co-chairman of a committee on Agriculture and Cooperatives.

Partners groups have been formed in thirty states under the AID-Alliance program and paired with parallel groups in 15 Latin American countries to back up the Alliance for Progress with people-to-people contacts. Members are unpaid volunteers; their expenses as delegates to the Partner countries and conferences are met by the Alliance.

21 Subject Areas80 Courses Offered
In Evening Division

The most comprehensive Evening Division program ever offered at the University of Vermont will get underway this month on the Burlington campus, in nine Vermont cities and towns and in Montreal.

A total of 51 courses is being offered on campus and 29 at off-campus centers in 21 different subject areas: art, music, chemistry, commerce and economics, education, engineering, English, literature, geography, political science, German, history, mathematics, home economics, geology, philosophy, physics, psychology, romance languages, sociology and speech.

With the exception of a few non-credit courses, credits may be earned for Evening Division courses if entrance requirements are met.

The University Evening Division started on a limited basis during the 1940's and became a full-scale program in 1953. Total attendance and the number of courses offered have grown steadily; in 1960-61 881 students attended fall and spring semesters. In 1965-66 the number had risen to 1934, and the number of courses given had grown correspondingly.

The Evening Division is headed by Dean Raymond V. Phillips who also directs Summer Session and Conferences and Institutes at the University.

Additional information may be obtained from the office in 148 Waterman Building or by calling 864-4511; ext. 297.

Poster Contest
Announced*DORMS MAY ENTER

The Homecoming Poster Committee invites everyone and every dorm to participate in the 1966 all-campus poster competition, an event which has been open only to sororities and fraternities in previous years.

The theme of this year's contest is "Songs of the Century," and each dorm is invited to do its own poster (made of chicken wire and crepe paper), or an entire complex of dorms may build one between them.

Themes must be submitted to the office of Director of Student Activities in Billings by Oct. 11.

UVM Receives
$18,000 Grant
Shared With Hospital

The University of Vermont and the Mary Fletcher Hospital are the beneficiaries of a prominent Burlington businessman who died in June of 1946.

Each institution will receive over $18,000 under the terms of the will of the late Ernest A. Brodie, long-time president and general manager of Citizens Coal Co.

Mr. Brodie died June 26, 1946 at the age of 80, and provided a trust fund with principal to be divided between UVM and the Mary Fletcher at the termination of the trust.

Born in Rock Island, Que., in 1865, he moved to Burlington with his family in 1873, where his father entered the wholesale shoe business. A graduate of the University in 1886, Mr. Brodie went to California as a civil engineer for a land and water company. He returned to Burlington in 1895 and, after closing out his father's shoe business, brought an interest in the Citizens Coal Co., serving as its general manager and later president. He was married to the former Ruth Boardman, of Burlington, who died in 1939.

His gift to the University provides for establishment of the Ernest A. Brodie Athletic Scholarship Fund. His gift to the Mary Fletcher will further development of the hospital's program.

Rev Perry Defends Coffee Houses

Espresso explosion! Each month 150 new church-related coffee houses open their doors. From humdrum beginnings with two chairs, a table, and a coffee pot, came the most exciting venture of the contemporary church. Critics have attacked the movement as heretical, radical, p.r.-motivated, neurotic, and shallow. The Coffee House Ministry, by John D. Perry, Jr. (John Knox Press) is the first book about the new and controversial movement.

Malcolm Boyd, the "espresso priest," writes in the foreword that it is a "highly practical handbook concerning the theology of the laity related to life in the world."

Perry finds the coffee house movement is set within the framework of the church's traditional task of evangelism. In it the church has discovered another way to communicate with people. "The coffee house provides an opportunity experience dialogue, not just talk about it."

He goes on to show how others may brew their own controversy, discussing location and decorations, equipment, and finances. The final section examines the roles, relationships, and responsibilities of coffee house personnel, and offers hints for their training. There is a bibliography of the coffee house movement, 25 photographs, and 13 coffee house recipes.

John D. Perry, Jr., is the Protestant Chaplain in a co-operative ministry at the University of Vermont. He formerly directed the University Christian Fellowship and the Koinonia Coffee House at the University of Connecticut. During the summer of 1965 he conducted a "Coffee House Study Project" for the National Council of Churches and the National Coffee Association.

Slade Is New French Dorm

By Margaret Crane

The French House became a reality this fall when Slade Hall's occupants and new head resident arrived. The dorm is occupied by twenty-three upperclassmen who signed up for the French Dorm last spring.

At Slade, the girls are on an honor system to speak French at all times except when discussing academic subjects in terms too technical to be possible in French.

The head resident of the French House is Mlle. Monique Soube, a graduate student, who's home is Paris France. This year being her first experience with living in the U.S., she provides a fountain of French influence for those living in the dorm.

The French House is under the guidance of the French Cultural Center which is headed this year by Mme. Geno, former director of the French Houses at Middlebury and Elmyra College.

The house and Center will have a formal opening ceremony on Oct. 9. President Rowell and the Cultural Attache of the French Embassy in Boston will be honored guest.

Home Ec Club

Holds First Meeting

On Thursday, September 1966, the Home-Economics Club met at the Newman Center for their annual Big-Little Sister Picnic. Upper classmen were hostesses for the freshmen girls. Several members of the Home Economics staff attended. After Dr. Samenink and Ruth Taylor, President of the club, spoke, the officers of the club modeled some fall fashions by Simplicity.

Film Series

Opens

Francois Truffaut's "Shoot the Piano Player" opens the Fleming Museum film series Wednesday night, September 28, 8 p.m. in the Arena Theater. The French film was scheduled at popular request.

There are ten programs in the film series. Admission is by Museum Membership and is $3.00 for students. Among the films scheduled are "To Die in Madrid," a Valentino classic, "Blood and Sand," and the Canadian "Nobody Waved Good-bye." The second Program, October 12, will survey the new American film -- the kicky flicks. Featured are works by four Ford Foundation winners -- Comer, Emshwiller, Vanderbeek and Harris.

EDITORIAL...

At a meeting on Wednesday, President Rowell assured campus leaders that the Greek system is by no means losing ground on this campus. He further asserted that belonging to a Greek house should mean more than just a place to eat and sleep.

"It should mean something to the development of the individual; and as long as it does, it will continue to have importance. There will always be a place for the fraternities and sororities as long as they fulfill this purpose."

President Rowell believes the Greek system has fluctuated in quality and importance on this campus for as long as he has been here and, in answer to a poignant question, assured many it is now a system moving toward the top once again.

If all this is true, and we agree this is indeed the pattern, then why is there constant criticism made by non-Greeks and certain faculty members?

Although industry and a willingness to work, is not a measure of the worth of a system, we must admit the Greeks consider their role at the university in a serious light and strive to make it and keep it strong. Fraternities and sororities are not without support, as can be attested by the above statement and by the support other faculty members have given.

"The organization of systems make them strong." This comment was made by Fred Brown, president of the Inter-Fraternity Council. He feels, and we agree, the Greek system is well coordinated and smoothly run. This alone does not guarantee success, but it is an indication of a step toward a favorable outcome.

If it is of any consolation to those firm non-believers, Fraternity and Sorority houses do manage to alleviate the housing shortage problem. This is not meant to be a propagandistic move to push the Greek system.

We do feel, however, that criticism is not justifiable without due reason and the snide remarks are, as far as we are concerned, uncalled for.

If anyone cares to constructively criticize the Greeks, they are willing to hear you. The fact that two houses on this campus were chosen by their national organizations as the best all-around chapters of their respective sorority and fraternity, speaks well for UVM's system.

Another fraternity was named second in scholarship throughout the nation. These and other awards, as well as the dominance of Greeks at the high-level positions in all areas, academic and extra-curricular, surely do not detract from the over-all image of Greeks.

Why then, in view of all these factors, do some continue to deride the "Fraternity Man"? We suggest to you that these criticisms are unfounded.

Student Leaders Define Problems

Fargo, N.D.-(I.P.) - A report on the first Campus Leaders' Retreat at North Dakota State University this year emphasized the following problems and possible solutions:

The student at this University has the right to know what the courses he is taking involve, and what professors are going to teach him. Each department should be required to list the teachers that will teach the different sections of the course well in advance of registration.

There is far too little interest in reading outside the classroom. A list of the top "ten" books read by the students on campus could be published each month in the campus newspaper.

Competition should be developed among campus organizations for a common goal.

Cultural opportunity should be provided by each student's curriculum.

Groups should place more emphasis on those activities which provide lasting effects or learning experiences.

Delegates from approximately 35 campus organizations voiced their opinions in different discussion groups that were designed to bring out problems as student leaders see them. Faculty members encouraged students to think creatively and dare to act on their convictions. Another workshop with a self-evaluation clinic will be held this coming spring.

UVM Designated Civil Defense Service Center

The University of Vermont has been designated a Professional Development Service Center in the national Civil Defense program.

Under this program it has been awarded a one-year $19,927 contract.

Aim of the project is to stimulate the inclusion of fallout protection in new buildings, both private and public.

Stephen C. Knight, Jr., associate professor of civil engineering, has been named center director. His assistant is Arthur F. Tuthill, professor of mechanical engineers. Three other civil engineers and two other mechanical engineers are certified analysts and will work on the program.

Prime task of the center will be to conduct seminars, lectures and workshops of from one to 12 hours on fallout shelter design and construction techniques.

These sessions will be for architects, engineers and state and local officials involved in planning new buildings.

Professor Tuthill explained that such fallout protection can be incorporated into the plans for conventional structures at little or no extra cost.

The center staff will also be available to review building plans and specifications to examine their potential for fallout shelters, and to recommend techniques for protection.

Another service will be to work with architectural firms on any of their building projects, where fallout protection planning may be desirable.

Finally, the center staff will work up case studies to illustrate techniques in planning fallout shelters.

In 1965 Congress required that fallout protection be incorporated in the construction of all new federal buildings, and this requires the service of a certified shielding analysts.

SCEPTIC

By M. Minsky

SIS BOOM BAH RAH RAH RAH. RIS SOOM BAH SAH SAH SAH. HIS HOOM HAH DAH DAH DAH. WIN TEAM FIGHT TEAM WIN TEAM WIN.

What a miracle is man. What an example for our children. I am amazed; I am awed; I am astonished. Even at public sports spectacles he recites poetry, listens to music and dines upon specially prepared meats and other substances. So much at once. He is surrounded by this beauty; but is attracted by a mere game. He is always attracted by the trivial rather than the meaningful. A man would gladly die and, even more gladly, kill for no other purpose than preserving the trivial way of life.

Imagine if you can twenty two men, adult men who are supposedly scholars, leap with great force upon one another with much gnashing of the teeth, rending of the clothes and shattering of the skulls for no other purpose than to obtain a small brown spheroid made from the skin of a dead beast. More curious, the players who obtain the disgusting trinket wants nothing more than to get rid of it by depositing the object behind a white line drawn on the field. For their endeavors, these grown men receive a letter to pin upon their cloaks. How quaint, how curious, how bizarre.

I hope no person will accuse me of lying, but I have seen several thousand people, most of whom were adults, gather to watch this spectacle. Some even pay to be admitted; most of the spectators are admitted free because - would you believe - they are scholars. Furthermore, they will sit on hard seats, expose to the foulness of the weather in order to watch the spectacle. Impossible. Yet I have proof.

People will pay a great deal more to watch two men attack each other in a small ring placed in the midst of a great hot smoke filled room. If by chance one of these men should kill the other or, by chance, if both should perish everyone, is shocked and horror stricken partly because they wanted it to happen in the first place and partly because they enjoy being shocked and angered. Most of these fighters belong to a certain minority group and are honored so long as they are silent. This is an example of American liberalism.

There must be a reason for man's interest in such games. Certainly, one doesn't go to see who wins. One can read that in the paper. The reason people go to games is to be amused. They seek amusement because they are bored. They dare not remain bored because that will force them to think. And if people thought, who would pay the taxes. Thought overthrows governments, destroys religion and ends wars. None of that. No, No, None of that. Think of the economy. Children must not think. For thought causes blindness, baldness, sterility, and warts.

Further more man enjoys violence. If he did not enjoy it there would be no need for his religion to condemn it. Of course his religion doesn't really condemn murdering. One can be a murderer and a Christian so long as one wears a costume. And there was a time when to be a Christian one had to be a murderer. Times change. But man should be thankful for a scarcity of tailors. Most men find substitutes for their murder-instinct. They play games such as football and chess. Some find this process of substitution difficult and run for high public office and so long as they kill for peace, remain respectable until they lose the war. Perhaps if the Germans played more football . . . Then again the Americans play football. Then again the Germans had Hitler. The again America has . . . but if one can't say something nice . . . Ah! only three of them are left in the White House.

QUOTE OF THE WEEK

"I will walk further on the road set by Hendrik Verwoerd," B.J. Vorster, the new prime minister of South Africa. He probably deserves it.

STUDENTES

By John Kyper

Just what is this tantalizing spectre men call life? Is it an empty myth devoid of all meaning, an utterly absurd and cruel joke upon man, the feint of mischievous fates; or is it a dynamic reality, pursuing stumbling humanity to the belief that it can rise above the rubble of its past, that man need not become victim of his own evil.

It is a heritage of the past that declares as with one voice that man is nothing more than crass animal, hopeless and without morality, for whom civilization is a superficial veneer, who can do no good and must therefore be subjugated "for the good of all." And so men have been treated as animals. The "human" refinements of the torture chamber, the death factory and the commune are nothing more than ingeniously connived adaptations of the zoo, the slaughterhouse and the yoke, designed to debase man to an animal and strip him of his soul. It is nothing new; it is as old as the doctrine that the strong possess the right and the obligation to exploit the weak. It is agless, an extension of the jungle, of the caveman.

But beyond his evil man has demonstrated in his existence a nobility of achievement, unknown by any animal, ordained by a sense of something greater than himself, a force which compels him to strive toward greatness. It is founded upon a vision that human life is more than the mundane cruelty apparent in superficial inspection, a belief that in life there is a purpose and that every individual is a unique entity and is so endowed by God with a soul.

Thus man is faced as always by the fundamental conflict of his nature: the animal against the soul. Is he but a random combination of chemicals, litter better than the beast from which he evolved, or is he a miracle of Creation, imperishable by death? Throughout his history man has lacked the will and the ability to confront this issue of his existence. Today he possesses for the first time the potential of his own destruction or total enslavement. Hence he must confront the challenge to modernize to become a new, incorruptible man; for he can no longer co-exist with his ability to do evil without being forced to pay an ultimate penalty.

Col. Robinson's Daughter Completes Officer's Training

Second Lieutenant Patricia J. Robinson poses with father, Colonel L.G. Robinson, formerly of UVM ROTC Department.

FORT MCLELLAN, Ala. - 2Lt. Patricia J. Robinson, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Leonard G. Robinson, 129 Oakhill St., Peekskill, N.Y., graduated June 17 from the Women's Army Corps Officer Basic Course, U.S. Women's Army Corps School, U.S. Women's Army Corps Center, Fort McClellan, Alabama.

Major General William G. Haneke, Chief of Finance, Department of the Army, Washington, D.C., was the guest speaker for the graduation ceremony. Diplomas were presented to the graduates by Lieutenant Colonel Mary E. Kelly, Deputy Director of the U.S. Women's Army Corps. Included among the graduates were six member of the Republic of South Vietnam Women's Armed Forces Corps.

Academic work in the WAC Officer Basic/Officer Candidate Course is designed to familiarize newly commissioned college graduates and selected enlisted women with the fundamentals of Army administrations, stressing practical application to develop leadership. This course is eighteen weeks long and is conducted twice annually at the U.S. Women's Army Corps School. Students study the responsibilities and duties of both troop and staff officers.

While attending the course, Lieutenant Robinson participated in one week of practical leadership training in a basic training company and in staff sections at the WAC Training Battalion. During the practical exercises students are delegated duties requiring them to utilize classroom instruction while having the opportunity to observe experienced officers and non-commissioned officers. She also observed activities at Redstone Arsenal, Huntsville, Alabama.

Upon completion of the course officers perform supervisory or administrative duties at detachments, posts, and stations all over the world, or may attend one of the many service schools where they receive special training. Lt. Robinson's first assignment is at the U.S. Women's Army Corps Center, Ft. McClellan, Alabama.

Lt. Robinson is a graduate of the University of Vermont, with a baccalaureate degree in English.

Her father was the Professor of Military Science at the University of Vermont before retiring this year.

Miss Alper Will Teach at Ripon

A 1964 graduate of the University of Vermont, Miss Elaine Alper, has been appointed an instructor in romance languages at Ripon College, Ripon, Wis. She is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, scholastic honor society.

Research Grants Approved For Faculty

The Board of Trustees has approved up to eight faculty summer research fellowships, with a stipend of $1,500 each, for award this summer for non-thesis research in the humanities, social sciences and related fields.

Faculty members interested in the fellowships should apply before October 1 to the office of Dean Macmillan (General Chairman of the Institutional Grants Committee), 107 Waterman. The application, in four copies, should include:

1. date of application, name, rank and department of applicant;
2. title of proposed project;
3. objectives of proposed project;
4. reasons for undertaking work;
5. previous work;
6. proposed procedure and outline;
7. probable duration;
8. names and addresses of three persons on or off campus competent to judge the value of the proposed research project.

The Award Committee "does not look with favor" upon applications from faculty members whose time should be devoted to the completion of work on their advanced degrees. There is no set rule governing the allocation of fellowships; they may be awarded to the same person more than once, and no attempt will be made to distribute fellowships equally among departments.

Announcement of the awards will not be made until the Board of Trustees has approved them at its December meeting. Further information may be obtained from Dean Macmillan's office, Ext. 576.

Perception

By Jan Quackenbush
Autumn.

Green life seldom slips so easily to sleep or to rest or to simply wait. Nor with such a fanfare; the distant band of blaring colors softly sensed at first marches, marches breathlessly and we, watching all the avenues for some display of red or orange of golden braid, we step into and then within the rhythm of the brisk parade. We, in yelping youthfulness, witness only yearling change.

But what of the old lady: dressed heavily in her peppered woolen coat and dimpled woolen cap? She lifts her head and glances once, far down the avenue. She hears the distant drum and turns away; the cadence is too swift for her, Autumn is too gray.

Strutting as we do, we leave her far behind. But as we pass her by and see her wave her feeble flag, see the moisture in her eye, smile tenderly to her the she may know her Autumn can be kind.

The Two Faces Of Lee Harvey Oswald?

In the July 28th issue of The New York Review of Books, Professor Richard H. Popkin charged the Warren Commission with catering to the public's need for security by concluding, before examining all facts and possibilities about President Kennedy's death, that the crime was committed by a lone, alienated assassin.

THE SECOND OSWALD, a book length version of Professor Popkin's widely-quoted article, with an introduction by Murray Kempton, will be published on September 11th by Avon Books. In addition to 10,000 words of new material, the book contains the FBI autopsy report dictated by two FBI agents on November 26, 1963. Published in its entirety for the first time, the report describes what these agents saw and heard while the doctors were examining President Kennedy on the night of November 22nd.

THE SECOND OSWALD offers the first systematic theory suggesting how Oswald may have conspired with others to assassinate President Kennedy. It is based on evidence in the 26-volume Warren Commission Report, on new evidence that has appeared in recent weeks, and on recent books criticizing the findings of the Commission, Professor Popkin presents evidence that a man who looks like Oswald, and often posed as Oswald could have been the actual assassin. He shows that the Commission dismissed important evidence. A man who looked like Oswald was identified at a Dallas shooting range, at an auto show room, and at the book depository itself. The author cites numerous other instances pointing to the role a second Oswald may have played in the assassination.

Unlike the Commission's theory, Professor Popkin writes, the theory of the second Oswald "fits much of the known data, and requires fewer miracles or highly unlikely events. Since second Oswald was an excellent shot, my theory does not require the dismissal of all of the people who saw second Oswald as mistaken, no matter how much corroboration they have."

In the light of the Report's deficiencies, Professor Popkin urges a reopening of the investigation. He believes the Warren Commission served the American and the world public badly by doing "a rush job, a slapdash one, defending a politically acceptable position."

Professor Popkin is Chairman of the Department of Philosophy at the University of California at San Diego.

FEIFFER

I TALK TOO MUCH. I'M QUITE BRIGHT SO ITS INTERESTING TALK, BUT NEVER THELESS I TALK TOO MUCH.

YOU SEE, ALREADY I'M SAYING MORE THAN I SHOULD. MEN HATE IT FOR A WOMAN TO BLURT OUT. I'M BRIGHT. THEY THINK SHE'S REALLY SAYING 'I'M BRIGHTER THAN YOU ARE.'

AS A MATTER OF FACT, THAT IS WHAT I'M SAYING. I'M BRIGHTER THAN EVEN THE BRIGHTEST MEN I KNOW.

THAT'S WHY ITS A MISTAKE TO TALK TOO MUCH. MEN FALL BEHIND AND FEEL CHALLENGED AND GROW HOSTILE.

SO WHEN I'M VERY ATTRACTED TO A MAN I MAKE IT A POINT TO TALK MORE SLOWLY THAN I WOULD TO ONE OF MY WOMAN FRIENDS.

AND BECAUSE I GUIDE HIM ALONG GENTLY FROM INSIGHT TO INSIGHT HE ENDS UP BEING TERRIBLY IMPRESSED WITH HIS OWN BRILLIANCE.

AND WITH MINE FOR BEING ABLE TO KEEP UP WITH HIM.

AND HE TELLS ME I'M THE FIRST WOMAN HE'S EVER MET WHO'S AS INTERESTING AS ONE OF HIS BOY FRIENDS.

THAT'S LOVE.

UVM Student Praised For Acting in Festival

BURLINGTON - An 18-year-old University of Vermont coed from Proctor, who made her debut with the professional company of the Champlain Shakespeare Festival at the Arena Theatre here, has garnered high praise from two leading metropolitan drama critics who have visited the Festival this summer.

LUCIANA

Betty Smith, a 1965 graduate of Proctor High School who enters her sophomore year at the University this fall, played Luciana in "The Comedy of Errors," Queen Gertrude in "Hamlet," and Joan of Arc in "Henry VI, Part 1."

JOAN OF ARC

Elliot Norton, drama critic for the Boston Record-American, wrote "... Betty Smith brings earnest intensity to the role of Joan of Arc in "Henry VI, Part 1." About her Luciana, he wrote "Miss Smith is pertly attractive ... and knows how to play a joke heartily without contortion or distortion."

GERTRUDE

Montreal's leading critic, Sydney Johnson, wrote in the Montreal Star, "Betty Smith gives the impression of being a first-class technician as Gertrude." He noted the "almost frightening witchery of her Joan la Pucelle," and expressed "delightful surprise to find her playing Luciana in 'Errors' with such sunny lightness."

NATURAL TALENT

Producer-director Edward J. Feidner calls her a "natural talent." Guest director Jeff David says "she does amazingly well as Joan" in his production of the Shakespearean history.

REGINA

Miss Smith is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Smith of Proctor. Prior to her appearances this summer, she played Regina in Lillian Hellman's "The Little Foxes" at the Proctor Players Club when she was 16. She spent last summer with the Middlebury Inn Group, and has been active this past school year with the University Players.

Museum Lecture On British Art Is Sept. 29

Harold Cohen, a leading new-wave British painter, will lecture (with slides) on new directions in British painting at 8 p.m., Thursday, Sept. 29, in the Main Gallery of the Fleming Museum.

An articulate spokesman for the cool side of the London art scene, Cohen is known for his strong, uncompromising views. While on campus, he will attend art department classes as visiting critic.

Try-Outs For Musical Are Sunday

Try-outs for "Most Happy Fellow" will be held this Sunday, Sept. 25, at 2:00 in the Arena Theatre. Anyone interested in reading for a part is welcome to attend the audition.

Collection On Show

London Grafica Arts will present an exhibition and sale of its original lithographs, etchings, woodcuts, lino-cuts and silk-screens at the University of Vermont, Robert Hull Fleming Museum, Wilbur Room from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Tuesday, September 27, 1966.

Our collection consists of graphic arts ranging historically from 15th Century woodcuts to contemporary British and French printmakers. The price range of our prints is from $10 up to and including those higher priced items which might especially appeal to the collector. Our concern shows its prints at various universities throughout the country.

Our entire collection has been purchased by Mr. Eugene Schuster. Mr. Schuster has recently returned from three and one-half years of study at the Warburg Institution at London University, London, England, during which time he studied under the famed Dr. Gombrich.

Each show that we bring to a university has between 300 and 400 works of art and thereby gives to the individual student, as well as the selective print collector, a very diversified collection from which he may select.

Flicks

FLYNN - Peter O'Toole and Audrey Hepburn in "How to Steal a Million" - An extraordinary film highlighted by superior acting and colorful shots of Paris. Suave and exciting.

STATE - Elizabeth Taylor in "Butterfield 8" and "Cat On A Hot Tin Roof" - Although Taylor received the academy award for "Butterfield 8" she is far superior in "Cat On A Hot Tin Roof." The former film is nothing short of atrocious; the latter film is well entrenched as a movie great.

STRONG - "What Did You Do in the War, Daddy" and "Tom Jones". If you can make it through this prodigious double feature your reward will be many laughs, mostly from Tom Jones, and a restful night of sleep. Tom Jones is the Best Picture of the Year from 1963 and a more fitting award could not have been given.

SUNDAY - Dean Martin in "The Silencers" and Lee Marvin in the hilarious "Cat Ballou."

Picture of the week - Tom Jones if you haven't seen it; otherwise "How To Steal a Million."

Peace Corps volunteer teaches home economics to native girls in El Salvador.

El Salvador Offers Challenge

By Mary Burbank

Standards here vary greatly and some houses may be modern and clean but most in the country are small and dark with dirt floors and almost no furnishings. There are many children playing around the houses and many dogs and chickens wandering in and out of the houses at will. Ignorance, dirt, too little water, not enough proper food, many illness and high birth and death rates make for the almost hopeless situation for the poor country people.

Where do we start? What can a small number of Peace Corps people do in less than two years? At the end of the first few months, one may very likely wish he had never heard of Peace Corps, had never had to face the grim reality that we see daily.

But the people are friendly and after seven months here I am understanding what is said. I would advise anyone who is thinking of joining the Peace Corps to get all the language experience that is possible before training. Every bit helps. Many Indian words are used, many people do not know how to spell and often cannot tell us whether the great number of sounds just uttered is one word or several, so your dictionary may not help. This can be amusing at first but after several months it becomes frustrating. Difficulty with the language limits one's contacts with the people as well as one's work with them. But I am learning.

I am working with the El Salvadorean Extension Service which to me seems somewhat disorganized. Then I remember that it is new here and I try to picture what the United States Extension Service was like almost 50 years ago. And the opportunities for service seem great and challenging once again.

My biggest problem is the apparent indifference of cow-workers. No one really likes to change and one seems to make progress as slowly. Today, I think for the first time, the Home Economist and her secretary believed me when I said that there are poor people in the United States. Everyone seems to believe that all North Americans are rich and the "give me" attitude that one may encounter can be irritating. If it is a cow-worker who may be earning more than a Peace Corps Volunteer, this can be very irritating.

But unless one can change and leaders can be developed, how can the country people be helped? One almost loses hope but then some remark of thanks or determination is made or a small change become evident and one is encouraged to continue, thrilled to be part of a project like the Peace Corps.

Peace Corps Will Recruit Here

Robert Lederman, who has served two years as a Peace Corps volunteer in Venezuela, will be here as part of a recruiting team of four members during the week of October 24. The recruiting station, for all interested Juniors and Seniors, will be in lower Billings. The revised Peace Corps test will be given Saturday, November 1. More details will be available at that time and in the coming issue of the paper.

Volunteers From UVM

University of Vermont graduates who are serving as Peace Corps Volunteers, such as George Talbot of Woodstock, Vermont, who is serving in Tunis, Tunisia and John R. Ward of Asbury Park, New Jersey, who is serving in Tunis, are working in agricultural projects. George is working in agricultural education and John is teaching dryland farming.

Peace Corps Combats Starvation

Today, in a world of startling progress in science and technology, a centuries-old problem still plagues millions of people around the world. It is simply how to get enough to eat. One half of the world population is under-nourished or malnourished.

In Latin America, our next-door neighbor, for example, a continent rich in natural resources, millions go hungry. Why? The main "why" is because few of the people know anything of modern agriculture, of livestock care, of proper nutrition... many have never heard of soil conservation, crop rotation, proper feeding and breeding... many have never heard of co-operatives, or credit unions. They have been farming in the same primitive methods as their fathers and fore-fathers before them.

The largest Peace Corps agricultural programs are in Latin American, though Peace Corps Agricultural Volunteers are also serving in Asia and Africa.

These Volunteers, most of whom have a 4-H or FFA background, and/or a degree in agriculture or home economics, are working in villages and on farms, teaching the people how to set up hog and poultry co-operatives... how to start credit unions. They are teaching the basic fundamentals of soil conservation, improved irrigation techniques and recommending proper fertilizer levels. Some Volunteers are working as Agricultural Extension Agents, other are Vocational Ag Teachers. Many are Home Economists working in secondary schools and guiding 4-H clubs. Others are working in rural communities, teaching basic nutrition, child care and health... while still some are working in school lunch programs and are teaching home-making skills in community

Miss Linde, '66 Is Peace Corps Volunteer

Elizabeth Linde, a '66 graduate of UVM has been named Peace Corps Volunteer after completing 10 weeks of training at Roosevelt University, Chicago, Illinois.

The new Volunteers leave for Sierra Leone on September 6 to replace Volunteers who are now ending 2 years of service in teaching at the secondary level. They will be assigned to various schools throughout the country.

With their arrival, approximately 245 Volunteers will be at work in Sierra Leone Peace Corps projects which include community development and teaching.

During their training at Roosevelt University the new Volunteers studied Krio, Mende and Temne languages, West African history, U.S. history and world affairs and specific instructions on teaching methods and skills as applied to the Sierra Leone school system.

Presenting The Drinking Song for Sprite: "ROAR, SOFT-DRINK, ROAR!" (To the tune of "Barbara Fritchie")

Traditionally, a lusty, rousing fight song is de rigueur for every worthy cause and institution. But we wrote a song for Sprite anyway. We'd like you to sing it while drinking Sprite, though this may cause some choking and coughing. So what? It's all in good, clean fun. And speaking of good, clean things, what about the taste of Sprite? It's good. It's clean. However, good clean things may not exactly be your idea of jollies. In that case, remember that Sprite is also very refreshing. "Tart and tingling," in fact. And very collegiate. And maybe we'd better quit while we're ahead. So here it is. The Drinking Song For Sprite. And if you can get a group together to sing it--we'd be very surprised.

Roar, soft drink, roar!
You're the loudest soft drink we ever saw!
So tart and tingling, they couldn't keep you quiet:
The perfect drink, guy,
To sit and think by,
Or to bring instant refreshment
To any campus riot! Ooooooh--
Roar, soft drink, roar!
Flip your cap, hiss and bubble,
Fizz and gush!
Oh we can't think
Of any drink
That we would rather sit with!
Or (if we feel like loitering) to hang out in the strit with!
Or sleep through English lit' with!
Roar! Soft drink! Roar!
Yeahhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhh, SPRITE!

SPRITE. SO TART AND
TINGLING. WE JUST COULDN'T
KEEP IT QUIET.

Question for the Week: To the Freshmen - What is your first impression of the University of Vermont?

Suellen Wolfson; Class of 1970, Forest Hills, New York.

I always wanted to go to a school with ivy-colored buildings and warm and friendly people. This was the image I've always had in mind since I learned what the word college meant. I always wanted to go to a school that I could be proud of that had all these characteristics. UVM has filled all my expectations.

Suellen Wolfson

from day to day so that the pressure doesn't build up. So far everyone has been very friendly. I think the campus is about the right size socially and academically.

Linda Dunbar; Class of 1970, Burlington Vermont.

Well, it's all total confusion, but everyone is very friendly admit it all. I have found the work easy to handle so far, in fact some classes are not as difficult as they were in high school. I do wish that I were living in the dorms because living at home I won't get to meet half the members of my class.

Tricia Smith; Class of 1970, Kwajalein, Marshall Islands

As soon as I arrived I was lost. Seeing real trees and green grass and people wearing shoes and being fully clothed has made a great impression on me because at home it is too hot for the grass to grow and we only have tropical palm trees. I've already found the cold weather unbearable. I think the campus is very impractical the way things are set up. I'm referring specifically to the location of Redstone Campus. I'm taking a course in medical technology hoping to possibly become a doctor, and I find that I am already having trouble with my chemistry course.

In the future, be careful what you say and to whom you say it because you too may have just been put "On the Spot."

Have You Found Any Meteorites?

Take a closer look at those rocks that abound in Vermont. Some of them may be meteorites.

This is the advice of an article in the August issue of Yankee magazine, written by Curtis B. Norris, former University of Vermont science writer who now is editor of the Wareham, Mass., Courier.

Norris quotes Raymond W. Grant, professor of geology at the University, as saying no meteorites has yet been found in Vermont but there's no reason why some shouldn't be.

Grant gave a possible explanation for why no meteorites has been found: Too many other stones.

The Vermont professor is looking for rare minerals in Meteorites under a $5,900 National Science Foundation grant. He has offered to analyze free of charge any stones which finders believe are meteorites.

UVM Student Studying In Israel

Janet Hadda

After a fortnight en route from New York to Israel on the S/S "Shalom", 133 students from 63 universities and colleges in the United States and Canada recently arrived in Israel for a year of study at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem.

The contingent includes Janet Hadda, of Forest Hills, N.Y., from the University of Vermont.

The group, bringing the number of North American students under this program to a total of 600 since the project started in 1955, joined a special 10-week, 6-hour-a-day Hebrew Ulpan at the University on July 25, together with some 200 other foreign students from all over the world. The intensive language course will help prepare the students for lectures in Hebrew when the fall semester begins.

"It is a carefully selected group," says Dr. Yehzekel Cohen, Dean of Students and in charge of the University's foreign student program. "They had to meet rigorous academic and personality standards; an indication of the level is that more than 50 applicants who did not fulfill the requirements were turned down."

Pam Howe; Class of 1970, Essex Junction, Vermont.

I think the size of UVM has impressed me the most. In walking around the campus I have found that your rarely see the same people. I really think that the kids I've met have been very friendly. If I had any questions I wouldn't hesitate to ask anyone. I think UVM has a very warm and friendly campus. I don't like large lectures because the professor doesn't have enough contact with the student, but I guess this is something I'll have to get used to.

Pamela Howe

Robert Hutton; Class of 1970, Fort Lee, New Jersey.

At first I thought the academic pressures would be unbearable, but now that I look back I have found that this fear can be easily overcome by doing my work conscientiously

Robert Hutton

UVM ROTC PERSHING RIFLES GETS TRAINING IN SURVIVAL TECHNIQUES

Fifteen members of Pershing Rifles at the University of Vermont with four guests from Massachusetts schools learned to "Live off the Land," as part of a special training program in Summer Warfare and Survival.

The students, along with Captain Alton R. Sparks and Sergeant First Class Arnold C. Maher, left Sunday, August 28th, to camp out until the following Sunday at Mt. Norris Boy Scout Reservation in Eden Mills, north of Morrisville.

The Survival Program was designed along the lines of "Counter-Insurgency," techniques like the type of military action being fought in Vietnam today.

Pershing Rifles is the National ROTC Military Society. UVM students taking part in the exercise were Pat Boyden, Unit Commander, and Thomas Wheel of Burlington; Walter Cooper, Unit Executive Officer, of Gales Ferry Conn; Weston Cate of Montpelier; Lesley Pike, and Peter Macutchan of Stowe; Don Chioffi, the Unit Cook and Douglas Coolidge of Rutland; Thomas Shailor of Colchester; Ted Foster of Middlebury; Neal Vreeland of Welleville, N.Y.; John Kinsey of Morrestown, N.J.; James Whithead of Massapequa Park, N.Y.; Douglas Treuting of Short Hills, N.J. and John Mullen of Port Henry, N.Y.

CYNIC's Original Aims Maintained

By Jon Schechtman

During the Spring of 1883, several UVM students, realizing that their alma mater had no centralized source of news, decided to found a newspaper. Their efforts bore fruit on April 25, 1883, when Issue 1, Volume 1 of the UNIVERSITY CYNIC was distributed.

Then, 83 years ago, the CYNIC was a twelve page magazine whose articles covered a broader area than a normal newspaper. The emphasis lay more on creative essays and an evaluation of impending problems, rather than the straight reporting of news.

There was a necessity, the founders believed, for the establishment of some formal institution to report and record the daily acts of the student body. However, it was noted too that the most pronounced effect of a school newspaper was on the undergraduate body. A paper would allow the students to discern in what directions the school was leading them and in what directions the school itself was going, while serving too as an outlet for interested writers.

A statement was made in the CYNIC'S first editorial asserting the paper's main function. This certain writing pledge that the UNIVERSITY CYNIC "will not assail the faculty; it will give voice to the sentiments of no faction. But of the city, the students and college it will aim to fairly represent."

The founders of UVM's paper had been criticized for the name that they had chosen, yet their selection was justified, in ancient Greece, a follower of Socrates founded the Cynic school of Philosophy, so named because of their place of study—the "Cynosarges." Perhaps who allegedly searched the world for an honest man.

(and other non-apathetic "students")

The CYNIC is accepting applications for staff positions. To facilitate this yearly operation we have arranged a meeting for interested parties. It will be:

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1966

4:15 P.M.

MARSH LOUNGE, BILLINGS

If you absolutely cannot attend this meeting and still desire to write, visit the CYNIC Office in lower Billings, before Friday noon and be sure to leave your name.

The Cynics were philosophers who questioned other people's sense of values, believing that truth and honesty are the only virtues. The UNIVERSITY CYNIC, in its original purpose desired to uncover the truth, since, in the long run, it was in the best interests of UVM.

The first copy of the paper was divided into seven main sections; headed as follows: General Literature, Editorials, Personals, Exchanges, Science, Books, and Locals. The largest division was "General Literature." This consisted of student essays on "literary, social religious, and political topics, short stories, poetry, articles on college life, customs, games, and communication on any matter of interest."

"Personals" dealt with what alumni were doing, i.e., where people were employed, who had married, who had been accolladed, etc.

The section of "Science" was an evaluation of the happenings in the world of science. Also included were constructive criticism of the science curriculum or departments.

"Books" consisted of reviews of literary works -- text books, fiction, etc. -- while "exchanges" contained interesting news and comparisons of other college campuses.

On looking at the present VERMONT CYNIC, one is able to perceive that the basic tenets promulgated in the first issue of the paper, 83 years ago are still being upheld.

Misdirected Idealism Dangerous

Kansas City, Mo. -- Misdirected campus idealism threatens "a real disservice to the national interest" in a little noted area, Lawrence A. Kimpton, of Chicago, said here today.

"The idea seems to be abroad on the campuses that personal challenge and the opportunity to make a meaningful contribution to society are nowhere to be found within a corporation," Kimpton said, "in my judgment this idea is both wrong and highly inimical to the best interests of the very society our young people quite commendably wish to serve."

A vice president of Standard Oil Company (Indiana) and former Chancellor of the University of Chicago, he spoke at Rockhurst College.

"However spooky some of the manifestations of the present campus unrest may look," Kimpton said, "they are at least higher up the intellectual ladder than devouring uncooked goldfish... and they bespeak a more thoughtful generation. To take the beatnik as truly representative may be to mistake a few saplings for the forest."

At the same time, he noted, "there is another very significant side to current student attitudes which has been given less notice than the militant protest activities."

"The prospect of our most promising youth all hastening into research, teaching, government, and solving the problems of peace, poverty, and race relations, leaving to the pedestrian and second-rate the management of the economic engine on whose product all these other activities depend for their ultimate support is a sobering one," he added.

Cliff Explains Objectives Of 'Notes'

(From The Daily Nebraskan)

Tremendous to deplorable covers the spectrum of University English professors attitudes toward Cliff's notes.

Harried students studying for hour exams or finals describe the notes as magnificent.

Cliff Hillegass, originator of Cliff's Notes, consider them "a study aid to assist the student to better understand a work."

SUPPLEMENT

"The notes are definitely a supplement to the classroom," he continued, "They enable the student to better utilize a teacher's teaching ability."

Hillegass started the study aid series in the basement of his home seven years ago with a series of 16 major Shakespearean plays. Since that time Cliff's Notes has published 105 additions to the series ranging from "Huckleberry Fin" to "The New Testament."

The idea for the series of plot summaries and commentaries was suggested to Hillegass by a friend, Jack Cole, who has a similar enterprise in Canada.

Two factors are taken into consideration, Hillegass said, when deciding on the subject for a particular volume. One factor is how widely the original work is read and the other is what problems does the work present to students.

James Roberts, assistant professor of English at the University and consulting editor of the publication, explained that it takes up to a year and a half to put out an edition. The notes, he continued, are written by college professors, chairmen of University English departments and high school teachers who have taught and understand the work in question.

Each volume is geared to the level of the student who will be using it, Roberts explained.

He added that too many people tend to judge a series on one or two volumes when in reality a judgment should be based on the readings of various titles from different levels.

"The Old Testament" differs from the poems of T.S. Eliot and Dante differs from "The Sound and the Fury," he remarked. "Each has different problems aimed at different levels."

STUDY AIM

Hillegass stressed that the notes were intended as a study aid and not as a synopsis for the book.

"The purpose for which they are produced," he said, "is to aid students in understanding a work."

"Our aim is to lead the student back to the original work," he said, "and give him a greater interest in the individual work itself and literature as a whole. If they (Cliff's Notes) make the average student interested in literature, I'd be most happy."

Apparently many professors do not think the series is accomplishing that purpose.

General opinion among the University professors interviewed, seemed to be that the notes were used as a substitute for the text.

"When students use these notes as a substitute for the text," said Lee Lemon, associate professor of English, "they are worthless. Some are badly done and that is most serious when they are substituted for the text. Too often the student comes out of the course knowing no more than he did before."

VARIATION

"There is a wide variation in the quality of the series," said Hugh Luke, assistant professor of English, "I too think they are deplorable as a substitute for the text, but as a review for a good student, they can be useful."

Stephen Hilliard, assistant professor of English, said that in his course on Shakespeare, students who rely on the notes instead of the text invariably come out with a bad grade.

"It amuses me," he said.

CYNIC News and Feature editors would like to take this opportunity to apologize for the inconvenience caused those who wished to attend Wednesday's meeting. There was a mix-up in room scheduling, and the conference room was not available to us. We do hope that those of you who are interested in the CYNIC will drop in at the meeting planned for next Friday afternoon, in Marsh Lounge in Billings Center at 4:15.

Fall Baseball Team Opens At MIT

By Ted Ryan

Having lost only one player through last spring's graduation, the 1966 fall edition of the University of Vermont baseball team is looking towards an exceptional fall season.

On Friday the Cats will play at MIT for a single game. Saturday Boston University will host the Cats for a doubleheader. A doubleheader is scheduled for Sunday with South East Massachusetts technical school.

Coach Ralph LaPointe stated he expects "a sensational season" this fall and he said he sees no reason why his squad couldn't go undefeated, "unless it's the coaching," he added.

LaPointe, assisted by Jim Cross, works his ball team at Centennial Field every afternoon. A total of 17 players have been turning out nightly, including a promising group of sophomore pitchers.

The only player LaPointe lost via the graduation route was captain and shortstop Bobby Cronin. A slick fielder and sharp hitter, Cronin will be missed greatly.

LaPointe's sophomore son Dave has stepped into the vacated position. Dave is one of only two sophomore fielders with the team.

Captain Rick Aldrich and Bob Neild are both showing fine form as catchers. Aldrich will probably start but Neild may see action at thirdbase.

John Packard returns once again to his firstbase position while a pair of talented fielders, Coach Ralph LaPointe looks forward to a sensational season.

sophomore Steve Kunkin and Bruce Lombard, are vying for the starting second base position.

If Lombard wins the second sack job, Kunkin will probably move to third base to challenge Neild for the hot corner slot.

Two of the outfield positions appear set but the third spot will probably change hands throughout the fall season, LaPointe said.

Sluggo Don Fitts, a letterman, will patrol left field and Dave Wayne returns to centerfield. "Anybody may start in right field," LaPointe said. "It may be any of the pitchers."

LaPointe has plenty of pitching material from last year's staff and several of last spring's freshmen mound squad have strong arms.

Fireballing John McCord heads the staff but LaPointe said the big senior has made few of the practices.

end.

"I want to use these games to take a good look at the sophomores," the UVM coach said.

The following weekend, UVM

Slugging outfielder Don Fitts takes a good cut.

The other lettermen, all righthanders, are Len Sheffott, Bruce Bovenizer and Don Schneider. Sophomore Terry O'Leary is the only southpaw on the pitching crew.

The other three sophomore righthanders are Mac Adams, Tom Suchanek and Charlie Brucato.

LaPointe has not decided who will start on the hill this week-will host Dartmouth for 1 p.m. doubleheaders on Oct. 1 and 2.

TICKETS AVAILABLE

Tickets for the upcoming Connecticut and Rhode Island football games (both away, October 1 and 8, respectively) are now on sale at the book store at a price of $1.

Pitcher John McCord, left, and catcher Rick Aldrich show hustle in contest last spring.

Golfers Away

By Mick Kropsky

The University of Vermont Varsity Golf team swings into action this Friday in a match against MIT and Clark at the beautiful Oakley Country Club. Golf coach J. Edward Donnelly is anticipating a good fall season. After holding tryouts, 10 men were selected by Donnelly to represent the 1966-67 UVM golf team. With only last year's captain, Jimmy Nixon, lost to graduation and with six veterans returning to the squad, this year's team must be considered one of the most experienced in New England.

Leading the team is this year's captain Art Shields along with Lloyd Hier, Bob Nadler, and Joe Donnelly. Other members of the team include veterans Nick Van Tassel, Al Smith, and Tom Chiota. New members of the squad are Tom Adams, Pat Arkinson, and Bruce Fay. Mr. Donnelly indicated that all the freshmen will see action in at least one match or tournament.

On September 30 and October first UVM will have a match with Sir George Williams in Montreal, and on October third UVM will oppose Brandeis University at the Burlington Country Club.

MANAGERS NEEDED

WANTED: Football managers for both varsity and freshman teams. Anyone interested should call the field house at Centennial Field.

Booters Victorious

The Catamount soccer team left bright hope for the coming season last Saturday when they defeated Dartmouth, 3-2, in a scrimmage. Dartmouth has been a perennial soccer power.

Coach Hal Greig expressed satisfaction in the performance of the defense in the scrimmage, but stated that the offense must improve its continuity if the Cats are to defend their Yankee Conference title successfully.

The booters will have another scrimmage Saturday at Plattsburgh State before opening the regular season on October 1 at Connecticut.

Mitchell Leads Cats To 35-12 Win Over AIC

The INSIDER

By Leo Pfeiffer

After defeating American International College on Saturday, there was something very definitely missing in the locker room, something that, were it present would ignite the typical jubilant activity so common for UVM after a game. The something that was missing was satisfaction. The halftime score was 7-6 and this was the only thing UVM had in its favor. The coaches were angry, the players were angry. The threat from the coaches of many bruises and hard work the next two weeks naturally made the players think about the situation and redemption in the second half. Captain Van-Benneken reminded the team of the early morning running before breakfast and the two a day workouts after that for two weeks before school. Mindful of the fact that this conditioning was for the second half and not the first, UVM took the field again. Quickly scoring 21 points in the third quarter proved to everybody that A.I.C. did not belong on the same field with UVM.

Leading the charge was sophomore Paul Simpson who came in to do most of the quarterbacking along with help from Jack Stroker. Dave Shumate got a hip pointer during the course of the game and was not able to perform. He will be ready for Connecticut in 2 weeks, however. Bob Mitchell turned in his usual strong performance along with Jim Culhane and Pete Clifford. The prettiest play of the game came on a counter with the backfield flow going one way, thus causing the defense, keying on this, to react. Smooth running flankerback Dick Hebert coming around from the other direction, took the handoff and glided into the end zone untouched. This play, Bob Mitchell's 64 yard touchdown pass-run and Jack Schweberger's T.D. pass from Simpson deserve mention.

This is, of course, speaking offensively. Defensively, up front John Gurrieri deserves special mention. It seems that so often when the ball carrier or quarterback got banged up badly and was slow to get up, it was big 78 who was on top of him. Judging from the films it seems almost impossible to stop his strong pass rush. Bill Lawrence came up with an interception, thus he gets a milk-shake from defensive backfield Coach Dan Roarks. You can imagine what he will give for an interception in the last game.

Colin Murd, his shoulder still bothering him, got a shot of novacaine for the second week in a row to dull the pain for contact, and for the second week in a row, he sat the majority of the game out because the coaches didn't want to take a chance of him reinjuring himself. Offensive and defensive swing man Steve Vukovich filled in and did a good job.

Joe (the Toe) Soldano, coming off the bench from a 3 week old injury, proved that his toe is as sharp as when he left off last year, converting 5 for 5 P.A.T.'s. Joe will be ready to play against Connecticut on October 1. Doing an outstanding job in his position was Lefty Harrington. Lefty, a starting halfback two springs ago and being medically unable to play last year, was switched to middle guard on his request because he loves contact, especially against bigger men (actually he has no choice on the matter.) His desire brought out his ability for a fine game.

Practice sessions all last week seemed to the coaches as listless and one even predicted that the showing Saturday would not be up to par. Perhaps it was overconfidence all week, perhaps the team rested on its laurels over Springfield. Regardless, it will be corrected, and even if the showing was not up to ability, the score was still 23 points in favor of UVM and this deserves credit no matter what.

By George Passage

The University of Vermont football team opened the 1966 campaign last Saturday with a lack luster first half, but came roaring back after intermission to post 35-12 victory over the Aces of American International. The Cats have an open date September 24 so the next encounter will be on October 1, at Storrs, Connecticut, against the Huskies of U Conn. This will be the first meeting of the two clubs in 33 years. The last meeting saw UVM come out on top 31-6. The series between the two clubs is even at two wins apiece. The Huskies open their season this Saturday against Yale.

Last Saturday the home fans had the opportunity to see two different teams play for Vermont against the Aces. The team that came out in green and gold after intermission certainly was not the same team that had played the first 30 minutes. Playing inspired ball throughout the second half, the Cats rallied for 28 points to walk away with the victory.

Bob Mitchell led the second half explosion with two TD's to end the afternoon with 18 points. The Bridport Bomb also carried the ball 28 times (a new UVM record) for 131 yards. Fullbacks Jim Culhane and Pete Clifford also lugged the leathers besides displaying fine blocking skills.

This ground attack was complimented by an outstanding aerial game which accounted for 244 yards. Dave Shumate, Paul Simpson and Jack Stroker combined to complete 13 of 29 pass attempts. Shumate had 5 for 11 and 108 yds, before being forced to the sidelines just before the half with an injury. This Saturday's open date will give Shumate and the other walking wounded, Pete Ambrose, Joe Soldano and Tom Dexter two weeks to regain top form. Soldano, although hampered by injuries had a perfect 5 for 5 point after touchdown attempts. In the other kicking department, UVM's punter Art Brown had a good day by averaging 39 yds on three kicks.

Catching the passes thrown by S.S. and S. incorporated were Dick Herbert, Jeff Kuhman, Jack Schweberger and Mitchell. Besides displaying good hands, these receivers turned many receptions into long gainers and scores with their fancy footwork.

Coach Clifford was not as pleased with the defensive team's showing as he was with its Springfield performance, but in the next two weeks it is expected he will have the desired results. There were some outstanding individual performances however. Big John Gurrieri, number 78, had a great game at his defensive tackle spot. Also, linebacker Bill Wolff and Stephen Vukovich, borrowed from the offense as of last week, turned in good efforts.

Before closing, there is one more outstanding effort that needs mentioning. The people in the the stands did not cheer this effort because only a select few had the privilege of witnessing it. But what Coach Clifford and his staff accomplished at half-time of last Saturday's game and the adjustments made by the players certainly proved to be the turning point of the game. This is a reflection of the many long uncheered hours of work which go on during the week by these men.

DIVING CLUB AT UVM?

There will be a meeting Wednesday, September 28 of all persons interested in forming a UVM Scuba Club. Where? Conference Room "B" at Billings. We have a few ideas. Bring us some more. Any questions, call Ext. 584.

UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT, BURLINGTON, VERMONT

SEPTEMBER 30, 1966

UVM Enrollment Tops 5000

University of Vermont enrollment for the fall semester has topped 5,000 for the first time in the University's history.

The increase this year over last - 541 students - is the largest ever except for the years immediately following WW II when enrollment leaped from about 1300 to 3300.

President Lyman S. Rowell said that this year's total "continues the trend which has seen our enrollment increase each year for the past 13 years."

He said the University had planned for part of the increase in recognition of the larger numbers of Vermonters applying, but the actual total "is 100 more than we had anticipated."

The increase from 4463 last fall to 5004 this fall includes 387 more Vermont residents, 154 more nonresidents. In all, there are 2997 Vermont residents, the largest ever; and 2007 nonresidents at UVM this fall, almost an even 60-40 percentage split.

The total increase includes 367 more undergraduates, and President Rowell said the University had "pretty much anticipated this."

It also includes an increase of nearly one third in the graduate college - up to 405 from 307; and Mr. Rowell said that "we had not anticipated this much increase in this area."

The total is a new high for the Graduate College, and the fall figures reflect records in many other ways.

Starting with the largest freshman class in history, each of the four undergraduate classes is the largest ever.

The freshmen class total of 1357 is nearly 200 larger than last year's; the sophomore total has topped the 1,000 mark for the first time - up from 994 to 1028. The junior class is up to 881 from 827. The senior class is up nearly one hundred, from 794 to 881.

The larger upperclasses reflect three factors, Mr. Rowell said. First the number of students who are eligible to return but who do not return is decreasing.

Last summer the University gave upperclass students an opportunity to be excused from resident hall contracts if they wish when it became apparent that greater number than expected were returning.

Few students asked to be excused from their contracts, and the result is about 20 percent of the rooms in both men's and women's residences have been assigned an additional student.

A second factor in the increase in the upperclass ranks is an increasing number of transfer students being accepted. This is

Dean Kidder Attends Rutgers Bicentennial

Dr. George V. Kidder, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, represented the University of Vermont at the Rutgers Bicentennial Convocation last Friday, September 22, in New Brunswick, New Jersey.

Rutgers University's observance of the 200th anniversary of the granting of its charter on November 10, 1766, served to highlight the development of all higher education in the United States. Founded in 1766 as Queen's College, Rutgers was the eighth college in the colonies. As described in its charter, Queen's College has as its purpose the "education of youth in the learned languages, liberal and useful arts and sciences," a goal which today still remains generally valid.

As Rutgers observed the 200th anniversary of its founding, it also celebrated its achievements and contributions over the years. Yet, in the anniversary convocations, lectures, and programs, an emphasis was also placed on the challenge and opportunities of the future for all American higher education.

Attending the Bicentennial were about 20,000 persons from all over the world and approximately 650 delegates from American and foreign universities and colleges, and learned societies.

Other northern New England schools sending delegates were Middlebury College, represented by Dr. John Bowds, Dean of Faculty, and Dartmouth, Bowdoin, Colby, and Bates Colleges. Also present were representatives from the other five New England universities.

Sgt. Hines Killed In Vietnam

Sergeant Louis C. Hines

Sergeant Louis C. Hines, formerly of the ROTC Department, was killed Wednesday, Sept. 21, in combat action against the hostile forces.

He was serving with C Troop, 2d Battalion, 5th Cavalry of the 1st U.S. Cavalry Division (Airmobile).

At UVM he instructed freshmen in Military Science and was in charge of training aids. He was also an advisor to the UVM Band. He and his wife were sometimes chaperones at fraternity parties.

Sgt. Hines, a native of Mississippi, was stationed in Korea with the 1st Cavalry Division prior to being assigned to UVM in the Fall of 1963. He left UVM in May of this year for Vietnam.

Sgt. Hines is survived by his wife Mildred and five children, Louis Jr., 9; Wanda Joyce, 8; Beverly, 7; Janice Maria, 6; and James, 2 who reside on North Winooski Avenue in Burlington.

Chairman Of Classics Department Dies

Dr. John Kent

Dr. John Harvey Kent, chairman of the department of classical languages at the University of Vermont and Dean of the Graduate College from 1953 to 1960, died at his home, 135 Cliff St., Tuesday afternoon.

He was born in Truro, N.S., May 7, 1909; the son of Harry A. and Edith (Fraser) Kent.

He was a student at Dalhousie University Halifax, Nova Scotia in 1925-26, received his B.A. degree, with honors, from Queen's University, Kingston, Ont., in 1930 and his M.A. degree from the same school in 1943. He received his Ph.D. degree from the University of Chicago in 1945.

Dr. Kent gave lectures in the classical languages at Dalhousie University 1930-32, and was assistant professor there 1935-36. He was classics master at McCallie School, Chattanooga, Tenn., 1940-45.

He was associate professor and professor of Latin and chairman of the department at Southwestern College, Memphis, Tenn., from 1945 to 1950.

Dr. Kent came to the University of Vermont in 1950 as Roberts professor of Classical Languages. After serving as Dean of the Graduate College from 1953 to 1960, he chose to return to teaching and research.

Dr. Kent spent part of the year 1964 on sabbatical leave in Greece, engaged in archaeological research. Previous to that, at the request of the American School of Classical Studies in Athens, he had prepared for publication the Greek and Roman inscriptions that had been discovered in the excavations at Corinth in Greece. His book "Corinth, Vol. VIII, Part III - The Inscriptions, 1926-1950" appeared in print in 1966.

In 1959-60 Dr. Kent served as president of the New England Conference on Graduate Education.

Dr. Kent was a Wheeler fellow in the American School of Classical Studies at Athens, Greece, in 1940, a member of the

Would You Believe? - Tug-of-War. - One of many Greek Week Games.

Again It's..... "Go Greeks!"

"It's Greek to me," you may have heard someone say this week.

If they were referring to their chemistry homework, their use of the expression is understandable. If, on the other hand, they were trying to say they didn't understand the fraternity-sorority system, their use of the expression was inexcusable. For this has been Greek Week.

THE GOALS

The purpose of Greek Week is to promote unity within the Greek system and instructions of both independents and Greeks about the fraternities and sororities. The means of achieving these goals are willing cooperation and spirited competition. And the results are education and entertainment for participants and spectators.

THE EVENTS

The first big event of Greek Week was the Convocation Wednesday. Dr. Gregg and Dean Gribbons made general introductions to the fraternity and sorority systems, speaking on what they offered students who join.

Then there was a general explanation of rushing rules and policy.

Thursday the houses held exchange dinners intended to let members get acquainted with other Greeks. Later there were three "workshops" for house leaders, rush chairmen and pledge masters.

The first workshop on "I.F.C. Responsibility" was held at SAE, the one to guide pledge masters at Acacia, and the one for rush chairmen at AEP.

SING NIGHT

The best was yet to come. Friday features the Greek sing at Patrick Gym, 8:00. In the sing the 16 fraternities compete against each other for one prize, and seven sororities sing out for another one.

After what is generally an excellent program of presentations, last year's athletics trophies and the new I.F.C. Sports Trophy will be given out.

Finally, the Greek Queen is announced, and then the judges must make their difficult decisions and present the winners of the sing.

UVM Officials Discuss Campus Security

Campus security was discussed recently at a meeting of university and college officials, law enforcement officers and newsmen at the University of Vermont.

Roland D. Patzer, dean of student personnel, called the meeting to review progress in lighting the campus and streets used by students, to outline steps taken by UVM and other institutions to safeguard students and to reaffirm policies on news coverage of incidents.

Miss Jackie M. Gribbons, dean of women, read proposed instructions for women students at UVM, while Proctor M. Lovell, assistant business manager, outlined plans for campus lighting at the university.

Lt. Robert G. Abare of the Department's detective bureau, described the importance of identification and evidence of apprehending and convicting offenders.

Serious incidents have not been numerous, but have occurred frequently enough to be defined as a "problem."

Among institutions represented were UVM, Trinity College, Champlain College, Mary Fletcher School of Nursing and Jeanne Mance School of Nursing. Police forces of Burlington and South Burlington were represented, along with the state police and campus security forces.

The Vermont Cynic

VOLUME 84 SEPTEMBER 30, 1966 NUMBER 12

EDITORIAL...

The past month has seen the University of Vermont erect still another monument to assinnity in the form of its decision to allow certain student leaders the privilege of a yellow parking sticker while denying it to others. The monument is not very large, yet it is symptomatic of a brand of bureaucratic thinking which is often so pitifully evident in matters of policy.

As we go to press the situation stands as follows: The co-editors of The CYNIC are permitted to have yellow stickers, as are the Kake Walk directors. But the president of SA, officially the highest student officer in the school, is denied a sticker, as are the chairman of SCOPE, president of Student Players, and head of production for Lane Series.

At the same time, non-student head residents at Redstone Campus are given yellow parking permits, while residents who are graduate students are not. (Among those denied stickers is the head resident of the entire freshman men's dormitory complex.)

With regard to the student leaders, we feel that parking stickers should be given to all if they are given to any. Under the circumstances it appears that the mistake was initially made in granting them to a chosen few at the beginning of this academic year. The justification cited was tradition. But we are afraid that this simply isn't good enough, for as we see it, tradition is not sufficient justification for the absurdity of this situation. Since the mistake has already been made, there can be no choice but to extend the convenience of yellow-sticker-parking to the remaining student leaders, to all head residents, and to graduate teaching assistants.

We urge all those affected by this situation to direct their grievances to the Office of Student Personnel. Perhaps if you keep them busy enough, such a visual demonstration of your disgust will open their ears to reason.

We were distressed to learn that a number of students have had their books stolen from various locations on campus. While the theft of books may be interpreted as an upward trend in larceny, we see it as a malicious, despicable act. An analysis of motives would in all probability reveal the profit from resale as the most common goal of the book burglar. Far from the dedicated scholar who is frustrated by his poverty, he is, rather, a common thief and, if caught, should be dealt with accordingly.

Letters To The Editors...

Parking?!?

Two Problems; One Solution

Dear Editor,

UVM has many problems, but there are two which could be solved with one simple solution. There is the ever present parking problem, caused by, among others, the girls who drive down from Redstone Campus. There is also the problem of girls who don't get back for lunch, who are worn out from walking back and forth from main campus, and who freeze half to death many days during the winter when that bitter wind comes blowing its way down South Prospect St. . . . No matter what any member of the administration may say, none of these conditions are very desirable.

Thus, in this age when the bicycle has become the status symbol of UVM, I propose that the university or some organization within it, purchase a bus (I doubt that a used school bus would be very expensive) to be put on a continuous shuttle service from Main to Redstone Campus. For its use each girl could pay 10¢ per ride.

If the above should be too big of a problem for the university to handle, perhaps some arrangement could be made with the Burlington Bus Co. to provide such a service at appropriate times.

Yours truly,
Eva Whitfield

Reader Wants Some Answers

To The Editor:

Amid the great issues of history being enacted at this moment, and among the buzzing in the halls of academe, I wish to introduce an issue which looms large to those involved, though it is a local matter only. This is the problem of student parking. Apparently the problem is confined to us only, as the most cursory glance into the largely empty faculty parking areas will testify. At the expense of appearing simple minded, I would like some rational answers to these questions:

1. Why must we, the undergraduates, pay two dollars for a sticker which in effect excludes us from ninety percent of the areas designated for parking?
2. Why do not members of the faculty and staff receive tickets when they transgress, when they park in student areas?
3. Why have we been progressively denuded of parking areas in the last four years, while staff and faculty have in direct proportion gained spaces?
4. Why should an independent survey be a foreign firm result in the exorbitant fine of five dollars for our transgressions?

There are other questions also. But what is demanded is rationale. We have, it appears, been subjected to the most arbitrary and depotic rule recently in matters which concern the entire academic community. Since we have been offered no explanations, apologies, directives, etc. on the crucial matter of executive succession, it would seem folly indeed to hear from Olympus on so trivial a matter as student parking. Let them walk! I consider such attitudes more appropriate to eighteenth century France than to a university dedicated to the ideals of intellectual and political freedom. And, since I share the underground revolutionary ferment now beginning (faintly, ever faintly) to stir on this campus, I categorically refuse to pay one parking ticket until the fore-mentioned rationale is supplied. I invite other intrepid revolutionaries to follow suit. For those who need historical parallel and/or ideological identification I supply the following exercise in imagination: These "parking tickets" are not what they seem; in reality, along with a universal reactionary conspiracy, they are lettres de cachet. We, the dispossessed, are the victims of a vast conspiracy which prefers to remain nameless (though we know it as C.H.A.O.S.). Those who are docilely led to pay these arbitrary taxes are never seen again. They are pressed into service repairing the campus roads under cover of darkness. They are cast among the damned, aimless and nameless victims of a sinister and proliferating bureaucracy. They are lackeys of the imperialists. They never return to classes; they are classless. Think of pre-1789 France and you immediately see the terrible similarity.

We must refuse to pay. We must demand that the alien "consulting firm" be banished from our soil. They are brigands, hired mercenaries. These Hessians must go. We have fought these issues before. There will be no taxation without representation. We must elect committees to oversee our parking. We must present our cahier de doléances. We must organize our Committee of Thirty. Give us back our ancient rights.

My fellow travellers, I urge you to resist these arbitrary encroachments.

Feverently yours,
Johannes De Silentio, '67

Re Football; Alternative?

To The Editors:

With regard to the Sceptic September 23: it seems that the author is overlooking a very important factor in his criticism of that nationwide sport, football, — a better alternative!! This obvious omission makes me think that the author has, at present, no better entertainment for the public or no better public for such entertainment!!

Sports contributes to the growth and character of the participant, in that he is a member of an activity which requires one to cultivate responsibility in a group effort toward a common goal. Coordination, interacting human relations, and faith are also essential components in group functions. People have to act as an entity, not as a unit. In college, the training grounds are on the gridiron, on the debating rostrum, in fraternities, in sororities, and in various organizations in which many individuals participate.

Football at UVM, to be more specific, activates a spirit which is conducive to one's identification with the school and with other UVM facets. These "twenty-two men, men who are supposedly scholars" should be praised for their fine attempt at a sport which requires not only a great deal of analysis, but mental training, physical exertion, and, most important of all, the ability to communicate with others. Football players can certainly be scholars. There is evidence of this, and there is nothing worse than a person who has not experienced the joy and richness of working with others. Man, and I don't believe I am wrong, develops through his experiences with Man.

Man enjoys violence. No one can deny this, but he also needs a release from inner tension and, what better way than to physically (and mentally) exert himself to team capacity and the expectancy of his fellow workers?

What is wrong with being amused? Does the mind stop when one seeks and finds amusement? These are the implications and how incorrect they are. Would it be wrong to say that the average football fan goes to games to:

- 1) be a part of the college;

Memoirs of a ROTC Sergeant

By K. Klonsky

A room, a desk, a pile of paper-work, merits and demerits, purposeless, unchallenging, unsatisfying, restless, the ROTC sergeant surveys the scene and drops his head down on to the marking book in front of him . . . "There's a war on and I should be there . . . but I have a wife and five kids . . . but a man's got to have a sense of purpose and I'm a soldier who has never seen a war, which is something like a mezzo-soprano who has never sung an aria . . . I'm trained for war, I could take care of myself, maybe get promoted or come back with a medal . . . but maybe I won't come back at all. I don't have to go; my wife doesn't want me to go; I love my kids . . ." and over and over he banters with himself and still men die on a steaming battlefield half a globe away; men dying by the hundreds; the thousands? Bullet-riddled and castrated. "There's a war on; can I face the shame of staying home? How can I expect respect from those beneath me if I don't go? They'll ask: 'What were you doing while our boys were over in Vietnam?' I'll say: 'I was teaching ROTC and supporting a family of seven.' And they'll look at me with their knowing smiles and I'll know, I just lacked the guts. The rest of them went; they had kids. But my wife will plead with me on her knees and she'll cry . . . but I'm a man and I must do what is to be done. I could never live with myself otherwise . . ." So his decision is made and his wife takes it better than he thought possible. Only at the airport does he see through her veil of indifference and notice her sorrow, sorrow so deep that her parting face stays with him right until the end.

Epilogue - Five kids sit in a circle playing catch with daddy's medal. Mommy's out to work; she won't be back till late.

Monument To A Misguided Missile

On a recent afternoon as I scurried across the green from Waterman to the Old Mill through the unexpected and very wet downpour, it suddenly became obvious that the most hallowed trophies of the school are the to offer support to a group of students who excel in a skill different from their own?

2) to scrutinize, enjoy, observe, and suffer the good and bad displays of talent out on the field?

The purely academically-oriented students have no reason to think of anyone other than themselves, for what other responsibility do they have? Is this preparation for community living? Does this path lead to the ability to share, to cooperate, and to live with others?

Man is a miracle in that he has learned, is learning, and will continue to learn better ways to live with his contemporaries. Isolation is not the answer, nor is the abolishment of group activities. Somewhere there must be an esprit de corps or, at the very least, a spirit which will stimulate Man to more congenial living and more football games.

Sara Wills Pike

least appreciated simply because few people are aware of their importance.

While skipping hurriedly between the raindrops, still trying to retain some degree of sedateness (no easy task, since I was carrying twenty pounds of textbooks, an over-size pocketbook and holding an old CYNIC over my head), I noticed a young man bent almost double, scratching his ear and peering with obvious bewilderment at the boulder in front of Old Mill. His seeming confusion bothered me somewhat, for were it not for a helpful and considerate upperclassman who once informed me of the significance of this monument I, too, would be puzzled.

Staggering gracefully up to him under the weight of my library, the paper by now stuck to my head and hanging over my eyes, I inspected the rock somewhat casually in hopes that the Ignorant One would ask to be enlightened. He didn't. This is what is meant by student apathy.

However, his interest was soon aroused. He began jumping up and down pointing at me, mumbling incoherently. So happy was I to see that he had at least become aware of my presence, that I didn't notice that The Complete Works of Shakespeare had fallen on his right foot.

He was very gentlemanly about the whole thing, though. He simply demanded what the  was I trying to do, amputate?

Not to be discouraged, I overlooked this remark. He tried his best to escape, but fortunately he couldn't limp fast enough, and so I caught him at the sidewalk.

By now I was late for class, but after all, this was more important ... As I explained to him, if I was willing to spend my valuable time helping him to become less of a lop-eared ignorant, the least he could do was listen.

The Rock had been constructed, I explained, as a monument to an alumnus named Oliver T. Schmedlap, an engineering student who had won a reputation during the early years of the university for his design and construction of a missile so strangely unique that experts insisted that it could never get off the ground.

Not to be so easily defeated, good old Ollie contrived a complex device for firing the missile, and one afternoon when he should have been at a physics lab, he conducted his own experiment.

He catapulted his monstrous spitball from the Moll as a protest against general principles.

The company that owned the bus the boulder demolished were understandably upset by this unwarranted attack. Ollie was immediately dismissed with not so much as a refund of his remaining tuition.

Ollie's "petrified spitball," as it came to be called, still remains one of UVM's more artistic features. And those who believe in such things insist that on a windy day one can hear the hiss of a spinning, flying object followed by the crash of rock on metal. But of course that's preposterous.

Should you be passing by when one of the regular touring buses stop to give sightseers an opportunity to see The Rock, it will be to your credit that you take the time to tell them this history.

It is doubtful that my bewildered friend will tell them. I overheard a friend of his saying that he avoids The Rock as though it were embodied by Satan himself, and limps all the way around Science Hall to get into Old Mill by the back door.

THE SCEPTIC

NO NO NO. Don't tell me they are at it again. Not another movement. Not another movement to save the world. Last week another movement was formed at Goddard College to attempt once again the salvation of this world. Interestingly enough those who oppose this group also want to save the world. The Goddard group wants to make the world safe from butcher-boy Johnson and his band of international gangsters and those that oppose the Goddard group seek to make the world safe for Butcher-boy Johnson and his band of international gangsters. Both groups have somewhat hastily assumed that this world deserves salvation.

Is life really worth it? I think the most anyone can hope to achieve in life is a few seconds of sexual bliss. Upon reflection each of us will have to admit that most of our adult life is spent thinking of sex. If nuns were as pure as they are supposed to be there would be no need for them to wear clothes. The Victorians knew everything was sexual, and hence they spent most of their time arousing themselves by concealing all that was sexual. Modern man simply reveals everything the Victorians hid. Our grandfathers hid their dirty wash under the bed; we display ours from a flagpole. But dirty wash is dirty wash and children are just as apt to crawl under beds as they are to look up at flagpoles.

I hope no one will think I am anti-sex. I am only anti-sex in so far as I am anti-human. And I am anti-human only in so far as man is against himself. As far as I know man and the ants are the only creatures addicted to warfare. True, King Solomon said we should imitate the ants, but even wise men lie. Nevertheless the only practical way to world peace is world annihilation. The only alternative is that everyone become a pacifist - but what about the economy?

Of course once we are dead we can no longer enjoy sex; but then again we have joined the majority of humankind. Socrates the wisest of men chose death for no philosophical ideal. He did so for reasons not unrelated to sex; he could not stand his wife. Then too sex and death are not so different; both release the individual from all tensions. Death is more satisfactory in that it releases you forever. The only thing one can really find repugnant is physical pain. The only reason I morally oppose the war in Viet Nam is because we are wounding more people than we are murdering and that I think is a pity.

Now some of you may find this philosophy a bit harsh. You may actually believe life has some value. If you uphold a belief in the value of life you can hardly be, as I am, a patriotic citizen of the United States of America. Better dead than red is true only for orthodox christians who are better off dead anyways if their religion is true.

Today there lives one man who can save the world for the sake of intercourse. That man is now president of the United States. He will probably be president for the rest of our lives because he will soon Chinese of theirs. He will not however be remembered as a great leader. He will be remembered as a great philosopher. For of all men he was the first to see. If two wrongs don't make a right maybe three, four, five or six will. And in so doing he may very well save the world.

QUOTE FOR THE WEEK

"The conduct of students toward all men is to be regulated by those plain rules of politeness, honor, and religion which are binding on every free and virtuous community. They are to conform to every requirement of the faculty, which may arise from their relations as instructors, counselors, and guardians, and as upright men and good citizens they shall use all lawful exertions to prevent and expose all violations of the laws of God and of the Country, and whatever is at variance with the objects of the University."

Taken from the University Rule Book

STUDENTES

By John Kyper

It is particularly disturbing to note the actions of a rather bellicose pacifist in defacing the pillars of Waterman and other locations on campus with abortively inflammatory statements about Vietnam and the University administration. If he had expected to incite any student revolt, he has failed, save to stimulate the puzzlement which usually greets such immature works. Obviously, if the person involved has anything of value to contribute he should express his opinions through more suitable channels.

Indeed, the contemptible action of deliberately smearing the property of others is in no sense non-violent. It is violence, for it is the willful extension of one's own activities to infringe upon the rights of others. Like Mario Savio, the "champion of non-violence" at the Berkley "Free Speech" demonstrations in 1964 who bit a campus policeman on the leg, our "pacifist" is a blatant hypocrite. Like the leftists who advocate draft card burning, he is deliberately attempting to confuse his violence with non-violence.

It is one thing to publicly question and dissent from the policies of this nation and suggest reasonable alternatives which can improve the society without destroying it. It is another matter entirely to commit treason, in a stealthy attempt to weaken and destroy America from within. Such a distinction is of utmost importance in judging the critics of contemporary society.

Fulbright-Hays Awards Competition Nears End

NEW YORK - The Institute of International Education reports the competition for U.S. Government grants for graduate study or research abroad in 1967-68, or for study and professional training in the creative and performing arts, under the Fulbright-Hays Act will close shortly.

This year marks the 20th Anniversary of the signing of the original legislation which created this exchange program. Since 1946, approximately 15,000 grants have been awarded to American graduate students for study in countries throughout the world.

Application forms and information about this year's competition for students currently enrolled at the University of Vermont may be obtained from the campus Fulbright Program Adviser, Dean W.H. Macmillan.

The deadline for filing applications through the Fulbright program adviser on this campus is Oct. 24.

PURPOSE OF GRANTS

IIE conducts competitions for U.S. Government scholarships, for students below the Ph.D level, provided by the Fulbright-Hays Act as part of the educational and cultural exchange program of the Department of State. This program, which is intended to increase mutual understanding between the people of the United States and other countries, provides more than 850 grants for study in 54 countries.

Candidates who wish to apply for an award must be U.S. citizens at the time of application, have a bachelor's degree or its equivalent by the beginning date of the grant and, in most cases, be proficient in the language of the host country.

Selections will be made on the basis of academic and/or professional record, the feasibility of the applicant's proposed study plan and personal qualifications. Preference is given to candidates who have not had prior opportunity for extended study or residence abroad and who are under the age of 35.

UVM Ph.D To Work Under Nobel Prize Winner

David L. Dalrymple, 25, who has completed his work for a doctorate at the University of Vermont, will begin research work this week under direction of a 1965 Nobel prize winner.

He received one of about 40 National Science Foundation postdoctoral fellowships awarded annually in chemistry.

Dalrymple, a native of Fredericktown, Ohio, is a 1962 graduate of Wooster College in Ohio. The following year he did graduate work at Ohio State. When Dr. William N. White, who heads the chemistry department at Vermont, moved from Ohio State to Vermont in 1963, Dalrymple transferred his studies to the Vermont campus.

At Harvard Dalrymple will work with Dr. Robert Burns Woodward, best known for his work in synthetic organic synthesizing many compounds, including quinine, chlorophyll, strychnine, and cholesterol. Dr. Woodward, too, was a post-doctoral fellow at Harvard, in 1937-38.

Dalrymple said that at Harvard he will be investigating the theoretical approaches to explaining reaction mechanisms.

Creative and performing artists are not required to have a bachelor's degree but they must have four years of professional study or equivalent experience.

Applicants in social work must have at least two years of professional experience after the Master of Social Work degree. Applicants in the field of medicine must have an M.D. at the time of application.

Two types of grants are available through IIE under the Fulbright-Hays Act: U. S. Government Full Grants, and U.S. Government Travel Grants.

A limited number of travel grants is available to supplement maintenance and tuition scholarships granted to American students by universities, private donors and foreign governments.

AMERICAN REPUBLICS

Because of the growing interest in inter-American studies, there are grants available to a number of countries in the American Republics Area in the fields of history, the social sciences, law, the humanities and other suitable fields.

All applicants for these grants must be proficient in the spoken language of the country for which they apply and should have knowledge of the American Republics Area, specifically in the country or countries for which they are applying.

There are also opportunities for teaching assistantships in Indian and Italy for students interested in teaching English as a foreign language; teaching fellowships at universities in Italy for the teaching of the English language and English or American literature; teaching of American literature and/or civilization; and a teaching fellowship in the Philippines for the teaching of linguistics or English as a second language.

Augustine Series Offers Lecture On Art & Liturgy

Robert E. Rambusch, winner of a 1965 international architectural competition, will speak in the North Lounge of the Billings Center, Thursday Oct. 6, at 7:30 p.m. on "Art and Liturgy."

After graduation from the University of Toronto, Rambusch studied at the Sacred Art Center in Paris. He was made chairman of the arts section of the American Benedictine Association, 1960-64.

Since 1965 he has been treasurer of the Board of Directors of the American Institute of Architects, Inter-faith Research Center, as well as chairman of the Art and Architecture Committee of the National Liturgical Conference.

Well known as a lecturer, panelist and art critic, Rambusch has published widely. He has contributed chapters to Sunday Morning Crisis (Helicon Press).

In 1965 he was awarded the gold medal in the Cardinal Lecaro Architectural Competition.

Rambusch's talk will be illustrated by color slides projected on two screens. It will be the second in the Augustine Series presented this semester by the UVM Catholic Center.

The lecture is free, and open to the public.

SCOPE

Student Cultural Organization is now considering Freshmen and Sophomores for membership. For further details, those interested come to Conference Room C at Billings Center on Thursday, Oct. 6th.

GREEK WEEK SPECIAL

THE GREEK WAY

Greek Week has been a part of the fraternity way of life at UVM since 1959. It had been decided seven years ago that there was a necessity to set down uniform rules on fraternity attitudes toward rushing, parties, initiation, etc. Therefore October 26 through 31 of 1959 were designated as a time for perfecting the fraternity way of life, while strengthening bonds between all of the Greeks on campus.

There were discussions and lectures on all aspects of fraternity life, how it could be improved, how it should or should not be restricted. Another set of seminars was sponsored by the national organizations aimed at the individual chapters and concerned themselves with pledging, social functions, community activities, with special interest to pledge masters, stewards, and presidents.

Friday of that week was marked by a costume ball, the theme being anything Greek. The crowning of Helen of Troy occurred at this ball as well as judging for the most original chariot.

The following day was the day of the Greek Games and the popular chariot races.

The basic motivating spirit lying at the heart of Greek Week still remains the same today: it affords an opportunity for interfraternity cooperation toward the development of a proper college spirit.

TEP Receives Award For High Scholarship

The Tau Epsilon Phi National Fraternity recently announced its Kappa Chapter at the University of Vermont as the recipient of the 1966 John Kleinberger Scholarship Award.

Selected from the 70 chapters of Tau Epsilon Phi throughout the United States and Canada, the John Kleinberger Award is given to two chapters with the best scholastic performances for the previous academic year, taking into consideration both overall average and scholastic standing on campus.

The local TEP chapter finished second in the 1965 Fall Semester standings which found the top three fraternities separated by .02 of a point and first in the 1966 Spring Semester. For the total 1965-66 academic year at UVM Tau Epsilon Phi was number one.

Phi Sigs Named Top In Nation

The Leon Brummer Memorial Cup, symbolic of excellence among fraternities, has been awarded to the University of Vermont's Phi Chapter of Phi Sigma Delta.

The award, presented to President Richard J. Colton in Cleveland last month, returns to the UVM campus for the second time in five years.

While presenting the rotating trophy to Phi's President, Harold J. Glickman, chairman of the Awards Committee, explained the Brummer Cup is presented to the fraternity's chapter that has shown excellence in all phases of campus life for the previous academic year.

Citing Phi's record of consecutive Kake Walk skit successes, its outstanding scholastic record, its members' participation in extracurricular activities, and its community-wide programs, Glickman told over 500 fraternity alumni and student leaders Phi's achievements over the past year "will be difficult indeed to duplicate."

The formal presentation was made at the National Phi Sigma Delta Convention held at the Cleveland-Sheraton Hotel Sept. 4.

Irving Lisman, Phi Sig's alumni advisor on the UVM campus, stated that "the 1966 Phi Chapter rates on the top, having now surpassed the great records established by the fraternity during the 1950's. Lisman, who himself was presented with an award honoring his service to the fraternity, has been associated with Phi Chapter for over 30 years.

IFC All-Sports Trophy Dedicated To Lockwood

This year's winner of the All-Sports Trophy will be the proud recipients of a dedicated trophy. In the past, the trophy, purchased by the athletic department, went to the organization that accumulated the most points throughout the year in intramural athletics. This has normally gone to one of the member fraternities on the campus, and the IFC also buys a replica each year to be awarded to the winner.

However, it was felt that the true meaning of the trophy could be magnified greatly by putting it in the name of someone who has been closely connected with the intramural program at the University and who demonstrated and lived with the true spirit of the program to the utmost. The name suggested was Edward J. Lockwood.

Last April 20, Ed was killed suddenly in an automobile accident on campus. Ed was not a great athletic, however, he did have athletic ability which he displayed often. He played football for the University freshman. In his fraternity he was known as a house character.

He was well liked by all that knew him, he had the utmost concern for the intramural program of the house and did all that he could to win. He exemplified the true spirit that should be associated with intramural program here, and it is for this reason that we strongly feel that the trophy should be renamed "The Lockwood All-Sports Trophy" in memory of Ed and what he stood and lived for. The memorial trophy will rotate each year from winner to winner.

Alpha Delta Pi Awarded For Spirit

President Sue Gibbons presents award to chapter.

Gamma Tau, the University of Vermont's chapter of Alpha Delta Pi Sorority, held a banquet Thursday evening September 22, at the Lincoln Inn to receive the Elizabeth Mosley Coles Award. This award, an impressive silver tray and coffee urn, is a rotating trophy presented to that chapter of Alpha Delta Pi which has displayed the most pride in sorority membership, and enthusiasm and spirit in both campus and sorority events.

The award was originally presented June 18 at the National Convention in Culver, Indiana, where members from all 112 chapters were present. President Sue Gibbons received the award for Gamma Tau. Then, Thursday evening, she, in return, presented it to the chapter. On hand for the celebration were Dean and Mrs. King, House-mother Mrs. Dorothy Aseltine, the forty-eight present sisters, and several alumni.

Alpha Chi Wins Award For Social Work

Alpha Chis were pleased to learn that they placed first in social development at their national convention this summer. Christine Adams and Nancy Grover accepted the award at this 35th convention where 105 Alpha Chi Chapters were represented.

This award was given for the altruistic as well as the social projects that Alpha Chis participated in. Such things as their mile of money for Cerebral Palsy, faculty Christmas parties, work on blood drives, collecting for the Red Cross, entertaining at homes for the aged, and orphan parties exemplify the work Alpha Chis have done to earn this award.

DATE TO BE ANNOUNCED

Fraternity Or Sorority---Should I Join?

... The social fraternity in American university life is approximately a century and a half old. From the beginning of the twentieth century to shortly before World War II it was frequently the dominant group life living situation for the college student. Since World War II, universities and colleges have developed residence halls not related to the social fraternity for purposes of housing the many individuals seeking college learning experiences. Today, therefore, the college student on most college campuses will have alternatives in the group life he chooses.

In choosing your group life, you must always remember that there are many variables which must influence the choice. Foremost is you -- What kind of person am I? What experiences have I had, both personal and group? What kind of person do I want to be? What learning experiences will best lead me to where I want to go in life?

A second set of variables will be the kind of college which you choose. There are some colleges where not to be a member of a social fraternity is to deny oneself many rewarding experiences. There are some colleges where the social fraternity is significant in its influence on the social-intellectual life of the campus. A college must be selected on some knowledge of the social fraternity on that particular campus.

A third set of variables is the greater society in which you are a part. Are your non-college friends involved in social fraternities? Do you want to associate after college in ways in which social fraternity contacts will be a value to you?

A fourth set of variables, related to the prior three sets, are the personal values which you hold which may be consistent or inconsistent with those of the social fraternity.... All groups require some allegiance to their standards or values. You must decide whether the values held by a particular social fraternity -- and social fraternities are in many ways not identical with one another -- are consistent with your own values.

It is obvious that in selecting the social fraternity as the "Group Life I Choose" that there are many advantages and disadvantages, in the context of the preceding four variables, which must be weighed. A few years ago, the author asked a group of fifteen graduate students in a course in student personnel work with campus groups which he was teaching to list the advantages and disadvantages of social fraternity membership. These students, all of whom were former campus leaders and of whom about half were social fraternity members, reported 95 advantages. When edited and summarized, the statements appear as follows as reported for Mo- tive Magazine in the Fall Orientation Issue of 1960.

UNFORTUNATELY

It tends to:

1. Force the individual to rely upon a particular group for his standards and friendships and thus limits participation in a wide range of campus interests.
2. Place undue emphasis at times on superficial values, e.g., winning a queen election, building the best "float."

3. Increase the cost of attending college, particularly through special assessments and social pressures to spend in order to maintain individual status within the group.
4. Promote loyalty to the group rather than the total university.
5. Promote group snobbery and feelings of superiority on the basis of false standards.
6. Promote autocratic methods of controlling group members' behavior.
7. Establish the fraternity as a buffer between the student and the university, thus distorting the university's attempt to promote general intellectual and social values.
8. Promote social life at the sacrifice of scholarship.
9. "Force" the individual to participate in activities with which his personal, social and moral values conflict, e.g., drinking, sex behavior, pranks, hazing.
10. Engage in hazing practices which may harm individuals physically.
11. Promote overdependence on a specific group as a basis for security both while in college and after college.
12. Place emphasis on selection of friends on the basis of fraternity affiliation and social class rather than upon intellectual and personal values.
13. Place an undue emphasis on campus social and political life.
14. Divide the campus into Greek and non-Greek factions,

15. Select individuals from within own group to promote for leadership for key campus positions rather than allowing individual to rise on his own merit.
16. Restrict association with minority group members since discrimination is practiced by many fraternities in membership selection.
17. Exclude from membership those individuals who might best profit by fraternity membership, e.g., the individual low in social skills.

18. Promote conformity to a group's ideals and standards in such matters as dating, campus politics, and selection of social friends.
19. Make the aspirant not selected feel unworthy.
20. Dominate social life of the member.

It is noteworthy that a particular statement is often an advantage or a disadvantage dependent upon the individual and the interplay of the four variables....

ON THE OTHER HAND --

It tends to:

1. Provide a sense of belonging and identity for the individual.
2. Encourage the individual to participate in all types of activity, e.g., social, aesthetic, spiritual.
3. Provide smaller units of well-appointed group housing.
4. Provide a greater sense of loyalty to the college because of the permanence of the group and the better opportunity to periodically renew one's relationship to the group and the college.
5. Develop in the individual a sense of group cooperation and responsibility and skills in working in groups.
6. Promote group self-government.
7. Provide a vehicle whereby service to the college and the community can be more effectively rendered.
8. Give opportunity for more supervised study.
9. Provide experiences which stimulate self-discipline.
10. Provide a social and friendship group which aids the freshman in adjustment to college life.
11. Provide through the reputation of the fraternity an acceptance by the campus for the individual as one of that group.
12. Provide opportunity for friendship development with fraternity brothers in chapters on other campuses.
13. Provide a ready medium for exchange of intellectual ideas.
14. Provide opportunity to engage in the art of politics, e.g., campus elections.
15. Provide opportunities to win leadership positions.
16. Provide opportunity to engage in business and management activities through the business responsibilities of the fraternity.
17. Provide a medium for developing social skills.
18. Provide opportunity to develop close personal friendships which endure over a long span of years.
19. Stimulate the less-active person to develop his interest.
20. Provide an outlet for use of leisure time.

Smothers Brothers To Appear

by Judy Beeber

At home, or around town, you may have heard youngsters speaking a new language, known in the South as "Smothersese" and in the North as "Tommy Talk." This new adolescent speech pattern has yet to be classified by sociologists, but it is characterized by long, complex, unwieldy sentences, punctuated only by stutters and long pauses. The originator of this speech pattern is Tom Smothers who works with his brother, Dick as comedian-folk singers and together they are known as The Smothers Brothers. Burlington residents and students will have the opportunity to see this zany couple in person on Wednesday, October 5, at 8:30 p.m. in Patrick Gymnasium on the Lane Series Extra. Lane Series was fortunate to obtain the duo, since they are two of the finest performers in the concert business.

Although the Smothers Brothers use much comedy in their forte, on records and in their nightclub appearances, they use music as a basis to launch their wild meanderings. However, their comedy is vastly enriched by their ability to change the pace and introduce a serious song, done with feeling and warmth, when the moment is exactly right. Tom starts the comedy with his guitar and soon breaks into a nervous, distracted double talk that has him stumbling over big words, muffling lines with naive unconcern, singing off key and constantly upstaging his long-suffering brother, Dick.

The Smothers Brothers have achieved stardom through many media. Mercury Records has captured the brothers' singing and satire on nine top-selling albums. The brothers performed for four years in cross-country tours and nightclub engagements and were seen by three million people. In 1965, 35 million people tuned in their television sets to something called "The Smothers Brothers Show" and the brothers were suddenly known all over the country. Tom and Dick have been familiar faces on other television shows. With appearances on "The Tonight Show," "The Ed Sullivan Show," "Burke's Law," and others, the brothers have been established as two of television's most popular guest stars. It is quite possible that their first movie will be made this year.

Tickets for this Lane Series extra will be available to all and will be on sale starting Tuesday morning, October 4, in either the Lane Series Office, 54 Waterman, or in Bailey's Music Store. Any possible leftover tickets will be sold at the door Wednesday Evening at the gym. There will be three price categories of tickets. Unreserved space directly on the gym floor for which blankets must be supplied, will be sold for $2.50. Reserved seats in the lower bleachers will sell for $2.50 and reserved seats in the upper bleachers will be sold at $2.00 a ticket.

The Election Committee of Student Association asks that all persons interested in making themselves candidates for the position of Senator from their particular living unit obtain petitions at the Student Association Office, Billings Center, if they have not done so already.

These petitions will be available thru Sunday, October 2nd, and must be completed and returned to this office before 12:00 Noon Monday, October 3rd. Elections will be held in living units on Tuesday, October 4th, between 4-6 p.m.

Martha Graham Leads Off Blue Series

By Judy Beeber

Opening the new 1966-67 Blue Lane Series season will be the world known Martha Graham Dance Company whose performance can be seen on Monday, October 3, at 8:30 in Memorial auditorium.

Miss Martha Graham is the leading modern dancer in the world today. She has been awarded with the Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies Annual Award, an international prize equivalent in prestige to the Nobel Prize. The award was bestowed upon her as a token of gratitude for a lifetime of unabated creativity and unfailing excellence. Her own dance techniques were taught to many of the major and minor choreographers now at work in modern dance in America. At the Neighborhood Playhouse of the Theatre, her students have included Gregory Peck, Eli Wallach, Tony Randall, Joanne Woodward and other notables. Graham dancers and former students now teach in many American colleges and in London, Stockholm, Djakarta and in Tel-Aviv.

Miss Graham's dance career did not start until her third year in high school. In 1937, she danced for President Roosevelt at the White House; in 1949, was chosen as one of the six outstanding woman of the year; in 1950, she was cited by President Truman. Miss Graham and her company spent four months on an extensive tour in Europe and in 1955-56 they toured the Far East under the International Exchange Program. Miss Graham has electrified the world of dance and theater with great pieces such as "Embattled Garden", already called a minor masterpiece, "Clytemnestra, Phaedra," "Legend of Judith" and others.

There has been no tour of the United States by the Martha Graham Dance Company for the past 15 years, since costs of transportation productions along with the company and the special orchestra required have blocked previous plans to bring the company to American cities. Now, however, a grant from the National Foundations of the Arts, matched by contributions from loyal American art lovers, have made the tour possible and local audiences will be able to see the performances exactly as presented to New York and other world capitals. In New England the only two cities in which the dance company will be seen are Burlington and Boston.

The company consists of 65 dancers and will be accompanied by a 45 piece orchestra. One of the feature dancers will be Miss Phyllis Gutelues, who appeared on the Lane Summer Series Concert, "An Evening of Dance". The program will consist of three dances: "Embattled Garden," "Secular Games," and "The Legend of Judith" in which Miss Graham will appear. Miss Graham will display her great talent in the Apocryphal tale of the courageous Judith who saved her country Israel from destruction by killing the captain of the opposing enemy.

FLICKS

STRONG - Ralph Richardson, John Mills, Peter Sellers, and Michal Caine in "The Wrong Box." - This film is a don't miss. Possible the best film of 1966 and probably the best English comedy since "I'm All Right Jack". "The Wrong Box" is so swift, smooth and hilarious that one would probably like to sit in for the second show. A wild mele of inheritances, murders and abortion.

STATE - "Tarzan" - A new ultra-modern Tarzan that fires machine guns and drives cars and looks a bit ludicrous.

FLYNN - "Up to His Ears" - Jean-Paul Belmondo and Ursula Andress. Enough said.

S.A. - "Brigadoon" - A big and beautiful motion picture with music by Lerner and Lowe, well adapted from the Broadway stage. Concerns the fate of two hunters who lost their way in the Scottish Highlands. They come upon Brigadoon, a legendary world of dreams and enchantment. The score is right up there with "My Fair Lady."

PICTURE OF THE WEEK - "The Wrong Box" most emphatically.

UVM Sponsors Volunteer Big Brother, Big Sister Program

By Robert F. Balivet '68, student chairman

The UVM Big Brother - Big Sister Project provides youngsters between the ages of six and fifteen with the benefits of an honest friendship with a person of college age. Maladjustment and "acting-out", neglect and deprivation, through the actual or effective absence of one or both parents are common problems among some of these children.

MEET WITH CHILD WEEKLY

The Big Brother or Big Sister meets the child once a week for at least an hour. This volunteer presents new ideas, experiences, and opens new vistas to the child. Together they swim, play, hike, fish, cook-out, bicycle, and join in many other mutually enjoyable activities which they plan together. In all, a new friendship is developed.

REWARDING

This friendship is rewarding to both the student volunteer and the child. The youngster gains the security of an adult companion, and hence, affirmation of his or her personal worth. The student, who has the opportunity to give his own time to develop, also reported the benefits of exposure to family life (in contrast to their isolation from it while University students) and exposure to some of the very real problems of urban life.

The Project at UVM offers students a unique opportunity in the field of human relationships. It is largely directed by the students themselves as a service to the community and surrounding areas. It is completely ecumenical in orientation, involving students and children of all faiths.

The Rev. John Perry, Protestant Chaplain to UVM, advises the student leadership and serves as a liaison between the student and the various agencies who refer children. The referring agencies themselves maintain regular contact with their children and with the student volunteers.

LAST YEAR WAS FIRST

The 1965-66 project was intentionally a "pilot project" for particular reasons. This coming season the program hopes to expand to meet the increasing demand of youngsters.

For further information on how to become a member of this program either write or phone the Student Chairman, Robert Balivet, at 75 Loomis Street (862-6869) or the Rev. John Perry at St. Anselm's Chapel of Redstone Campus (ext. 669).

A Pint Speaks Out

(Ed. note: The symbol is just to attract your attention. Of course, we don't know what the attendant may be like.)

No, I'm not a pint of that stuff that most of us are too familiar with. I'm a pint of blood and I belong to the greatest life-saving program ever undertaken in the world.

Everyone in America can benefit because my blood is available to everyone when blood is needed to save a life—yours. Everyone can help with a little of his time and his blood.

You say, "I don't have the time," or, "I get too weak," or "I've got a cold," or "someone else will do it." Let's not kid ourselves, I'm not going to be around forever.

I'll have to be replaced and I can't wait for that someone else. I need you. Won't you help?

Let's face reality. Most of us are afraid. And what is the matter with that? It's a normal reaction to something that appears distasteful.

All I can say is that the first time is always the worst. This is only because of the element of apprehension. I cannot alter your fear, but I will try to overcome it with some simple facts to alleviate your anxieties.

The only really bad part is the needle. I have found that you are squeamish, don't look at it. You'll hardly feel it. No, giving blood won't weaken you. There are 12 pints of blood in your system, and the giving of one hardly affects you.

In fact, within 24 to 48 hours the pint is replaced. If you are under 21, you can still give by having your parents sign the release slip. Very simple.

Most important, however, is the feeling that you get from knowing that you have done something tremendously worthwhile.

Now that I have told you why you should give, I'm going to tell you how you can give. Ethan Allen Rifles is sponsoring a Blood Drive in coordination with the Red Cross, October 4, 5 and 6 at Billings Center.

All you need do is pick up an appointment card at Billings, your Dorm, Fraternity, Sorority, or elsewhere, and then show up at the time you indicated as being convenient for you. We need 600 pints. Won't you help with an hour of your time and a unit of blood to provide a life-time for someone else? I've got to go. Will YOU replace me with a pint of YOUR BLOOD?

Mrs. Elliot Will Speak Here Oct. 4

A public lecture, "My Life with the Savage Aucas," will be sponsored Tuesday evening, Oct. 4, at 8 p.m. in the lower Lounge of Waterman. Mrs. Betty Elliott will be the guest lecturer and is being sponsored by Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship.

Betty Elliott is the wife of the late Jimm Elliott, one of the five missionaries killed in January, 1956, in the famous "Palm Beach Massacre." This incident which attracted world wide attention occurred when the five missionaries were making their way into the interior of Ecuador to the savage tribe of Aucas Indians. As their plane landed on a narrow strip of land, Aucas hidden in near-by bushes killed them.

Later, Mrs. Elliott with her little girl and the sister of one of the other missionaries lived for a time among the Aucas. In her lecture she will discuss some of her own thought and experiences as she learned to live and work among these people, some of the very people responsible for the death of her husband.

UVM ROTC SERGEANT PROMOTED

At a ceremony held on 19 September 1966 at the UVM Military Science Department, Sergeant First Class Christopher J. Garland was promoted to his present rank by Colonel David R. Longacre, Professor of Military Science.

SFC Garland is a native of Brooklyn, New York and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher G. Garland, 1488 E. 49th Street, Brooklyn, N.Y. He entered the Army in September, 1948 after attending Manual Training High School in Brooklyn.

SFC Garland's first assignment was with the 3d Infantry Regiment, "THE OLD GUARD," at Fort Meyer, Virginia. He entered the Korean Conflict in July 1950 with the 27th Infantry Regiment, the famed "WOLF HOUNDS", of the 25th Infantry Division. He was evacuated to Japan in January 1951 after receiving combat wounds. For this action, he was decorated with the Bronze Star with V device, the Purple Heart and the Combat Infantryman's Badge.

SFC Garland remained stationed in Osaka, Japan until 1955 serving with the Military Police Corps. He was then transferred to Ft. Dix, New Jersey for three years, remaining with the Military Police. In 1958 SFC Garland went to Germany serving with the 51st Infantry of the 4th Armored Group. In 1961 SFC Garland's next tour took him to Fort Hood, Texas, where he was Platoon Sergeant of the Division Headquarters Security Platoon. In 1964, he returned to the Far East serving in the 2nd Battalion, 8th Cavalry, 1st Cavalry Division in Korea. In October 1965, he joined the ROTC Instructor Group at the University of Vermont.

SFC Garland is an instructor in the Military Science Department and coaches both the University Varsity and Freshman Rifle Teams. He resides with his wife, Masae and five children at Fort Ethan Allen.

RIBBONS RECEIVED BY SUMMER CAMP AND BASIC COURSE CADETS

Cadet Douglas Orvis, brigade commander, was chosen the outstanding cadet of this year's ROTC summer camp. For his outstanding record in all competition, he was awarded the Association of the U.S. Army Award by Major Peck, Executive Officer of the Military Science Department, at the Friday leadership laboratory.

A number of cadets also distinguished themselves as being members of the best company at the camp. Cadets Thomas Armbricht, Mason Bryant, Vassar Curtis, William Finger, Thomas Mills, Gregory Pahl, Gary Rice, and Rodney Stewart, each received a blue ribbon mounted in a gold frame. The presentation was made by Major Peck to each of the seniors at their respective drills.

At the end of each semester, those basic course cadets with a 90 or above average, both in lecture and drill are awarded the basic course achievement ribbon. For any subsequent semester, a cadet who once again meets these criteria receives a star, making it possible to obtain a ribbon and three stars over the 2-year basic course. William Conrad, now an MS III cadet, received his third star from Captain Sparks at the Friday-junior drill held in the Military Science Building Cage. David Keenan, Robert Foster, Walter Cooper, and George Burritt, were among those to receive their second star. Paul Lewis, James Mitchell and Bruce Bottamini also received stars or ribbons at the junior drill.

Pershing Rifles Cadets also distinguished themselves by collecting the majority of achievement ribbons awarded to sophomores Robert Baldwin, Edward Barnard, Weston Cate, John Rusk, and Thomas Wheel received stars while Malcolm Brown, Douglas Coolidge, Robert Jerard, John Kinsey, John Macutchan, Leslie Pike, David Schermerhorn, Thomas Shaller and Neal Vreeland received the 1st award from Captain Howard D. Fraser at their Thursday night meeting. Cadet Bret Powell and Robert Walker received the award for the second time, and Windell Gotsman, Stephen Couture, William Driver, Peter Meyer, and Lester Velez were awarded the ribbon by Major Peck.

UVM Dames To Hold Meeting

The UVM Dames met at the home of Mrs. Lyman Rowell for their first fall activity on Tuesday, Sept. 20.

The second meeting of the UVM Dames will be held Tuesday, Oct. 4, at 7:30 p.m. in Terrill Hall. Interest groups will be formed, and refreshments served. All graduate and undergraduate wives are welcome. Future meetings will be held the first Tuesday of every month in Terrill Hall.

For information call our Welcome Hostess, Virginia Brown, 863-5008.

Davies Joins Art Department

UVM is indeed fortunate to have Mr. Hanlyn Davies, a 24 year old Welshman, as part of its growing Art Department. He has been given a free hand in establishing the new design course offered to beginners in the field of visual arts. After two years of graduate study at Yale, he is both excited and optimistic about the future of art on this campus.

Mr. Davies sees the United States as the hub of art in the world today. This surprising fact was the major reason for his choice of studying, teaching and working over here. It is especially rewarding when a European notices that "things are on the move here." Many Americans tend to lose sight of this fact and condemn their country as "cultureless" or "materialistic."

The young teacher stressed that he would encourage a personal involvement with his students and their work. However, he does not want "personal involvement" to become blind self-expression. Practice will come before theory but will not eliminate it. The design course will provide a working vocabulary for students who found themselves lost in the terminology of advanced art courses. This prerequisite training will bring students closer to their work.

The importance of art in the modern world cannot be understated. With greater amounts of leisure time predicted for the future, people will have the need of self-expression staring them in the face. The University, fully realizing this inevitability, has taken measures to strengthen its Art Department. The addition of Mr. Davies is a step in the right direction.

CATS OPEN YC SLATE AT UCONN

The University of Vermont football team, being idle last weekend, resumes its gridiron battles October 1 at Storrs, Connecticut against the Huskies. The cats opened their season at home two weeks ago with a convincing 35-12 over the Aces of AIC. It should be added here that halftime entertainment Saturday at Storrs will be provided by 1800 musicians as the 9th Annual Band Day brings together 27 high school bands. This pageant is one of the most colorful musical events in New England.

Although originally concerned about what effects the week lay-off would have on his team, Coach Clifford now considers the open date as an advantage rather than a disadvantage. Most of the team's injuries (which prevented the Dartmouth scrimmage) have responded to treatment and providing no injuries occur this week in practice, the Cats should be full strength for the first time.

Joe Soldano, who many consider one of the best middle guards in New England, will get his first taste of contact this season. Soldano went 5 for 5 in points after touchdown attempts against the Aces but saw no action at his defensive position.

UVM's smooth offensive machine, which piled up over 400 total offensive yards in its opener, is again ready to roll. Junior Dave Shumate, injured against the Aces, should be able to resume his signal calling chores with Soph. Paul Simpson and Jack Stroker are always ready to take over the helm. These three seem to improve with each minute of play. Trying to improve upon his 131 yards and three TD's will be running back Bob Mitchell. The fullback spot is in the capable hands of Jim Culhane with hard running Pete Clifford an able replacement.

Dick Hebert has the dual capacity of filling the flankerback's shoes and kicking off. Watching three of Hebert's kickoffs reach the goal line in the last game certainly was an impressive sight. In the middle of UVM's offensive line, which averages over 210 pounds, is sophomore Dave Capman. Guards Bill Crudo and Dan Martin plus tackles David

Lucaroni and Jim Sullivan make up the remainder of the interior line. There is not a senior in this group so Coach Clifford will have to put up with them for at least another year. Rounding out the offensive team are Jack Schweberger and Jeff Kuhman, two tall and talented ends. The defensive platoon is lead by 225 pound captain Bill Van Bennekum. Joining the Hoboken Hurricane on the line are John Gurrieri, Joe Soldano, Bill Dorezenski and Don "Tuck" Nelson. Linebackers Bill Wolf, Ed Kiniry, Colin Hurd and Steven Vukovich will continue to change the course of events for many an opposing ball carriers. In the defensive secondary are Bill Leete, Bill Lawrence and Leo Pfeiffer.

Looking ahead to the game Saturday, the Huskies, under first year Coach John Toner, opened their season last weekend coming out on the short end of a 16-0 contest with Yale. U Conn was led by 6'3", 205 pound fullback, Paul Gruner. The Cats will definitely have to keep an eye on this impressive junior. Another player for U Conn to take notice of is Roy Lawrence who already has kicked a 48 yard field goal this season.

It looks like Saturday's battle at Storrs has all the makings of a real thriller and the "CYNIC" Sports Staff takes time here to wish the Cats good luck. After the weekend clash, it is expected that the number of wins Coach Clifford will need to become UVM's winningest football Coach will be reduced from five to four.

Soccer Squad At Norwich

By Ted Ryan

Key injuries may ruin the University of Vermont's 1966 debut in Yankee Conference Soccer Saturday when the Catamounts travel to Connecticut in the league opener for both but coach Hal Grieg is still optimistic.

Vermont, the Cinderella team of the 1965 season, will try to defend its title but Jeff Hyman, Jack Semler and Bob Schroeder may be on the sidelines, Grieg said this week.

Hyman and Semler, counted on heavily in the offensive department, are suffering from minor injuries and will probably see limited action in Saturday's game.

Schroeder, a scheduled starting fullback, has been hampered by muscles spasms in his back. His status as a player for the rest of the season is doubtful.

"Bobby is a key player, I was depending heavily on him," Grieg said.

Grieg expressed pleasure with the continued improvement of the sophomores essential to Vermont title hopes.

"They have had two baptisms under fire. They're coming along fine. The seem more confident and stronger," the soccer mentor stated.

The Cats followed their 3-2 scrimmage upset over highly-touted Dartmouth with a convincing 4-0 scrimmage decision over Plattsburgh State College last Saturday.

The high-gear offense of the Cats kept the Plattsburgh goalie busy by slamming 30 shots towards the New York netman.

While the offense was unleashing volley after volley, the defense bottled up the meager Plattsburgh threats. The state school took only two shots at goal in the first place. In the second half Vermont's goalies were never the target of a Plattsburgh shot.

"I was very pleased. The boys played a very aggressive type of game. Plattsburgh was supposedly an experienced team, having lost only one player from last year," Grieg stated.

Grieg commended halfbacks Jeff Taft and Pete Giroux and fullbacks Tom Bitter, Les Balise and Peter Myer for their sharp defensive play.

The UVM coach also noted the fine line of play of Pete Baldwin, "who played an outstanding game," Jack Semler and Dave Cronin, who filled in for the injured Hyman.

Saturday's game with Connecticut may well have a direct bearing on the outcome of the Yankee Conference title race this fall. These two bellclubs and Massachusetts are rated as the primary contenders for the crown.

"I expect an exciting, close ballgame. Like we were, they were a predominately sophomore team last year. I understand they have an excellent transfer student," the UVM coach concluded.

FRESHMEN HOST NORWICH FRIDAY

Opening the day before the varsity, the freshman soccer club is loaded with promising prospects.

The frosh open Friday against Norwich in back of Gutterson Field House.

Varsity coach Hal Grieg said 49 to about 40 boys have reported to practice, the largest group in recent Vermont soccer history.

"It's a large group and some of the boys look very promising but they still haven't been tested," Grieg said.

Among the aspiring frosh booters are four members of the Proctor High School team which captured the Vermont State High School soccer crown last year.

Jon Poljakik, a Proctor grad, is a leading contender for the starting goalie position. His quick moves and defensive ability has impressed Grieg.

Kevin Austin, Bob Greene and Carlo Tonelli, Poljakik's teammates last year, have also displayed fine form in practice.

Two Pittsfield, Mass., boys, Bob Pekala and Charles Goodrich, Chris Harris of Mount

Frosh Host Norwich

The University of Vermont freshman football team opens its five game season Friday, Sept. 30, when it plays host to the Norwich frosh. Bob Guthridge takes over the reins as head coach of the Kittens this fall. Guthridge, a 1950 graduate of Temple University, will be assisted by 1965 All-East Center Rusty Brink and Joe Albanese.

Linkmen Split

The University of Vermont golf team opened its 1966 season by defeating Clark but losing to M.I.T. in a triangular meet held at the Oakley Country Club, Watertown, Mass. Joe Donnelly and Bob Nadler were the only linkmen to defeat both of their opponents, while Loyd Hier, Captain Art Shields, Al Smith, Bruce Fay and Nick Van Tassel ended the day one up and one down. The next match for the golfers of coach Ed Donnelly will be at Montreal Sept. 30 and Oct. 1 against Sir George Williams. Two of last years lettermen are lost to the team for the season, and only time will tell what

State Budget Officials Eye UVM Funds Closely

$5 Million Appropriated For University Usage

(Credit: Burlington Free Press)

MONTPELIER - Vermont budget officials plan to take a close look this year for the first time at the budget requests of the University of Vermont.

The budget and Management Division has prepared a list of items it wants more information on and Gov. Hoff has sent the request along in a memorandum to UVM President Rowell, it was learned Thursday.

The departure from the usual procedure of allowing the university autonomy appeared prompted by two things: first, the increasing amount of state funds the university is using and, second, the still unexplained "resignation" of Dr. Shannon McCune as president.

University trustees have said only that McCune resigned, while McCune has said publicly that he was fired. Requests for further information from the trustees resulted in refusals from the board.

Hoff told newsmen recently that he had not learned the full story of McCune's departure and felt that the trustees had handled the situation badly.

Hoff strengthened his position when he told Rowell in the memorandum that "we can also look forward to increasing public pressure for a clarification of the university's attitude toward its responsibilities to the public and I think this also merits your close attention and some joint discussions between the university and the state."

Administration Commissioner William F. Kearns said so far the university is cooperating with the state in providing the information.

He acknowledged that this is the first time the state has taken such an interest in the university budget and operations.

Kearns said the new approach seemed reasonable since the university received about one-tenth of the general fund appropriations.

Kearns said that the school is continuing to grow and the state

Pres. Rowell Comments

University of Vermont President Rowell Thursday confirmed that he had received a letter from Gov. Hoff indicating the state's Budget Division would like additional information for the university's budget requests.

Rowell said "I have read the letter and request and talked with the Governor and with Administration Commissioner William Kearns and with Roland Crisman, assistant director of the budget management division."

He said "I do not consider the request unfriendly in any sense."

"We had already begun preparation of our budget along lines suggested prior to the last legislative session. Our preparation includes much of the information that is being asked, and we are seeking to prepare the rest of the information."

He said that not all of the data requested is available in the form which the budget division has requested, and that preparation of some of this data would require some time.

Rowell noted that the university has recently established an institutional research office and that this office would make it easier to obtain this and other data.

He said also that the state has asked for salary scales and ranges for the different ranks, that this information has been made available in the past and would be again.

Regarding listing of individual salaries, Rowell said that he had Appearing with Miss Warwick will be Bert Orr's Orchestra and a Rock and Roll band from the Boston area. Tickets will go on sale Monday, Oct. 3, at the UVM bookstore at a cost of $4.00 a couple.

Parking Discussed

It is evident to anyone driving a car or crossing the streets that UVM is currently plagued by traffic and parking problems. In order to attempt to resolve the dilemma, the administration has called in Dan Kiley and

Council Named Book Club Judge

Prof. Norman B. Council of the University of Vermont English department has been named one of three regional judges in the Book-of-the-Month Club Writing Fellowship program. He will undertake the preliminary screening of fellowship applications with author and translator Rex Warner of the University of Connecticut and Alan H. MacLaine of the University of Rhode Island, who will chair the group.

Two fellowships of $3,000 each will be awarded in each of seven regions in the U.S. and its possessions and Canada. Final selections will be made by a board of national judges which will be named at a later date.

The program is open to any person who will be a senior in an accredited college or university in the U.S. or Canada on Dec. 1, 1966, provided he is nominated by a member of the English department of his college. It is designed to give gifted seniors an opportunity to develop their talents in creative writing in the year following their graduation.

The competition and entertainment of this year's Greek Week has served not only to enlighten the students about the Fraternities and Sororities, but also to advance unity among the Greek to advance unity among the Greeks themselves. The high point of both the Greek Sing and the Greek Games took place Friday night in Patrick Gymnasium during the awarding of the intramural trophies. This was the dedications of the All-Sports Trophy To Edward J. Lockwood who, as Dr. Perrine stated in his citation, "exemplified the true spirit that should be associated with intramural program here." Students Receive $1,000,000

Over 1400 students at the University of Vermont are sharing over $1,000,000 in financial aid in one form or another this year to help them meet their college expenses, and the University's Financial Aid officer reports that more would have been awarded if it had been available.

Approximately half of the total aid is in the form of scholarships, with the Wilbur Fund constituting the largest single source of scholarship aid available to UVM students. The Wilbur Trust, with a current market value of over $3,000,000, this year has provided over $133,000 to 246 Vermonters at the University.

A wide variety of other UVM scholarship funds - the great majority of them restricted by terms of their donors - have contributed more than $260,000 to 295 students.

In addition, 300 students are benefitting from scholarships awarded to them by agencies like service clubs, veterans organizations, Dollars for Scholars. These sources add $92,000 to the total aid available for UVM students.

Another 101 students have been awarded Senatorial Scholarships valued at more than $17,000; and another 40 students have received $10,000 in scholarships from Vermont Student Assistance Corporation. Two dozen scholarships valued at over $15,000 are helping students pay their way through the medical college.

President Lyman Rowell said the University is constantly looking to increase the scholarship funds it may make available to its students. He said the Wilbur Fund has "since the early 1930's made a college education possible for literally thousands of Vermont men and women who might otherwise have been unable to accept admission to the University."

"The funds available from this and other sources have increased

At its first meeting, the club got things rolling by electing the club's first officers. The advisor, Dr. Hersch, was introduced to the members. Dr. Hersch, professor of mathematics, was formerly three-time state chess champion of Colorado.

The UVM Chess Club meets on Wednesday evening at 7:00. Any aspirants are welcome to attend.

"The Quiet Revolution In Quebec" Discussed By Miss Leland

On Tuesday, September 27, the students, faculty and associates of UVM were enlightened with a lecture entitled "The Quiet Revolution in Quebec" by Professor Marine Leland, Professor Emeritus of French Literature and Fr. Canadian Civ. This lecture, held at 8:00 in the Lower Lounge in Waterman, was the first of a series of lectures on French Canada and was of interest to history, sociology, philosophy, and language majors as well as to those majoring in Canadian studies. Professor Leland spoke on the truth behind the quiet revolution and stressed that it was often misrepresented in newspapers and thus misunderstood by the public. She spoke of the rising trend toward internal revolution since 1765 when England acquired the "long established full-fledged French Province," and gave examples of the problems present in Quebec today with bilingualism in the educational and legal systems of the province. She also discussed the politicians who helped to create the state of affairs which gave rise to the necessary demand for change on the part of the people of Quebec.

Miss Leland was born in Canada of American parents and was educated at Radcliffe College, Cambridge, Mass. Since 1940, she has combined her work in the field of French Literature with research on Canada, with special emphasis on French-speaking Canada. Her contributions to this field have been widely recognized and honored.

The next lectures in the series will be "Contemporary French Canadian Literature" on October 25, and "French Canadian Immigration to the United States: The Franco-American" on November 15. They both promise to be as stimulating as the first.

LA MAISON FRANCAISE

University of Vermont President Lyman S. Rowell and New York City Cultural Attache M. Edouard Morot-Sir of the French Embassy will speak Sunday, Oct. 9.

Associates, sites and landscape architects. A subcontracting firm of engineering and planning consultants are now conducting the basic field studies of the campus.

Joseph J. Kim, the man presently conducting the survey has stated the problem is not the parking on the campus alone, but the flow of traffic around UVM, and the impact of these automobiles on the towns of Burlington and South Burlington. Most students on campus have received questionnaires asking where they live, if they own a car, how they arrive to school, where they park their car, etc.

An evaluation of these field findings, as related to the physical lay-out will not be ready until November, and a model or sketches of the proposed corrections will not be prepared until the first of the year. However, it is hoped that the recommendations made will greatly improve the present situation.

EDITORIAL...

There is a tradition of antagonism between students and townspeople which exists in almost every college town in America. Apparently Burlington is no different, for relations appear to be in the process of deteriorating where, until recently, they were good.

Fundamentally, this tension can be attributed to a mutual misunderstanding. Some local people seem to regard the university with fear, anticipating the onslaught of hordes of college males whose only purpose it is to burn their crops and rape their daughters. Simultaneously, the "townie" has become a collegiate institution, symbolizing all that is provincial and generally anti-intellectual. To a certain extent the behavior of each of the two parties to this misunderstanding has confirmed the suspicions of the other. But, in the greatest number of instances, the suspicions are groundless.

There is nothing that can bring two opposing fractions together more effectively than a common project of some sort. What we propose, therefore, is a meeting of campus and municipal leaders to discuss ways and means of minimizing currently existing friction. This does not preclude the possibility of unilateral action by campus organizations (the Fraternity System, for one). By taking some children from an orphanage out for a picnic, for example, a fraternity can accomplish more in one afternoon than in ten Greek Weeks.

In any event, someone will have to make the first move. We feel it should be the University.

Billings Center is, apparently, the scene of a new kind of parking problem. We have been informed that it is no longer possible to find a desk to study at, without arriving before dinner. Since the management does not accept reservations, the logical alternative would seem to be expansion of the facilities. The point is that there is additional space which is currently being wasted. For example, could not the balcony of the Apse (round room) and the two over the S.A. desk be converted to study areas? If not, why not?

On the subject of Billings Center, we feel it is high time a ventilating system be installed in the record booths.

wants to make sure that money for the institution is justified in light demands from other state agencies.

The administration commissioner said the state will never try to tell the university what to teach or how to run the academic end of the operation.

ed," he said, "but still have not kept pace with rising costs." He noted that the Student Assistance Corporation had recently indicated it would ask the State Emergency Board for an additional $150,000 to be used as incentive grants for state students attending college; and that Senator John J. O'Brien indicated he would also ask the Emergency Board for an additional $90,000 in Senatorial Scholarship funds.

Total scholarship funds awarded to UVM students this year from University and other funds amount to $528,000. This year the University estimates tuition paid by Vermonters will make up about $1,300,000 of a total operating budget of about $18,000,000. In effect, Rowell said, Vermonters receive scholarships which reduce the total tuition they pay to about one third.

In addition, this year the University has awarded loans to 672 students totalling over $477,000. Largest single source is the Federal National Defense Student Loan Program, which provides $285,000 for 370 students. An additional 210 students have been awarded loans totalling over $100,000 from University loan funds.

Financial Aid Officer Allen Walker also counts University part-time employment as part of the total student aid picture at Vermont. This year, he estimates 200 students will earn $90,000 filling a wide variety of jobs which University departments pay for; and that another 115 students will earn about $95,000 under the federally supported work-study program.

The foremost authority on the Roman Catholic Church and birth control will speak in the Billings North Lounge Friday (Oct. 14) at 7:30 p.m.

In that year he gained international prominence with the publication of "Contraception: A History of its Treatment by the Catholic Theologians and Canonists."

A graduate of Harvard College and the Harvard Law School, Dr. Noonan studied at Cambridge University, England, before receiving his Ph.D. from Catholic University in 1951. He received a Guggenheim Fellowship 1965-66, and will be visiting professor of law at Stanford University in 1967.

His address here is the third in the current Augustine Series presented by the Catholic Center. It is free and open to the public.

The SCEPTIC...

Last week was Greek Week. There was a Greek Wednesday and all the Greeks wore their ticky-tacky blue shirts (Fraternities mold character). There was a Greek convocation (Fraternities develop the mind), a Greek Sing (Fraternities patronize the arts). There were also Greek Games (Fraternities inspire teamwork), Greek parties (Fraternities teach social graces) and Greek Week Rushing Smokers (Fraternities are camp).

The Greek Sing was quite an event. When one compares the total work to the end result the only noble emotion one can experience is pity. The other possible motion is associated with the gross flow of semi-digested foods from the mouth. The winning sorority sang a melody of three songs: "Over There," a song associated with a war fought to make the world safe for democracy, but had the effect of making the world safe for more wars; "Praise the Lord and Pass the Ammunition," the only honest Christian hymn; and "Ballad of the Green Beret," a sentimental song about a professional killer hired by the state who hopes his son will follow in his footsteps. The winning fraternity sang "Swing Low Sweet Chariot" and, contrary to rumor, they did not wear blackface. It is a pity there aren't more Negroes on campus. If there were, fraternities could prove their liberalism - one in every house and two in none.

Saturday night I attended a party which consisted of several hundred drunks gyrating as if being attacked by a swarm of wasps. They had a great deal of trouble moving about because of several inches of slime had accumulated on the floor. An observing anthropologist informed me that they were "sublimating." The males knew that they couldn't get the females into bed so they did the next best thing - a pretty miserable alternative. I, however, am of the opinion that the dancing is more than a crude attempt to tire out the quarry. There were officers from every important campus organization - Departure, CYNIC, Scope, University Players and Lane Series. At least two members of UVM's left wing political group attended - incognito to be sure. Also represented were several less important groups - S.A., Kake-walk Committee, Ariel, various honorary societies and several members of the football team. But the party was fun because we all got drunk. Let me take this opportunity to thank my hosts.

The purpose of a rushing smoker is to introduce freshmen to the fraternity system. This is done by feeding them. I attended such a smoker. To my delight I spied a keg. To my disappointment I found it was filled with cider. Next to the keg was a table littered with food. There was also a six foot mound of chopped liver out of which leapt one very attractive girl. By the time I had arrived all the cigarettes had been consumed. So I asked some one for a smoke. He eyed me suspiciously and said, "Smoking causes cancer." So I downed another shot of cider and went about introducing myself as Frodo Baggins. I can hardly wait for next year when I can rush again. The chopped liver was very good.

"I WOULD DO ANYTHING TO WIN VIET NAM WAR, SAYS EISENHOWER - headline Burlington Free Press.

"I would do anything to bring the war to an honorable solution," Dwight Eisenhower, ex-golfer.

Mass Changes Listed

SUNDAY MASS CHANGE: We hope you noticed that the 9:00 a.m. Mass has been changed from Ira Allen Chapel to the new Saint Augustine Chapel. This is for the convenience of the students who find St. Augustine much more suitable. We trust that the addition of the extra Mass at St. Augustine at 9:00 a.m. Sundays will relieve the crowded conditions at the 11:00 a.m. Mass. Coffee and doughnuts will be served each Sunday immediately after the 9:00 a.m. Mass. This new schedule begins next Sunday, October 9th. The other two Masses will remain the same, 11:00 a.m. at St. Augustine and 4:30 p.m. at Ira Allen Chapel.

COMMUNITY: Students should make every effort to attend Mass on campus on Sunday, as part of the University Community. The Mass is constantly being made more meaningful. To better fulfill our responsibility as Christians, everyone should participate in the prayers, the singing and the total worship.

THE NEW BREED

A new frontier imposes a natural process of elimination. You can meet the people that you would see on top of a high ski run which had no chair lift, and you can do it without the effort of climbing... just let gravity take its course: it's all downhill at the PARACHUTES INCORPORATED CENTERS.

The Centers are staffed and equipped to put you out on your first jump immediately following a time-tested four hour period of instruction. ($35 for everything involved in making the jump.) Safety is insured through the use of automatically opening main parachutes, FAA approved ten-place jump aircraft (your entire class jumps together), radio communication to the student, all-land drop zones, and constant, overall supervision by professional instructors both in the aircraft and on the ground. (80,000 jumps to date, over 8,000 of which were first jump students)

Borge Stars In Second Blue Concert

Victor Borge

By Judy Beeber

Celebrated pianist-humorist Victor Borge will star on the second Blue Lane series Monday, Oct. 10 at 8:30 in Memorial Auditorium.

Borge made his first appearance in Burlington in February 1963 when he performed on the Lane Extra.

Borge became a child prodigy because of his great talent at the piano but later had to struggle to reach the height of success he has achieved.

Born in Denmark, He was introduced to the piano at the age of three and on his tenth birthday, he played in concerts in Copenhagen, Berlin and Vienna.

Borge slowly integrated humor into his concerts and then wrote musical comedies, composed, directed and conducted. His brilliant career began as his fame spread throughout Scandinavia but ran into complications when the Nazis overran Denmark.

He was forced to leave his homeland and came to America in 1941 almost penniless and unable to speak English. His first break came when he was hired to do the audience warm up for the Bing Crosby radio show.

With this start, Borge's talent became apparent to many and he started on the road to fame. Television appearances followed radio and Borge was headlined with the top TV personalities of America.

In 1953, he did a one man show called "Comedy in Music" in many theaters in different cities and culminated his tour on Broadway. After his Broadway debut, Borge again toured the states and broke all time records. In the five months that followed, he grossed over $1 million.

Borge returned to Europe and appeared on BBC-TV in London where he was named "outstanding Television Personality of the year." For the first of his frequent television shows he received the highest fee ever paid a television performer $300,000 for the two shows on one hour each.

In 1965, he made a tour of the Eastern U.S., Canada, the British Isles, Germany, his native Denmark and back through the U.S.

Burlington will be one of the 16 cities in which Borge will be performing this autumn. Accompanying the pianist-comedian will be straight man Leonid Hambro.

Vermont Commands Floating Laboratory

Capt. Wardwell is native of Chittenden, Vt., where his mother, Mrs. Clara A. Wardwell, resides. He attended Pittsford High School, and graduated in 1930 from the University of Vermont with a degree in civil engineering.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — The modern oceanographic "floating laboratory," the USC & GS Ship OCEANOGRAPHER, is scheduled to leave Jacksonville, Fla., tomorrow for an 11 week, 14,000-mile scientific expedition to the South Atlantic.

The $9.2 million vessel, America's largest and most complete automated oceanographic research ship, will conduct a wide range of marine scientific studies off the eastern coast of South America and participate in observations of a total eclipse of the sun Nov. 12.

Designated "OPERATION ECLIPSE," the trip will take the 303-foot, 3,800-ton air conditioned vessel, which was commissioned in Washington July 13 by President Johnson, to Buenos Aires, Argentina, and return to its Jacksonville base Dec. 17.

Commanding officer of the ship is Captain Arthur L. Wardwell, of Chittenden, Vt.

The scientific expedition is being conducted by the U.S. Department of Commerce's Environmental Science Service Administration (ESSA). Participating ESSA agencies are the Institute for Oceanography, the Institute for Telecommunication Sciences & Aeronomy, the Weather Bureau, and the Coast and Geodetic Survey, which operates ESSA's fleet of 14 ships.

After reaching Buenos Aires Nov. 6, the OCEANOGRAPHER will prepare for the solar eclipse. The ship will be stationed directly in the path of the total eclipse, about 200 miles east of Buenos Aires and 150 miles off the Argentine coast. The total eclipse will last about two minutes.

The ship's schedule for the South Atlantic trip follows: Depart Jacksonville, Oct. 3; Rio de Janeiro, Oct. 19-24; Buenos Aires, Nov. 6-10; On eclipse station, Nov. 12; Buenos Aires, Nov. 14-16; Rio de Janeiro, Nov. 27-29; Jacksonville, Dec. 17.

Approximately 120 Fellowships will be awarded in March 1967. Candidates must be nominated by Liaison Officers of their undergraduate institutions by November 1, 1966. The Foundation does not accept direct applications for the Fellowships.

Danforth Graduate Fellows are eligible for four years of financial assistance, with a maximum annual living stipend of $2400 for single Fellows and $2950 for married Fellows, plus tuition and fees. Dependency allowances are available. Financial need is not a condition for consideration.

WILSON FELLOWSHIP COMPETITION OPENS

Competition is now open for Woodrow Wilson Fellowships for 1967-68. The nomination deadline is Oct. 31.

Students you think capable of becoming outstanding future college teachers in the liberal arts and sciences must be nominated by you by the deadline date.

Send candidate's name, current mailing address, college and proposed field of graduate study to: Prof. H. Ronald Rouse, Regional Chairman, Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation, Bromfield-Pearson Building, Tufts University, Medford, Mass. 02155.

Lane Series Is A Sell Out

Standing room only is the word at the University of Vermont's Lane Artists Series for the third year in a row. Prof. Jack Trevithick, executive secretary of the Series, says all tickets for this year's programs were sold out by mid-September.

About $15,000 worth of season reservations must be returned, and more orders were either refused or not sent in at all, according to Trevithick.

"Both the red and blue series (concurrent schedules of events) have been booked to the rafters in six of the twelve years of Lane Concerts," he adds.

"In fact, the Lane Committee will certainly discuss the possibility of a third series for 1967-68."

It costs about $35,000-$40,000 to pay for the type of concerts that the Lane Series present, including both artists' fees, production and promotion costs. Part of the expense is met by ticket sales, but the Series would not be possible without the endowment for which it is named.

In 1954 Mrs. George B. Lane made a generous gift to the University in memory of her late husband, an alumnus. The George Bishop Lane Artist Series was formally inaugurated in 1955. Since then, backed by enthusiastic audiences from throughout Vermont and neighboring states the Series has expanded to include the two winter series, a Chamber Arts series, summer series, children's program and occasional "Lane Extras," concerts open on a first come-first served basis.

Although regular seating is by season-ticket only, admission to individual concerts is sometimes available through a service of Trevithick's office, which will put one-event ticket applicants in touch with season-ticket holders who do not plan to use their seat for a particular concert.

Ionesco's "Bald Soprano" Is Presented

Members and friends of the Department of Romance Language will create Ionesco's "La Cantatrice Chauve" (The Bald Soprano) at the Arena Theatre on October 8 and 9 at 8:30 p.m. The two performances figure as part of the Inauguration Ceremony of the new Maison Francaise which will be officially opened on Sunday, October 9.

Those appearing in the cast are: Jean-Pierre Lascoumes, Marie Geno, Malcolm Parker, Terry Comerford and Michel Mehu. The production is under the direction of Thomas Geno. The cooperation of Ed Fiedner and Bill Schenk of the Drama Department is making the presentation possible.

Anyone knowing the theatre of Ionesco knows that The Bald Soprano is a key work in the development of the dramatist. His obsession with the non-communicative capacity of man, his nightmarish vision of man's dehumanization and his ideas of the interchangeability of character are all present in this one play which created a major stir in theatrical circles when it was first presented in 1950.

Faculty and students are reminded that his new mounting of the play is open to the public. There is no admission charge.

Booters Beat UConn, Eye Rhody

By Ted Ryan

The University of Vermont soccer team will seek its second Yankee Conference victory Saturday, a week after the Cats decisively rocked league co-favorite Connecticut.

Coach Hal Grieg hopes his forces will be at top strength for Saturday's clash with the Rams. The 11 a.m. game will precede the football contest between UVM and URI.

"We don't know much about the Rams but we can expect a tough battle," Grieg said. "Last year they were primarily a junior and sophomore club."

The Catamounts were hampered by injuries to defensive backs in the resounding 4-1 win over U Conn. Bob Schroeder, who was in the infirmary prior to the U Conn game with muscle spasms in the back, played only

Fall Nine Goes 8-1

By Ted Ryan

A surprising showing by sophomore pitchers has boosted baseball coach Ralph LaPointe's hopes for a Yankee Conference title next spring.

"It was a pleasant surprise," LaPointe said as he singled out sophomore Terry O'Leary and Tom Suchanek for talented twirling during the past two weekends.

The Catamounts, boasting an 8-1 record, complete their season Saturday against Southeastern Massachusetts Tech Saturday at Centennial Field.

Mac Adams, another sophomore hurler, has turned in consistent performances and Charlie Brucato revealed talent with sharp pitching in spots. Brucato is also a sophomore.

These four talented pitchers combine with veteran moundmen Len Sheflott and Bruce Bovenizer to give the Cats an awesome pitching crew. With the addition of John McCord in the spring, who is not participating in the fall program, the UVM staff should be one of the best during the spring campaign.

LaPointe was forced to dip into the freshmen ranks to come up with a catcher after captain Rick Aldrich was sidelined with back injuries. And LaPointe was very surprised and pleased with the strong performance turned in by Dick Farrell.

"He's going to a good one. I am pleased with his aggressiveness, his desire to learn and his raw talent," the UVM coach stated.

Two other players, John Packard and O'Leary, suffered minor injuries during the past weekend. Packard has a shoulder separation and O'Leary pulled a hamstring muscle.

Bob Neild, who caught during the Dartmouth series, was commended for a good showing. LaPointe was also pleased with the hitting of O'Leary, the defensive ability of Dave LaPointe at shortstop, and the key-hitting and defensive play of Steve Kunken at third base.

"Our outfield is looking better with the hitting of Don Pitts and Dave Wayne," LaPointe added.

LaPointe said he feels the team is making good improvement in the fundamentals of base running, relays and cutoffs. He added that the daily practices are not compulsory but noted attendance is nearly 100 per cent. "It shows these boys play for the love of the game," he said.

LaPointe has been ably assisted by Jim Cross and Bill Christie. "They both have been very helpful in keeping everybody busy at the practices," the baseball mentor concluded.

part of the game.

"He did a very good job considering the injury he had," the Cats soccer mentor said.

Peter Myer, a key player in the Vermont defense, was sidelined with a case of the flu.

Grieg was extremely delighted with his team's showing despite the heavy downpour which prevailed throughout the contest. Both the Cats and U Conn missed numerous scoring openings in the first half but Grieg attributed the lack of sharpshooting to the condition of the field and the ball.

"It has to be called a team effort. There were just no individual standouts," Grieg said of the win.

Pete Baldwin opened the UVM scoring with a low hard shot into the corner at the 15:45 mark of the first period. He then teamed with Jack Semler to provide two more Vermont scores in the second half. Semler took two passes from Baldwin and rammed both shots into the nets in the third period.

Baldwin, who had a hand in all the scoring, racked up the final tally after Connecticut cut the lead to 3-1. Jeff Taft intercepted a Huskie pass and booted the ball to Baldwin who drove in on the U Conn goalie all alone.

The Vermonters will be relying on the aggressive offense and stingy defense for its second Yankee Conference victory against the Rams. Last year the Rams almost upended the Cats, dropping a 4-3 decision.

FROSH NIP NORWICH

A strong offense and a solid defense in the first game of the season indicate that the 1966 freshman soccer team has plenty of potential talent on its roster.

The Kittens nipped Norwich in their opener a week ago, 2-1, but statistics indicate that the junior Cadets were outplayed.

The Kittens will travel to St. Lawrence for a game Saturday.

Freshman coach Bob Stone indicated pleasure with the performance his team turned in against the Northfield unit.

Jon Poljacik, Bob Greene, Carlo Tonelli and Kevin Austin, all of Proctor, each played sharp games. Charles Goodrich of Pittsfield, Mass., and George Peterson Ridgewood, N.J., were singled out as other strong starters while Brian Rivers of Brandon impressed Stone with his play. Rivers was used in reserve to fill in several positions during the course of the game.

Cats Face Big URI Club At Kingston

THE INSIDER

Revenge, oh sweet revenge!

And it was just that after Vermont defeated the University of Connecticut Saturday in the pouring rain. The satisfaction that was wanted but not present, spoken of 2 weeks ago, was in its full glory after the victory. The background to all this?

It seemed Connecticut did not take Vermont football seriously, judging from what the Connecticut papers had printed. They claimed that defeating Springfield and A.I.C. proved nothing, and considered the University of Vermont, which is the smallest of the New England State Universities as compared with Connecticut which is the largest, a soft spot in their rugged schedule. Because this was the first meeting between the 2 schools in 33 years, neither really knew what to expect. The press favored Connecticut as did just about everybody in the Connecticut and surrounding area. It was obvious that Vermont lacked respect down there and this was the one thing Head Coach Bob Clifford set out to attain.

Connecticut is a very good team. In fact one source rated them equal with Massachusetts. They seemed to think so, but their swaggering cockiness had a hand in their downfall. Infuriated by clippings the coaches posted on the locker room bulletin board, the scrappy Catamounts went down to the badlands of the south where the Connecticut Huskies is bred, and taught them a lesson that will not be soon forgotten. This is what made it so sweet.

This first half went exactly to the Vermont game plan and caused the coaches to agree that it was the best half of Vermont football since Bob Clifford has been here. The turning point in the game occurred about 5 minutes into the third quarter when Bob Mitchell had a sparkling T.D. run called back. The Vermont offense sputtered and Connecticut suddenly came to life. It was the defense now that had to meet the challenge of Connecticut's ferocious assault.

It seemed the main power play Connecticut had was an end sweep, and caused one player to nervously comment that they throw everything but the kitchen sink around the corner. This reporter agrees, because going into the last quarter they had run over him so often they made him feel like part of the football field. Connecticut tried desperately to get an air attack going but the alert secondary had their men covered like a blanket.

Things were tense right down to the last minutes of play when finally on fourth down the Vermont defensive line crashed through and dropped the passer, thus causing Connecticut to relinquish the ball for the last time. The next and last series of downs was interesting. Several Catamounts rubbed salt into the Huskie wounds. One player kept repeating what the papers said about a soft spot, and ignited a small fire for all on the field. Another who was challenged by a Huskie said, "Hey, I don't want to fight. We already won the game." It resulted in a Connecticut penalty of 15 yards. After the clock ticked off the last seconds of the game, the stunned Huskies retreated to their locker room with their tails between their legs.

ECAC Golf Here

by Mick Kropsky

The University of Vermont varsity golf team traveled to Canada last weekend to participate in a seven team tournament at the Champlain Country Club in the outskirts of Montreal. With rain coming down and a strong wind blowing, scores soared in the first round held on Friday. Lloyd Hier was low man for UVM in this round with a respectable 83. Art Shields followed with an 89, while the rest of the UVM squad was in the low 90's. Meanwhile the Canadian players accustomed to playing under these inclement weather conditions were, for the most part, getting better scores than their neighbors from across the border.

The next day the weather had cleared and it proved to be a different story for the UVM golfers. Bobby Nadler, who had shot a 91 the day before, came in with a 75. Joe Donnelly followed Nadler with a 77. Lloyd Hier continued to play good golf and shot an 80. Just behind Hier were Art Shields and Nick Van Tassel with 84's. Saturday's fine play by UVM was good enough to give Coach J. Edward Donnelly's linkmen a fourth place in the tournament.

just behind Sir George Williams, M.I.T., and Carlton.

UVM golfers are home this weekend for a match with Brandeis University and the E.C.A.C. tournament. The two top teams and the top ten individuals in the E.C.A.C. event will qualify to go and play in New York City on October 21 and 22. Both events this weekend will be held at the Burlington Country Club.

FOX NAMED

Jim Fox, end coach of the University of Vermont football team, has been named freshman hockey coach, it was announced Wednesday (Sept. 28) by Athletic Director J. Edward Donnelly.

In addition to being a football ace at Colby under Bob Clifford, Fox was also an ice standout, serving as captain of the 1960 Colby hockey team.

While at Vermont, Fox has been working towards his M.E. He graduated from Colby in 1960.

He was varsity football and wrestling coach at Winslow, Me., High School and Waterville, Me., High School before coming to UVM as freshman coach in 1965.

He is married and the father of three daughters and a son.

Mitchell Sets Rushing Mark In UConn Win

By George Passage

The University of Vermont football team will be out to try to make it three in a row this weekend when they take on the University of Rhode Island at Kingston. Both teams are 1-0 in Conference play and a win means a lot to both teams. Rhode Island polished off UNH 17-6 for its Conference victory while Vermont up-ended U Conn 14-10. Since coming to UVM Coach Clifford has a 24-10 record with 21 victories in the last 26 games.

Last year Vermont trimmed Rhode Island 26-6 and even though many of last year's squad has departed (Rhode Island has 33 sophomores on the 46 man squad this year) the team is out for revenge. The Cats lead the series with the Rams 5 wins to 4 but fourth year coach Jack Zilly has his young gridders eagerly awaiting the forces of coach Bob Clifford. Clifford will be out to make it four in a row over the Rhode Island eleven.

Promising sophomore quarterback Larry Gaswell and Tom Fay will do the signal calling for the big Rams Saturday. The other sophomores who are headed for action are 225 pound fullback Owen McEntee and 215 pound tackle Ben Kelly. R.L. also has a fine passing attack this year to compliment its bruising ground game.

Attempting to halt the offensive minded Rams will be UVM's stingy defensive platoon which has allowed only 11 points

And in the Vermont locker room.... Pandemonium. For many it was their most satisfying victory, but when the elation calmed down after 45 minutes, the Cats were reminded that Rhode Island was waiting in the wings for next week and itching to defeat Vermont for the first time in 5 years.

But, that sweet revenge.

Bob Mitchell

Mitchell Named YC

Back of The Week

Amherst - Vermont halfback Bob Mitchell (Bridport, Vt.), Maine defensive end Charles MacDonald (Augusta, Me.) and Rhode Island fullback Brent Kaufman (New York, N.Y.) have been selected as the Yankee Conference offensive, defensive and sophomore standouts of last Saturday's games.

Mitchell carried 32 times for 167 yards in Vermont's 14-10 win over Connecticut. In leading the Catamounts to their second straight win Mitchell established a new Vermont rushing record.

MacDonald, a junior, was switched last week from linebacker to defensive end. He turned in a stellar performance as Maine edged Bucknell, 7-6. Several times he broke through to nail the Bucknell quarterback for substantial losses.

Kaufman, a sophomore fullback, was Rhode Island's workhorse in the 17-6 win at New Hampshire. Kaufman netted 78 yards in 23 attempts to set up the Rams' scoring opportunities.

Catamount defense closes in on U. Conn. quarterback Gruner in last weeks game.

per games this season. The defensive backfield of Leo Pfeiffer, Bill Leete, and Bill Lawrence, who all had great game against U Conn, should give Rhody's sophomore quarterbacks plenty to think about. Captain Bill Van Bennekum anchors the defensive line consisting of Big John Gurrieri, Bill Dorozenski, Joe Soldano and Don Nelson. Joe Soldano continued to split the uprights on point after touch attempts making both tries Saturday. Soldano now has 31 points in 33 career attempts. Defensive linebackers Bill Wolff, Steve Vukovich and Colin Hurd are always in the right place at the right time.

Commenting on last Saturday's game at U Conn, Coach Clifford said the team got off to the best start of any team since he took over as head coach. This comment was obviously prompted by the outstanding job turned in by the offensive eleven in the half.

Special recognition must go to linemen Dave Martin, Jim Sullivan and Jeff Kuhman for their tremendous line play. Kuhman also caught a TD pass from junior quarterback, Dave Shumate, Shumate, recovered from a hip injury, called a great game. The other touchdown was a six yard scamper by Dick Herbert. The three linemen previously mentioned plus Dave Capman, Bill Crudo and Dave Lucaroni opened holes in the U Conn defense all afternoon enabling Bob Mitchell to pile up 167 yards on the ground. This erases All-New England halfback Ken Burton's record of 150 yards in one game set in the 1962 campaign. Mitchell also carried the ball 32 times thus breaking his own mark set against AIC this year. In the first two games of the season Mitchell has carried the ball 60 times for 298 yards and it appears that more records loom in the future.

FROSH WIN

The freshman football team, sparked by the leadership of quarterback Frank Mazanec offensively, and back Bob Shookus defensively, defeated the Norwich plebes at Centennial Field last Friday by a 16-8 score.

Mazanec passed 7 yards to flanker Pete Anderson for the first score with halfback Harry Canning going one yard for the other TD. Gene Monahan kicked one extra point and an 18-yard field goal. Shookus came up with two interceptions and numerous other defensive gems.

The next game for the Kittens will be at home against Bridgton Academy on October 14.

Fuzzy Evans Cited

John (Fuzzy) Evans, the former University of Vermont basketball coach who retired in 1965, is one of five college basketball coaches recently named to the Helms Hall College basketball Hall of Fame in Los Angeles, a internationally known sports shrine.

Evans, who was replaced by Art Loche as UVM coach, will have his name developed upon the Hall of Fame trophy.

The other coaches honored included Ben Carnevale of Navy and Forrest Twogood of Idaho and USC. Six outstanding all-Americans, including Bob Pettit, Cliff Hagan, Dave DeBusschere, John Rudometkin, and Cazzie Russell, will also be inducted into the Hall of Fame.

Harriers

The University of Vermont varsity cross country team will open its 1966 season, once again under the guidance of Archie Post, Saturday (Oct. 8) at Williamstown, Mass., against RPI and host Williams College.

Post remarked that he is "quite concerned with the condition of the boys after the long summer layoff." A couple of the boys came back in fairly good shape, after working out on their own during the summer months.

Renier Chaintreuil, a senior from Pittsford, N.Y. is the 1966 captain. Chaintreuil will be one of the top runners for Post this fall along with sophomore Ralph Coleman and junior Wilmont Howard. Coleman hails from South Londonderry, and Howard is from Brattleboro.

Peter Jones, a junior from Basking Ridge, N.J., has been hampered with a toe injury and it has been slow coming around. However, Coach Post says he should be ready for the opening meet.

The question plaguing Post is the fifth man for Vermont... it could be Paul Aldinger, a veteran runner from Jericho, or Sid Young, a senior from Lyndonville.

There are a lot of problems facing Post, but it should prove to be an interesting campaign. Post says, "if a number five man comes through I could have the most balanced squad I have had in the past three or four years." The first home meet is Homecoming Weekend against the Black Bears of Maine, Oct. 15.

Car Crashes Into Allen House

(Credit: Burlington Free Press)

An Essex Junction sheet metal worker, James Moore, Jr., 22, of 134 Pearl St., suffered facial and head cuts early Thursday when his sedan was demolished as it slammed into Allen House, a University of Vermont dormitory at Main and South Prospect Streets.

Moore was pulled from the wreckage and taken by police cruiser to a hospital for treatment.

Police said Moore failed to negotiate a curve at Main Street and University Place at 1:08 a.m., jumped a curbing and crossed the college green.

The 1966 sedan then sideswiped a tree, continued across Main Street and plunged into and under the porch of the girls' dorm.

Impact ripped up the flooring and all roof supports were moved and cracked, causing the porch to sag.

A maintenance department spokesman at the university said the damage was estimated at $500.

Formal Dance-Football Highlight Weekend

Homecoming, 1966 is here. Tonight, the ball, complete with two bands, a name performer, and the announcement of a Homecoming Queen. Tomorrow a football game and parties.

Tonight, the ball. The music has been provided by not one, but two bands: Bert Orr's Orchestra, a familiar name to upperclassmen, and the Sprites, a rock and roll band from Boston. A name performer, the world famous; Dionne Warwick, singing hits such as: "Walk On By," "You'll Never Get To Heaven If You Break My Heart" and "Message to Michael," has been enjoyed by all. And the King and Queen of Homecoming, they too have been announced, complete with court and crowns.

Tomorrow, a football game. UVM's opponent will be the University of New Hampshire. Of course a victory is expected, although the game should be a good one. Saturday night, naturally, there will be parties.

The junior honoraries, headed by William Libreria and Sand Wyne have taken extensive steps toward making this year's Homecoming, for which they are responsible, a golden success.

The chief contributors are: Bill Machanic, Mimi Vogt, Ball; Bill Vannatten, Judy Anderson, Half-time; Marilyn Telf, Dave Coletti, Poster; Vern Kellogg, Nancy Gear, Publicity; Eric Stuppi, Brenda Goodsell, Tickets; Bob Bloomenthal, Mibs Taylor, King and Queen; and Jean Bain, Finance.

The chairmen, along with the Pep Committee, cheerleaders, Charlie Catamount, and the UVM band will escort the King and Queen from Ira Allen Chapel to Centennial Field, scene of Saturday's game with New Hampshire.

At half-time the King and Queen will each receive a trophy, a final souvenir of their reign. The Greek winner of the poster competition will be honored at this time, as will the alumnus or alumna who has traveled the longest distance.

The existence of such an award shows the significance of the American Homecoming tradition of the loyalty to one's college ties.

HOMECOMING WEEKEND

Parents and alumni will visit the campus the weekend of Oct. 14-16 for Homecoming, when a high point will be the varsity football game against New Hampshire at 1:30 p.m. on Saturday at Centennial Field.

Alumni will register at Alumni House from 9 a.m. until noon on Saturday. Coffee will be served. The alumnus who has traveled the farthest for Homecoming will be presented with a blanket, during the game's half time. The King and Queen will be introduced at this time.

Writers, Editors, Visit UVM

Last week, a group of about 25 writers and editors visited the University of Vermont as part of a tour of New England's six state universities. Vermont was the fifth stop on the New England tour for the writers, members of the Education Writers Association.

As might be imagined, they were impressed with the beauty of our campus. More important, several commented that the faculty and staff they met and talked with here were the most candid they had met on the tour; and most of the writers said they were particularly impressed with the students they met here - the group had lunch with a sampling of student leaders selected by Student Association President Jim Fontanella.

Perhaps best of all - many of the writers commented that they encountered "a spirit" at Vermont which they had not encountered elsewhere, something which they said set apart Vermont as a special university.

It might be added that the writers indicated that they were generally very favorably impressed by New England's other state universities. Their tour began at the University of Connecticut, and included the Universities of Rhode Island, New Hampshire and Maine prior to the Vermont stop. It ended over the weekend with a visit to the University of Massachusetts. The tour was arranged through the public relations offices of the six universities, with Wallace Moreland, assistant to the president at the University of Connecticut serving as chairman.

Cola Longacre prepares to give blood at recent blood drive. (Credit: Rochester, SPS)

685 Pints

Record Set in Blood Drive

Six hundred and eighty-five pints of blood were donated by members of the university community and surrounding locale during the three day blood drive sponsored by the Ethan Allen Rifles. The new record set for the Vermont-New Hampshire area seems to be typical of the trend over the recent years, as each year the total rises to a new high. We can't attribute the success to any specific group. The student nurses gave a lot of their time, not only helping the regular nurses, but in registering, typing, and serving coffee and donuts. The members of the Ethan Allen Rifles donated an equal amount of time with publicity, recruitment, and maintenance. The important time given, however, was by the students themselves - the hour or so that it took to give a pint of blood. The members of the Ethan Allen Rifles would like to thank all of those who gave for making the blood drive successful.

What Is Un-American?

Are you Un-American? Is UVM Un-American? Is it Un-American to Protest the War in Vietnam? Just what is Un-American, anyway?

These and other questions will be discussed next Friday night by a spokesman for the National Committee to Abolish the House Un-American Activities Committee at Encounter Coffee House at 8:30 p.m. in St. Anselm's Chapel Building. This will mark the second time this semester that Encounter Coffee House has been open.

Mr. Henry Berger of the History Department will introduce the speaker, Mr. Arnold Lockshin, of Cambridge, Massachusetts.

The National Committee to Abolish H.U.A.C. been trying, so far with only moderate success, to stir up opposition to HUAC's continuation and activities. Mr. Lockshin is a veteran opponent of HUAC, having participated in the Anti-HUAC demonstrations in San Francisco in 1960, while a student at University of California. (It was these demonstrations which the controversial film "Operation Abolition" suggested were "Communist-led.")

Mr. Lockshin's itinerary includes talks at other Vermont colleges during next week before his arrival at UVM on Friday.

SAMA Grants Loans

Medical students at the University of Vermont recognize the occasional dire need of their fellow students for an emergency loan.

Results: the Student American Medical Association has given $500 to set up an emergency loan fund to answer this need.

Steven Fireston recently presented a check for that amount to Medical College Dean Robert J. Slater.

Marston Club Features Yeats

A week of readings, a panel discussions, exhibits, lectures, and a play will salute poet W.H.

Auden at the University of Vermont Oct. 21-28. The program, which is free and open to the public, is the second literary program offered by the Frederic C. Marston, Jr. Graduate English Club; last year's was a week of tribute to William Butler Yeats.

Friday and Saturday (Oct. 21-22) the University Players will present "The Age of Anxiety" by Auden at 8:30 p.m. in the Arena Theatre, Fleming Museum.

The following Sunday (Oct. 23) the noted novelist Rex Warner, professor of English at the University of Connecticut, will discuss Auden's "Selected Poetry" at 8 p.m. in the Waterman Lower Lounge.

On Tuesday (Oct. 25) students will present readings from Auden's poetry at 8 p.m. in the Votey Auditorium.

The program will conclude Friday (Oct. 28) at the Marsh Room, Billings Center, with a panel discussion on "Achievement of W.H. Auden." Coffee will be served.

During the week a collection of Auden manuscripts will be on exhibit in the special collections room of the Bailey Library.

All events are free and open to the public.

The club was formed in the fall of 1965 and was named in honor of Dr. Marston who died the same year after teaching English at Vermont since 1948.

Officers for the coming year elected at a recent meeting are: Phillip Sheridan of Winooski, president; Linda J. Knight of Springfield, secretary; Majorie V. Zeuch of Burlington, social chairman; Ghita Picoff of South Burlington, program chairman; Hayward B. Crewe of Burlington, treasurer; Dr. Robert W. Caswell of Shelburne, professor of English, faculty advisor.

Full Program Planned For Parents Weekend

FOOTBALL GAME: Parents are cordially invited to attend the 1:30 p.m. football game between the University of Vermont and the University of Massachusetts at Centennial Field.

REFRESHMENTS AND MUSIC AT MUSEUM: Light refreshments (to help tide you over until our fashionably late dinner) will be served in the Fleming Museum from 4:30 to 5:45 p.m. It is our plan to have pleasant background music, and the Museum will have two special exhibits in addition to its standing exhibits - one on the drawings and sculpture of Edwin Oware, one on early Chicago architecture.

PANEL OF DEANS: 6 to 7:30 p.m. Southwick Ballroom. The deans of the undergraduate colleges have been invited to serve on a panel to discuss Academic Stresses as They Affect Stu-

Immediately following President Rowell's address, Family Associates President William Cronin will discuss the accomplishments of the Association and their plans for the future.

EDITORIAL

Since this is Homecoming weekend and there are, no doubt, a good number of alumni visiting, we feel obligated to let them know what sort of university they have come home to. Using "The Cynic" as our point of departure, it has become bitterly apparent that the weaknesses of this newspaper are inherent in the very nature of the university itself.

This is not a very good newspaper you are reading now. Just ask any of the "sidewalk superintendents" who populate this campus. They'll tell you. But just to show you that they are not totally lacking in social interest we are certain they will add that they feel someone ought to do something about the situation. The point is that "The Cynic's" shortcomings are symptomatic of a legacy of mediocrity which prevades every non-scholastic aspect of life at this institution.

We find thoroughly inexplicable the dichotomy which has arisen here between the academic and the intellectual. This is a university which is uncompromising in the high standards it applies both to its student body and its faculty. This is, further, a university whose students are highly future-oriented and thus scholastically ambitious. Yet, this is a university where this scholastic achievement is not accompanied by a commensurate intellectual involvement in the form of extra-curricular commitments. It is a university whose faculty and unendurable overburdened and grossly underpaid, despite the fact that it is one of the most expensive state schools in the nation. And, it is a university where irate students write caustic, yet well-written letters to the editor, expressing their disgust with the poor quality of their campus newspaper, yet cannot find the time to put their literary talents to work for the paper instead of against it.

We can only conclude reluctantly that this is a university which is over-priced and intellectually undernourished, one whose students are fervently committed to the pursuit of grades, rather than to action and thought. We conclude, further, that these are the sort of third-rate people who make this a second-rate university.

Sceptic Laughs At Self

To The Editors:

Congratulation to the Sceptic last week. He decided to cut up Greek Week but found much more to laugh at (and sneer at) in himself.

This should indicate that Greeks will be around long after the Sceptics have dissolved in their own bile, but maybe not.

I think even Greeks can laugh as the Sceptic prepares his own immolation by fire (firewater??) - Buddhist - monk just as long as he doesn't use Greek Gasoline. (chopped liver?)
David E. Lambert '67

A New Sceptic?

To The Editors:

Congratulations, you have hit yet another new nadir in university journalism! In reference to last week's "sceptic", I have yet to read such a disjointed, poorly written collaboration of pseudo-intellectual bitterness. If the scepticizer has a complaint against the "camp" greek system at UVM, or an accusation of false "liberalism" on campus, or even dissatisfaction with the "left wing political group" running the school, then let him present his views in a more eloquent manner. But to discuss all the above (and more), and tack on the end still another stab at the Vietnam situation is something that surely only the most naive freshman would attempt in a short essay for English. Perhaps if the CYNIC is concerned with its generally accepted reputation as a third rate school newspaper, it might start remedying such by finding a new scepticizer. One with a little more ability and less of a chip on his shoulder might do for a start. But, if as I suspect, this suggestion isn't totally agreeable, you could at least get the present one to sign his name to his masterpiece of buffoonery, or will that omission be written off to your already overwhelmingly large amount of typographical errors?

Sincerely
Eric C. Bauer '68

Bad Relations Questioned

To The Editors:

Concerning your editorial of last week, I would be very interested in seeing you produce any evidence to support your conclusion that formerly "good" relations between UVM students and townspeople are now deteriorating.

Since this seems to be the best argument you could think of to back up a worthy but sickeningly unoriginal proposition, your editorial has all the catalytic effectiveness of a mug of warm, stale beer.

Cynically,

Blood Drive Success

To The Editors:

We would appreciate the use of your columns to extend our thanks to everyone at the University of Vermont who assisted in any way with the three-day blood drawing held at the Billings Center last week. The final total of 685 pints broke all previous UVM records.

The Ethan Allen Rifles, with Douglas Orvis as chairman of the project, did an outstanding job in planning the drawing and carrying out the many details involved. They, together with the scores of students who assisted our staff in processing the donors, have earned the thanks of untold numbers of hospital patients who will benefit from these blood transfusions.

We would also like to express our appreciation to Mr. David Bain, Coordinator of Student Activities and the Billings Center Student Governing Board. Our bloodmobile staff, along with everyone here at the Center, is convinced that the use of the Billings Center Lounge was a major factor in the success of the drawing.

Sincerely,
Edward R. Stearn
Administrator

Study Room Discussed

To The Editors:

As a brief reply to Mr. Berk's editorial in last week's CYNIC, we would like to inform him, as well as the rest of the student body, of the efforts which have been made to obtain increased study facilities in Billings.

The area above the apse is much too small to be either safe or comfortable for a study area. Appropriation of other areas of Billings presently being used as lounge or informal discussion areas would be in direct opposition to the Center's philosophy that Billings is primarily a student center and secondarily a study area. We could welcome any comment concerning this or any other issue.

Enlightens Sceptic

Editors' note: This letter is written to a columnist for the CYNIC and will be addressed to him.

My dear Mr. Sceptic:

I would like to enlighten your readers with a few facts which you obviously overlooked in your comments on The Greek Week Sing and fraternity parties.

Many people -- good, decent, intelligent people, worked very hard for the Greek Sing, and they enjoyed working hard because they like to sing. I realize that I am speaking to one of those eighteen-year-old literary whiz kids, but what I didn't realize was that he is also a greatly endowed musical critic. I assume you like to think of yourself as Vermont's answer to the Village Voice.

As for Walt Disney's "Wonderful World of Fraternity Parties," I can only agree wholeheartedly with your description. You have an uncanny grasp of the obvious.

Interestingly enough, I have, on occasion (in addition to attending Fraternity Parties) attended one of those more intimate functions usually consisting of people with more than "two thumbs." (Being the staunch individual that you are, this little allusion to stereotypes is employed for your sole enjoyment.)

For those of you readers less fortunate than I was who have never attended the superior un-stereotyped apartment party, (and for UVM's Earl Wilson) I can regretfully relate (and I'm sure our Elsa Maxwell will agree) that these happenings fit quite adequately into her description of Fraternity Parties, the only possible difference being that it cost these nouveau hippies a great deal more money to get stoned.

In closing, I would like to convey one small anecdote for the enjoyment of your vast following of unquestioning readers:

I can vividly remember one particular gathering I attended, for I was introduced to a fine spicemen of our adolescent society, who was in such a state that I could find nothing but PITY for him. As a matter of fact, he was the only boy I've ever seen who passed out standing up. Of course, he didn't tell me his name; he really didn't do much of anything. When I asked some people who he was, they just laughed and said, "Isn't he cute? He's a newspaper columnist, of philosopher, or poet, or plumber, or something."

Sincerely,
Timothy Hayes, '67

Bring "Professores" Back

Open Letter to UVM:

A few years ago there was a column in each week's CYNIC entitled "Professores". This column was written by a different faculty member each time and presented some opinion about students, the university, or any general topic.

This column no longer appears. It is a column, however, which very much should appear. A theory of education which assumes the professor or teacher is merely a slavemaster or figure to restate and emphasize facts from books is, of course, ridiculous on any seriously intellectual campus.

Professors supposedly have a calling to help people educate themselves, by stimulating, guiding, and encouraging them.

What better opportunity to do this at UVM on a large scale than through the CYNIC? I am sure our faculty is not boycotting the CYNIC from fear of a cynical student body.

I am sure the trite argument of student apathy can not excuse professors from presenting their beliefs; what better way could they think of to whip apathy out of town?

Can the CYNIC be at fault? I assume that copies of our paper are available to most faculty members. If this is not the case, it should be. I am sure the paper would print anything serious sent to it.

What, then, can everyone do? Professors and other faculty members: have opinions and dare to present them.

CYNIC: encourage, nay, solicit Professore columns from campus intelligentsia.

Students: if you hear any original, startling, or profound ideas in class, suggest to your professor (assuming they are his ideas) that they would be interesting to the whole student body.

OR DOESN'T ANYBODY DARE??

Sincerely,
Dick Matheson, '67

Sceptic Subversive?

To The Editors:

Who ever wrote that Sceptic article of October 7 (I believe it was Frodo Baggins) ought to be ashamed of himself. What's he trying to do, give the fraternity system at UVM a bad name? It sounds like the author was rejected by every fraternity on campus when he was a freshman and is now trying to get even by defacing the image of the whole system.

I too attended a Greek Week party, though I failed to see anything distasteful there as the author of the Sceptic did. I saw a bunch of fun-loving, clean-cut youths enjoying themselves after having a long week of arduous study. And the author's re-

SCEPTIC

By M. Minsky

Apparently I have upset several people - quite unintentionally. It seems that certain people in the administration were upset because in last week's Sceptic I seemed to imply there was -----ing at a Fraternity party. University specifically forbids -----ing at fraternity parties. However as the whole world knows there is quite a bit of -----ing at such parties. Officials are alarmed because they believe if any public printed word of -----ing is mentioned, they will be forced to do something about it. But if they do anything about it, the students will probably riot and comfortable apathy will be no more.

If one reads my column carefully one will discover that I did not say fraternity parties were -----ing parties. I simply stated that there were -----s present. I am quite sure that all -----ing was conducted outside the hours. Would a member of a fraternity burn his draft card? Would he violate any other law? The question hardly merits an answer.

The bizarre motions of the participants were due to the fact that they were indeed being stung by a swarm of wasps. Yet their spirit was such, their joie de vivre so great that they could not, nay, would not abandon their house or their party to the insects. I must also apologize for my scornfulness in listing various campus organizations. Outing Club, I am sorry.

The day after my article appeared a rather upset Greek approached me and said that he and his brothers had a big discussion and that while a few disagreed (they had not been able to hash things out) the consensus (watch that word) was that I would make it hard for Greeks to get dates for their parties because I implied that the only reason they asked girls was so that they could get -----. That is true. But they would only get ----- after the proper ceremonies. What fratman would be so crude so vulgar to ask out a girl not good enough to become his wife? And would he not treat her as a sister? It is a gross slander to imply that UVM students would father bastards. I think that pregnancy (and I apologize to those who will be offended by that word) can be caused by unclean doornobs.

This weekend is homecoming. I hope you all will help your house-mommies bake the oatmeal cookies and make the hot cocoa for your parties. In case you are interested the University Library has books which explain various party games - charades, musical chairs, etc.

QUOTE FOR THE WEEK

"Mary had a little -----"

diculous assumption that the fraternity males were trying to get "the females into bed" must show some sort of perversion on his part; after all, aren't fraternity members "brothers," and aren't sorority members "sisters?" It was like a little family fun affair, that's all. The idea of brothers and sisters going to bed is surely absurd, and undoubtedly immoral.

How, after all, could fraternities even exist on this campus if their functions were as purposeless and evil as the author insinuates they are? The administration surely wouldn't allow their presence unless they were physically intellectually and morally constructive. Would it? It seems to me that this Frodo Baggins is trying to perpetrate a hoax; an article such as he wrote is definitely subversive and wrong because it attempts to deface something which is already accepted as good. His talents are wasted here; he ought to be criticizing some of those free-love institutions such as Goddard, which everyone knows is bad. It would be right in line with the human sense of goodness and justice which is ingrained in the fraternity system if some angered (and justly so) members of the UVM fraternity system punished the author of that weeks Sceptic by beating him up. This would be an example for anyone else who might have intentions of defacing that which the majority accepts as good.

World Viewed As Childish

By K. Klonsky

To all those who say the world doesn't advance, I am one who takes exception. The world is now 12 years old. Psychologists describe 12 as "the difficult age, the age of transition."

The child reluctantly decides to part with his playthings and to start taking his role in society. He graduates from his neighborhood elementary school to the adoring sighs of the PTA. He is fearful of the coming year when he must attend Junior High School in a farther part of town. Yes, the umbilical cord finally breaks and Aunt Clara's cheek pinches provoke utter contempt. But the child does not break so suddenly and so completely.

The fights with his friends will continue for a few more years, the whining complaints will linger a while longer.

And the world is in the age of transition. Of course the world will be 12 years old for quite a few more human generations. But the violent tantrums are getting less attention and the world is beginning to pick his head up and see that he is responsible for what he himself does and that Mother Nature will not pick up the mess he leaves strewn around.

And he's beginning to see that other people have feelings just like himself and these feelings are not to be disregarded. And he's beginning to understand that people are not tools and slaves for his own ends. The world has not stopped fighting yet but he's at the age where it's beginning to make him look foolish, win or lose.

After graduation from elementary school, say about the year 3000, the world will be bar mitzvahed to the ogling eyes of his inhabitants. The reception will be a glorious affair.

Beethoven will be piped from the solar system multiplex stereo and the great intellectual-spiritual communion will commence.

Picture it: 5 billion birth-controlled Earthlings singing to the Heavens in unison:
Seid Umshlungen, Millionen!
Diesen Kuss der ganzen Welt!
Bruder! über'm Sternenzelt
Muss ein L'ieber Vater-Whonen,
Freude, Schöner Gotterfunken
Tochter aus Elysium,
Allah be praised! Adolescence has come at last.

Placement Barometer

By Douglas O. Hanau, Director UVM Placement Service

THE CLASS OF 1966 IN REVIEW. For the fifth consecutive year now, your Co-Editors and Staff of The CYNIC have been kind enough to allow me to talk with you through the medium of this column on various subjects pertaining to your career and vocational plans. If you are looking for a witty column or a smart commentary on campus life, I commend you to read others in this newspaper who are more agile with the uncommon word than myself. On the other hand, if you are interested in learning more about changing job opportunities for today's college graduate; shifts in manpower trends; financing a graduate education; three dimensional career planning for women; and other related topics perhaps significant to your post-graduate plans, then I cordially invite you to become a weekly reader and hope that the subject matter and announcements will prove to be of interest.

To sum up briefly, for the UVM Class of 1966, last year was wild in recruiting circles. I am pleased to report that 67% of last year's total graduating class registered and made some use of your Placement Office. This is the greatest percentage of the senior class working with our Staff since the Placement Office became centralized in 1962. Even more remarkable is the fact that 82% of last year's senior women registered with the Placement Office as contrasted with 33% of the Senior women from the Class of 1962.

I think it is significant that despite articles in Newsweek, Time, Fortune, and The Wall Street Journal which state that the Class of 1966 was not interested in Business and Industry, that some 40% of our UVM Class of 1966 men entered various beginning jobs and training programs from among the 56% of the Senior men registered. There is no question that Viet Nam and the rush to graduate school has had a serious impact on manpower planning. I am told by a number of Chemical Companies that hiring a good BA/BS chemist is more difficult in 1966 than recruiting some Ph.Ds.

Salaries in 1966 showed a modest increase with Liberal Arts making a substantial gain. Following are some yearly average starting salaries for our UVM Class of 1966: Home Economics (Clothing & Textiles) $6,000; Home Economics (General) $4,589; Accounting $6,039; Industrial Management $7,016; Marketing $6,274; Liberal Arts (General) $6,113; Chemistry $7,920; Economics $6,800; Education (General) $5,400; Civil Engineers $7,294; Electrical Engineers $7,965; Mechanical Engineers $7,880; and Medical Technologists $5,645. I have only cited a few of our majors and if you are interested in a more complete breakdown you may consult our 1966 Annual Report. Regardless of the salaries being offered, it is apparent that opportunities were never more plentiful for the Class of 1966 and I see no change for the Class of 1967.

With essentially three Campus Interview Programs being run, i.e., Graduate Schools, Technical and Non-Technical - Seniors and Graduate Students took some 2,064 interviews for a new record. It is further worth noting that we had 113 employers representing Business and Industry; 14 Federal Agencies; 8 State Agencies; 35 School Systems, and 10 Graduate Schools visit the Placement Office to interview the Class of 1966.

To say that it was a successful year is an understatement and I would like to take this opportunity to thank our Faculty and Staff, the Employers, and most certainly the Class of 1966 for making the year a truly memorable one.

Looking ahead to 1967, I can only hope that this year's Senior Class will register, interview, and take advantage of the upcoming Placement Programs to be offered. For this Department is essentially your Department, in that we are interested in seeing you realize your post-graduate plans. To each of you my best wishes in the months ahead and I hope you will stop by the Placement Office and get acquainted.

"La Cantatrice Chauve"- A Hit

By Carolyn Seigel

Those people who enjoy and appreciate Eugene Ionesco were given an opportunity to witness a fine production of his play "La Cantatrice Chauve" at Arena Theater, Saturday and Sunday nights. The play was performed by several members of the French Department, in French.

"La Cantatrice Chauve," perhaps better known here as "The Bald Soprano," is one of Ionesco's most famous plays as well as one of his most absurd.

It deals with the lack of communication between people, even those as close as husband and wife, and the futility of trying to make oneself understood.

The cast, all amateurs, performed admirably. Special mention should go to M. Michel Mehu, who played the part of Mr. Smith. This was the first time m. mehu has acted. The actors were natural and spontaneous, and looked like they were having as much fun as the audience.

The influences of M. Thomas Geno, as director, were obvious and welcome. Mr. Geno, also, acted as the narrator, capitalizing on many humorous moments in the play.

"La Cantatrice Chauve" was presented last week-end in conjunction with the inauguration of Slade Hall as La Maison Française on the campus.

Lane Series Extra

Munich Chamber Orchestra Appearing Saturday

By Judy Beeber

Appearing on the second Lane Extra of the season will be The Munich Chamber Orchestra to be seen on Saturday, Oct. 15, at 8:30 p.m. in the Ira Allen Chapel.

The Munich Chamber Orchestra is one of Europe's most distinguished chamber orchestras, comprising fifteen virtuoso string instrumentalists conducted by Hans Stadlmair. The orchestra's repertoire includes old masters, Baroque, classical music and contemporary works.

The orchestra was formed in 1950 under the direction of Christopher Stepp, but since 1956 has been under the direction of Hans Stadlmair. Besides the yearly subscription series in Munich, their tours have taken them to the concert halls and festivals not only over Europe but also to Africa, South and Central America. These tours together with their many recordings on the Deutsche Grammophon Gesellschaft label have earned the orchestra international fame. This season's tour marks their first tour in North America.

Hans Stadlmair, conductor of the orchestra, started as a violinist and violist with both the Vienna Staatsoper and Vienna Symphony while continuing training as conductor. Maestro Stadlmair proved himself a great composer as well as conductor, by receiving in 1962 the music prize of the City of Linz, and in 1963 the prize of the City of Stuttgart for his Violin Concerto.

On Oct. 15, the orchestra will play many great classical pieces such as Joseph Haydn's "Divertimento in F major," Hugo Wolf's "Italian Serenade," Felix Mendelssohn's "Concerto for Violin and String Orchestra."

Smothers Brothers Perfect

By K. Klonsky

On the night of Wednesday, October 5, the Smothers Brothers appeared as a Lane Series extra. This college-oriented, folk-satire group proceeded to delight a receptive gathering at Patrick Gymnasium.

To satirize an institution like folk-singing a performer or group must first demonstrate their own talent in the chosen field. Pleasantly enough, the Smothers Brothers have remarkable singing talent and this fact, more than any other, is the major reason for their success. They could excel as a straight folk group but they break up the house with their comedy.

The humor of this group goes from the cut and harmless to the mildly risqué and the pin-prick. The satire of the folk song "John Henry" falls in the former category. Tom Smothers cannot understand how a three month old baby could say "hammer gonna be the death of me." The latter type humor occurs when Tom Badgers Dick: "Do you know the Jewish people?" Dick, after hedging, finally answers in the negative, to which Tom replies, "Watch it!" Or when Tom describes scenic Burlington as the place with "the beautiful golden leaves that you can't see because of the goddamn rain," Tom spices their song, "We Are Marching to Pectoria," with "grab your partner, by the hand that is," and "I'll sleep with you, you'll sleep with me, and so we will (whistles) together."

The Smothers Brothers are the perfect group for a college performance. A terrific audience, in size, enthusiasm, and politeness sparked the songful humorists to a top-notch show.

Martha Graham Brilliant

By Susan Bowman

The Lane Artist Series opened its 1966-67 Season with a performance that fulfilled our expectations more than adequately. The Martha Graham Company is known internationally for its contributions to the field of dance and the dancers appearing Monday night lived up to their reputation. They were above all brilliant technicians. Each dancer was an accomplished individual performer, but no individual demanded more attention than any other. There was an apparent harmony in the group that is so often missing in dance troupes. Also pleasant to note was the precision of the group. The Graham dancers were thoroughly rehearsed; throughout the performance not one careless or sloppy group sequence was evident. Such precision is not always the case with modern dance groups, particularly so early in the concert season.

The first of three dances, "Embattled Garden," was the least satisfying. Dancers executed movements but genuine life

Engineers, Mathematicians: Contribute to Technical Programs of National Significance

Creating secure communications systems and equipments unknown anywhere else. This is the mission of the National Security Agency—a mission which in turn creates problems of a high order of difficulty, requiring an uncommon amount of ingenuity.

There is no other organization like it... no other organization doing the same important work, or offering the same wealth of opportunity for imaginative graduates in mathematics or the engineering sciences.

A separate agency operating within the defense establishment, NSA has a critical requirement for:

ENGINEERS. To carry out basic and applied research, design, development, testing and evaluation of large-scale cryptocommunications and EDP systems. Engineers may also participate in related studies of electromagnetic propagation, upper atmosphere phenomena, super-conductivity and cryogenics using the latest equipment for advanced research within the Agency's fully instrumented laboratories. Career programs are designed to develop the professional engineer for a full and satisfying future in research or management.

MATHEMATICIANS. To define, formulate and solve complex communications-related problems in support of the NSA mission. Statistical mathematics, matrix algebra, finite fields, probability, combinatorial analysis, programming and symbolic logic are but a few of the tools applied by Agency mathematicians. They enjoy the full support of NSA's completely equipped computer laboratory where many of them often become involved in both the hardware and software of advanced computing systems. Theoretical research is also a primary concern at NSA, owing to the fact that the present state of knowledge in certain fields of mathematics is not sufficiently advanced to satisfy NSA requirements.

CAREER BENEFITS

With NSA, you enjoy all the benefits of Federal employment without the necessity of Civil Service certification.

NSA's generous graduate study program permits you to pursue two semesters of full-time graduate study at full salary with academic costs paid by NSA. The Agency also encourages participation in professional associations and assists you to attend national meetings, seminars, and conferences.

Located between Washington and Baltimore, NSA is also near the Chesapeake Bay, ocean beaches and other summer and winter recreation areas. The location permits your choice of city, suburban or country living.

Starting salaries, depending on education and experience, range from $7,729 to $12,873. Check now with your Placement Office to arrange an interview with the NSA representative visiting your campus, or write to: Chief, College Relations Branch, Suite 10, 4435 Wisconsin Avenue, N. Open House Held at La Maison Francaise

By Margaret Crane

La Maison Francaise held its formal inauguration on Sunday, Oct. 9. President Rowell and the Cultural Attache of the French Embassy in New York, Monsieur Edouard Moro-Sir, were honored guests and speakers.

University officials, members of the French Department, residents of La Maison, parents, friends, and faculty of several near by colleges were present. The day's program included an open house, speeches, and the ribbon cutting ceremony by President Rowell and Monsieur Moro-Sir.

President Rowell surprised many of those present by making his speech in French. He spoke about the co-operation that it had taken to organize La Maison. Monsieur Moro-Sir spoke about the importance of such a place to promote the friendship of the French and American intellectual communities. Mme. Geno, Directress of La Maison, presented the speakers and Mlle. Monique Soubes, head resident of the dormitory. Mme. Geno made it well understood that La Maison was not only to be a French speaking residence hall, but a center for French activities for all persons at the university, in Burlington, and at neighboring colleges.

The mild weather on Sunday made the outdoor portion of the ceremony very pleasant. Those present all seemed to enjoy the festive atmosphere. The "Open House" enabled residents to guide their guests through the entire dormitory. They appeared quite proud to exhibit the 24 single rooms, and many of the other homelike conveniences of Slade Hall, La Maison Francaise.

was lacking. A second number entitled "Secular Play" was much more rewarding. "Play on a Socratic Island," that is play with thought, was its first theme. The movements were beautifully symmetrical and measured. Static groupings of dancers became balanced forms. Sudden geometrical patterns emerged among the bodies of the moving dancers. A ball was rhythmically tossed among men like a dialogue. Also interesting was the Utopian dream play which followed. Movements were swift and delicate like the rapid play of dreams across the mind. The short sequences of which this part was composed were as lovely and fragmentary as dreams. On all three parts of "Secular Play" the dancing was excellent.

Unfortunately the major piece, "Legend of Judith," was not as successful. It had a superb choreographer, director and a good actress; Martha Graham is no longer the great dancer she has been. The title role Judith could have been a fine part but it never became more than an excuse to put Miss Graham on the stage. The role of Judith was a lost opportunity. Fine dancing by a vital young troupe emphasized the shortcoming. Mary Hinkson, Bertram Ross and several unnamed male dancers deserve mention for their performances. One other defect in "Judith" was the over-abundance of costume and movable scenery. Judith's costume changes frequently drew attention away from other dancers. Their movements in turn began to look like an excuse to cover Judith's changes. At other times portable scenery and billowing sleeves obscured the dancer's movements.

In general the Monday evening performance was of highest quality.

Pianist-humorist Displayed His Many Facets

By K. Klonsky

The amazing Victor Borge returned to Burlington on Monday night and he has not changed a bit. This is good news for any Borge fans as he has long reigned as one of the great masters of the entertainment business.

Borge is three men in one: the clown, the satirist and the pianist. As a clown he hammed it up about his heartburn from a Burlington restaurant, about the late arrivals in the audience, about a shaky bench and a chipped piano, and just about anything he could get his hands on. Leonid Hambro, concert pianist from the New York Philharmonic, played the foil to his jests. Borge and he frolicked through Liszt's Hungarian Rhapsody playing a game of musical pianos. They played one hand apiece on a Chopin nocturne. They joked through Tchaikovsky's Piano Concerto and the more they joked the more one wanted to listen. Through it all was heard beautiful music in snatches and one kept hoping that they would get serious and play a full piece without interruption.

As a satirist, Borge is something else. He got on the bandwagon and poked fun at LBJ and his Secret Service "Bird Watchers." He tore apart the pretentiousness of Aaron Copland and Leonard Bernstein. ("Bernstein recently interpreted Copland's music... for Copland.")

Finally, there is Borge the pianist. There can be no mistaking the vibrant quality of the tone he practically oozed out of the old Steinway. The ageless Dane is a quality artist of the highest order and this, more than anything, is why people love him. For when he finally settles down to play, one appreciates him the more. He joined with Hambro in the first movement of Rachmaninoff's First Piano Concerto, a piece that has gained great popularity of late. Borge succeeded in adding new dimension to the piece, the highest accomplishment a musician can make.

An unhealthy Lane Series audience was delighted by the whole affair, and rightly so. However, there was so much hacking and wheezing that one might have sworn he was at a benefit for a bronchitis ward. But through it all Borge again established himself as entertainer supreme.

PERSHING RIFLES EXPANDS

UVM's Company L-12, Pershing Rifles, has expanded its activities again this year, with a company strength of 27 brothers and 50 pledges. The program includes a pledge drill team and a girls drill team scheduled for competition with other companies in the Twelfth Regiment at Boston in December. In addition, a rifle team has been formed, and there is a hum around the office resulting from an active and growing interest in parachuting among members of the unit.

The Twelfth Regiment was chosen the best in the nation for the last academic year. Returning brothers that were active last year received a best regiment ribbon and a year's service ribbon.

Cats Host Surprising UNH Squad For Homecoming

THE INSIDER

By LEO PFEIFFER

Vermont went on the field Saturday at Kingston with one basic concept in mind. This concept, or should I say obsession, was to prove that Jack Zilly, the University of Rhode Island Head Coach, was correct when he said that Vermont would be the toughest opponent for him all year. After all, their schedule does include Massachusetts and Brown, among other tough opponents. It almost seems that he knew what happened to Connecticut after what they said in the papers about Vermont, so perhaps he was taking his psychology from a different angle. However, Vermont is becoming immune to such tactics and went out to prove that he wasn't just whistling "Dixie."

In the process of doing it, Bob Mitchell set two more records in number of carries with 39 and yards gained, 192. It appears that no matter how much keying the opposing defenses make for Bob, with the strong line up front doing superb blocking, nobody will be able to stop him unless they double or triple team him. This would, theoretically speaking, leave the defense vulnerable elsewhere.

Meanwhile "The Wolf Pack," the adopted name for the defense, was equal to the challenge once again. The coaches claimed this game would be won by defense and it would not be an easy task containing Rhode Island's explosive offense. The result: 30 yards net gain on the ground. Their great halfback, who averaged 8.9 yards a carry previously, has his average reduced to 4 yards a carry while Bill Leete and Ed Kiniry did fine work in containing their big end who was leading the league in just about everything.

Bill Lawrence seems to have nailed down a job returning punts after the fine job he did Saturday. This department was more or less up in the air between members of the defensive secondary. Other than Lawrence, there was Bill Leete, who can be trusted anytime in the deep position, Ed Kiniry who starts worrying about it on third down but nevertheless does a great job, and Leo Pfeiffer, who has such an illustrious past in that department that in his entire career, he has received just three punts, and dropped all three.

And so, the Cats won decisively. The usual joking and rehashing the game went on during the long trip home, which was highlighted by Keith (Ode) Keiderling's version of "Ebb Tide," much to the team's delight.

However, there was one thing that everybody had in the back of his mind and seemed to put a damper on the situation. This was Dick Hebert, who broke his ankle during the game. Dick was presented with the game ball, but this will not compensate for the loss of his services. Dick was headed for All-League honors and would have been instrumental in winning the conference championship. Now the team will have to rise to the occasion, as teams have been known to do in the past, and do it without him.

Vermont will do just that Saturday against the upset-minded Wildcats from New Hampshire. The New Hampshire head coach, as usual, came out with a prediction for the game when head line coach John Coons exchanged game films with him. Said the New Hampshire coach, "Against Maine our team jelled and we're going to make things tough for you Saturday." Said Bob Clifford, "I'd say he's a pretty cocky coach, wouldn't you?"

Fall Baseball Team Has Successful Year

By Ted Ryan

"Fall baseball served the purpose we wanted. We found out what we were looking for. We tested our young pitchers and were pleasantly surprised," is the way baseball coach Ralph LaPointe summarized the successful fall season, this week.

LaPointe added he was especially pleased with the sharp pitching of a veteran, Bruce Bovenizer, and the hurling and hitting of sophomore Terry O'Leary.

The injuries suffered by John Packard and Rick Aldrich hurt the team but it gave LaPointe a chance to see Bob Neild and freshman Dick Farrell behind the plate and Tom Suchanek at first base.

"We found out things we normally learn on the southern trip in the spring. Now I can experiment at a couple of positions," the veteran Vermont coach added.

LaPointe also expressed pleasure with the hitting and throwing arm of Don Fitts, the steady play of Dave Wayne, the bat of Brad Stevens and the strengthened middle infield of Dave LaPointe and Bruce Lombard.

SKIERS START TRAINING

A total of 12 aspirants have been training daily under the leadership of co-captains Scott Leake and Peter Sargent. Since the second week of the school year, the varsity members have been working with weights or running daily.

Coach Bob Stone will join the team in November after the conclusion of the freshman soccer season. Stone anticipates a good season for the Vermonters.

Mitchell Smashes Own Two Marks In URI Game

By George Passage

UVM reaches the halfway point in its schedule this weekend with a Homecoming battle against UNH and as yet the Cats have nothing but wins to their credit. The Wildcats are coming with a 10-7 upset victory over Maine while the Catamounts defeated Rhode Island last weekend 21-7.

Saturday's game brings together two of the finest runners in New England, quarterback Bill Estey from UNH and Bob Mitchell for the Cats. Estey, the do-it-all quarterback is playing in his second campaign and indications lead everyone to believe it will be better than last year's. Behind Estey is a fine sophomore halfback, Bill Phillips, who is the second leading ground gainer (to Mitchell) in the Yankee Conference.

The Wildcats are a veteran team, having only lost nine lettermen last year and will be out to revenge the 23-7 loss dealt them by UVM last year. The series record with UNH stands at 15-17-1 in favor of Vermont and first year Coach Joseph Yukica brings his offensive minded team here in hopes of squelching UVM's Homecoming spirit. But, Coach Clifford and the Green and Gold appear ready for the challenge.

The Bridport Bomb, Bob Mitchell, continues his heroics. Last weekend it was 39 carries for 192 yards and as usual, they are both UVM records. (Mitchell needs only 201 yards in five games to break Ken Burton's single season rushing record) Dave Shumate and Paul Simpson continue to relieve people of any doubts about the quarterbacks ability. Jim Culhane, UVM's hard blocking fullback, continues to push big linemen around to open holes for Mitchell.

One cannot say enough about UVM's tremendous offensive line and when a hole opens up in the defense, one knows the reason. The defense, which has allowed less than 10 points per game, has improved with every game. In the season's opener they allowed 12 points and last weekend it was only seven. Special mention must go to middle guard Joe Soldano, end Bill Van Bennekum and linebackers Colin Hurd and Bill Wolff for their fine play. John Gurrieri and Don Nelson will probably never play a sub-par game in their three years on the team if the first eleven are any indication. With Bill Leete, Leo Pfeiffer and Bill Lawrence in the backfield, the Rat Pack has certainly proved its worth.

Intramural Scoreboard

The intramural touch football season is rapidly coming to a close. At press time these were the leaders in the four leagues: League A - DP; League B - tie KS and SAE; League C - PDT; and League D - MAT. The winners in each league will compete for the All Campus Touch Football Championship later this month.

The singles tennis tournament is now in the third round of competition with Mel Hebel, TEP's outstanding tennis star, still going strong. Hebel easily won his second round match, defeating John Smiarowski (ATO) 6-1, 6-0.

Mr. Strassburg, director of the intramural sports program at UVM, has informed the CYNIC that only a few people, out of the many who have shown an interest in participating, have qualified for the intramural swim meet. To qualify one must have six recorded workouts plus a physical exam. ANYONE INTERESTED IN COMPETING IN THE SWIM MEET SHOULD COMPLETE THEIR SIX RECORDED WORKOUTS BY THE END OF THIS WEEK.

The intramural basketball schedule begins October 19 and students are needed to referee the games. The pay is $1.25 per game. Anyone interested should contact Mr. Strassburg at the gym.

Mitchell Repeats

Amherst, Massachusetts - Vermont halfback Bob Mitchell (Bridport, Vt.), Connecticut guard Roy Lawrence (Iselin, N.J.), and Massachusetts sophomore Mike McArdle (Millbury, Mass.) have been selected as the Yankee Conference back, line man and co-sophomores of the week.

Mitchell, Vermont's power-driving standout, was chosen for the second straight week. He netted 192 yards rushing in 39 attempts, including a 54-yard touchdown run to spark the undefeated Catamounts to a 21-7 win over Rhode Island.

ance of second-year coach Art Loche. Top returning veterans from last year's 12-8 squad are captain Bruce Hanna, 6-5 Russ Boardman, both seniors, and 6-2 junior Bill Librera.

Other returners are juniors Alden Hale, Don Katz, and Sandy McLeod. These three, along with top sophomore prospects Dave LaPointe, Terry O'Leary, Bob Jacobs, and Rich Kellogg will be vying for the remaining starting positions.

Loche expects to have a rebuilding year this season after losing his top three scorers from last year's squad through graduation.

Booters Keep Winning

By Ted Ryan

"Right now it looks like a confrontation between Massachusetts and Vermont here Oct. 29," UVM soccer coach Hal Greig said as he ventured a guess towards the outcome of the Yankee Conference title race.

The Cats and UMass are the only squads undefeated in league play but Greig quickly pointed out that the University of Rhode Island, beaten 4-2 by the Vermonters last week, is still in contention.

Pete Baldwin is leading the Cats in scoring this season with three goals and three assists.

"And New Hampshire may act as a spoiler. Actually any of these four might take everything. Connecticut has been virtually eliminated after losing to Massachusetts and to us," Greig added.

The Cats, who stunned everyone by finishing in a tie for first last year in their first year of league competition, will face the darkhorse New Hampshire unit Saturday. The outcome may have direct bearing on the title scramble.

In a rough and tumble battle a week ago, Vermont upended Rhode Island in a game interrupted 34 times for penalties.

"It was a difficult and rough game because it was hard to keep play going continuously. I was especially pleased to see the boys come back in the third quarter," Greig said.

Vermont dominated play in the first half and opened the scoring with a goal by Pete Baldwin which shot past URI goalie Les Goff. With two seconds left in the period Tom Bitter cleared the ball to Baldwin who booted a pass to Jimmy Wood. Wood broke in on the goalie all alone and fired the ball into the nets.

URI made a determined bid to get into the game again in the second period but UVM wrapped up the game with goals by Jack Semler and Wood.

"The defensive play of Donny Carlson, Jeff Taft, and Tom Bitter and the sparkling line play might have scored more goals but for fouls," Greig added.

New Hampshire, beaten 3-2 by Vermont last year, promises to be a tough game. The Wildcats had an excellent freshman squad last year.

balanced, freshman soccer coach Bob Stone said this week that he is especially pleased with the very fine group of halfbacks and the spirit of the team.

The Kittens, 2-1, before Tuesday match with Northwood, has some exceptional talent.

Five boys from Proctor, four of them on the starting team, and Brian Rivers of Brandon give southern Vermont high school soccer strong representation.

Linemen Carlo Tonelli and Bob Greene, halfback Kevin Austin and goalie John Poljacik are the starters from Proctor who have impressed the frosh soccer coach, Jim Candon, who also was a Proctor boy, recently tried out for the team and has looked good in practice at center fullback.

Rivers is the number one reserve for Stone and he plays several positions capably. Charles Goodrich of Pittsfield, Mass., "will be a good one," and Chris Harris of Mt. Kisco, N.Y., are two highly talented boys. Harris was labeled as "the consistent team leader" by Stone.

UVM Plans $10 Million Improvements Program

Plans for capital improvements on campus for the coming biennium were discussed at the recent Board of Trustees meeting. These include a second new residence hall, the physical sciences building and married student housing already in the planning stage, and renovation of several major buildings which will be freed for other use after completion of the new life sciences and phase III medical buildings both under construction now.

The total capital improvement budget projected carries an estimated price tag of $10,000,000, and Pres. Rowell asked and received authority from the Board to bring a request for up to $4,591,000 of this amount to the 1967 Legislature.

Biggest single item in the total to be asked of the Legislature is a new $3,235,000 physical sciences building. The last Legislature approved a bond issue of $2.1 million for the University to use as matching funds for the life sciences building, with any remaining funds to be applied toward the physical sciences building.

The University won federal matching funds for the life sciences unit, and thus has $600,000 in state support available for the physical sciences

RENOVATION PROJECTS

Also in the $4.5 million capital request to the state are several renovation projects - in Hills Science Hall, Williams Science Hall, Morrill Hall, Old Medical Building, and some other smaller units. For the most part, the renovation involves space which will be freed by departments and programs moving into the new life sciences and Phase III medical buildings when they are completed during the coming biennial period.

IFC Chooses Outstanding Faculty Members

Sixteen faculty members of the month were chosen by the fraternities last week. This was the opening of a new Interfraternity Council policy. Each month the fraternities will select a faculty member whom they feel has been outstanding as a teacher and a member of the university community. They will be asked to visit and speak to the fraternities. The Interfraternity Council hopes that this will help promote better communication and understanding between the faculty and fraternities.

At the end of the school year each fraternity will select a faculty member of the year. From these one will be chosen by the IFC. He will receive a grant for study in his particular field of interest.

The purpose of this program is to provide an opportunity for the exchange of ideas between the faculty and fraternities and for the designation of outstanding faculty members.

Included in the overall project campus development for the biennium is a new residence hall - in addition to one already in the planning stages - to house 600 students. The Board also authorized the University to seek reservations of $4,000,000 in federal loan funds for the project. Repayment would be through student rehts after completion of the unit.

The Board of Trustees approved a tuition increase of $100 - from $500 to $600 - for residents, and of $300 - from $1500 to $1800 for nonresidents, effective in the fall of 1967.

Peace Corps Will Recruit At UVM

By Meryle Sachs

Now is your chance to prove your loyalty to the cause of the world peace. October 24-28 will find UVM the center for Peace Corps Volunteer Recruiting, when a team of returned Peace Corps Volunteers will visit the campus. The average volunteer spends two years in areas overseas with about one hundred contemporaries, and affects an average of one thousand people. This year almost as many volunteers will complete service abroad as returned home during all of the first four years of the five-year-old program.

Tuition Rises Sharply

Residents $600
Non-Residents $1800

The Board of Trustees approved a tuition increase of $100 - from $500 to $600 - for residents, and of $300 - from $1500 to $1800 for nonresidents, effective in the fall of 1967.

The last UVM tuition increase came in the fall of 1964.

Medical College tuition will also be $600 and $1800.

Pres. Rowell said the tuition increase was recommended to the Board only after "a searching look at our programs and the University's ability to find the funds necessary for their support."

He said the tuition increase will provide an additional $1,750,000 in two years, and that the alternative would be to ask the State for this additional amount.

The dollar amount anticipated from tuition and fees will increase by $2,675,000, he said, but the percentage of the total provided by tuition is down from about 25 to 23.8 percent.

The Board of Trustees of the University of Vermont approved an operating budget for the next two years which calls for a total budget of $22,385,000 the first, and $25,002,000 the second year of the 1967-69 biennium. The operating budget for the present year is $19,052,000.

Included is a request to the state for $6,903,000 for 1967-68, and $8,058,000 for the 1968-69 year of the coming biennium. The state appropriation for the current year of UVM's operation is $5,008,000.

Rowell said the new budget called for an increased share of UVM's total support from the state, 31.5 percent. He said the budget also anticipated an increased share, 27.2 percent, would be available from federal funds.

Trustees Disagreed With McCune

"The board initially selected Dr. McCune on the basis of his outstanding qualifications and background in education, and the board retains the highest regard for Dr. McCune's scholarship and personal integrity.

"Nevertheless, it was decided that a change in administration would be in the best long-term interest of the university. The board took this action only after a careful review of the activities of Dr. McCune's office since his appointment to the presidency, and of his program of action for the university.

"Board members felt that Dr. McCune's philosophy of administration did not meet the challenges facing the university, and that another kind of leadership - more forceful and direct - was necessary."

"The board discussed this difference in philosophy with Dr. McCune in the spring, and in August decided that a change in administration would be in the best long-term interest of the university.

Must Students Pay College Parking Fines?

Mississippi (CPS) -- Millions of university-issued parking tickets across the country may now be worthless. In a precedent-setting case, the prosecution of a Mississippi State University student for refusing to pay his campus tickets has been dismissed.

Leslie C. Cohen, a Canadian political science student at MSU, balked when the academic institution imposed $20 in parking fines without a hearing.

When the University threatened him with dismissal and state court action unless fines were paid, Cohen went to the Lawyers Constitutional Defense Committee of the American Civil Liberties Union.

The LCDC secured a restraining order to prevent MSU officials from impeding Cohen's efforts to gain admission to a Canadian law school. Cohen feared that the University would delay sending his records, would not the parking violations on his records or would not allow him to take a necessary summer session course at Mississippi State.

The LCDC subsequently challenged the constitutionality of the Mississippi statute under which the University justified its regulations. The statute granted to the State Board of Institutions of Higher Learning the power to create regulations which are municipal in effect, the LCDC charged.

While the case was before the U.S. District Court, the State Attorney General, representing the University, conceded that the regulations which were promulgated by MSU and their manner of enforcement were null and void.

The University dropped its charges against Cohen and the Mississippi statute came under the consideration of a three-judge federal court.

Although the law was eventually ruled constitutional, LCDC chief counsel Alvin Bronstein said that this does not affect the due process precedent that had been raised over the tickets themselves.

Bronstein said he had already received request for particulars on the case from legal departments of several universities.

By Robert Ebling and Joe Denhoff

In the Waterman Lower Lounge Mr. James B. Dow, an investigating agent of the Federal Bureau of Drug Abuse Control, gave an address about drugs and his line of work on October 12. Dow told the small Vermont Consumer Day crowd of one hundred and fifty persons that he had joined the Pure Food Drug Administration in 1959. Twenty hours previous to his talk, Dow had been walking the Streets of Cambridge, Massachusetts in dirty clothes looking for pushers of Barbiturates, Amphetamines, and Hallucinogens, which his department is responsible for. Dow was also looking specifically for LSD, with which he is well acquainted.

He then went on to tell the audience about a few of his cases in which people had become addicted to the "pills." One example dealt with a teenager who had killed a girl as a result of being addicted to Amphetamines, or pep pills, as they are commonly known. Another case dealt with a prominent New Hampshire businessman who had become addicted to pep pills at day and Barbiturates at night. The result of this man's addiction was an overdose of sleeping pills which killed him.

Dow classified the pills addicts of today as the adult users and the teen users. With this he gave reasons for usage by these groups. Adults use pills to pep themselves up and then pills to calm themselves at night. Teens, on the other hand, use pills to find kicks, to become part of the crowd, or to display an anti-social attitude.

Next, Mr. Dow talked about LSD, an hallucinogen. LSD is a mind trigger, and does not harm or even effect one's body. Ten minutes after entering the body and bloodstream, all traces of the LSD disappear. However, with the mind triggered, the patient is likely to do anything. Many people find LSD an intellectual experience, while others find it a horrifying experience. LSD brings out the subconscious feelings of people. This may lead to suicide, contentment, or a feeling of having one's body on fire. Dow explained how he had come in contact with a girl whose "trip" with LSD showed her gum fly out of her mouth, bounce off a dirty floor, and fly back into her mouth. She woke up in a state of hysteria and remained in that condition for days.

Dow then gave a quick history of LSD, which is actually an acid in a by-product of Lysergic Acid, which is no longer made in the United States due to Federal action. In Europe one kilogram of Lysergic Acid can be purchased for $10,000. Last year, a man in California purchased a kilogram of the acid, and he a few chemical steps, made LSD and sold it for one million dollars. Dow added that a person with two years of chemistry could manufacture LSD and even Lysergic Acid.

Will Study Bacterial Diseases

A recently formed team of doctors at the University of Vermont is aiming its scientific guns at a big target - the broad field of infectious diseases.

Dr. Ben R. Forsyth, Dr. C. Alan Phillips and Dr. Dieter W. Gump only recently joined the faculty of the University of Vermont College of Medicine.

They are setting up a laboratory in the University Medical Science building. Their services will be available to patients at both the University-affiliated hospitals, the DeGoesbriand Memorial and the Mary Fletcher.

Their major work will be the study of bacterial diseases. This will include diagnosis of obscure or suspected infections as well as helping physicians in the choice and use of antibiotic drugs for patients.

Aim, of course, is to cure the patient. As Dr. Forsyth explains it, "Because medicine is able to eradicate many infections, this is one of the fields in which we can produce cures in the absolute sense."

The team will also investigate virus-caused diseases. More persons have viral diseases, but because they are usually minor in nature, fewer persons are hospitalized with them.

Dr. Forsyth says he is "hopeful that within the next 20 years we will have the appropriate drugs to handle viral infections, as we now have for bacterial infections."

The doctors, as part of their research, will study, with the State Health Laboratory personnel, any viral infections found in the Burlington area. They also hope to keep a "virus watch" or "alert" on the community in order to spot any epidemics of viral diseases. This will involve study of outpatients as well as hospital patients.

A third area of interest to the group is in mycoplasmas. These produce "primary atypical pneumonia" in man.

Let's Go... Beat The Cadets

The promotion of school spirit here at UVM depends mainly on the work of three separate groups: Charlie Catamounts, the cheerleaders, and the Majorettes. This year, TEP's Dick, Baden is Charlie, the jovial, yellow catamount, who serves UVM working side by side with the cheerleaders at football games to arouse spirit and illicit enthusiasm from the fans. The legend of UVM's catamount, according to the Class of '69 "Freshman Review," dates back to the late 1700's when Ira Allen discovered on the shore of Lake Champlain a cougar which had been wounded by a Charlee Indian arrow. Today Charlie remains the school mascot and lends a big hand in promoting participation from Catamount fans.

Co-captains Joan Rousseau and Anne Brown lead the cheerleaders in training new girls and spending many hours preparing to boost school spirit at each Saturday game. Last week, the squad took on four new members with the addition of Lesli Carlson, freshman; Judy Bamman and Mary Moninger, sophomores; and Cheryl Burrus, junior. Pep rallies, too, are an important task for the cheerleaders and, as Miss Brown clearly expressed, it is hoped "that people will make the rallies part of their social plans."

The majorettes, also, represent the enthusiasm and spirit of UVM. New this season to the group are Eleanor Harvey and Emily Greene, both from the freshman class. Under the direction of Gail Hurst, captain, the eight twirlers practice often in order to prepare a skillful and entertaining performance at the football games. In backing Charlie and the cheerleaders as well as making each game more enjoyable, the majorettes play their part in seeing that UVM's school spirit improves.

"Successful Marriage" Is Topic For Series of Eight Symposia

"Successful Marriage" is to be the theme of a series of eight symposia devoted to understanding its successes and failures. Monthly talks by understanding specialists in the areas of communications, sex, children, money, leisure, religion, man-woman roles and social changes will be presented. Each is to be followed by a permanent panel presenting the professions most closely related to the field of study. Opportunity will then be provided for audience interaction.

These symposia are part of an educational program sponsored by the First Unitarian Church at the head of Church Street. The Reverend Gaston M. Carrier, Minister, is hopeful that the series will fill a long standing community need and that participation in the series will be shared by people from all faiths, educational institutions and the general public. Notices are being sent to other churches. Details may be obtained from the local clergy.

Symposia will be held in the First Unitarian Church Parlors starting at 8:00 p.m. Dr. John G. Miller, Psychologist at the Howard Family Service Agency will open the series on October 23 with the discussion on "Communications and Marriage."

On November 13, Dr. John Van S. Maeck, Chief of Service, Obstetrics and Gynecology, Mary Fletcher Hospital and DeGoesbriand Memorial Hospital, will speak on, "Sex and Marriage". On December 11, Dr. Lorpa Boag, Clinical Instructor in Psychiatry at UVM, College of Medicine will present "Children and Marriage."

"Money and Marriage" on January 15 will be the subject to be treated by Mr. W. Wallace Hill, Director of Social Service, Mary Fletcher Hospital.

February 12 will be devoted to the subject of "Leisure and Marriage" by speaker Dr. J. Anthony Samenink, Professor and Head, Area of Family Living - Human Development at UVM. He is to be followed by Rabbi Max B. Wall, Ohavi Zedek Synagogue, who will discuss "Religion and Marriage" on March 12.

Beverly Benner Caro, Director of Adult Education, Goddard College and Editor of the book: "American Women - A Changing Image", will speak on "The Changing Status and Roles of Men and Women in Marriage." This is scheduled for April 16. The final symposium on May 14 will feature Dr. Rowena Ansbacher, Associate Editor of "The Journal of Individual Psychology," speaking on "The Longterm Future of Marriage As We Know It."

Panel members participating at all eight meetings are: Miss Lena E. Cochran, Social Worker and Executive Director of the Howard Family Service Agency; Dr. Julius G. Cohen, Associate Professor of Clinical Psychiatry, UVM College of Medicine; The Rev. Jack Hemenway, Episcopal Minister of St. Paul's Cathedral, Burlington; Dr. Gordon F. Lewis, Sociologist, Associate Professor of Sociology, Sociology and Anthropology Department, UVM, and Mr. Robert W. Eastman, Attorney at Law.

The statement continued to express that they (Board) "... regrets that the time between... Aug. 6 and ... Oct. 15 created an opportunity for misunderstanding. This was not our intent."

VA Pays Students

The nation's 1200 university and college newspapers, magazines and other publications have been asked to join the Veterans Administration in an all-out saturation campaign to acquaint every veteran-student with all details of the new G.I. Bill payment procedures of the education program.

The VA cautions the veteran, going to school, should be prepared to pay his expenses for at least two months.

The law requires that monthly certificates of attendance, signed by veterans, be sent to the VA attesting the veteran has attended classes. Necessarily, these certificates can be sent only after a month's schooling is completed. On the 20th of the following month, VA mails the payment checks. Proper and prompt sending of these certificates will eliminate delays.

Allowances are:

Monthly Payments Available to Veterans:

Full Time	$100	$125	$150
Three-quarter Time	75	95	115

Less than half-time, but more than one-quarter time is 4 to 6 semester hours.

A cooperative program is full-time program consisting of classroom and alternate training, with the training supplemental to the educational institutional portion.

When a course is of less than a regular semester, such as summer school, the 14-hour standard is used or the equivalent in class plus laboratory, field-work, research or other types of prescribed activity.

Correspondence course allowances are based on the established charges for lessons completed and serviced by school. These allowances will be paid quarterly.

This is Russ Kennedy of Balboa Island, California, on an in-port field trip as a student aboard Chapman College's floating campus.

The note he paused to make as fellow students went ahead to inspect Hatshepsut's Tomb in the Valley of the Kings near Luxor, he used to complete an assignment for his Comparative World Cultures professor.

Russ transferred the 12 units earned during the study-travel semester at sea to his record at the University of California at Irvine where he continues studies toward a teaching career in life sciences.

As you read this, 450 other students have begun the fall semester voyage of discovery with Chapman aboard the s.s. RYNDAM, for which Holland-America Line acts as General Passenger Agents.

In February still another 450 will embark from Los Angeles for the spring 1967 semester, this time bound for the Panama Canal, Venezuela, Brazil, Argentina, Nigeria, Senegal, Morocco, Spain, Portugal, The Netherlands, Denmark, Great Britain and New York.

If joining a club has passed your mind sometime this year, don't let it pass again.

Do I dare

Disturb the universe?

In a minute there is time

For decisions and revisions which a minute will reverse.

Don't be too eager to give yourself the convenient excuse of "no time" or "no interest." The club activities on this campus demand little time and are sufficiently varied to appeal to anyone.

For I have known them all already, known them all-

Have known the evenings, mornings, afternoons,

I have measured out my life with coffee spoons;

If you think trudging around from class to class and maintaining your chosen average is getting you an education, you are indeed mistaken. Part of an education is doing, acting, and accomplishing that which cannot be done in the classroom. To produce a magazine, to get a speaker, to arrange an outing, besides being a source of identification are a source of personal satisfaction that you were in on something that worked, something that happened.

No! I am not Prince Hamlet, nor was meant to be;

Am an attendant Lord; one that will do

To swell a progress, start a scene or two,

Advise the prince; no doubt, an easy tool,

Deferential, glad to be of use

For God's sake, for your sake, show yourself that you are alive. The regrets will come when the chance is no longer there. Don't be content as a Prufrock in the Den.

And would it have been worth it, after all,

After the cups, the marmalade, the tea,

Among the porcelain, among some talk of you and me,

Would it have been worthwhile,

How will you ever know if you do not try? You can only squeeze so much out of the same dessicated conversation that rambles on and on, month after month, year after year. Use your human talents for something besides this incessant gossip. Become an active part of a group, a club, a team, or a fraternity and stop asking yourself if you are really capable.

(For) when I am formulated, sprawling on a pin,

When I am pinned and wriggling on the wall,

Then how should I begin

To spit out all the butt-ends of my days and ways?

In Japanese it is said: "Ikiru;" in English it is said: "To live." For you, the choice is clear: Either you live or you drown in a sea of caffeine and useless aphorisms.

UVM Marks
175th Anniversary

One hundred and seventy-five years ago, the State of Vermont took the decisive step which resulted not only in the founding of the University of Vermont but also in establishing it as the first such U.S. institution to offer education to any student, regardless of religious belief.

The 1791 charter establishing the University provided that the "by-laws shall not tend to give preference to any religious sect or denomination whatsoever."

In 1966, the University continues to observe the letter and the spirit of this declaration. Without fanfare, it will observe the 175th anniversary of its chartering as an institution of higher education which set a new goal of freedom in American education.

The charter took effect Nov. 3, 1791, signed by Vermont's first governor, Thomas Chittenden.

It is believed the moving spirit was that of the Rev. Samuel Williams. A descendant of Cotton Maher and other famous early New Englanders, he was a clergyman and teacher; and quite possibly a teacher of the University's first President, the Rev. Daniel Clarke Sanders, at Harvard.

Dr. Williams' belief in the ideal breadth of education and his observations on the native religious tolerance of Vermonters appeared in 1794 in his "History of Vermont."

Vermonters, he said, "are persuaded that the Government has nothing to do with their particular and denominational tenets. It is not barely toleration, but equality which the people aim at."

In his remarks at the Convocation formally opening the current academic year, President Lyman S. Rowell said, "I hope we may take time in this 175th year of the University to involve ourselves in many discussions directed to the determination of the role of this institution and to the means of action by which we can hope to achieve them. I invite all members of this University to propose areas for discussion and I invite all members to participate in the discussions."

Among the midst of rumor, fact or fiction, the Board of Trustees, finally, agreed on a statement of fact and not the fiction that has been filtering under the locked doors. Specifically, the statement read: "The resignation of former UVM President Shannon McCune was sought by the Board of Trustees the week prior to Aug. 6, 1966 meeting."

It would have been beneficial, if the Committee (one choosing the presidential candidates) had looked into McCune's past record of administrative policy. It is apparent that the board failed to inquire about this particular aspect. Many long term friends knew that McCune believed in the indirect approach; he was not the decision making man. The failure of acknowledging this "truth" has accuse more harm than necessary. The harm has not affected Dr. McCune, instead it has made many look toward "the goings on" at Waterman.

Oddly enough, the statement was not issued earlier because of an understanding between the board and McCune. The board told McCune that they would adhere to whatever he said, which was his resignation statement (CYNIC, Sept. 9).

Unfortunately, this procedure made the board and University look like incompetent fools, after McCune confirmed the dismissal rumor. Even so, admiration for the Chairman of the Board, Mr. Marvin, must be extended. For two months, Marvin stood firmly on: "No Comment."

In reality, what is wrong with an indirect administration policy anyway? Corporations and big business use a President to sign papers and spread "good will" across the countryside. This is essentially what Dr. McCune believed. He wanted to see UVM stand for something higher than the "Two bit Long Island College" that it is at present. As a result, he was politely asked to retreat.

If we may be allowed to refer to the "democratic" procedure that is this nation's policy, a president should oversee the procedure. He should not make the final trivial decisions. Apparently, UVM has and will always be a one man band!

Even so gentlemen, may we remind you that the next time, decide first what you want: a democratic or a bureaucratic administration. Don't wait until your procedures have dragged an institution through the mud and grime of politics.

M. Robinson

The Board of Trustees chose a spring weekend for a three-day celebration of the 175th anniversary of the chartering of the University, and voted to tie the formal inauguration of Lyman S. Rowell as president of the University to the anniversary celebration.

The weekend - April 29-May 1, will also include a state day at which time the University will invite citizens of the state to see the campus and to participate in the anniversary and Honors Day programs.

In a Small Valley in Central Vermont near a small town called Blandmead is a small but well known liberal arts school. The name of this school is Dadard College and recently it was my privilege to interview the president of this College. Incredulously I found President Bohnd in his office.

SCEPTIC: Could you give me a brief history of the college?
BOHND: Yes. Dadard College has a long tradition. Founded in 1959 by Malcolm Hedde, it has been the epitome of liberal education. Here we allow no intolerance, no bigotry and no hatred. Intolerance is forbidden.

SCEPTIC: Could you tell me more about Mr. Hedde.

BOHND: Mr. Hedde was a liberal. He tried several times unsuccessfully to get himself ejected from HUAC meeting and twice attempted to get himself arrested. He was a great humanitarian; his dying words were "Death to Facists."

SCEPTIC: How nice. Could you tell me about the school's educational policy?

BOHND: We allow our students to study what they want. Right now a group of students are studying Thoreau in the woods. Another student is doing research on the hemp plant so he can help Mexican peasants. But perhaps the most interesting feature of our program is the Institution Study program. Originally it was a work. We began noticing many students began to, shall we say, "flip out" during this period. Our new program involves the institutionalization of students as inmates in asylums for the insane all over the country. In an insane society the only place for a sane man is an institution.

SCEPTIC: Is there a drug problem on your campus?

BOHND: No, there is no problem at all.

He smiled and took a deep, deep drag from his pipe.

Last week an interesting rumor circulated the campus. The rumor was that certain members of UVM's left wing were going to infiltrate certain frat parties. If they saw any drinking, they were going to report it to the dean. As a result at least two people were not allowed into an "Open House" at two fraternities. Talk about paranoia.

I would also like to thank my fans for their letters, several of which appeared in last week's CYNIC. I shall take them into consideration in writing future articles. If this article appease any of you who were irritated by previous articles, I can only warn you next week is another week...

Liquor Ban Revoked

By Virginia Broadbeck

The Collegiate Press Service Washington, D.C. (CPS) -- A rule prohibiting drinking in dormitories has been unexpectedly reversed by Georgetown University.

Officials said the new policy, which allows all men to keep both beer and hard liquor in their rooms, was designed to help students develop personal responsibility.

According to the Reverend Anthony J. Zeits, director of student personnel, authorities who have studied the campus drinking issue have concluded that "the formation of young men is facilitated when they are given the freedom to choose whether to use or not to use alcoholic beverages."

Georgetown officials also said the move was made to end the pretense of enforcing an unenforceable rule - a primary consideration, according to several students.

Studies of other colleges which allow liquor on campus have shown that "most students do not over-indulge when allowed to have alcoholic beverages in their dormitories." Father Zeits emphasized.

Johnson's "Viet Nam"

By Robert Ewegen

The Collegiate Press Service

(As presented by Little Boy Johnson, president of the United States and grandson of a former President whom we all know and love. The address was delivered at the dedication of the American military cemetery "Gettysburg East," outside of Saigon in the year 2052.)

Mah Fellow Americans:

Foah score and seven yeas ago, my grandfather brought forth upon this continent of Asia a new political concept, conceived in expediency and dedicated to the proposition that we are better dead than red.

Now we are engaged in a Great Society (oops, I mean a Great Civil War), and for that matter have been engaged in that Great Civil War for four score and seven years now, testing whether that concept of a permanent American military presence in Asia or any concept so ill-conceived and so ineptly executed, can long endure.

We are met on a great battlefield of that war, a battlefield where General Ky was overthrown by General Hee, where General Hee was overthrown by General Me, where General Me was overthrown by General Wee, where General Wee was overthrown by General Gee, and so forth through the 56 different coups that finally culminated last spring in General Plea's government, which we are now convinced is in a position to bring to this nation the political stability that is so necessary if we are to begin to effectively roll back the aggression from the north.

Excuse me folks, I just received an urgent note. (Oh no, not again.) Hrrumph. What I meant was the 57 coups which finally culminated in General She's coup three minutes ago which we are finally convinced is in a position to at last offer this nation the political stability that is...

Hmrrph. Be that as it may. We have come to dedicate this battlefield as a fitting memorial to moderate losses that our forces have sustained over the past 87 years so my grandfather and his successors could test the theory that the way to bring Hanoi to the peace table was to escalate further.

is a surprising one, according to Gerry McCullough, news editor of the student paper.

McCullough said the drinking decision was handled quietly. The Student Council discussed the issue with administration officials last year. The newspaper knew nothing of the proceedings until the matter was settled, McCullough said.

No one circulated petitions or flyers in support of campus

For the past four years, McCullough added, student leaders have been trying to liberalize Georgetown's policies. Dormitory curfew regulations have also been relaxed this semester, he said.

With the lifting of the ban on campus drinking, Georgetown, a medium-sized Roman Catholic institution, has become the second college in Washington to allow the privilege. The other is George Washington University.

An interesting sideline, McCullough noted, "business is really booming at the corner liquor store."

It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this, and anyone who thinks otherwise is a nervous nelly and probably a traitor besides and simply helping to prolong the war.

The world will long note and long remember what we did here, probably because we will still be long doing it, but the world will probably never understand WHY we did it.

And frankly, I'm fed up with that kind of idiotic questioning emanating from the capitals of the world over the last nine decades! I DON'T CARE WHY WE ARE HERE! THE POINT IS WE ARE HERE AND ITS TOO LATE TO PULL OUT NOW! WE ARE GOING TO STAY HERE! WE ARE GOING TO ESCALATE! THIS UNPATRIOTIC PRACTICE OF DEFERRING GRANDFATHERS HAS TO STOP SO THAT WE CAN BUILD UP OUR TROOP COMMITMENT TO 68,000,000 MEN. ONLY THEN WE WILL HAVE AN ADEQUATE STRENGTH RATIO OF 84 to 1 NECESSARY TO PUT DOWN THIS INSURRECTION.

And as long as I am president, mah fellow Americans, I promise you this: We shall not withdraw. I promise that this nation, under me, shall have a new birth of conformity (boy, will we shut up those peaceniks) and that government of consensus, by manipulation, for the sake of saving face, shall not perish from the earth, although admittedly the population might.

(Ewegen is editor of the Colorado Daily.)

Jewelry Made Of Shark Teeth

By Charlotte Beam

Million year old fossils certainly make unusual jewelry. UVM junior, Mardi Crane, makes unique earrings and necklaces from fossilized shark teeth. Last summer while beachcombing on a key off the coast of West Florida, Mardi discovered a deposit of the teeth. She collected some and decided to make jewelry with them. She did so, first matching the teeth (which vary in color from brown to black and in shape and size from slender teeth about one inch long to short triangular teeth about 3/8 inches long) then fashioning the jewelry with delicate wires and chain.

She has sold her work in Greenwich Village, Florida, and Connecticut. It is presently on sale at Designer's Choice here in Burlington. Mardi has about 70 pairs of shark teeth on hand, and her younger brother in Florida keeps her supplied with them. Recently she donated several of the fossilized teeth to the UVM Geology Department, which had none from this particular deposit.

SELECTIVE SERVICE EXAMINATIONS

Selective Service Examination November 18 and 19, 1966. Applications are available at 125 Waterman - Testing Service. Deadline for filing is October 21, 1966. The examination will be held in Southwick Gym on November 18 and in 24 Hills Building and 350 Waterman Building on November 19.

BERTHA TERRILL

HOME EC CLUB

The Bertha Terrill Home Economics Club met on Thursday, October 13, 1966 at Southwick. After a short business meeting presided by Ruth Taylor, President, a panel on Graduate Study was presented. Dr. Johnston of the UVM graduate school gave information about preparation and admission to graduate schools. Mrs. Shirley Hamilton and Mrs. Kathleen Strassburgh gave personal accounts of their work and study in graduate school. A coffee and discussion period followed.

Fulbright-Hays Fellowships Available

The U.S. Office of Education announces Fulbright-Hay Graduate Fellowships for study abroad of non-West European Languages and related areas for 1967-68. The program's purpose is to enable graduate students who plan to teach in U.S. institutions of higher education to undertake language and are research and study abroad in their fields of specialization.

Applicants must have completed two years of graduate study in the U.S. Preference will be given to students who are planning to carry out dissertation research and who will have taken their preliminary examinations for the Ph.D. degree before the start of the award. Awards include round-trip, a maintenance allowance, an allowance for up to four dependents, project allowance, tuition and insurance.

Further information is available in the Graduate College Office, 107 Waterman.

ATTENTION BRIDGE PLAYERS

Due to a ponderous lack of interest, manifest by the student body, in the current meeting time of the bridge club, the officers unanimously voted to reschedule it to meet on Saturday night at 10:30. Henceforth, all interested bridge players are urged to come at that time.

DRUGS

Following Dow's address there was a brief question and answer period. One question was, "What do you know about drug use here in Burlington?" Dow replied that there was a definite usage of Amphetamines and Barbiturates, but he knew of no use of LSD. He then added that there would be a "pill party" that evening in Burlington. However, he made no further comment.

Following Mr. Dow's address there were three added speakers with their own personal points of view on the subject. First, Dr. Murdi McDonald spoke on drugs and the human body.

Dr. McDonald brought out three points which are all of grave seriousness. "What drugs are safe?" he asked. His answer was none. "No drugs are safe, they are all poison." Also, "If one pill does the job well, will two pills do it better?" Dr. McDonald commented on how important the proper dosage of drugs are, and commented on the importance of the right usage while dealing with drugs. Lastly, Dr. McDonald specified, "If you don't feel right, should you take a pill?" Normally the answer was definitely not, and he warned the audience that pills should be used as little as possible, and only under the orders of a doctor.

The second speaker was Dr. Charles Ravaris from the UVM Psychiatry Department. Dr. Ravaris' purpose was to speak about drugs in research and treatment.

Dr. Ravaris stated that it was doubtful if a drug such as an Hallucinogen could cure emotional disorders. Most psychiatrists work with Barbiturates, or as most people refer to them--tranquilizers. The tranquilizers work as anti-depressants and relieve anxiety and tension. LSD in research could be useful to some people, however detrimental to others. Since LSD is being used experimentally only by doctors now, Dr. Ravaris could not actually comment on what the drug would do for a patient with a subconscious problem.

Following Dr. Ravaris and completing the evening of lectures, the audience and the pleasure of hearing Dr. J. Ward Stackpole speak on drugs and the adolescents.

"The drug-using adolescents, think only of themselves, and know everything," Dr. Stackpole commented bluntly. "The girls are foolish, modest, and immoral in their speech, dress, and behavior." This generation is making great usage of modern day drugs, but why? The answer is not an easy one, however Dr. Stackpole feels that they want to be independent, and to achieve this, hostility of authority is inevitable.

"Drug usage makes the kids different, and accepts him into a select group. The drugs are readily available, status and adventure is involved, and pills are so easy to get.

"The people are fooling with fire." It was said and pills are the first step towards drug addiction. Only five percent of all reformed addicts stay reformed, and usually involve four other people with drugs during their lifetime. To wrap it up, Dr. Stackpole commented a very short but effective line, "These people who fool with drugs underestimate life."

Loft Presents Spontaneity Theatre

The Loft announces a first for our Burlington community - Spontaneity Theatre. Once a month for the next three months, the Loft will have a "Happening".

The dates are October 29 and the second Sundays in November and December, from 8:15 to 10 p.m. Dr. John Miller, clinical psychologist and psychodramatist, will be the director. He has directed sociodramas in New York City, as well as in the mid west.

In describing Spontaneity Theatre, he said what happens depends on the group, but he prefers to see if the group can explore the important social problems of the day.

Last year, one of the dramas which the Loft put on was concerned with girl attacked in New York, in which 30 people witnessed and in which no one ever called the police. The theme seemed to be "So Not To Be Involved."

Tickets for October 29 will be on sale at the door for $1.00 per person. For further information, call Dr. Boyd Post, ext. 398.

a SMILE for volunteers. SMILE is an acronym for the five areas the department considers important in judging applicants. They are: Skills, Motivation, Interpersonal Relations, Languages, and Emotional Maturity. The Peace Corps Volunteer considers himself in a different light than the American public does. He did not join the Corps to teach the "American way" or to preach the "Christian way." He went abroad to participate in an exchange of ideas and to learn the customs of the host country.

An example of a problem encountered by volunteers in the "teacher-trainer" program is the lack of high school preparation received by those students who wish to enter a university. An excerpt from "Volunteer," the magazine issued monthly to volunteers, says, "Last year's trigonometry student may very well be this year's trigonometry teacher, because the school may not be able to find anyone better..."

Indicative of the personal rewards of Peace Corps service is the experience of Lloyd A. Stevens, age 40. He has been totally blind for fifteen years and went to Nepal to start the only school for the many blind children there. Stevens tells how his status has altered considerably from what it was for the first few months of his service — "something of a carnival performer on a round-the-world tour. Rickshaw drivers and shopkeepers no longer wonder at the strange American who walks among them. Instead they are quick to explain to friends that there is now a place where their blind can be taught."

There is the humorous aspect of the Peace Corps as well. Two Indian-bound groups are scheduled to train together in Boston for rodent eradication and cottage industries projects. They have already been labelled "rat-man and bobbin."

When they can, large industries and corporations try to aid the volunteers. For example, "Reader's Digest" is available free of charge to all volunteers for the length of their term of service.

Why not visit the Peace Corps Recruiting Volunteers and have some questions answered about the Peace Corps?

Bulotsky Wins Scholarship

Alan Burton Bulotsky, of 41 Chester Ave., Brockton, Mass., has been designated the New York Life Insurance Company medical scholar at the University of Vermont for 1966-67.

He began his study of medicine this fall, following graduation magna cum laude from the University of Massachusetts in June.

Vermont is one of 11 schools in the country selected by the New York Life Insurance Company for its Medical Student Scholarship Program, which was initiated this year.

The $2,140 scholarship covers cost of tuition, books, housing, board and equipment. It is subject to annual renewal based on satisfactory performance of the recipient.

Bulotsky is the son of Benjamin Bulotsky. He was graduated from Brockton High School and was 39th in academic rating in his class of 880 at the University of Massachusetts.

He was a pre-medical major and concentrated on the study of zoology. His senior honors research was on the "Histology of the Mouse Kidney."

WHO JOINS THE PEACE CORPS? PROFILE EMERGES IN SURVEY

Who is the Peace Corps Volunteer? Or, at least, who thinks about becoming a Volunteer?

Among more than 1,200 college seniors quizzed last spring on 58 campuses in a Louis Harris survey of student attitudes toward the Peace Corps, this composite answer emerged:

Compared with the total sample, 250 seniors who already had applied to and been accepted by the Peace Corps tended:

- to come more from schools and homes in the East and West;
- to come from state (thus larger) schools;
- to major in liberal arts;
- to be active on campus in areas other than student government;
- to be more often women (although about 60 per cent of all Volunteers are men);
- to have younger, better educated parents;
- to have fathers who are more often professional or executives;
- to come from higher income families.

The UVM International Club will have its October meeting, 8:00 p.m., Friday, October 21, in the Marsh Lounge of Billings Student Center. All foreign students, staff, and faculty (as well as interested friends) are invited for an evening of parlor games. Foreign members are invited to wear their national dress, while the rest are invited to come in costume.

Students Owe More Money

More students are leaving college owing more money.

Figures gathered by University of Vermont Financial Aid Director Allen Walker show that the value of outstanding loans has increased from $244,000 in 1949 to $735,000 five years ago, and to $1,860,000 last June.

Those figures are just the indebtedness accrued by young men and women at the University before they leave campus to make their way in the world. Walker says the same thing is happening nationally. In effect, he says, colleges and universities must offer loan aid to students they consider needy and deserving of scholarship aid, but there is "just not sufficient scholarship funds available for the job."

The University of Vermont is more favorably endowed with scholarship funds than most state universities. Its Wilbur Fund alone — generous gift of an adopted Bermonter — this year produced over $133,000 shared by 246 Vermonter. In all, the University this year, awarded $528,000 in scholarship aid out of a scholarship-loan-work total of more than $1,000,000. Over 1400 students shared.

But Walker says additional scholarship aid would have been awarded if available. He cites the new educational opportunity grant program administered by the Office of Health, Education and Welfare. This year, the first year of the program, the University of Vermont received $50,000 to award as scholarships. "But, using standards set by Health Education and Welfare, students at the University would have been eligible in terms of need for an additional $250,000 had the funds been available."

$4,000 DEBTS NOT UNUSUAL

Walker says it is not unusual for students graduating after four years of college to owe up to $4,000 in loan fund programs alone. In 1965, 247 students graduating or terminating their education left the University owing a total of $252,000. That's an average of $1,020, the range was $40 to $5300. The latter figure was owed by a medical student, but more than one undergraduate had accumulated close to the $4,000 loan total the University considers the maximum under normal circumstances.

Walker notes that the student may very well owe additional money, the University doesn't know about.

Someone summed the matter up by asking: "Why is it the young man graduating owing three or four thousand dollars always falls in love with a coed who owes likewise?"

MORE LOAN PROGRAMS ARE AVAILABLE THAN SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAMS

In any event, funds available for loan programs are increasing faster than funds available for scholarship. The impact of the federal loan programs has made the most dramatic impact. In 1961-62, the University awarded $184,000 in loans. The amount rose to $221,000 in 1962, $242,000 in 1963, and to $451,000 in 1964, when a major increase in federal loans became available.

Walker is encouraged by the fact that more business and industry firms are making scholarship funds available, and he cites the Federal Motors Scholarship program as "one of the best plans," because "they bring a national program down to the grass roots level. They give us four scholarships — one a year — and we select the recipients."

Similar plans in which the University of Vermont shares have been established by Sears Roebuck, Western Electric and, in Vermont, the Cone Automatic Machine Co., in Windsor. Last year, the New York Life Insurance Co., made a similar scholarship program available for medical students, with UVM's medical college one of 11 named to share in the plan.

"This means students don't have to compete nationally, and it encourages more students to apply. Under our system, we don't ask students to apply for any specific scholarship funds. Rather, we consider each case individually, and make awards out of our total funds available, using the Wilbur Fund where it is most applicable, other funds in other cases."

Marston Club Gives Auden Festival

In its festival of "Auden," The Marston Graduate English Club will feature Auden's eclogue, The Age of Anxiety.

The Age of Anxiety is referred to be critiques as a "baroque eclogue" - "a natural setting contrasted with an artificial style of diction."

In discussing the stage reading, Mr. Ernest Cabrera, director, Mrs. Ghita Picoff, director of publicity, and Dr. Robert Caswell, of the UVM English Department, brought out several notable points of interest. They said that to their knowledge the poem has never been presented on stage. Mr. Cabrera is "trying to make the poem come alive on the stage" because it has "such dramatic elements that it is viable for the stage."

Although Leonard Bernstein wrote a symphony, based on Auden's eclogue, baroque music was chosen as background music to add an extra note of interest.

NOTE: Last week, the CYNIC SAID, "Yeats". It is Auden. Sorry.

Comic Book Craze Sweeps US Campuses

According to a magazine article published (in Esquire - August 18) comic books are becoming so popular with college students that over 50,00 of them now pay a dollar each to belong to a comic book 'society' with chapters on more than a hundred campuses.

"Quoted in the article in Esquire, William David Sherman, an English teacher at the State University at Buffalo, explains that he uses certain comic books in his course on contemporary American Literature."

David Stone, a student at Cornell University quoted in the article says: The books "often stretch the pseudoscientific imagination far into the phantasmagoria of other dimensions, problems of time and space, and even the semitheological concept of creation." Comments?

Join the Peace Corps... or join General Electric

Let's face it, the Peace Corps isn't for everybody. (Neither is medicine, law or social work.) But you can get a lot of the same kind of satisfaction from a job with General Electric.

Because we, too, are trying to make life on earth more livable.

That can mean a job designing a new satellite to forecast weather. Or supplying nuclear reactors to generate electricity more cheaply than ever before. Or controlling smog in our cities and pollution in our streams.

It can mean better lighting to cut down crime. It can mean new rapid-transit systems to unclog traffic.

All it takes is brains, imagination, drive and a fairly rugged constitution. These qualities can get you a job with General Electric - or with the Peace Corps.

If you choose the Peace Corps, we'll understand. But when the day comes that you leave the Corps, remember us. You'll still be young, and at General Electric, the young men are important men.

Hoopsters Start Practice

By George Passage

The varsity basketball team has been busy every afternoon in the gym attempting to get back in shape before formal practice begins Oct. 17. Second year coach Art Locke greeted his players at a meeting last month and outlined a pre-season training schedule consisting of weight-lifting and cross-country running. Coach Locke feels this pre-season training was an important factor in last year's successful campaign (12-8).

Graduation certainly left a large hole in last year's lineup and Coach Locke is looking to the underclassmen for the answers. Ken Spalter, Milt Goggans and Layne Higgs, the number 1, 2, 3 scorers respectively will have to be replaced if UVM is to have another winning season. This trio's rebounding and playmaking will also have to be replaced.

To answer some of these questions are returning senior lettermen Captain Bruce "Streak" Hanna and Russ Boardman. Besides providing his usual fine defense and playmaking ability, Hanna will have to supply the leadership needed to quarterback the young squad. At 6'5", Boardman should clear the boards regularly. Bill Librera, Alden Hale, Don Katz and Sandy McLeod are returning lettermen in the junior class. Librera, who

Coach Art Locke drives home another point in practice. (Credit: Rochester, SPS) averages 11.2 points per game and had 144 rebounds last year is the Cat's top returning offensive threat. Don Katz, who amazed the fans with his spectacular foul shooting last year (92% from the line) could be an important factor in Coach Locke's plans this year. Alden Hale, 6'4" and Sandy McLeod, 6'3" could provide the lineup with its much needed height. Promising sophomores are Dave Lapointe, 6'2", Terry O'Leary, 5'10", Bob Jacobs, 5'10", and Richie Kellogg, 6'1". Billy Schmitt and Dick Shaw, 6'5" are also expected to don the green and gold this winter although they were not on the team last year.

FROSH BEAT BRIDGTON

The freshman football team also remained undefeated last by defeating Bridgton Academy, 14-12 on Friday to up their record to 2-0. Halfback Harry Canning of Danmora, N.Y., scored on a two point conversion to make the difference in the final score. Other standouts include backs Frank Mazanec and Bob Shookus. The Kittens will try to make it three in a row this Friday when they host the Williams frosh at 2:00.

Soccer Club Points To UMass Game Title Bound?

By Ted Ryan

October 29 will apparently be the day of decision for the University of Vermont soccer team.

On that day, the boosters will host the University of Massachusetts in what now shapes up to be the Yankee Conference game of the year.

The Catamounts turned aside an attempted upset by a young and aggressive New Hampshire unit a week ago, thus dashing UNH's hopes for the title. Massachusetts tied with the University of Rhode Island on the same day, putting Vermont into first place with a half-game advantage over U Mass.

Before Vermont plays Massachusetts in the big ones, the Cats will host underdog Union on Tuesday.

Vermont is the only unbeaten, untied team in the Yankee Conference. Pre-season co-favorite Connecticut has been eliminated from the title scramble with losses to both U Mass and UVM. U Mass is undefeated but is half a game behind the Vermonters by virtue of its tie with Rhode Island.

If Vermont beats U Mass, the Cats will virtually wrap up the title. Only a clash with Maine on Nov. 5 will remain on the Vermont YanCon.

Coach Hal Greig again expressed pleasure with his charges after their win in a "very close ball game against tough, young New Hampshire team which showed tremendous improvement over last year."

Vermont dominated the early part of the game, which was played on a warm day. At the six-minute mark, Pete Baldwin took a lead pass from Jack Semler and hammered a low shot under the hands of the UNH goalie.

UNH roared back during the next two periods, outshooting the Cats 13-7. The Wildcats tied the score in the third period on Glenn Aborn's boot pass. Vermont goalie John Hilton, "It was kicked beautifully into the right corner," Greig stated.

At the 2:40 mark of the final period, Jimmy Wood broke in on the UNH goalie and slid across the front of the goal. Jeff Hyman, coming in from his outside left position, then poked the ball into the nets.

Vermont continued its domination throughout the period and at the 10:30 mark, a UNH touched the ball with his hand in a melee in front of the UNH goal. Center fullback Bob Schroeder then iced the game with a free kick into the nets.

Each squad took 19 shots on goal with UNH goal Ron Spaulding making eight saves and Hilton stopping six shots for Vermont.

Frosh Harriers Win Twice

By Mick Kropsky

A strong south wind was blowing as Coach Archie Post's Freshman Cross Country squad paced Rice Memorial and Essex High Schools this past weekend in Burlington. UVM won the tri-meet as was expected. What was not expected was that Tom Cook, who had paced the freshman harriers the week before in their triumph over R.P.I. and Williams, would set a course record, breaking the old mark by a whole 30.4 seconds. Despite the strong wind opposing him, Cook ran the 2.78 mile course in a blistering 15 minutes and 6.8 seconds. Coach Post's frosh team is now 2-0 on the season. On October 22, they will face Rutland, Vergennes, and Burlington high schools and on October 26 they will run against Paul Smiths in a dual meet.

While the freshman harriers were winning their tri-meet, the varsity squad was not doing so well, as they were being defeated by a strong Maine team. Prior to the Maine meet, however, Coach Post's varsity runners had had quite a bit of success. In their first outing they came in second in a tri-meet with R.P.I. and Williams.

After that the varsity harriers solidly beat Plattsburgh State with Chaintreuil, Jones, Coleman, and Howard all of UVM taking the first four places. The final score was UVM-18, Plattsburgh State-40. (In cross country the low score wins. Each place of the first five runners of a team counts as a score. For example, if UVM first five runners placed 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, and 7th their total score would be 17.)

The varsity harriers, like the freshmen, will be at home this weekend in a dual meet against Boston State.

Girls Notice

Each year the Women's Recreation Association awards the rotating all-sports trophy to the women's living unit which is outstanding in its participation in WRA tournaments. The trophy is awarded on much the same basis as the intramural sports trophy received by the fraternities.

We hope that the interest and enthusiasm will be high this year in competing for the trophy. If there are any questions concerning sports now in season don't hesitate to contact the Women's Physical Education Department. All are welcome!

Skiers Start Training

By Ted Ryan

The leaves are still on the trees but UVM's ski team is hard at work training for the upcoming season under the leadership of co-captains Scott Leake and Peter Sargent.

The 12 aspirants do distance, interval and sprint running three days a week and work with weights under the Norwegian Nordic Team program for three days. On Sunday the entire group hikes through mountainous terrain.

Coach Bob Stone, who will conduct the session in November after the freshmen soccer season is over, has plenty of talent returning but the glaring weakness in the Vermont squad is the lack of top-quality jumpers.

Stone attributes this flaw to the lack of a ski jump facility for UVM members.

"We have no outstanding jumpers because they all choose to go elsewhere when they learn that we don't have jumping facilities," Stone stated.

Leake, an A-classification cross country skier, and Sargent, a good alpinist, will be joined by alpinists Bob Bender, Harold Doria, James Howe, T.D. McCormick, and Chris Stephens. Jeff Marsh and Lucien Pacquette are cross-country men while Bill Geller and Greg Gallagher will compete in all four events. Bob Jerard will participate in cross-country, jumping, and alpine events.

Among the 41 aspirants in freshmen skiing are three class A's alpinists and four class B's alpinists.

Stone will be taking a close look at Jeff Berger, Peter MacConnell, Charles Goodrich, Neil Mackey, George Peterson, Tom Cook, Stearn Leathen and Fred Pool, a Colorado product.

Bob Mitchell Continues Assault On Records

Vermont Faces State Foe Norwich

THE INSIDER

BY LEO PFEIFFER

"A winner can never afford the luxury of a vacation." These were the words that were drummed into the Catamounts before the New Hampshire game, mainly because there was a tinge of complacency going into it. Regardless, the Cats overwhelmed the upset-minded Wildcats... for the first half. Everything went right as the Green Machine swarmed over, under, around and through the bewildered Wildcats in mechanical precision. Ball control seemed to be the criterion of success as the Wildcats ran only 18 plays the entire half, and these the "Wolf Pack" smothered.

This brings to mind the fact that nobody has been able to stop the Cats in the first half when it had to be proven who the superior team was. Once this is made clear, the Cats have a tendency to coast instead of running a score up.

The second half started and the vacation... and ulcers... began. As the coaches said Sunday night, never again this year will the Cats allow an opposing team to score three T.D.'s in a half and come out a winner.

Instrumental in the win, of course, was Big Bob Mitchell, and his kitchen sink, namely his blockers Jim Culhane, Fuzzy Martin, Jim Sullivan, Dave Lucaroni, etc. Pete Clifford made his father look like a genius by switching him to flanker to fill the shoes of Dick Herbert, presently a commentator for the games on radio.

An interesting thing happened when one of Vermont's drives bogged down and a field goal attempt was made from the 37 yard line. One of the New Hampshire players broke through the line as the ball was snapped and nudged Joe Soldano. After the kick (which was wide), Joe did a good bit of acting here as he fell on the ground writhing and holding his leg until he saw the penalty flag fly and 15 yards stepped off. Then he hopped up and trotted to the bench as Vermont got the first down.

Tucker Nelson seems to have shaken his injury and played a good game and Pete Ambrose did a good job on kickoffs.

Nobody seems to know exactly what caused the second half collapse but what happened was exactly what everybody tried to prevent. A typical explanation was a combination of New Hampshire shaking the hex that Vermont has had on them for four years and Vermont coasting.

Once a team gets started rolling it is the hardest thing in the world to stop. However, the Cats put just enough effort in the half to win and slowly walked into the locker room. If anybody had already been in there he never would have known the team had come in. Nobody said a word. All that could be heard was cleats on the floor and equipment coming off. Finally somebody realized Vermont had won. John Gurrieri was first, shouting that Vermont had won, were 4-0 and the game was behind us. That broke the ice but not the memory, which will haunt the Cats until they redeem themselves next Saturday.

And speaking of memories, everybody has one about the game with Norwich of past years. Norwich has openly stated that they would rather beat Vermont than all their other games combined and point their whole season toward the Cats. The Cadets have had victory snatched right out of their grasp the last two years in the closing minutes of the game, and this year with the 4-1 record, they definitely have plans to making their dream come true. However, the Cats will not be caught napping this year. As the team was running wind sprints Monday afternoon, Coach Clifford said to the team, "Everytime you open a book this week, you should see nothing but Cadets." Said somebody from the back of the ranks, "Yeah, and by the end of the season we'll be in Viet Nam seeing real Cadets." That's the sacrifice you have to make.

Mitchell Pounding Out Yards

University of Vermont junior halfback Bob Mitchell has established an all-time NCAA College Division record for rushing attempts in one game it was learned Monday (Oct. 17).

The 5-11, 205 buldozer carried the ball 47 times Saturday in gaining 205 yards and scoring three touchdowns to lead the undefeated Catamounts over New Hampshire, 32-34.

An NCAB official said Monday that he is certain that no College Division players had carried as many times in one game. Although records were sketchy, the NCAB official said the mark was with "38 or 39."

Mitchell's 47 carries tied the NCAA Major College mark which was also set Saturday. Don Fitzgerald of Kent State in Ohio lugged the ball 47 times to break the old University mark of 45.

The Vermont halfback sensation is the chief reason why the Catamounts have reached the halfway point in their schedule.

Rugged Cadets To Be Led By QB Moskal

By George Passage

The University of Vermont football team will be looking for its fifth win as in many games this Saturday when it travels to Northfield, Vt., to engage in a State series battle with the Cadets of Norwich.

The Maroon and Gold, under second year coach Joseph Sabol, have a fine veteran squad led by high scoring quarterback Al Moskal. The Cadets are also blessed with a fine runner in fullback Thomas Couture. The Northfield eleven have won four games in a row, the latest a 33-14 belting over St. Lawrence, and certainly Clifford has never lost to Norwich, they are annually one of the toughest opponents. In the last two years UVM has beaten Norwich by a total of only five points. This will be the first State series game for both teams and it looks like it will be a good one.

In last Saturday's Homecoming battle with UNH, Bob Mitchell continued his bone crushing running by leading the Cats to 32-34 victory over the Yankee Conference foe. Mitchell carried the ball 47 times for 205 yards (both single game records) and brought his season totals in these two departments to 146 attempts and 695 yards (both season records).

first scores, Jack Schweberger and Jeff Kuhman continued their fine pass receiving. Schweberger caught his third TD pass of the season, a 31 yarder from quarterback Jack Stroke. Tackles Dave Lucaroni and Jim Sullivan, guards Bill Crudo and Dan Martin and center Dave Chapman make up one of the best interior lines in New England as can be proven by UVM's offensive statistics.

Although the defensive team had a sub-par second half Saturday, their brilliant first half proved to be the difference in the game. The Wolff Pack (contrary to common belief the de-have the momentum to give the Cats a tough day. Also, it is rumored that the Cadets are still moaning the 7-6 loss Vermont pinned on them last year. Dick Herbert's 50 yard punt return and Joe Soldano's point after touchdown late in the game is something the Cadets have thought about all year. Vermont holds the series edge over the Cadets 15-36-6, and although Coach

KW Skit Preparation Has Begun

Preparation for the 70th Annual Kake Walk, February 16, 17, 18, 1967 has already begun. Many houses have started writing the scripts to skits which they would like to present on the nights of walking. The selection of three of these skits for presentations is the first of many highly competitive aspects of Kake Walk, sanctioned by the Kake Walk Committee.

The preparation and presentation of a skit is a very laborious, time consuming, yet gratifying experience for a fraternity. A maximum of house unity, spirit, house devotion and a devotion towards a good Kake Walk weekend is required for an undertaking of this sort. With the skit presentation having these ingredients, campus wide publicity and respect is gained by a fraternity. Because the Kake Walk Committee feels the presentation of a skit represents the true spirit of the weekend, any house presenting on a obviously has an excellent chance of winning the Lechnyr Trophy. This trophy is given to the house which exemplifies most the spirit and ideals of Kake Walk. Over the years, this has become the most coveted of all Kake Walk awards.

A keener competition for skit presentation is in the making this year. The attraction lies in the fact that sequences of the skits this year are being filmed and that the films will be made available to the houses participating. These films will prove particularly valuable in rushing and public relations.

Last week two girls were slightly injured in an accident in front of Waterman as they were crossing the street. A nurse from the infirmary, believing them to be UVM students came to the scene and helped them gather their things together before they went to the Emergency Ward of DeGoesbriand Hospital.

The two girls were high school students from Barre, visiting a debating workshop here.

Also last week a coal slag heap slid down a hillside in Wales and killed between one and two hundred people, mostly school children. This tragedy was grieved by people throughout Great Britain and the world, as experts tried to ascertain the cause.

The people in the civilized village had for years attempted to have action taken on removing the danger from above them, but their pleas had been ignored.

For years students, faculty, and administration have attempted to cut down on the potentially tragic traffic situation aggravated by student pedestrians. There have been no major results.

Last year the CYNIC conducted an interview with the man who is now UVM's president, concerning the traffic situation on campus. President Rowell then unfolded the major plans which he hoped could be put into effect to cut down on the danger to students on this campus.

The cooperation of the city of Burlington was needed, however, (Continued on Page Two)

President Lyman S. Rowell explains University budget problems. (Credit: Buchanan, SPS)

Rowell Explains Tuition Rise

"We didn't try to balance the budget this way," explained President Lyman Rowell, referring to the recently announced tuition increase for the coming year.

"However," he continued, "I don't think there ought to be free education. Each partner should contribute something." But, the president said, he did not believe the able student should be prevented from obtaining an education because of financial difficulties.

Speaking to a group in Memorial Lounge Tuesday afternoon, Mr. Rowell said he did not believe the $11 million increase in the budget from last year was "too bad" considering the new programs being undertaken.

He said one reason for the increases in tuition was the fact the total university budget was growing faster than the student body. Moreover, he said, since Vermont is a comparatively small state, it neither can nor will provide as great financial support as most other states.

On the average, a state provides about 50-55 per cent of the funds for state institutions but Vermont state appropriations this year account for only 28 per cent of the total university budget and are expected to provide only 31.5 per cent of the financial support for the coming fiscal year the President said.

He also pointed out UVM has been a state university only since 1955 and custom also is a factor in determining the state appropriations.

The percent of the total state income budgeted for the college, has, however, been dropping since 1963-64, according to Mr. Rowell. In that year the figure was 10.4 percent, while for the coming year the request amounts to only 9.3 percent of state resources.

Another reason for the raise in tuition, the president explained, was that legislators would probably have been far more reluctant to grant the requested increase in funds if tuition had been left at the same level.

They would have regarded tuition as an untapped source of funds and have the university to raise fees. "We'd rather do it ourselves than have the state tell us what to do," declared Mr. Rowell.

STATE ASSISTANCE

Responding to a student question regarding state assistance to in-state students to hold defray the increase in tuition, Mr. Rowell said he would not request such aid from the state. But, he went on, both gubernatorial candidates had "deplored" the increase and had said such assistance should be provided.

"I certainly will support the winner's efforts to keep his campaign promises," remarked Mr. Rowell.

In explaining how the final out-of-state tuition figures for the coming year were determined, the president said a comparison was made with a number of area private schools. The University, he said, serves in effect as a private schools for those students, and he said he feels the education it provides is comparable.

ADMITS TUITION IS HIGH

He concluded, however, he did regret the high figure for in-state students.

This is the most expensive for state students of all land grant colleges.

The president pointed out, however, one-third of all in-state tuition fees are paid by scholarships from the Wilbur Fund, and he said the university is presently seeking comparable aid for non-Vermonters.

Parents' Day Is Saturday

The fourth annual Fall Parents' Day sponsored by the UVM Family Associates will be held Saturday, October 29, 1966. This year, as has been the custom, the Day is scheduled after the end of the first marking period to best acquaint the parents to the University and its academic life. They are also invited to attend a football game (Massachusetts) and a panel of Deans.

The Associates were founded in 1962 with the stated purpose "to enrich student life," to draw the families closer to the University and to help students as an extension of the family. To this end they provide gifts to students activities, including an annual gift to UVM.

The parents of each student are eligible to join at five dollars a family. According to Presidents Mr. and Mrs. William Cronin of Burlington dues have been received from over 770 families to date.

The first Parents' Day was held in 1963.

Student Writes "To Touch the Grass" Student Inspired by Beatrice Potter

By Wendy Wyatt

Is the drama in life that which is interior, inside the person, or does it lie in an attempt to express life, or is it a synthesis of two? The source of this question is the life of Beatrice Potter, an English novelist and author of Peter Rabbit. It was the inspiration for a play, "To Touch the Grass" by Jan Quackenbush, a UVM senior. The play will be presented on Sunday, October 30, at 8:30 p.m. in the Arena Theater. Admission is free.

and partly because this meant a slight tax levy, this cooperation was refused. A major part of the proposed safety plan dealt with the area on South Prospect St. in front of Waterman.

President Rowell said last year that with an increasing number of students planned for the future of UVM, an increasing amount of attention would have to be paid to campus planning and safety planning, or someday there would be a serious accident on campus.

The conclusion from two accidents last week may be that before action comes, President Rowell will have to be made a tragic prophet, like the people of a small village in Wales.

Four Vermont Students Receive G.M. Scholarships

Four Vermont students, all recipients of General Motors Scholarships, were interviewed by Kenneth N. Scott, a University of Vermont Trustee and a vice president of General Motors. The University of Vermont Student Aid Committee selects the freshman recipient each year. The Class of 1970 recipient is John St. Peter of St. Johnsbury, a 1966 graduate of St. Johnsbury Academy. He plans to major in physics and work in math and physics as it relates to Space Technology. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick P. St. Peter of St. Johnsbury.

Also at the dinner were the participants from the senior, junior and sophomore classes.

The senior GM Scholarship participant is Michael LaPointe of Winooski. LaPointe is majoring in English and plans to join the Peace Corps following graduation. The Winooski High graduate is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George LaPointe.

James White of Groton, the junior class participant, is majoring in chemistry and hopes to enter the research field. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hazen T. White of Groton.

Linda Chapman of Brattleboro, the sophomore recipient, is majoring in elementary education, preparing for a teaching career. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Chapman of Brattleboro.

Entering its 11th year, the General Motors Scholarship plan now awards financial aid to colleges and universities in all 50 states.

Last year the 300 GMScholarships were awarded to freshmen in 142 private institutions and to 82 public institutions. The range of the financial aid is from $200 to $2000. Last year, the average was for $1,172. Taking part in the program last year were 1,588 students around the United States.

Worthwhile Experience - Coffee House Service

By Debbie Arnold

After you have been to something which you think is worthwhile, you naturally want to share the experience with others. Here I go:

This morning I awoke - per usual - and hopped (?) out of my trundle bed and almost set about to wasting the half hour before lunch when I remember a sign I have been passing by every Sunday morning: "Coffee House Service in Wright Dining Hall." I pulled my legs off the desk, turned off the hi-fi and radio, placed around me some Sunday togs and ventured forth to a most interesting service.

SERVICE

This coffee house service is sponsored by the UCA (University Christian Association) and at the moment is quite small - as all things tend to be before they develop. The service begins at 10:30 in Wright dining hall and as can be imagined is quite informal. The format is as such: First a short general service is held, then coffee and donuts are served as the theologian prepares to give his sermon, which is followed by discussion.

Today the sermon concerned that faithful discourse of "Apathy at UVM." Mickey Drown, President of UCA at UVM, began his discussion (and it truly developed into a discussion) with a reading from Paul: "I know what you are doing, and that you are neither hot nor cold, I wish you were either hot or cold. As it is, since you are tepid and neither hot or cold, I am going to spit you out of my mouth." Thought provoking? . . . especially as you begin to think of yourself in such terms.

He raised three questions: 1. What is apathy? 2. Is it found at UVM, and if so to what extent? 3. How does it effect us as Christians?

Apathy, he had deduced, is a "lack of involvement, due to lack of interest, emotion and so forth, in relation to a specific group, club, organization, or movement . . . It is lack of concern, but in relation to a specific object. For example, a fellow may be quite apathetic toward the Viet Nam Protest Movement, and still get extremely 'fired-up' for a fraternity party." Hmm, thought I munching a donut.

"Is apathy found at Uvm, and if so to what extent?" He brought us on a trip looking at what students are doing. UVM "has a large and active Student Association." There are sixteen fraternities and six sororities which are growing and which do serve as worthwhile groups at times. There are fifty students participating in tutorial projects and the big brother program. These are hundreds of students participating in many clubs available at UVM, and he went even further, but I won't.

Then he said - "All these things are happening and yet we still hear the plaintive cry of apathy!" The problem is what apathy means: "Does it mean lack of involvement in any given area - or does it mean a real lack of involvement in the important issues that come before our school, our church, and our country continually." He decided it was the latter, and he had a point, thought I calmly sipping some coffee.

CHRISTIAN AND APATHY

He then asked what was the Christian's role in this situation. "Is there room in Christianity for apathy?" Paul allowed no room for a non-committal attitude towards life - and neither do, rather should I, thought I choking on my fourth donut, because I wanted to speak out.

DISCUSSION

And the chance came. For the next forty-five minutes the topic was placed in the audience, a rather small congregation. It was an interesting discussion with everybody throwing their ideas (horrors) around. And it suddenly dawned upon us that one of the problems is that most everyone on the campus does realize the apathetic atmosphere! Everyone talks about it, is disgusted by it, and then quits his endeavors for "no-one is interested." Perhaps, and I can assure you that even I don't know, the solution is each person should attempt to become "unapathetic." (It's as easy as all that!) After all, groups are made up and determined by individuals . . . and so is life . . . and so are you . . . and me? Hmm, Well, at least I thought and even spoke although my mouth was always stuffed.

All in all, and what I am trying to say, is that this service is really worthwhile. It gives you a chance to think and speak about the issues around the campus and around the world. No-one shoots eggs or laughs or calls you "out of it, because you have an opinion."

Well, I have said all I have to say, and that's all one can do (what an apathetic attitude!). The next service will be next Sunday at 10:30 in Wright dining hall. "You will never know what you have missed until you try it." (I believe Mother said that and she is usually right - horrors.) I'll be there and nor for the mere reason that I have an obsession for donuts.

And so, as Mickey closed his sermon I shall close this discourse: "We are the people of the Lord who forget who we are, and who we are called to be, and who must ever remind ourselves each day that our past is received, our present is good, and our future is open."

LSD-Heroine Of Over Blown Fairy Tale ?

"Is LSD merely the heroine of an overblown, press-exaggerated fairy tale, or is it a legitimate human experience that will permit man to explore an entire new cosmos of individual creativity?" This is the central concern in Warren R. Young's and Joseph R. Hixson's book, LSD ON CAMPUS, a Dell paperback - original published this month (60¢).

LSD ON CAMPUS is not an attempt to further any preconceived notions about the drug. It is an objective, well-documented account of the "Acid Scene" with particular emphasis on the use of LSD in American colleges and universities. The authors have drawn on to interviews with students, educators, legislators, physicians and clergymen throughout the United States in their effort to understand both the effect of the drug and the reason for its special appeal to the younger generation.

Two special chapters in LSD ON CAMPUS are devoted to Dr. Timothy Leary and the relationship between LSD and psychedelic theology. The book also contains a series of drawings made by an artist during an LSD trip, a history of the use of psychedelic drugs in the United States and a discussion of LSD effects on creativity, study, work, maturity and sex.

Offers Foreign Study Scandinavian Seminar

The Scandinavian Seminar is now accepting applications for its study program in Denmark, Finland, Norway and Sweden for academic year 1967-68.

This opportunity to combine living with learning will have special appeal both for college students and other adults who would find a year of study in a foreign country of special value.

The students in the seminar program lives from two to eight weeks with a family in his Scandinavian country, using its language daily and sharing in the activities of the community. For the major part of the year he lives and studies at a Folk High School - a residential school for young adults.

He is completely separated from his fellow American students during the seminar year, except for the short periods when he participates in the intensive language courses and the three general sessions conducted by the seminar in Denmark, Norway and Sweden. An important aspect of the student's seminar program is an individual study project in a field of special interest to him.

Over 100 American colleges and universities have given either partial or full credit for the seminar year.

The Campus Game

By Judy Triplett

For the benefit of those who remain, even at this late date, unenlightened as to the full calendar of social activities to be enjoyed on this campus, I take this opportunity, graciously allowed my by the CYNIC, to introduce the most often enjoyed, though least publicized, social activity at Vermont.

In preparation for the following, it may be helpful to first clarify a point which has only recently been brought to my attention: the calibre of the individual participant. Needless to say, all regular players are fervent in their enthusiasm, and fully appreciate the aesthetic value of such an experience. Most are also involved in better known extra-curricular activities.

For the most part it is an undergraduate function, although quite often a member of the University staff elects to join in, and more seldom a graduate student has been known to indulge. The near lack of graduate school participation is not, in general, evidence of disinterest. A considerable amount of time is necessary to the full enjoyment of the activity, and most graduate students find themselves unable to spare this amount of time in pursuit of an extra-curricular which has no direct bearing on curriculum.

Regular participants need not here concern themselves further, since they know beforehand the content of this essay. Since the "in" cliques are not always willing to share an activity which they enjoy with someone whom they consider to be "out of it", it is for the outsiders that this essay is written, that they may "get with it" and rise to the distinction of being numbered among those already "with it". For the outsiders, then, an instruction manual for THE GAME.

- 1) Arrive at Bailey Student Center anytime.
- 2) Sit anywhere, periodical or reserve sections preferred.
- 3) Open any book or magazine; look at it for 2-10 minutes, depending upon your own attention span.
- 4) Get up and join the nearest mob. (Mobs will be standing in tight clusters near those "out of it" who are attempting to study. Mobs may be easily identified by the harsh, rasping, irritating quality of their conversational drone.
- 5) Talk about anything, in as loud a whisper possible without developing a nodule then and there.
- 6) If possible, start an argument with the loudest, brassiest member of you mob. Then ask the egghead nearest you to settle the argument.
- 7) Very Important: Do not neglect other mobs. Wave often and shout personal "hellos" to people you know.

8) Either remove your shoes or knock over a bookcase. Should topics of conversation become scarce, this will attract sufficient attention to keep you group in the running. Pushing a chair around is also effective.

9) Groups will be judged by the adult library staff, and will be rated on:

- a) quality of disturbance, including originality
- b) duration of disturbance
- c) size of mob
- d) number of people disturbed

10) Judging takes place every hour on the half hour (allowing time for arrival and adequate preparation after class). In the event that the staff is having their judge it, and students contests will be postponed until next hour.

Those desiring to be initiated into THE GAME are cordially invited any time. It's more enjoyable just before exams or germ papers when everyone is there.

If you have any questions, just ask the first "in" person you see. He's the one with his mouth open. His group can use all the support it can get.

Perception

By Jan Quackenbush

In his essay "On My Philosophy," 1941, Jaspers wrote:
The alternative "nothing or everything" stands before our age as the question of man's spiritual destiny.

Observing the precursors of the "Great Society," it would seem that we have happily answered that question by choosing the "everything."

If, on the other hand, we heed the warnings of those "un-Americans," all indicates that we have chosen "nothing" and are ingloriously treading the flooding waters of oblivion.

Either way, the indication is that we have chosen. I believe that we have compromised between the "nothing or everything" and feverishly chosen the "anything." The "anything" that we can grasp hold of to stay afloat or, more pointedly — alive; that to stay contentedly alive is all we are reaching for. Worst of all it is, apparently, all that we hope for.

This simple choice, to grasp "anything," represents a value judgement by us: "anything is better than 'nothing' and, although not 'everything,' is is 'something.'"

That we have thus chosen is the cause of our vast un-easiness and dis-satisfaction. It is the cause of our soaring criminal tendencies because, by choosing "anything," we are, in fact, already thieves. Obviously, we have robbed somebody else of that particular thing. And, not un-related, we are robbing ourselves of any possible chance to approach perfection in ourselves, because the state of being perfect is "everything."

Although we might be ashamed to admit it, we — human beings, are by nature desirous of perfection. When we believe we aren't perfect, we are consciously sad. When we choose not to strive towards completeness of self, we are, consciously or unconsciously, tragic.

The moral of all this is a simple one: if we want to be happy, we must strive to be "all things" and not simply "something." By so employing ourselves, we can be happy because we are then — compatible with ourselves.
I'll go back to sleep now.

Challenges like these have raised a new generation of idea men at G.E. If you're good enough to join them, you'll find responsibilities come to you early. Your talents are recognized, your work is rewarded — in money and in opportunity.

This time next year, you could be on your way. Talk to the man from G.E. next time he visits your campus. And don't be surprised if he's young, too. At General Electric, the young men are important men.

Carlson, Essex Junction; Robert J. Florczak, Fairfield, Conn.; James A. Freeman, Great Barrington, Mass.; Robert W. Jensen, Richmond, Vt.; David E. Lambert, Lunenburg, Mass.; Thomas E. Mills, Burlington; Frederick M. Ober, J., Saxtons River, Vt.; Douglas G. Orvis, Burlington; David A. Peura, Peabody, Mass.; Michael J. Reardon, Wallingford, Conn.; Michael P. Ricciardi, Oyster Bay, New York; Peter E. Rising, Glen Head, L.I., New York; John N. Rutledge, Scotia, N.Y.; John C. Schweberger, Weehawken, N.J.; and Joseph D. Soldano, West New York, N.J. Their selection was based on their leadership abilities, high moral character, and aptitude for military service. Each cadet receiving the award must be above average in academic standing, and must have distinguished himself in military studies. If the cadets maintain their standing throughout the senior year, they will be designated Distinguished Military Graduates when they receive their baccalaureate degrees. Being chosen as DMS further allows them to accept commissions in the Regular Army.

SFC OVITT REJOINS MILITARY SCIENCE DEPARTMENT

SFC Thomas R. Ovitt, who left UVM in August for assignment with the 1st Infantry Division in Vietnam, rejoined the Military Science Department as an instructor this week.

SFC Ovitt was wounded by mortar fire on August 25th and evacuated to the Chelsea Naval Hospital in Massachusetts. At the time he was wounded, SFC Ovitt was serving as a Platoon Sergeant, Company C, 1st Battalion, 2nd Infantry. Soldiers evacuated to the United States as a result of wounds are given credit for a full 12 month tour in Vietnam and are subject to reassignment elsewhere upon recovery.

PERSHING RIFLES PLEDGES LEARN COMBATIVES

The Pledges of Company L-12, PERSHING RIFLES, have recently completed an intensive five-week program in hand-to-hand combat. During this course of instruction, mandatory for becoming a brother, they were instructed in the basic fall positions, throws, counters to knife attacks, and attacks to vulnerable points -- all of which follow the Regular Army training program.

Each week the instruction began with a period of physical conditioning selected from the "6-12" program used by the U.S. Special Forces. The conditioning phase of training was followed by a demonstration of the combatives techniques to be learned. These techniques were then practiced until they became natural.

The course was not only exciting, fun, and educational, but also involved hard work, sweat, and a few bruises. However, serious injury was prevented by intensive supervision by the brothers.

Individual, team, and platoon competition was encouraged in preparation for the final exam held during the PERSHING RIFLES field maneuver October 22, 1966. This training will prove valuable, because it will enable the cadets to take care of themselves in their active duty and in later life. Completion of this course instills both pride in their outfit and confidence in themselves.

Chess Anyone ?

The UVM Chess Club will hold a circuit tournament in Billings North Lounge on Wednesday evening, Nov. 9 at 7:30. Dr. Hersch, adviser for the chess club, will be the feature of this tournament. Dr. Hersch who is three time chess champion of Colorado cordially invites any challengers to play him in the tournament.

Any number of challengers are welcome. Dr. Hersch will take on all opponents simultaneously by moving a piece at each table, as he works his way around the room. Each opponent will play until a check-mate has been secured or a concession made.

The idea of a simultaneous circuit tournament is not new to Dr. Hersch, he previously played another college against nine faculty members and defeated all of them.

If you have any skill in chess, come to North Billings Lounge Wednesday evening at 7:30. Dr. Hersch back up his challenge with a small cash prize to anyone who can beat him.

IFC at UVM Helps Winooski Fire Benefit

The Interfraternity Council at the University of Vermont presented a check for $50 Tuesday to the Winooski Volunteer Fire Department to permit underprivileged children to see "Tommy Scott's Hollywood Hillbillies Stage Show" the same evening.

IFC President Frederick B. Brown, a senior, presented the check to Chief Maurice Blanchard to cover the cost of admitting 50 children from St. Joseph's Child Center in Burlington and other underprivileged children.

The volunteer firemen sponsored the show to raise money for two portable generators.

Some young engineers will go through almost anything for a future with "P.S.E. & G."

Whether you're a swashbuckler or not, our personalized training program offers you the opportunity to contribute to tomorrow's challenging world. Find out if you can qualify for a stimulating and rewarding career with Public Service. See our representative when he visits your campus.

Shannon McCune Comments On University Of Hawaii

By Shannon McCune, Research
Professor of Geography

This is the first of what I hope may be a series of columns on universities, individuals, places and events that would be of interest to the students and faculty of the University of Vermont. My research project is to study higher education in the Far East - placing special concentration on some selected universities and studying the geography of the areas they serve. As a by-product I am sure to gain many impressions which I would like to share.

MOST COLORFUL CAMPUS

The University of Hawaii where I spent October 21st is the most colorful campus I have seen. Flowering bushes, palm trees, emerald grass set against cream colored buildings rival vivid colored shirts, shorts and dresses worn by the faculty and students. It is 'Aloha Week' and people were dressing in the spirit of it. The campus - just as is Hawaii - is a melting pot of races and has a very informal atmosphere. Students walk barefoot, some have beards, many girls dress in mu-mus, a full-length Hawaiian-style shift dress, faculty members appear in eye-dazzling sport shirts. Fraternities have built benches under shade trees where their members gather between classes to girl-watch. (By the way, fraternities and sororities are almost all locals, so that they are not bothered by discriminatory restrictions which obviously are not condoned in Hawaii.)

BUILT 60 YEARS AGO

The University was built sixty years ago on the outskirts of Honolulu, now the city has grown around and far beyond it. Nestled against the hills, there is very little room for expansion. There are a couple of high-rise dormitories, but most of the 15,000 students commute. The University has branches and experiment stations on the other islands. It operates three community colleges as a part of the university. Next year's budget is up $26 million over this year's, a total of $64 million for operating funds and $40 million for new buildings. They expect 25,000 students in 1975. Its graduate and specialized program are growing, but its major emphasis have been on undergraduate teaching and associated research and public service programs.

Time Waits For No One?

Have you ever eaten lunch in minus five minutes? Did you ever walk fast enough between Lafayette and Billings to have it take you minus two minutes? Finally, have you ever walked into Waterman and found that on the ground floor you are five minutes late for class, only to discover that by the time you get to the second floor and rush in, you have burst in on the late five minutes of the class before yours?

This is a common problem among students at UVM. Someone really should organize the clocks in order to preserve the sanity of students and faculty. Don't forget - when you ask what time it is make sure you specify what time you want - first, second, third floor Waterman, or perhaps you'd like north, south, east, west Ira Allen, maybe Billings, or would you believe good old Daylight Savings Time!

Because of its location in the Pacific, the University gives special attention to tropical agriculture, oceanography and Pacific and Asian studies. For example, the geography department offers separate courses on the geography of Japan, China, Southeast Asia, and the Pacific Islands. There is even a course on the history of Korea! I had the fun of teaching one class in this; there were fourteen very alert students, ranging from sophomores to Ph.D. candidates.

PACIFIC AREA STUDIES

There are two features of the University that UVM students and faculty might be particularly interested in. First, the two six weeks summer sessions which offer a great array of specialized courses on the Pacific area. It would be a new educational experience to join the 10,000 students, who come from the mainland each summer. The second feature is the East-West Center for Cultural and Technical Interchange. The Center designed to promote mutual understanding between the peoples of Asia and the United States is located on the campus in a complex of dramatic buildings. It is supported by the United States government with a six million dollar appropriation this year. They have some very good fellowships for mainland students who want to start graduate work in Far Eastern studies. American students enjoy their contact with Asian students who come mainly for technical and scientific studies. The Americans travel to the Far East and the Asians to the mainland as a part of their program. I was told that they would welcome applications from UVM students. The East-West center also has a program for senior scholars who wish to use the library and other facilities for research. UVM faculty members might explore these possibilities, though they should be warned that the cost of living is pretty high, for example, gas is 40 cents a gallon.

PARKING - THERE TOO

It was a lot of fun to spend a day on the campus. Parking is a major problem! They charge students $20 a semester for parking privileges in lots on the edge of the campus. The faculty group with whom I had lunch took me to a Japanese restaurant where we sat on the floor and enjoyed raw fish dipped in soy sauce with mustard and white radish. The rush and bustle of the campus, the new library with every seat filled with a student studying, the crowded cafeteria all reminded me of UVM. The 90 degree heat, the flashy mu-mus, the ethnic variety of the students, the bare feet or sandals made me realize that I was on a unique and vibrant campus. Toyko University which I will be visiting next week will be equally different, yet equally interesting.

The time at the tone.

Flying Frug Anyone?

By Hugh Manity

"It was just this feeling I had. The best way I can describe it is like when you swallow a pill, but it won't quite go down. Anyway, the feeling was that no one gave a sweet fit whether I took another breath or not, I know it sounds stupid, but Christ, I couldn't get it out of my system. So I made a collect call to my house in New Jersey, but fast. The first and only thing my mother wanted to know as why I was calling in the middle of the afternoon. Didn't I know that the rates changed at 6? "Ok, Ok, Ma - it won't happen again."

"It won't, either. I have tried to get some consolation from my father but it was Saturday and he was outside washing the car, and didn't come in because the soap would've dried on it.

I can imagine what my mother told him about why I called: "He hung up before he said anything worth paying for. That kid won't learn anything about money unless you make him go out and earn some of it for himself."

The whole thing ticked me off. Anyway, since I'm a dues paying member I figured I'd get some of this off my chest at the House. They don't stop their touch game for nothing, though. Now I know why seniors cut out after the initial crap - it's easier to find brotherhood in the park.

Saturday night is "Dog" night, but all I heard was what a drag this town is and all the places she used to be able to go when she was in high school - last year.

Man, I don't know what state they come from, but they're more stupid every year. And hotter. But it's not worth it. So that was about it.

Nobody on the floor would shut up. Not even after I went out and told Curt that I'd beat hell out of him if he didn't stop his half-ass laugh. I don't have to tell you what he did, but I won't listen to that laugh too much more, I can tell you.

It wasn't that I had just a bad day. I mean, that was when I first became conscious of the thing, bust as soon as I did that was it.

Man, I can't name the person who gives a flying frug for anything that has to do with me. Really gives a flying frug, I mean. Not just somebody who asks you if you want to go to it - doesn't-matter-where.

Well, please don't look back on everything and say that anyone in particular should get the blame. I'm probably the one who should, but I can't see it that way.

Tell everyone I'm sorry about the whole thing. And please ask them to make the arrangements inexpensive. They probably will be anyway."

communism, and you thank them because in your heart you know that you are nothing else but a simple silly savage.

Several weeks after the white foreigners left, some of your fellow countrymen come into the village. They chop off the hands of the mayor and slaughter the rest of the landowners. Then they divide up the farmlands and force you to elect a new mayor. A few weeks later, a second group of your countrymen enter the village and they chop off the hands of the new mayor and give the land back to the families of the landlords. Then the first group of your countrymen returns, kills off the second, imprisons the mayor who spent most of his time coercing people to pay the taxes, sponsors a new election for a new mayor who will claim previous taxes invalid and demand the people pay again. One day the foreigners return and arrest everyone who paid their taxes to the new mayor. That's life. Meanwhile your mother has lost her other arm and is now cured of arthritis. Your sister has a profitable trade and your father hasn't been seen since he forgot to vote in an election.

Aren't you glad you're an American? Don't you wish everyone was? And everyone could sit all snug and comfy and drink their beer or smoke their pipe and do all sorts of fun things. Recently adolescents in New York have taken to burning paupers as they sleep in the streets. But if Lyndon and Hubert can do it with the approval of Cardinal Spellman, there is no reason why these youngsters can't. Out of complete altruism, America has extended its war on poverty to Viet Nam.

Of course everyone wants peace. Even Johnson. Then again, Hitler also wanted peace; he even said so. And all the "good and pious" people pray for peace. But one might as well drink for peace. If history proves anything, it is the nonexistence of anything closely resembling a god. Christians and Jews out of profound ignorance can babble as long as they want of their superstitious prayers for peace. But until they do something, until they become truly religious there is no hope whatsoever for peace. There is one, and only one, way to prevent war and that is to refuse to fight. True that's unpatriotic, but patriotism is nothing less than treason to humanity.

"O SAY CAN YOU SEE BY THE DAWNS EARLY LIGHT"

"Sound of Music" Beautiful But Mundane

By Ken Klonsky

Perhaps there is no film that has provoked more popular admiration and less controversy than "The Sound of Music," now playing at Burlington's State Theatre. Winners of the 1965's Academy Award for best picture, most people are generally agreed as to its glorious picturesque and musical qualities.

However, fine the movie looks and sounds, "The Sound of Music" does have its drawbacks. At the risk of alienating mothers, religious leaders, and Julie Andrews' fans, the film seems somewhat less than artistic. Specifically, the story and the characters are designed to appeal to the sentimental emotions within us. This is not to say that the sentimental is not a nice emotion but it does tend to make the movie, as it did the Broadway Show, a bit more mundane than the lofty Austrian Alps in which it is shot.

The movie does succeed at being the saccharine story of a young woman (Julie Andrews) who is torn between the convent and her sudden and unexpected love for a wealthy baron (Christopher Plummer). Plummer, as Baron Von Trapp, is effective as the domineering father of a bunch of bratty kids who become somewhat repulsive by the end of the film. Miss Andrews, as Maria, is her usual disarming and effervescent self as the governess who brings the children into contact with the world of song. After much hassle with the Nazis, this entire entourage is forced to escape the country, but not before they sing "Edelweiss," a magnificent song, before the endangered populace.

The Sound of Music is no more than its title suggest. If you are looking for a spiritual upheaval, you're just not going to find it. It is a tuneful and occasionally warming experience that is well worth your time if you go for that sort of thing.

Exhibition of Owre's Art at Fleming

Opening this Saturday at the Fleming Museum is an exhibition of drawings, sculpture and related work by a new Vermont artist, Edwin Owre who lives and works in Moretown. He is currently teaching drawing and painting in the Art Department at UVM and at the Hopkins Center in Hanover, New Hampshire.

Mr Owre is best known as a draftsman and sculptor. His drawings are usually figure studies whose images dissolve into an interacting play of line and veils of color. The sculpture is figurative without being literal. They are built up of slabs of lumber that are shaped into figures with saw and chisel and finally painted to produce works similar in effect to the drawings.

His exhibitions includes Provincetown in 1961, Yale Alumni Sculpture in 1964 and Bundy Art Gallery, Watfield, Vermont in 1966. Before joining the UVM art staff this fall he worked with the Prickley Mountain Architectural Project in East Warren.

Mr. Owre will discuss his work in a gallery talk in the Museum Wednesday, November 2 at 8 p.m. Following his talk, there will be a reception for the artist, his friends and guests of the Museum. The exhibition continues through November 13.

Rise of Architecture Traced in Photographs

The demolition of many early Chicago buildings in recent years have given urgency to the study and preservation of these now historic monuments which illustrate the rise of the modern movement in the architecture of this country. The exhibition EARLY CHICAGO ARCHITECTURE which opens at the Fleming Museum, October 29 features a selection of photographs and measured drawings of structures

The exhibition traces the Chicago story from the early commercial buildings to the work of Louis Sullivan and to the "Prairie Houses" by Frank Lloyd Wright and his followers. It opens with the Leiter Building of 1879 which represents the first step toward skeleton construction and points to the glass curtain wall of the modern era.

With its revolutionary engineering and its magnificent ornamentation the Auditorium dominates the exhibition with a large number of exterior and interior views and details. Outstanding examples of residential buildings are Richardson's Glessner House, built in 1886-87, by the architect who designed UVM's Billings Library, now a student center. Frank Lloyd Wright's Robie House of 1908-09, which was declared a National Monument in 1964, concludes the survey.

Rarely in the history of architecture is there such a fusion of advantageous circumstances such as there was in Chicago in the last decades of the 19th century. The devastating fire of 1871 created an urgent need for a new city center for the rapidly expanding industrial age and its need for factories, railroad stations, and office buildings. This challenge was met by a group of architects and engineers with a unique combination of talents: imagination and a feeling for design, concern for urban society, and a will to experiment.

The exhibition continues through November 20.

"To Touch the Grass"

(Credit: Gauzoulis, SPS)

"To Touch the Grass" is about people with a need. The characters come together by accident. All of them are looking for an object to which they can communicate. Curt, for example, is seeking for a friend, someone he can trust. The play approaches the theatre of pathos rather than tragedy - no person is heroic and the resulting situation is pathetic.

In talking about his work, Quackenbush says that it "isn't didactic in a sense of instruction or in moralizing to the audience. What I've done is to create people who all have a need to communicate . . . This is what I'm emphasizing. This is a reality of which we are already aware of.

The play will be presented by Upshot, a branch of the University Players, concerned with the experimental theater and with helping those interested to become better in their field.

The cast of "To Touch the Grass" is:

Eza - Liz Ingoldsby
Grandmother - Sherry Hawkins
Curt - Larry Sargent
Father - Burt Mazzy
Carrie (Eza's sister) - Liz Hustonoff.

Injuries May Shatter Cats Chances

UMass Meets UVM For Soccer Crown

By Ted Ryan

Injuries may cost the University of Vermont soccer team the Yankee Conference title Saturday.

Four starters will not be with the unit when the Cats face the University of Massachusetts in back of Gutterson Field House. The game will probably decide the Conference race.

Jeff Hyman suffered a shoulder separation in Tuesday's battle with Union College, won by Vermont, 4-0. Hyman was charging in on the Union goalie all alone, and rifled a shot which the Union goalie blocked. Hyman then flipped over the goalies and landed on his shoulder.

Another starter, outside right Jimmy Wood, injured his knee in Vermont's 1-0 loss to Middlebury. Two other starters, Peter Myer and Lesli Valaise, are not expected to see action.

The Vermonters displayed a high gear offense Tuesday with the romp over Union.

Ace Peter Baldwin was the outstanding player of the game. He drilled home two goals and was credited with an assist on another.

Coach Hal Greig said, "Our offense showed pretty good punch but we still have a defensive problem."

Greig complemented Joe Noss, a substitute, who has played well in the position vacated by Valaise. Greig was also pleased with the fine offensive showing of Theron Webster, another sub who has filled in capable for Wood.

The Vermonters started rolling Union on a smash into the lower right corner by Baldwin midway through the second period. In the second period, Webster hammered home a long shot, perfectly placed into the right hand corner of the nets.

Baldwin notched another score in the third period and Jackie Semler booted home the final goal, after receiving an assist from Baldwin.

The Massachusetts game will be close despite the lack of defensive personnel which Vermont suffers from. The Cats will be out to avenge an overtime loss which cost the Ver-claim to the title last year.

The Redmen compose, "probably the toughest team we faced all year," Greig stated. "They have no outstanding players but they are a tough club because they work well together. They are a very business like team."

The Redmen offense is sparked by the very fine outside Jerry Cellili, and a center forward from Africa, Ed Ayanaba. The talented goalies is Jerry Martin.

If Vermont hopes for the title, the Cats must be prepared mentally. And the strain of losing our starters via injuries may prove to be the factor which will let the title slip from the Cats grasp.

Coach Greig is faced with the

Maine's Huard Is Top Lineman of Week

Amherst, Mass. - Oct. 25 - Maine linebacker John Huard (Waterville, Me.), Massachusetts halfback Bob Detore (Greenville, Pa.), and Connecticut halfback Bill DiYeso (Yorktown Hts., N.Y.) have been selected as the Yankee Conference outstanding lineman, back and sophomore of the week for their performances on the gridiron last Saturday.

problem of preparing the Cats mentally. Yet, despite the odds, Greig is confident his boys can meet the Redmen and walk away with the title.

Game time is 10:30 a.m.

Huard, a Little All American linebacker, scored two touchdowns on defensive gems as Maine toppled Rhode Island 21-6. The first touchdown coming when he grabbed a Rhode Island punt that he blocked and ran into the end zone and the other with a twenty-nine yard punt with an intercepted pass.

Detore, a spunky 5'7" halfback, averaged four yards a carry rushing and scored Massachusetts' first touchdown as the Redmen upended Boston U. for their third straight win.

Other linemen cited for their play included Roy Lawrence (Connecticut), Roc Brooks, (Massachusetts), George Donatello (New Hampshire), Jeff Kuhlman (Vermont), and Vin Petrarca (Rhode Island).

Backfield nominations were Paul Gruner (Connecticut), Paul Keany (Maine), Bill Estey (New Hampshire), Leo Pfeiffer (Vermont) and Larry Caswell (Rhode Island).

Sophomore standouts included Jo O'Connell (Maine), Tom Kasprzak (New Hampshire), Jack Stroker (Vermont), Brent Kaufman (Rhode Island), and Randy Robinson (Massachusetts).

UMass Challenges Vermont
THE INSIDER

By LEO PFEIFFER

"Running against you guys is like running against Green Bay."

This is what one Norwich player said to this reporter after the game on Saturday. And justifiably so. The Cadets were so outclassed that they did not really feel as bad as they did a year ago because they knew they had no chance of winning as the game progressed. A good team is a team that does not make the same mistake twice and the Cats made sure of this on two counts. They were caught napping last year and were lucky to come out a winner and they relaxed in the second half last week against New Hampshire and were lucky to come out a winner. Before the game, it was decided the same things would not happen again. The result: 43-0, the Cats.

The Cadet Quarterback, Al Moskal, who incidentally was New England's leading passer, was unable to complete a pass in the first half before he was crunched by John Gurrieri. Seeing it was like seeing a Volkswagen meet head-on with an oncoming locomotive. Needless to say, he was out for most of the remainder of the game.

The offense turned the afternoon into a three ring circus. The balance it displayed was remarkable, with all three quarterbacks shining. Jack Stroker had the best day, completing five of six with one long gainer to Ray Madeka called back, and three T.D.'s, showing that his superb passing ability goes beyond the practice field.

Paul Simpson is fast gaining a reputation in New England of being one of the best clutch passers around. He completed a pass in the first UVM drive to Jack Schweberger on a fourth and eleventh situation. Had this pass failed, the complexion of the earlier part of the game could have been different. Now that Dave Shumate is healthy again, he played his usual steady game.

Jack Schweberger and Jeff Kuhman are also establishing a reputation similar to the ones the two big Massachusetts ends. Milt Morin and Bob Meers, had the last three years. Both are in the pros now. It can safely be said that there are not too many defensive backs who are able to stop them.

Bill Dorozenski played the best game of his career and it was an outstanding day at that, having his hands in the quarterback's face all day stuffing it down his throat and making numerous tackles before the Norwich play could materialize. Dave Lucaroni also had a great day. To see a Norwich defender intercept a UVM pass and turn around only to run into big Luke head-on is like seeing a polio victim run into King Kong.

Regardless of the score, credit should be given to the Cadets. They realized they could not win but they hit just as hard at the final whistle as they did on the opening kickoff. This takes a lot of guts when a team is so far down.

However, even before the game was over, everybody knew what the team was already thinking about. It seems a UVM team was in the same situation two years ago, going into the Massachusetts game 6-0. A great disappointment came with the 28-7 loss. This year WILL be different. The game needn't be mentioned to the team. The players were not supposed to talk or even think about Massachusetts until this week because it is the team philosophy to take one game at a time. But some players are already chewing on the linoleum, and if you happen to pass one this week and he growls at you instead of saying, "Hiya, Jack", you know what is on his mind. Professors please sympathize.

SCOUTING REPORT: UMASS.

LAST YEAR'S RECORD: 7-2

SERIES RECORD AGAINST VERMONT: 16-512

HEAD COACH: Victor H. Fusia (Manhattan '38) 6th year, 34-11-2.

LETTERMEN LOST: 13

PROMISING NEWCOMERS: End: Bill Warnock; Guards: Charles Hersey; Noel Schablik; Halfbacks: Mike McArdie, Paul Vaccaro; Fullback: Bruce Cochran.

1966 PROSPECTS: Playing the 1965 Lambert Cup and Trophy winners the first two games of the season and winding up with Boston College presents a challenge that is the most formidable in Coach Vic Fusia's six years at U Mass. He must replace NFL picks Milt Morin, Bob Meers, and Phil Vandersea, plus Bernie Dallas and Dave Kelley. QB Greg Landry, who last year as a sophomore made many people forget Jerry Whelchel, heads cast of 20 lettermen. Depth appears lacking at center and fullback.

Conference Title
Awaits The Victor

By George Passage

With the Yankee Conference title at stake, the University of Vermont Catmounts have their biggest challenge of the season this Saturday when the University of Massachusetts' Redmen invade the Burlington area. Both teams are 3 and 0 in conference play and a possible Tangerine Bowl invitation awaits this winner. Overall this year U Mass is 4-1, its lone loss coming at the hands of powerful Dartmouth. Vermont is 5 and 0 this season with its most recent win a 43-0 dumping of Norwich University.

This will be the 25th meeting of the two clubs with the Redmen holding the series edge 16-6. There have also been two ties. In his sixth year as head coach at U Mass, Victor H. Fusia has compiled a record of 38 wins and 12 losses. His Yankee Conference record is 24-3. Much of the credit for this year's excellent record is the result of the fine playing of the Redmen's talented quarterback, Greg Landry. Landry leads the Redmen in several offensive departments including passing and rushing. Behind Landry at the halfback slots will be little Bob Detore, 5'7" and 170 pounds and Bid Don Durkin, 6'4" and 210 pounds. Another offensive threat is left end Bill Warnock who leads U Mass in pass receiving. Bill Connor and Jim Mitchell anchor the offensive line which averages over 220 pounds. The Mass defensive platoon (which has allowed seven points per game this year) has a pair of fine tackles in Ed Sherman 6'4", 240 pounds and Dick Qualey 6'2", who tips the scales at 250 pounds.

Leading the Cats, as he has all season, will be UVM's Little All-American candidate Bob Mitchell. The Cats have averaged almost 30 points a game and Mitchell's 800 yards gained and 171 carries and 8 TDs are part of the reason. At the other running back is Jim Culhane. Culhane has done a fine job of blocking all year besides lugging the leather at better than 3.5 yards per carry. Peter Clifford, who replaced injured Dick Herbert, has done an excellent job at flankerback the last two games, scoring three touchdowns. Junior quarterback Dave Shumate continues to do a fine job of moving the UVM offense. Shumate, along with sophomore Paul Simpson and Jack Stroker have hit on 45 of 99 pass attempts this season for 734 yards. Considering the experience this trio lacked at the beginning of the season this record is a credit to their determination and will to win. Jeff Kuhman is the leading Vermont pass receiver with 15 receptions for 242 yards. Jack Schweberger, second to Mitchell in scoring with 24 points, has 10 receptions. Opening holes in the big U Mass defense will be five of the most underrated interior linemen in New England. Tackles Dave Lucaroni and Jim Sullivan, guards Dan Martin and Bill Crudo plus center Dave Capman (three juniors and two sophomores) are primary reasons for UVM's success this season.

The Cats' stingy defense is anchored by 6'2", 225 pound end Captain Bill Van Bennekum. At the other end is Don "Tuck" Nelson. In the last outing Nelson had a great day which included two fumble recoveries. At defensive tackles for the Cats are Steve Yukovich, Bill Dorozenski and John Gurrieri. Big John, number 78, is the boy who last week made the Norwich quarterback Al Moskal wish he had gone out for debating instead of football. Joe Soldano, the defensive middle guard, continues his All Yankee Conference ability. Junior linebackers Colin Hurd, Bill Wolff and Ed Kiniry have combined for almost 160 defensive points this year. In the defensive secondary are Leo Pfeiffer (who leads the team with 90 defensive points), Bill Leete and Bill Lawrence. These three

Jeff Kuhman

University of Vermont tight end Jeff Kuyman has been named to the ECAC Weekly Division II All Star team for an outstanding performance against Norwich last Saturday.

Kuhman, in one of his top collegiate performances, grabbed four passes, good for 89 yards and a touchdown. On the season the Toledo, Ohio junior has 15 catches for 242 yards and two touchdowns.

Kuhman is the second UVM player to be honored this year. Little All American candidate Bob Mitchell made the squad each time for the past three weeks, an unprecedented reward for a Vermont football player.

Mitchell was a halfback nominee again this week after gaining 105 yards in 25 carries, scoring one touchdown. Cited as a nomination for Sophomore of the Week was quarterback Jack Stroker, who completed five of six passes for 125 yards and two touchdowns.

UMass Stars

held Norwich to three completions and 14 yards last weekend. The Wolff pack appears primed to give Landry and company a rough day Saturday.

A win Saturday would make Coach Clifford the winningest coach in UVM's history. Last Saturday's victory was his 27th since coming to UVM which ties with former grid Coach Fuzzy Evans and Ed Donnelly.

Also, Rachel T. Burroughs, instructor, department of nursing, and Giustino N. Mastro, visiting instructor, department of mechanical engineering.

RESIGNATIONS

The Board also accepted three resignations, including that of Dr. Robert J. Slater, dean of the College of Medicine, effective Dec. 31. Dean Slater will take a post as executive director of the Association for the Aid of Crippled Children, in New York. The Board directed that a letter expressing Trustees' appreciation be sent to Dr. Slater.

Also accepted were the resignations of James A. Root, associate professor of civil engineering, effective June 30, 1967; and of H. Reed Saunders, assistant professor commerce and economics, effective Oct. 1, 1966, to permit him to assume a position with the American College Testing Service.

Newsweek Cites UVM Alumnus

Jerome Agel, a Burlington native and University of Vermont alumnus, is cited for his "ability to dig up first-rate stories on the book beat" in recent Newsweek magazine article describing his two-year-old publishing venture, a monthly tabloid, entitled "Books."

"The twelve-page paper last week was doing well enough - subscription 'in excess' of 10,000," Agel claims - that it may go biweekly," says the feature in the press section of the weekly news magazine's Oct. 17 issue.

Agel, who now lives in New York City, is a 1952 Vermont graduate. As a student he worked for the Burlington Daily News and Free Press, and at the University played a part in founding the UVM Program Series which became the Lane Artists Series.

After studying at the Columbia University School of Journalism, Agel worked in television production and advertising in New York City, and was a partner in his own public relations agency, prior to founding "Books."

Medicine to take a new post Dec. 31.

President Lyman S. Rowell said that Dr. Andrews was the unanimous choice of the selection committee which had been instructed to look "both within and outside the faculty and staff of the College of Medicine." Mr. Rowell said the executive committee of the medical college had endorsed the choice and added he was "personally pleased with the committee's recommendation."

He said Dr. Andrews had worked closely with Dean Slater during a period of rapid advancement of medical college programs. This included the largest single project fund effort in the University's history, the $8.7 million third phase medical building for which alumni and friends gave over $4.5 million to match a federal grant. The project is under construction.

During the same time, plans have been going forward for a major curriculum revision. As associate dean of the medical college, Dr. Andrews played a key role in this and in academic development of the college, including the program which won a $500,000 Kellogg Foundation grant.

Also, the medical college developed, in cooperation with the State Medical Society and Health Department and representatives of other health agencies, a plan anticipating the major federal heart, cancer, stroke program.

As a result, the Vermont College of Medicine was on of the first five institutions to be awarded a major grant under the program. Dr. Slater's contribution was recognized by his appointment as one of 12 members of the President's commission for the H.C.S. program.

Dr. Andrews, a Vermonter, began the pre-medical course at the University, transferred to Middlebury College in 1943 under the Navy's V-12 program. He earned his A.B. there and his M.D. at Johns Hopkins, taught at Johns Hopkins two years, before joining the Vermont faculty in 1958.

At Vermont, he has been active in research, concerning infectious diseases, particularly in native resistance to infectious agents as contrasted to resistance acquired as a result of immunization or having had the disease.

Dr. Slater, who has served as dean of the medical college since 1962, resigned this September, effective Dec. 31, to accept the post of executive director of the Association for the Aid of Crippled Children in New York. He came to Vermont from Canada, where he had been an associate of the department of pediatrics of the University of Toronto, and a staff member of the Research Institute of the Hospital for Sick Children.

Debate Club Considers Taxes, Defense

Can Vermonters find relief from big taxes? Can the United States defend the free world? These are among the topics the Lawrence Debate and Discussion Club at the University of Vermont is ready to present anywhere in the state, for any interested group, at practically any time.

The Club is in its 21st year at the University. In its heaviest year as many as 70 discussions have been presented throughout the state; the average is 40 per year.

In discussion, as opposed to debate, team members present all sides of a question, talk about the differences, then invite remarks and questions from the audience.

PREPARED ON FIVE TOPICS

Members are already preparing themselves for the tax and defense topics and three others: "Abolish town meeting government - is this progress?" "Are demonstrations and federal legislation the best answers for civil rights?" "Resolved: that the United States should substantially reduce its foreign policy commitments."

American Society Worships Violence?

By John Kyper

In Granada, Mississippi, as an apathetic nation watched, innocent children were beaten with bicycle chains by an enraged mob. The children, of course, were colored and their sole crime was their desire to receive a public education.

This incident only serves to emphasize the spectre of violence that has arisen in our midst. American society has been progressively tolerating, condoning, and encouraging violence; we have come to worship it as a god. We accept its every manifestation in man as natural and even commendable; we are too sophisticated to be disturbed, too smart to care.

It has long been argued that man is merely an extension of the beast, that violence is nature to him and that its enjoyment satisfies and pacifies human emotion. Indeed, the philosopher, Oswald Spengler, told the German people shortly before Hitler came to power:

"The tactics of man's life is that of a splendid, brave, cunning cruel beast of prey. He lives attacking, killing, destroying. He has wanted to be master as long as he has existed."

It is not surprising that the holder of this tenet see no wrong in treating man as they see fit:

"Man is an animal . . . which has been given a civilized veneer. Man is a collective animal grouped together for his own protection before the threat of his environment. Those who so group and control him must then have in their possession specialized techniques to direct the vigor and energies of the animal man towards greater efficiency in the accomplishment of the goals of the State."

so wrote Beria, head of the Russian Secret Police, who was himself later to die before a Soviet firing squad.

It follows that the monopoly of violence, whether subtle or blatant, has been effectively utilized to enforce totalitarianism, as has been demonstrated in Nazi Germany, Red China, and Mississippi. It possesses the sole end of eliminating opposition or of intimidating it to ineffectual silence.

America is playing with a dangerous monster, which may someday achieve the potential to destroy our freedom. Violence never satisfies human emotion; however, it is a cancer that can only grow upon itself, as the events in Mississippi and the recent incidence of violent crime implies.

What can be done in the present situation. Dr. Frederick Wertham, author of "A Sign for Cain: An Exploration of Human Violence," believes, "We must simply grow less insensitive to violence." Perhaps his statement is an oversimplification, but his challenge to confront our own apathy is a valid admonition.

SHIFTS IN JOB MARKET CREATES NEW TERMINOLOGY. (Re-printed from the Burlington Free Press March 24, 1966). Can you define the duties of an astrogeologist, a synoptic meteorologist, an engineering psychologist or a geomagnetician? If you can't, you're in the majority. Yet, these are among the fast-growing new occupations in the U.S. today.

Would you guess that job prospects are bright in the fields of atomic energy, electric power, radio, television, telephones, petroleum and natural gas? If so, you're in the majority. Yet, the fact is that the rate of new job growth in these fields actually is shrinking.

Never have changes in the U.S. labor market been so dramatic, so rapid-fire as in the era in which we live. A comparison of the Labor Department's latest 962-page Occupational Outlook Handbook with previous editions in the past decade underline the fantastic extent to which whole new occupations are emerging under our eyes, while whole old occupations disappear.

Meanwhile, with the major job fields, detailed shifts of importance to millions also are occurring. For instance: The small U.S. dairy farmer is fading from the countryside. But "agribusiness" jobs in other fields are climbing: Agricultural research workers, argiculture economics, workers in feed mills, fertilizer productions, food processing.

Openings for artist, actors, writers, musicians continue to be exceedingly limited. But the market for school teachers in all of these fields is expanding substantially and so are chances for commerical artists, technical writers, illustrators.

The broad field of atomic energy is stabilizing. But future growth is anticipated in jobs in space vehicle propulsion, in electric power stations, in radioisotopes for medicine and food preservation. Automation obviously is wiping out vast numbers of jobs, particularly among the unskilled and undereducated. But, just as obviously, automation is creating other jobs for computer programmers, copying machine service men, tape librarians, tape perforator typists, etc.

A relative shrinking of jobs in many goods-producing industries has been going on through most of the post-World War II years. But a sharp increase in jobs in services has been a post-war phenomenon too and there has been a spectacular upsurge in employment in government, health and education. The implications of these employment trends go beyond their clear impact on the millions choosing careers in this era. They mean that our schools and teachers must make giant strides in equipping students with the general, basic knowledge which they can carry from job to job. This knowledge will be essential if employees are to cope successfully with the shifts in their occupations in the years ahead. They mean that vocational counselors must become far more proficient in guiding students through the maze of today's and tomorrow's occupational opportunities. Matching industries and abilities with jobs in becoming a "skill" in itself. They mean that employers must place increasing stress on continuous worker training-retraining -- and workers must be prepared to undergo training-retraining throughout their working lifetimes.

(NOTE: An astrogeologist studies the surface of the moon or planets. A synoptic meteorologist interprets information on weather conditions from world-wide reports, weather satellites, etc. An engineering psychologist studies man-machine relationships. A geomagnetician probes the earth's magnetic field.)

Michael Minsky, in his role as "Sceptic" appears to have unnerved a substantial portion of his readership. By way of explanation, we can only say that this is as it should be, and that when he ceases to perform this function we will fire him.

The fact is that the charge of journalistic irresponsibility which has been levelled against him has served only to crystallize his duties in our eyes. In brief, they are: To disrupt. To entertain. To anger. To provoke. To reveal.

Needless to say, Michael Minsky cannot be all things to all people; admittedly, the above list is incomplete and his critics should feel free to fill in the gaps in adjusting it to their own dislikes. But, in the light of the above criteria, we feel that Minsky does his job exceedingly well. Don't you?

While our "Sceptic's" critics have argued that sophistry doesn't become him, and that he could achieve his objectives through a more diplomatic approach, we get no reaction to polite editorials. In fact, we are willing to speculate that, with the possible exception of our "Insider," the "Sceptic" is the most widely read column in this newspaper. We can only conclude that we are faced either with an audience of masochists or a body of critics who are not being entirely honest with themselves.

The crux of the matter is that Michael Minsky has been blessed with the uncanny facility to step back and take a long, objective look at the absurdity of everyday situations. His commentary is criticized as a distortion of the truth. But what his readers are actually objecting to is the revelation of the personal distortions upon which they rely for psychological survival in the best Darwinian traditions.

Minsky's natural insights may eventually become available to the general public. But until such time there is much to be learned from his column. If, in the process of publishing it, "The Cynic" loses some of its student support, we feel this a reasonable price for our convictions and a loss we can easily absorb.

Sceptic Abuses The Powers Of Journalism

Dear Mr. Minsky:

I have just read your "Sceptic" column which appeared in the October 28, 1966 issue of The VERMONT CYNIC.

From the Fall of 1934 until graduation in June 1937 I was far more involved with my writing and other activities on the UCLA Daily Bruin (student daily newspaper at UCLA) than I was with getting my B.A. degree. As a member of the fiercely anti-war generation which accepted Fortune Magazine's scathing article on "The Merchants of Death" I was glad to escape on a technicality even the one year of compulsory ROTC required of a Sophomore transfer from a non-landgrant institution. Because my competitor for post of editor was Stan Rubin, whose writing has since made him a profitable living producing for Hollywood and TV, I shifted to Business Manager my senior year on the paper. However, I retained my status as one of the dedicated group of campus writers who were determined to prevent war, reform the University, and generally help usher in a new era.

(While it is true that the Managing Editor in 1935-36 was Louis Banks, who has since become a Senior Editor first on TIME and then on FORTUNE, the editor that year was Gilbert Harrison, who has been publisher of the NEW REPUBLIC for many years.)

In retrospect I realize that we often inserted material into the Daily Bruin which hit somewhat below the belt, material which involved abuse of the journalistic power we had acquired.

However, it is my present opinion that your column which I have just read far exceeds anything we published in its abuse of your responsibilities as a member of the newspaper staff and of the University public. I would welcome the chance to discuss with you and your associates the subject of ethics and responsibilities of college journalists. It is a subject on which I have had occasion to think at some length off and on for some thirty years.

The Sceptic "Red Atheist" Propaganda

To the Editors:

I have just read M.G. Minsky's article of October 28 and was never more shocked in all my life.

UVM is a state college and for a state college to allow the publication of red atheist communist propaganda is an outrage. I believe the state legislature should make an investigation into communist subversion in UVM.

I also believe Mr. Minsky has no place at UVM, he should be expelled and shipped to CUBA with the rest of his friends.

Little Less Stuffed Shirt Please??

To the Editors:

Nice moves, administration! Nice spirit, too. What is so wrong about having a sign on the library (which, if I remember correctly, was built backwards) encouraging our football team to beat U Mass?

This is the first time in so many years that we have been favored to win, and when there is harmless attempt to show the team the student body is behind them 100 percent, it is torn down.

This type of thing, I believe, is typical of the way some things are handled here.

The atmosphere of a college is not only an academic one, but social and athletic. You don't suppress the academic side, so why injure the athletic aspect by taking such a ridiculous stand in such a simple but meaningful thing.

Such things as the sign on the library show student initiative and school spirit, so why destroy such good intentions?

I think a reconsideration of values is in order. So how about having a little more spirit and a little less stuffed shirt?

Karl Kassler

Prove IT!

Well, kiddies, the time has come to prove you are grown up.

Tuesday is THE day. Everyone who is an adult has a chance to prove it.

This is the era of proving things. How about trying to prove you are not completely apathetic. (I realize you made the attempt at the U Mass game - good try.)

Your chance is here. Don't miss it or you'll have to wait another two years.

I realize this may be a let down that no one can throw eggs at you while you are proving your worth, but try it. They may laugh when they find out who you voted for!

Kill For Peace

We must kill for peace, kill mother and child,
 By burning their homes and killing their flocks;
 We must suck their blood, their maidens defile
 And then spread their limbs leaving only rocks.

There has to be war to solve our problem:
 of little to drink and no place to live
 So bomb and bomb with the sound of a drum and clear the land as if using a sieve.

We will teach you how to torture and rape,
 To growl and grovel in jungle and mire
 Until we fill your heart with so much hate
 That you'll kill and kill until you expire

Come on boys, start marching, marching (you fools)
 Out to kill and get killed (you goddamned fools).

SCEPTIC

By M.G. Minsky

Last week in Patrick Gymnasium, tastefully decorated in orange and black crepe paper the members of the Fun and Games Club, Miss Suzy Creamcheese was declared Catamount Girl of the Year. She was chosen by a committee which included a priest, a minister, two deans and Doctor Lear, a local gynecologist. When crowned by Miss Mary Ellen Duque, last year's girl of the year, Miss Creamcheese was heard to say, "Oh, my. Is this really me?" After being congratulated by the losing contestants, tearful Miss Creamcheese was treated for minor facial lacerations. When kissed on the cheeks by her escort, Miss Creamcheese and most of the audience responded with a deep sigh.

Miss Creamcheese, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lemuel Pitkin Granville Creamcheese IV, is a blue eyed blonde haired member of Theta Theta Theta sorority. Her outside interests include skiing, tennis, sailing, hiking, dancing, piano and as she puts it "finding the right man to be my husband." She is a member of the Trips Club, The Singing Club, The Good Works Club, The Youthful Americans for Freedom and the Kampus Kristian Krusace. Miss Creamcheese is a Home. Ec. major, specializing in knittery and Yarn Theory. Upon graduation, she hopes to join the Peace Corps, where she can divulge her skills to the naked african hordes.

In addition to being active Miss Creamcheese is also quite creative and as her talent in the Catamount Girls of the Year contest read two poems which she had written all by herself. The first one was "How Sadly Weepst Thou, Now" and the second poem she wrote in high school was titled "What Am I? I Am Me." The audience was deeply moved. Her schedule from now on will be somewhat crowded. Monday, perpetually smiling, Miss Creamcheese will be given out autographs in the Den. She will have a column in The VERMONT CYNIC in which she will reveal her innermost thoughts. Some of those thoughts she has already revealed.

UVM: "It's a great school. I mean as far as knitting is concerned you couldn't ask for more."

Fraternities: "I only date fraternity men. Fraternities really improve character. Everyone in the honorary societies is in a fraternity so they must do a lot of good as far as the what do you call it, scholastic ability, is concerned."

The War: "I don't know. I guess you just sorta (sic) gotta (sic) be for it. I mean maybe innocent people get kinda (sic) hurt, but you gotta look at the good things don't you. I mean we're just there fighting for their freedom (sic)."

Civil Rights: "I think negroes are just like everyone else. My parents had a negro maid once and she was just like everyone else. I mean all the other maids we had."

Love: "When you're in love, you really know it."

Parents: "I love my parents, I really love them. Really I do. They're just great folks. Really they are. Why are you smiling like that?"

"To Touch The Grass" Explores Individual Needs

By Charlotte Beam
"To Touch the Grass," written and directed by Jan Quackenbush, played to a full house Sunday night at the Arena Theater.

The play fit neatly together; the plot was a clever frame for some thought-provoking ideas. It considered to varying degrees the problems of individual needs and of loyalties, both to others and to self. It dealt with the theme of escapism, clearly demonstrating some of the harmful results. Most of all, it was the story of individuals caught in a web of circumstances, that web being the product of their own actions.

Eza, unhappy in her life but able to escape it by pretending, had had premonition of her downfall. However, she was unable to see that this downfall was to be caused by her pretending. When she met the grandmother, she fulfilled a need in them both by pretending to be the lost daughter. The meeting ended on a sour note and forbode no good; yet when Ezra met Curt, who, she realized, was the grandson, she felt compelled to continue playing her role. Curt, unaware of Eza's falsehood, saw her as a truthful and beautiful creature whom he had to protect. The played moved to its inevitable conclusion when Curt, protecting Eza and "truth," killed Eza's father.

The play was well produced. Liz Ingoldsby, Sherry Hawkins, Performance Flawless But...

"Mikado" Becoming Outdated

By K. Klonsky

"The Mikado," Gilbert and Sullivan's most acclaimed work, was presented by the Lane Series on Thursday, Oct. 27.

There is much to be said for the musicality, costumes, and settings of the D'Oyly Carte Opera company but there is a distinct suspicion that much of the dialogue of "The Mikado" is rapidly finding its way into the theatrical graveyard.

GOOD PERFORMANCES

In fact, the only real redeeming qualities of this relic is its fairly lively, although somewhat repetitious, musical score and its occasional resort to amusing slapstick.

The performance of the company was almost flawless... Peter Potter, a resonant tenor, was the brightest singing star of the production in the role of Nanki-Poo.

Upon learning of his opportunity to marry Yum Yum, the woman he loves but for whom he must eventually sacrifice his life, he utters one of the few funny lines of play: "Oh modified rapture!" Pooh-Bah, chief brunt of the satire, presents a clever paradox. While he is the biggest kowtowner in Japan in a figurative sense he is literally too fat to do a proper kowtow.

FINE ACTING

Kenneth Sanford, as Pooh-Bah, had a miserable weak singing voice but this drawback thankfully did not carry over into the dialogue of the blowhard bureaucrat. The best actor amongst the D'Oyly Carte was John Reed as Ko-Ko, the Lord High Executioner.

One appreciated his clowning gestures without which the whole first act would have sunk into the well of boredom. Christene Palmer as Katisha, "chosen daughter-in-law" of the Mikado, was a better actress than singer.

Although her voice was not at all unpleasant.

Donald Adams as the blustering Mikado, emperor of Japan, was very strong and he helped to make the second act a good deal more enjoyable than the first.

VINTAGE HUMOR

The Gilbert and Sullivan musical score is simply not good enough to enliven the tedious and sometimes corny humor of "The Mikado." The satire on phony airs, on Shakespearean love scenes, on British politics, and on Japanese customs is strictly old hat.

The words are not devastating enough to be good satire nor are they moving enough to be eloquent. Although the enthusiastic audience would disagree, it would appear that "The Mikado" has become vintage humor.

Flicks

S.A. - Three Coins in a Fountain - Rossano Brazzi is fairly good in this somewhat heavy love story. Nice musical score.

STATE - The Sound of Music.

FLYNN - Jerry Lewis in "Way Way Out" - the usual slapstick that is becoming much like watching a man in a padded cell.

STRONG - Fri. - Macbeth - the magnificent Maurice Evans and Dame Judith Anderson in a widely acclaimed production. 1111 - Saturday & Sunday - After a previous cancellation "The Shop on Main Street" will finally arrive. Stars Ida Kaminska and Josef Kroner from Czechoslovakia - best foreign film of 1965. Pervasive new look at World War II atrocities. Human and tragicomic masterpiece with a stunning conclusion.

November 8 - Votey at 8 p.m. - Marlon Brando and Lee Marvin in the horrifying and brutal motion picture of a motorcycle gang war, "The Wild One." One of Brando's first tough-guy roles.

Larry Sargent, Liz Oustinoff, and Bert Muzzy handled their roles very competently. Lighting and sound effects were skillfully managed to heighten the impact of the play. On the whole - a good job.

Loft Conducts

"Happening"

By Jon Schechtman

The Loft was the scene of a Happening last Sunday night. Forty inhabitants of the Greater Burlington area reacted to the theme "What would do if you had six months to live."

The object of a Happening of this type, or more generally, Spontaneity Theatre, is to make the audience more aware of a problem in our Society, by means of acting and discussion. A necessary part of such a production is audience participation.

In order to warm up those in attendance, Dr. Miller, director of the happening, posed questions to the audience concerning professional, personal background, taste, etc., in an effort to get people acquainted and to put them at ease. It was during the question and answer period that the theme was arrived at through a question posed by Dave Edsall, '70.

Dave, and a member of the acting company, acted out a scene in which a student visited a friend who had only six months to live. Then the characters switched positions and the scene was re-acted. Later, a girl from the audience volunteered to act out the skit. Such a thought as what she would do if she knew she had only six months to live was constantly in her mind, as her step-father had died last year of cancer. Her enactment of the situation was very poignant, since she was putting all of herself into it. In fact she was acting out a part of her life.

Following the scenes, there was an open discussion of the problem as well as an evaluation of the acting and the realism of the portrayal.

The audience then divided into smaller discussion groups, with more open discussion following.

Dr. John Miller, a clinical psychologist and psychodramatist was the director. Psychologists from the Waterbury State Hospital served as actors or seconds in the productions.

The Loft will present two more such productions on the second Sundays of November and December, from 8:15 to 10 p.m.

DEAR REB:

Even When She Answers, He Still Gets the Busy Signal.

DEAR REB:

Lately, every time I call my girl, she's either "not in" or "not interested." Last week I called her 23 times and couldn't even make a coffee date. The trouble started when she started dating a guy who owns a Dodge Coronet. Now she goes to parties with him, dances, football games, etc. Do you think I should call her again, or should I forget her and break her heart?

BAD CONNECTIONS

DEAR BAD CONNECTIONS:

I think your next call should be to your Dodge Dealer. Then make a date to see the '67 Coronet, the car that's breaking hearts all over America. You'll find that its good looks are pretty hard to resist. Now, before you break your girl's heart, give her another break. Ask her to go for a ride in your new Coronet. I think she'll get the signal.

Sincerely,
Reb

Here's the heartbreaker... '67 Dodge Coronet 500. A campus favorite with its great new looks, ride, and list of extras that are standard. Like bucket seats with either a companion seat in the middle or a center console. Plush carpeting. Padded instrument panel. Padded sun visors. Seat belts, front and rear. A choice of Six or V8 models. And lots more. So get with '67 Dodge Coronet and get busy.

Open Letter...

By Hugh Manity

Don't let anyone tell you there's no Never-Never Land. You're in it.

Escalation, segregation, exploitation, masturbation. You picket them all. And more. But what the hell do you know of any of it in your land of make believe? You free-thinking, sophisticated slobs who are too individual to look half-way decent. You shirkers who have to cop-out because you can't make it in a world of men and women. And it really doesn't matter how you punk: you whore, keep thinking you're a sexually enlightened lady; keep up the puffing, too, and tell me how backward society really is; hold your sign a little higher so all of us can that you're yellow and sure as hell don't want to get killed in Vietnam. Oh, but you sure as hell want to be around for the guzzling you'll do this weekend. You'll puke all over the place about who has a moral comitment and who doesn't. But who are you kidding? You could care less who dies over there as long as the war ends before you have to go.

All of you, just keep cutting your classes, keep bitching, drinking and pulling off your college pranks. You destructive brats. We're all impressed with you. But don't dare take a walk and wander off campus, because there you're nobody. On the "outside" where people work for a living and don't get everything on a platter, on the outside where people are crying over more than their acne and bad breath, they couldn't care less about you. You're just a little kid, and don't forget it.

You want to do something worthwhile? Try looking like a human, try respecting your elders, try being what people used to call "moral." Try being brave when you have to be. Oh sure, speak up for what you believe is right, sleep around if you feel like it, destroy property that isn't yours. But don't tell us that you're an advocate of free speech when all you really want is to shoot your mouth off and get attention; don't tell us you're a sexual liberal when you can't stay away from the sheets, and can't wait to get it from the next faceless mass that happens along. Face up to what you are, and if you can get thru all the crap and see the truth let us know. Or, if you're ashamed, keep it quiet. Either way is fine. But don't go around trying to fool all of us.

We need picketers, boozers, free-thinkers, even sluts. But we need the real, genuine kind. Those who truly believe in what they do. Not those who hang on and are too stupid to let go of the coattails of those leading them, and who are too self-deluded that they think they're for real.

You want to do something worthwhile? See what you can do about helping the blind. See if there's a United Fund you can solicit for, or a legal aid society that could use your help a couple of afternoons a week. Or are there more important things you have to sit around and bitch about?

I'm through, Boys and Girls. I hope everything in Never-Never Land is going your way. Be sure and write back when you grow up.

NEWMAN CENTER

A Newman Center meeting was held Sunday, Oct. 30 after the 9 a.m. Mass at Saint Augustine's Chapel.

During the general business it was decided to sponsor a Thanksgiving Clothing Drive for the poor and needy of our country. Day students as well as resident students are asked to give.

There will be a Newman representative in each dorm to collect your clothing goods.

Day hops or faculty members are urged to bring their donations to the Chapel. With a little effort and cooperation this should be a success.

Tell your family and friends about this Clothing Drive. Search your closets and attics for old but usable clothes. Please give, we are all fortunate. Many are not.

A WILLING CONTRIBUTION

There are only two justifications for living. One is that you are afraid to die and the other is that you might one day help to change the characteristics of existence. Most of the time things are so hopeless that you must choose the former. Happiness is when you have the choice and the choice is not compulsory.

on her engagement to Joe Gammon '65.

Looking For Someone?

Did you ever try to find a professor? He wasn't there, was he? He wasn't there the next 20 times you tried either, was he?

This is a problem common to most students at UVM. All our professors have office hours, but they also have coffee urges that arrive at the same time.

You can try to beat your way to them after class, but they are usually mobbed by screaming students asking questions. Don't try to call them; they are never there!

I think someone should give them coffee pots, sign-out sheets, note boxes and phones at home. That way you might be able to get hold of them one time out of ten.

Does water pollution bug you? Or smog? Does it concern you that some places in the country never have enough teachers? Or nurses? And when you read about the growing pains of a developing nation, do you wish you could do something?

You can. Thousands of General Electric people are helping to solve the problems of a growing, changing world.

Generating more (and cheaper) electricity with nuclear reactors. Controlling smog in our cities and pollution in our streams. Using electronics to bring the teaching skills of an expert into many classrooms at once, the trained eyes of a nurse into many hospital rooms at once.

If you're not content with the world as it is... and if you have the brains, imagination and drive to help build a better one, we'd like to talk to you.

See the man from G.E. during his next campus visit. Come to General Electric, where the young men are important men.

Four members of the company went to the Orange, Massachusetts Sport Parachuting Center on 23 October to take the basic parachute jump course and make their first two jumps. This brings the total number of jumps in the company to 19, with a set goal of 100 jumps by the end of the year. More members plan to go to Orange 6 November.

POWELL RECEIVES "CADET OF THE MONTH" AWARD.

Bert P. Powell, a sophomore cadet from Burlington, was awarded the cadet of the month award last Friday afternoon during the C Company Drill period at Guttererson Field House. He was chosen from among four other candidates, who had previously shown themselves outstanding in the 350 member basic course. The reviewing board, consisting of the Brigade Commander and two staff officers questioned the five candidates on their classroom knowledge, the ROTC program, and world events of a military significance. Cadet Powell was presented with a letter of commendation by the PMS, Colonel D.R. Longacre. Attached to the letter was a list of local merchants who offer awards to the cadet chosen.

This list includes four gift certificates, dinner for two, three service certificates, and six strings of bowling all of which Cadet Powell may claim by the end of next month.

At the regular Thursday night meeting 27 October, Captain Robert Hanke of the United State Marine Corps gave a very interesting talk with slides and films on his five month tour of duty in Viet Nam, where he was a fighter attack pilot flying F-4B's in close air support and bombing missions.

The pledges were also introduced to the basic parts on the M-1 rifle.

Take the Bind out of Blind Date

Why let "Cupid be stupid?" Meet your match scientifically! Boston has its "Contact." New Haven has its "Operation Match." Now Burlington has "Cupid."

Involving much of the same procedure of the former operations, "Cupid" uses scientific statistical tabulation to keep the cost down. All Burlington colleges and nursing schools are involved. For the amazingly low price of $1.50, you can have a date with destiny (whoever he or she may be).

When it comes to dating, take the bind out of the blind. Get your questionnaire from your friendly student government representative.

Have fun and be sociable! We dare you!

It's trade-in time for tired old myths.

Like the one about business. Especially big business. That it is beyond the rugged individualist's wildest daydream to enter this holy of holies because he'll lose something that's very sacred — like his independence.

Sure, it can happen. If a guy or gal wants to hide, or just get by, or not accept responsibility, or challenges.

We're not omniscient enough or stupid enough to speak for all business, but at a company like Western Electric, bright ideas are not only welcome, they are encouraged. And no door is shut. Create a little stir, go ahead, upset an old applecart (we replace shibboleths at a terrific pace — we have to as manufacturing and supply unit of the Bell System — in order to provide your Bell telephone company with equipment it needs to serve you.)

There's an excitement in business. True, we're in it to make a profit, but working to find new and better ways to make things that help people communicate is very rewarding and satisfying. Did you ever hear these wry words of Oliver Wendell Holmes? "Never trust a generality — not even this one."

That's how we feel about the generality that claims you'll just become a little cog in a company like Western Electric. You might, of course, but if you consider yourself an individual now, odds are 10 to 1 that you'll keep your individuality. And cherish it. And watch it grow. Even at big, big Western Electric.

You know, that's the only way we'd want you to feel. If you feel like coming in with us.

Please don't zlupf Sprite.
It makes plenty of noise
all by itself.

Sprite, you recall, is the soft drink that's so tart and tingling, we just couldn't keep it quiet.

Flip its lid and it really flips. Bubbling, fizzing, gurgling, hissing and carrying on all over the place.

An almost excessively lively drink. Hence, to zlupf is to err.

What is zlupping?

Zlupping is to drinking what smacking one's lips is to eating.

It's the staccato buzz you make when draining the last few deliciously tangy drops of Sprita from the bottle with a straw.

Zzzzzllupf!

It's completely uncalled for. Frowned upon in polite society. And not appreciated on campus either.

But, if zlupping Sprite is absolutely essential to your enjoyment; if a good healthy zlupf is your idea of heaven, well...all right.

McCune Reports From Japan

TOKYO NEWSLETTER

By Shannon McCune, Research Professor of Geography

A new term has come into our vocabulary - "jet-lag". When one travels west by jet plane that time changes are so rapid that the psychological time pieces one has built in get all mixed up. (For example, arriving in Tokyo after jetting across the Pacific one starts yawning and dozing around six o'clock in Los Angeles). Then at three o'clock in the morning one wakes up already to go. Fortunately, our physiological time clocks adjust themselves after a few days, but the interim creates problems.

The wisest thing is to accept no dinner engagements and to go to bed early. It saves the embarrassment of falling asleep while sipping after dinner coffee. Tokyo offers a special activity for the early riser - a visit to the wholesale market at Tsukiji. This Mrs. McCune and I did yesterday morning. (I'm writing about it the following morning at five a.m.)

With a population of over eleven million people, the sheer problem of providing fresh food for the people of Tokyo is staggering. It is made even more complex by the fact that most Japanese housewives shop for their food every day at small neighborhood food stores. Only a fortunate few have refrigerators or freezers in their homes. Japanese like their fish fresh - particularly if they are going to eat it raw (o-sashimi), as they often do.

MARKET BEDLUM

To the visitor Tsukiji is a confusing place of vast turmoil, but as one watches awhile its system can be discerned. It is located in a crescent shape along the curve of a canal so that boats and barges can tie up directly along side of the auction area. Tuna and other fish trawlers unload at the wharf during the night. Parallel with the wharfs railroad tracks where refrigerated and other cars bring in fresh fruits, vegetables and fish. Back from this area are great long sheds where the produce is spread out for the auction sales. The fish are laid out in rows - fish in tubs, fish in boxes, fish weighing from half a ton to baskets of fish that looked like coconut shreds. Sales start promptly at six a.m. signaled by a great ringing of bells, then the simultaneous shouting of all the auctioneers. The buyers have been busy inspecting the fish, each fish or box with a number and weight pasted on it. They peered at them with meat between their fingers. The auctioneers shout the number and a minimum price - and the buyer holds up his fingers for the amount above the price he is willing to go. I kept my hands in my pockets for fear I would inadvertently buy a tuna while scratching my head. It was fascinating to see and hear. Within a half hour hundreds of thousands of fish had been sold.

From the auction sheds the fish are carted away by the buyers assistants to the wholesale shops where they are cut up or packaged and sold to retail merchants. Some of the fish are taken to waiting trucks to be delivered to other wholesalers scattered throughout the city. We watched some of the ways in which the fish were cut. The most interesting was the slitting of eels, filleting them, and putting them on skewers to be broiled. On the outer ring of the whole sale shops were lots of small restaurants and specialty stores that sell fishing and marketing equipment - knives, baskets, trays, bamboo boxes, rope and dishes. Outside the market were packed in seeming utter confusion the small trucks, motor cycles, bicycles used to transport the produce to the local neighborhood markets.

The noise, the smells, the orderly chaos, the fish gleaming under glaring electric lights in the half-dawn, the milling of people and carts, the occasional tourist who was getting over his "jet-lag" made up a fascinating conglomeration, a characteristic of modern Japan.

Overseas Study Program Planned

To Be Initiated Fall '67

An overseas study program for students in which seven Vermont colleges may participate with the University of Vermont is being planned for the academic year 1967-68. Members of the University's romance language department have consulted with representatives of Middlebury, Trinity, Goddard and St. Michael's Colleges and the state colleges at Castleton, Johnson and Lyndon concerning joint participation in VOSP (Vermont Overseas Study Program).

Prof. Thomas H. Geno, a UVM French instructor, says the colleges "have registered keen interest in VOSP. If it continues this way, VOSP may be the first such study program in the nation to be open on a state-wide basis."

Representatives of the seven colleges will meet at the University Nov. 5 for further discussions.

Dr. George V. Kidder, dean of the Vermont College of Arts and Sciences, Professor Geno and Prof. Jean-Pierre Lascombes, also an instructor in French, will leave for France Dec. 11 to make a final choice between the two French universities under consideration for VOSP; at Tours or Nice.

Arrangements have already been made for a six-week orientation period at the start of the year-long program in a Paris institute for foreign students. Worth noticing is the fact that the VOSP students will be completely integrated with the French student body to avoid the separate "American college abroad" situation which tends to isolate American students from contacts with the host country.

Professor Lascombes will reside at the host university with the students as full-time VOSP director; Professor Geno will remain at the University of Vermont as associate director and Vermont liaison.

Scholarships Based On Financial Need

NOTE TO EDITORS: This is the fourth in the series on financial aid.

All scholarship awards made by the University of Vermont - with the exception of the honor scholarships to top ranking high school graduates - are made only to students who can demonstrate financial need. Academic promise and achievement are twin criteria.

Determination of need begins with completion of a form not everybody likes - the Parents' Confidential Statement of the College Scholarship Service.

The University of Vermont and the other five New England state universities are among 661 U.S. colleges using the form to help - and that's an important word, according to UVM Financial Aid Director Allen Walker - to help them determine financial need of scholarship applicants.

High school students applying for financial aid obtain the PCS from their high school, return it to the College Scholarship Service at Princeton, which in turn forwards it only to those colleges requested by the applicant. The PCS remains strictly a matter between the student and the Financial Aid Office.

It seeks to determine the financial resources of the student and his parents or guardians, and to weigh those resources against liabilities or obligations. The University - most colleges, in fact - expect that parents and students who can do so will meet the total college cost from their own resources.

This year, 1800 UVM students applied and over 14000 shared more than $1,000,000 in financial aid in one form or another. The majority were Vermont residents, with most of UVM's scholarship resources restricted, by terms of their donors, for awards to residents.

SOME OBJECT TO CONFIDENTIAL STATEMENT

Of the 1800 applicants, four objected to completing the Parents' Confidential Statement, and Walker reports that some Vermont high school principals and guidance counsellors report having objections raised to them.

"The problem is," says Walker, "with the number of applications we receive, we need to have some objective basis for determining relative need." UVM began using the PCS in 1960. Previously, the University used its own, less detailed form.

Applications were considered by a committee. Discussion often took into account personal knowledge of applicants by committee members. "A good job was done, but as numbers of students and applicants increased, it was felt more complete and objective criteria was desirable."

Now a financial aid committee representing faculty from each college of the University, plus a representative of the University Council and of the admissions, student personnel, and bursar's offices set overall policy. Walker administers the policy and authorizes awards. When he has a case he feels has merit, yet falls outside the policy, the case goes to the committee for its recommendation.

In most cases, financial aid awards are the difference between what the parents and students may be able to meet from their own resources and the total expenses the students will have to meet. Walker reports total estimated cost for a Vermontor for one year at UVM, including a $235 estimate for personal expenses, is $1835.

COMPLAINTS REFUTED

He reports that occasionally he hears complaints that the University has denied aid to a student who "really needs it," and yet awarded aid to a student whose parents "are well off."

He says this is not knowingly the case, and suggests that often appearances of material substance - "they live in a big house, drive an expensive car" - do not always reflect the true financial ability to pay.

The highest family income for a Vermont student receiving scholarship aid this year was $12,300. This was earned by two working parents. They have a second child attending another college where the parents pay $1,000 in tuition and fees alone.

They are also contributing $1,045 toward this year's costs for their UVM student; the students is contribution $350 from summer earnings, and $140 from savings. The student was awarded a $300 scholarship - the amount he requested - from the Wilbur Fund. A third child is a senior in high school.

Lowest family income, $1,642, was that of a widow whose child is attending the University. Social Security makes up to $400 available to help meet college costs for the student, the student is applying $350 earned this summer, and $250 in income from an insurance policy, and is receiving an $850 scholarship from the Wilbur Fund. In this case, as in many others, no part of the cost is expected from the parents' financial resources.

In most cases, the student meets part of his or her college costs from summer earnings and for many, part-time jobs while in college. In most cases, students are awarded a combination of scholarship and loan aid.

Concludes Walker, "we could use, and are always seeking, more scholarship funds."

Medical College Given Airplane, Will Hire Pilot

An anonymous donor has given the University of Vermont funds to purchase and operate a two-engine airplane for its College of Medicine.

The plane, already purchased and based at Northern Airways hangar at Municipal Airport as a Cessna Super Skymaster.

Because preliminary flights have proven the demand that will be placed on this plane, the university will hire a pilot instead of relying on part-time service. Destinations so far have included Canada, Philadelphia, New York, and Washington, as well as many Vermont points.

The donor suggest that the College of Medicine have first priority on the use of the plane.

He also specified that it should be used in connection with the regional heart disease, cancer and stroke program being developed at the university, and in particular cited the development of a regional program for the early detection of lung cancer.

Yankee Conference Champs End Season

Maine Meets Vermont Soccer Club

The University of Vermont will seek to conclude its Yankee Conference season with a perfect record Saturday when it meets the University of Maine.

The YanCon championship belongs to the Vermonters and coach Hal Greig is elated with the great performance the Cats gave in edging Massachusetts 1-0 for the title.

"They all did a fabulous job. It has to be one of the best team efforts even seen here at the University," state the 1965 Yankee Conference Coach of the Year. Greig may well be the Coach of the Year again this year.

The only goal of the championship game was slammed home by Gary Smith, only one of four substitutes filling vacancies in the injury riddled Vermont squad.

Smith's shot came midway through the third period in a game marked by great defensive work.

Smith was replacing outside Jimmy Wood, who was sidelined with three starters. The little known hero of Saturday's game is a sophomore. "He played well as a freshman. He's skilled and he's always on the spot," is the way Greig described Smith.

After the first minutes of the game, Vermont started dominating the game, constantly keeping the ball in U Mass territory. The aggressiveness of Jeff Taft and the ball control and exceptional passing of Jack Semler kept the Vermont offense rolling.

But the key to the game was the defensive work of Tom Bitter, Bob Schroeder and Les Valaise. The three kept the talented Massachusetts line from breaking loose.

"Tom, Bob and Les limited U Mass's big three to 13 shots. Anytime the defense can stop them from taking more than 15 shots, you have a good chance of winning," Greig explained.

Vermont goalie John Hilton turned in another spectacular performance in the nets. He blocked nine shots and made a sensational stop on a penalty kick which would have tied the score.

Another reason for the Vermont was the return of Bill Burling. Burling, who started for two years, decided to skip soccer and concentrate on his studies. But he rejoined the team after a rash of injuries hit the wings.

"The victory was particularly satisfying, especially after last year's overtime loss. We dominated the entire game but still lost," Greig reflected.

LAPOINTE HONORED

Ralph LaPointe, head baseball coach and freshman basketball coach at UVM, has been presented with the Distinguished Service Award by the Vermont Association of Health, Physical Education, and Recreation for "seeking international understanding through sports."

Frosh Harriers Finish Season

By Mick Kropsky

The UVM freshman cross country squad finished their regular season schedule with six wins and no defeats. In their last two outings they were victorious in a tri-meet against Burlington High School, Rutland H.S. and Vergennes H.S., and in a dual meet against Paul Smiths. In both meets Tom Cook, Jim Howley, and Dick Racusen finished one, two, three respectively for UVM. The only event left for the freshman harriers is the NEICAAA meet in Boston on November 7th which they will participate in along with the varsity squad.

The varsity runners lost a close battle against Boston State even though team captain Renier Chaintreuil took first place in the dual meet. After the contest Boston State, Coach Archie Post's harriers went up against a very strong field of cross country runners in the Yankee Conference championship meet at Kingston R.I. UVM finished in last place with Chaintreuil topping all other UVM runners.

Soldano Selected

Amherst, Mass. - Oct. 31 - Massachusetts safetyman Dave Giarla (Nahant), Vermont guard Joe Soldano (West New York, N.J.), and Maine halfback Charles Yanush (Mexico, Me.) have been selected as the Yankee Conference back, lineman, and sophomore of the week following the outstanding gridiron performances last Saturday.

Giarla came up with the key plays as Massachusetts ended the Catamounts six game winning streak and took over first place in the Yankee Conference standings with four wins and no losses. In addition to intercepting two passes to thwart Catamount drives, Giarla made a spectacular 74 yd. punt return for a first period touchdown.

Soldano, an all Conference guard last year as a junior, did a great job as the defensive middle guard in the Vermont defense and also contributed three perfect placement kicks to the Catamount offense.

Yanush scored three touchdowns as Maine downed Colby in the final gridiron meeting of the two schools and also returned two kickoffs for 84 yards.

Other backfield nominations included Bob Mitchell (Vermont), Bill DeWitt (Conn.), Sonny Wilson (New Hampshire), Paul Keany (Maine) and Tom Fay (Rhode Island).

Linemen cited for their efforts were Don Loranger (Maine), Roy Lawrence (Conn.), Rod Brooks (Massachusetts), Bill Basilios (New Hampshire), and Henry Walker (Rhode Island).

Sophomore standouts included John Krot (Connecticut), Randy Robinson (Massachusetts), Kurt Volherbst (New Hampshire) and Brent Kaufman (Rhode Island).

WRA NEWS

Intramural Scoreboard

By Mick Kropsky

The championship rounds of the fraternity and independent divisions of the Intramural Tennis Tournament were held last week. In the fraternity division, Bill Fous of L.I. defeated Don Burgess of D.P. 6-4, 8-6. Fous reached the final round by topping Dick Squire (DP) 6-2, 6-2. Burgess entered the final round after defeating Paul Robertst (PSD) in a close contest 7-5, 5-7, 6-3. The independent division championship match saw Bob Krebs (MAT) defeat Rex Smith (Converse) 6-4, 7-5. In the semi-final rounds, Krebs had defeated Ken Marshall (Austin) 6-3, 6-2, while Smith had won by default.

Also held this past week was the intramural swim meet. In all, eight events took place and when it was all over one record had been broken and another tied. Phil Canfield (MAT) swam to victory in the 100 yard breast stroke in record breaking time of 1:14.7, almost three seconds better than the old record of 1:17.6. In the 100 yard back stroke Tom Sandretto (SPE) came in first, tying the record of 1:13.5. Overall the top three teams in the meet were SAE followed closely by PSD and DS.

The intramural touch football season came to a close as PDT routed the Unbeatables 32 to 0 to win the all campus championship. PDT had won the fraternity division by defeating SAE 32 to 14. Meanwhile the Unbeatables had won the independent division with a close 2-0 win over MAT, a safety being the only score of the game.

A reminder: This Wednesday, November 9 the intramural indoor track and field entries close, and on Thursday the 10th the indoor mile relays entries close.

Catamounts Seeking Fourth Straight State Title

Vermont Hosts Middlebury

THE INSIDER

By LEO PFEIFFER

Last Friday night after the usual meeting was officially over, the team held a special meeting called by captain Bill Van Bennekum. It was then and there that the team decided that if they did get behind during the game the next day against Massachusetts, they would not and could not lose their poise and desire to win, no matter what happened.

Well, everything went wrong in that fateful first quarter, and the Catamounts, remembering their vow the night before, regrouped and started playing the brand of football they were capable of. The offense sustained a drive and took the ball into the end zone before the first half ended, making the score 20-7.

In the locker room, during the break, there wasn't one player who had any idea of quitting. The odds against the Cats were tremendous. They were up against one of the stiffest defenses in the East, allowing Dartmouth 17 points and no other team more than one touchdown. This didn't matter now. What did matter was that a great second half effort had to be made and the Cats went out on the field with just that in mind.

Outplaying Massachusetts for the remainder of the game could not compensate for the miserable first quarter, and the game ended with nobody convinced the best team had won.

The backfield coach of Boston College was scouting Massachusetts and said he was happy his team was playing Massachusetts instead of Vermont. From an unbiased viewpoint, this was Massachusetts' best effort this season, as was stated in "The Boston Globe." Also, this is not to sound like sour grapes, but when the Redmen intercepted the first pass, it took them 16 plays to go 30 yards, and the last situation was a 4th down and 4 for a touchdown. The Massachusetts halfback was down on the third yard line and no whistle was sounded, so he illegally crawled over the line and was awarded a T.D. The fact that the official didn't see it was just another break for Massachusetts.

However, this is no call for excuses, and as was stated several weeks back after the New Hampshire game, never again would the Cats give up three T.D.'s in a single half and come out a winner if correct predictions are any comfort.

The Cats came out of the game in excellent shape, which is unusual for the Massachusetts game. Ed Kiniry was knocked unconscious for several minutes on a kickoff but Paul Malone came in and did a good job. Also, Dave Lucaroni banged up his leg. Other than this there was only one other slight injury. As the team ran out onto the field prior to the game, Leo Pfeiffer couldn't wait for the game to start and fell flat on his face and in the process scraped his leg.

So, the stout hearts of the Catamounts almost achieved the impossible after the first quarter. The game that would make the difference in the 1966 football season, the one that everybody had been thinking about for a whole year, the one that the team had strived for ever since August 22 was, to say the least, ruined by eight minutes of bad breaks. The remainder of the game went just as everybody thought, but it wasn't enough, and the tremendous second half effort fell just short.

The disappointment was unbearable for some after the game in the locker room. Others just sat in a state of shock. After ten minutes of getting it out of their systems, Coach Clifford walked in, and because he has been in the business so much longer, he wasn't quite so emotional. Most couldn't look up, but what he said was of some consolation. He was still as proud as he could be of his team, and their playing their hearts out did not go unnoticed. It was a game which will not be forgotten for a long time --- probably the greatest game ever played on Centennial Field.

Mitchell Is Athlete Of Month

The University of Vermont's record breaking halfback, Bob Mitchell of Bridport, has been named September Athlete of the Month by the Vermont Sports-writers and Sportscasters Association for his spectacular season debut against American International College.

In that opening game at Centennial Field in Burlington, Mitchell carried 28 times and gained 131 yards. He scored three touchdowns, one on a 72-yard pass play from Dave Shu-mate of St. Johnsbury.

Mitchell also led Vermont to a pre-season scrimmage win over Springfield College, gaining 130 yards on the ground.

The pile-driving juniors enters the Oct. 29 Yankee Conference showdown with Massachusetts with 800 yards gained rushing on 171 carries.

Mitchell, along with the other monthly winners, is now eligible for the Athlete of the Year Award which is presented at the annual banquet, held each April.

Cats Will Rate As Heavy Favorites

By George Passage

In 1897, which was UVM's first year of football, captain, Wait C. Johnson led the Cats to a 14-0 victory over Middlebury College. This Saturday the two clubs will meet again for the sixtieth time. Game time is 1:30 at Centennial Field. It will be the last home game for the Cats this season as they travel to Orono, Maine on November 12 to battle with the Black Bears in the season finale. The University of Vermont holds a single game edge in the long series with Middlebury - 27 wins, 26 losses and there have been 6 ties. Coach Walter (Duke) Nelson is in his 21st year as head coach of the Panthers and the Duke always has the Middlebury eleven up for the big state series clash. The Duke has recorded 12 victories over Vermont since taking over the helm. Last year the Cats tipped the Blue and White 7-0 (that was the third year in a row Middlebury has failed to score against UVM) and a victory this year would mean the fourth straight Vermont State Football Title for UVM.

Leading the Panthers all season have been quarterback Charlie Brush and running backs Paul Ford and Ed Bergman. Brush and Bergman are both sophomores and have improved with every game. Although beaten by Norwich last Saturday 14-0, both boys were outstanding.

The Cats will be out to regain their winning ways this Saturday after being defeated last weekend by U Mass 27-21. Vermont now has a very respectable 5-1 record for the season. After falling behind 20-0 in the first period, the Cats put on a gallant effort which fell just short of another victory. Leading the charge for UVM was Little All-American candidate Bob Mitchell. Mitchell gained 110 yards in the second half to end the day with 147 yards and two TD's. Through six games Mitchell has 947 yards gained in 199 attempts and 60 points. Another spark in the UVM comeback was sophomore Jack Stroker, who passed for 62 yards and quarterbacked for UVM's three touchdown drives.

Providing good blocking for Mitchell were fullback Jim Culhane and linemen Jim Sullivan, Dave Lucaroni, Bill Crudo, Dan Martin, and Dave Capman. The fact that these linemen were outweighed heavily did not seem to prevent them from opening holes in the U Mass defense.

Tight end Jeff Kuhman caught his third TD pass of the season besides showing his fine blocking skill. Open end Jack Schweberger caught the longest pass of the day - a 35 yard toss from Jack Stroker.

Although twenty seven points are the most allowed by the Wolff Pack this year, this is not a true indication of the game they played. The defense was hampered by a poor field position early in the game, the result of an intercepted pass and a poor snap from center on an attempted punt. The defensive line, Don "Tuck" Nelson, Bill Dorezen-ski, Joe Soldano, John Gurrieri and Bill Van Bennekum kept the Redmen off balance most of the game. Soldano was especially outstanding at his middle guard position. Leo Pfeiffer had another fine game in the defensive backfield along with Bill Leete and Bill Lawrence. This trio held U Mass quarterback Greg Landry to a mere 49 yards of passing. Linebackers Bill Wolff, Colin Hurd and Ed Kiniry played their usual steady game.

This Saturday there will be a number of seniors who will be wearing the green and gold before the hometown fans for the last time. These seniors have seen UVM lose only 4 time in 22 games during their careers. Only two teams have defeated UVM while these boys have played, Maine and U Mass. The seniors on the UVM football team are Pete Ambrose, Bill Dorezen-ski, Bob Florczak, John Harrington, Dick Hebert, Ed Kiniry, Bill Leete, Leo Pfeiffer, Jack Schweberger, Joe Soldano, and Captain Bill Van Bennekum.

Don "Tucker" Nelson stops a U Mass runner while other Vermonters, Ed Kiniry (40), Bill Leete (15), Dan Martin (70), and Leo Pfeiffer (30), look on.

'Most Happy Fella' Is Entertaining

By Charlotte Beam

Who is the "most happy fella?" It's hard to tell. I vaguely receive the impression that Tony is supposed to be since, he gets the girl in the end.

But he is only, speaks English badly and has a terrible inferiority complex. Besides, Joe already got Tony's girl, so what does poor Tony really have to be happy about?

Personally, I think Herman is a better candidate for the most happy fella - he seems to have a lot more fun.

The three main characters, Tony, Rosabella, and Joe, put themselves in a very unhappy situation, which is actually too serious to be resolved as easily as they seem to do.

There is too great contrast between the grave and the joyous elements. Thus, while the light scenes are highly enjoyable, the serious ones tend to be melodramatic.

The group songs and dances, including a well-done number, "Big D," brighten the show considerably with their lively action, spirited singing, and colorful costumes.

The love affair of Cleo and Herman provides comedy, while the three chefs harmonize well, especially in the song "Abundance," which they perform with definite style.

A lot of work seems to have gone into this production. On the whole, the show is entertaining although not exceptional.

Opening night was Thursday. There are three more performances, tonight, Saturday and Sunday.

The show starts at 8:30 p.m. Tickets are available at the box office or may be reserved by calling ext. 711.

Tuition Tax Credit Bills Are Introduced

Education costs across the United States are steadily rising. Here at UVM the price of tuition has risen from the 1955 level of about $350 for Vermonters and $700 for out-of-staters to $600 and $1800, respectively, at the present. These increases have not been based on what the students could afford, but rather on the mounting expenses involved in providing education for expanding student body without a loss in the quality of education. These costs, which have steadily grown in the past, will assuredly increase in the future.

In order to help offset the burden imposed by the high tuition, bills have been proposed to both Houses of the Congress known as Tax Credit Bills. The plan is like this: The Federal government would allow a certain percentage of credit on income taxes for every dollar spent, up to a certain specified amount. This would not only be applicable to those paying tuition, but also to those donating funds to institutions of higher learning.

Such a bill would make it easier for low income families to meet the expenses of a college education. It would also encourage the necessary private donations to colleges, for, as enrollment expands, so must physical plants. Gifts finance a large proportion of such projects.

According to this bill, the tax credit is based upon the first $1500 paid for tuition, fees, books, etc. per students in college. The amount of credit is 75% of the first $200, 25% of the next $300, and 10% of the remaining $1000. The maximum credit is $325.

19 Senior ROTC Cadets Win Awards

Nineteen outstanding advanced ROTC senior cadets have been designated as distinguished military students at the University of Vermont.

The cadets received D.M.S. badges and certificates from Colonel David R. Longacre at a recent drill.

Those receiving the award included: Roger N. Albee, Brookline; Norman J. Boyden, III, Burlington; Frederick B. Brown, Woonsocket, R.I.; Richard L. Brown, Yonkers, N.Y.; Donald N. Carlson, Essex Junction; Robert J. Florczak, Fairfield, Conn.; James A. Freeman, Great Barrington, Mass.; Robert W. Jensen, Richmond; David E. Lambert, Lunenburg, Mass.

Also, Thomas L. Mills, Burlington; Frederick M. Ober, Saxtons River; Douglas G. Orvis, Burlington; David A. Peura, Peabody, Mass.; Michael J. Reardon, Wallingford, Conn.; Michael P. Ricciardi, Oyster Bay, N.Y.; Peter E. Rising, Glen Head, L.I., N.Y.; John N. Rutledge, Scotia, N.Y.; John C. Schweberger, Weehawken, N.J.; and Joseph D. Soldano, West New York, N.J.

Their selection was based on their leadership abilities, high moral character, and aptitude for military service. Each cadet receiving the award must be above average in academic standing, and must have distinguished himself in military studies. If the cadets maintain their standing throughout the senior year, they will be designated distinguished military graduates when they receive their Baccalaureate Degrees. Being chosen as DMS further allows them to accept a commission in the Regular Army.

Stanford University Communication Dept. Offers Scholarships

STANFORD - The Stanford University Department of Communication is now receiving applications for graduate scholarships for the 1967-68 academic year. The awards carry stipends from $1,770 to $4,770.

Approximately 25 scholarships are available for students preparing for careers in editorial journalism, mass communications research, and broadcasting and film. These are grants, not assistantships. No service is required of recipients.

Archaeological 'Dig' For Summer Fun?

Looking for man's past in Britain.

For students desiring an unusual, rewarding summer, the Association for Cultural Exchange, a British non-profit organization, is offering a chance to spend the summer in Britain. The project, "Pioneering the Past" is an archaeological "dig" consisting of a three week seminar at Westminster College, Oxford. This will be followed by three weeks in small groups digging at various sites in Britain.

This is a chance for young people to participate in important work, earn credit toward archaeology, and make many international friends.

Total cost to the student is $675 with scholarships available.

Further information can be obtained through the CYNIC office.

UVM Debaters Compete in Detroit

The Lawrence Debate Club of the University of Vermont was the only New England state university team at a regional debate tournament recently, in Detroit among some 40 colleges and universities participating.

At the University of Detroit, Vermont debaters Carl Lisman of Burlington, a senior, and Donna Loizeaux, a sophomore from Whiting, won four and lost two and were the only team to defeat a single debate the tournament champion, Wayne State University of Detroit.

In spite of the heavy schedule, no Vermont debater will make more than two out-of-state trips this fall, according to Dr. Robert Hueber, director of debate. The freshman turnout of twelve interested students, about average for recent years, "will give the club enough breath to represent Vermont at major debates without putting undue strain on the members," he said.

The Club is in its 21st year at the University and has ranked as "big league" in collegiate debate for years. Its teams have traveled over 250,000 miles since the Club was founded, winning more than 65 per cent of the 2800-plus debates in which they have taken part.

Professional Qualification Test—A prerequisite to qualify for a career position with the National Security Agency.

WHEN: December 10, 1966

(Get a PQT Bulletin at your Placement Office)

If you expect to receive a liberal arts degree before September 1967, register for the Professional Qualification Test. Taking and passing the PQT doesn't commit or obligate you to anything, but we urge you—even if you are not now fully certain of your future interests—to investigate NSA career opportunities.

An Agency of national prominence, this unique civilian organization is responsible for developing "secure" communications systems to transmit and receive vital information. How and why does that affect you? Because NSA has a critical and growing need for imaginative people—regardless of your academic major.

You will participate in programs of national importance, working in such areas as: Cryptography (the making of codes and ciphers), analytic research, language research, data systems design and programming, and administrative management.

At NSA, your professional status and earning power grow rapidly from the day you begin, without having to wait for years of "experience." Starting salary of at least $6,451 (for bachelor's degrees), regular increases, excellent advancement possibilities... and all the benefits of Federal employment. Another advantage is NSA's location, convenient to both Baltimore and Washington and a short drive from ocean beaches and other recreational attractions.

Plan to take the PQT. It could be your first step to a great future!

IMPORTANT: THE DEADLINE FOR PQT APPLICATIONS IS NOVEMBER 25. Pick up a PQT Bulletin at your Placement Office. It contains full details and the necessary registration form. Applicants must be U. S. citizens, subject to a complete physical examination and background investigation.

"To Touch the Grass" Quackenbush Plays On Audience Sentiment

By M.G. Minsky

"To Touch The Grass" a one act play by Jan Quackenbush proves the obvious; Mr. Quackenbush does have some amount of talent. Unfortunately, this talent is somewhat embryonic and, Mr. Quackenbush has a long way to go. Nevertheless, "To Touch The Grass" clearly indicates an ability to work not only with plot but also with characters. The plot, although perhaps contrived, is workable mainly because the writer plays upon the sentimentality of the audience by presenting us with characters we must pity. It is pity not drama which operates in the play. We are presented not so much with characters that feel but with characters that pretend to feel. Eza, the heroine, wants to experience but all she does is speak of her desire to experience. Ironically, what she desires to experience during the play is blindness, thus the play develops around her pretense of being blind. Grandma too wants to experience; she wants to experience her pleasant past again. She too is hopeless.

If Eza and Grandma are hopeless, Curt is preposterous. Onto the stage comes Curt, the image of the archetypal adolescent. He sees Eza and is overcome by her beauty. He speaks like a poet. But we soon learn that he is a murderer; he had killed his best friend, because his friend lied. Yet here he is strolling in his neighborhood park. Couldn't care less. Eza is quite disturbed by this; she has told him that she is blind. The play ends with Curt killing Eza's father. This time there are witnesses.

But, more than anything else the play suffers from wordiness. If Grandma said one more "I am an old lady. I am confused." I probably would have leapt onto the stage to gag her. Eza's "whys" induce the same feeling and her soliloquies usually were filled with namby-pamby poetic expressions. Extensive cutting would greatly improve the play.

Elizabeth Ingoldsby played Eza and she did so with taste and control. She achieved a broad range of dramatic emotion and got as much as possible out of her dismaying soliloquies. Sherri Hawkins did an adequate job as Grandma, but she lacked the emotional intensity of Miss Ingoldsby. Larry Sargent did the best he could with a preposterous role, although his delivery of lines could be improved. Liz Oustinnoff played Carrie, Eza's sister, who seems to be responsible for Eza and who usually gets punished if Eza strays from the house. It was sadly obvious that the director failed to show Miss Oustinnoff the complexity of her role. Her acting was good, but she was allowed to convey only one emotion - anger. Bert Muzzy played the father and his pretense on the stage was far more impressive than his somewhat bland delivery.

It is however pleasing to see that some on on this campus is creating and sincerely hope to seem more student drama in the future.

"Gospel According To St. Matthew"-Great!

After many years of Charleston Heston, Sal Mineo, bare bodies, clashing swords, super-sterophonic magna cum louder gargantua, this - Unpretentious Italian film is a refreshing and unique look at the Bible. Despite the lack of big-named stars and color photography, "The Gospel According to Saint Matthew" captures your attention and holds it until the end. The film has gotten critical acclaim all over the world and should be seen by anyone who is sick of walking out of a three hour-plus - spectacular feeling like a used dishcloth. Needless to say, the acting is somewhat amateurish, but nevertheless this fact should in no way deter you from seeing one of the great films of our times. It will only be playing for three days at the Flynn Theatre (Nov. 13-15) and that seems a pity since they gave Jerry Lewis and Elvis Presley a week apiece.

FLYNN -- James Colburn in "Dead Heat." Has been favorably received and represents an improvement over "Our Man Flint." Sunday - Tuesday - "The Gospel According to Saint Matthew." - Superlative Italian film reviewed below.

STATE - The Sound of Music.

STRONG -- Cary Grant in "Walk, Don't Run" - represents a come-down from past Cary Grant films but is highly entertaining in spots. Filmed in teeming Tokyo.

S.A. - Marlon Brando in "The Ugly American" - An awful film because it does not do justice to some provocative moments in the book and, at the same time, elucidates much which might have been left out. Brando at his worst.

SCOPE - November 15 - "Big Deal on Madonna Street" - fine comic moments with the most bungling group of thieves ever put on the screen. Marcello Mastroianni at the beginning of his fabulous career.

Fleming Museum

"To Die in Madrid" Is Authentic Film

Wednesday evening, November 16, Fleming Museum Association film series will present "To Die in Madrid," the recent and now renowned documentary on the Spanish Civil War. The French film maker, Frederic Rossif assembled it from newsreels and other film sources. The footage he used is all authentic, but in Rossif's words, every sequence "has its own musical beat, and for each battle I sought the correct rhythm. For me, it is above all a film of remembrance." And remembered by all those who see it; from the intimate close-up of peasants to the panoramas of massive battles that turned the countryside into an inferno. Madeleine Chapsal's narration, at times coolly factual, at times properly emotional, is delivered by Sir John Gielgud, Irene Worth and others. The musical score by Maurice Jarre is almost entirely by guitars. The presentation isn't wholly impartial -- Rossif's leaning toward the Loyalists is evident -- but in its exposition of bravery and atrocity on both sides little to choose beyond the agony of shattering tragedy."

The film will be shown in the Arena Theatre at 8 p.m. Admission is by Museum Membership.

Barring any undue legal complications, Stokely Carmichael should be in town next Monday. We urge you all to go and listen to the man.

You won't like what he is going to say. He will call you a bigot. He will tell you that two summers ago SNCC had some white college kids working for them, and that last summer they went to Europe. He will demand that the white man get out of the Negro ghetto on the grounds that every time a white man helps a Negro he also helps to perpetuate the conclusion that the Negro can't elevate himself.

Will he be wrong?

Stokely Carmichael will be glad to answer your questions. But make them good. For it is a SNCC tradition to sacrifice a number of well-intentioned white liberals to the caustic wit of their leader at each of his speeches. We have seen him in action. He is merciless.

Stokely Carmichael will bring to Burlington an indictment which is violently disturbing and embarrassingly pertinent. While we must take exception to his marriage of civil rights and anti-Viet Nam war cause, we are forced to admit to the bitter truth of his civil rights philosophy.

In short, Stokely Carmichael is telling it like it is.

R. B.

Ed. Note

Stokely Carmichael is presently out on bail for inciting a riot in Selma, Alabama. Consequently he may be unable to keep his scheduled lecture engagement at UVM. Scope will keep the campus informed of any last-minute developments. Should he be able to speak, admission will be limited to people having tickets (available free, upon presentation of student or faculty I.D. cards at Billings Center desk, Friday-through Monday).

Letters to the Editors

Re the Sceptic;

Mrs. Sartwell-

Defended??

To The Editors,

I just got done reading Mrs. Sartwell's letter and even though I didn't read your Sceptic last week I agree. The widow Sartwell is a pillar of our community (Lewis, Vermont) and would not be so outspoken if it wasn't true. M.G. Minsky must be one of those bearded nuts that started the Viet Nam trouble at UVM last year. Isn't Minsky a Russian name? Strange things go on at this college that would shock good Vermonters.

However, I wrote this because I disagree with Mrs. Sartwell on one point. As a student of History, I must say CUBA is really an American colony and has been one under great men like Teddy Roosevelt and William Walker. Instead of sending commies there, we ought to throw them off our island.

The Sceptic Wins Praise

To The Editors:

After reading Mike Minsky's column in the October 28 CYNIC, we would like to congratulate him on his success as an intelligent and amusing "Sceptic."

Blowing Own Horn?

To The Editors:

What have you done?! In your November 3 dictum in defense of one of your noteworthy columnists you awarded us two choices like (sic) that's all there were. Along side your stout declaration was a letter to the editor, a considered bit of counsel from an old grad. Was his advice considered or must youth always learn only from its own errors?

Now take note, while you leveled at criticism of your verbalist what did you do? You appear to be oblivious of an insidious plot. Did you read the sports page? Do you know who this Walter Mitty-esque Leo Pfeiffer is? What does he stand for? Let's look into his activities. 1) His name appears at the head of a column. 2) He is mentioned along the way as having made a splash on the grid-iron, yet how is not clear. Was he the sick-yellow suited Catamount or was he in the attire of one of our gladiators? 3) To conclude, he also was captioned into one of the game photos. Can you find him? In a Massachusetts uniform or was he hiding behind a cheer-leader?

Please look into this and save us before we are further afflicted by Pfeifferitis.

Play Unjustly Damned With Faint Praise

To The Editors:

Looking over last week's CYNIC:

Charlotte Beam unjustly damns "To Touch the Grass" with faint praise. The play was not "On the whole - a good job." On the whole it was an excellent job. This includes the acting of the three main character roles, the directing creativity behind the production, not to mention the writing of the play itself.

Mrs. Gordon Sartwell's Letter to the Editor unjustly damns the Sceptic with faint phrase. Anyone who can use the terms "red atheist communist propaganda is an outrage," reveals the starkly sterile state of their own imagination more than anything else.

Carl Wolpin's "Kill for Peace" unwisely damns his own position with impotent cliches, not to mention his forced rhymes and the fact this his position is a small barren island already occupied by about 19,669 starving, ranting ex-sailors.

And "Hugh Manity" damns approximately nothing in his open letter on Never-Never Land because of his painted face. The creator of "Hugh Manity," in case you didn't get the irrelevant pun, is merely a sick impersonation of Peter Pan.

FLYING HIGH (A Musical Comedy)

ACT I Lester Maddox, Bob Kennedy and Stokely Carmichael are the only three passengers in an airplane. They do not know when, where or if the plane will land. Stokely is hiding in the back of the plane, Lester and RFK are in their seats. Maddox sits on the right side of the aisle very near the window; in one hand he has a bible, in the other he holds an axe handle. RFK sits on the left side of the aisle, he seems quite nervous and constantly changes his position from near the window to further away. Suddenly Stokely leaves his hiding place and walks down the aisle.

Lester: Boy Come here. I want a shoeshine

RFK: Gosh. A colored citizen

(Carmichael sits next to Lester and ask him for a piece of fried chicken. Lester hits him with the Bible and Stokely flings Lester over the seat.)

Lester: Goddam nigger.

Stokely: Okay.

(They fight)

RFK: Now. Now. Don't rock the boat. Lets behave like grown up people. I have a solution - let's talk things over.

(Lester begins shrilling "Dixie". Stokely begins singing "We Shall Overcome" and RFK, moved both by the morality of the words and by the fact that he has nothing to lose, joins in with him. Stokely changes the words to "You Shall Undergo." Kennedy stops singing.)

RFK: Now. Now. I know exactly how you must feel. We Irish were persecuted too. If you want, you can sit next to me. I get the window, though. If you want a window there are many empty seats . . .

Lester: No niggers. I don't want no niggers. Send 'im back. Send 'im back.

RFK: He has his rights too. What do you want?

Stokely: Not Much. Just Lester's seat. He should sit in the back of the plane. He is, after all, very stupid. And someday baby whether you like it or not I'm going to get your seat. Someday there will be an awful lot of us in your city. But right now I'll sit next to you.

RFK: Top had there isn't some one here to take a picture of us having a little chit-chat. We could publish it in papers to improve race relations. Some of my best friends live in Harlem.

Stokely: Some of mine too.

RFK: See we really have a lot in common.

Lester: Yeah you're both reds.

RFK: No, We are both Americans.

Stokely: No. You are both Americans. White Americans.

Lester: You just want to marry my daughter.

Stokely: Why no. Your grandfather probably raped my grandmother. Might as well keep it in the family.

RFK: By the way when is the plane landing in Washington, Lester: Washington. This plane ain't going to Washington, its going to Atlanta.

Stokely: I bet the Pilot doesn't even know. But after all he's white too.

RFK: Why don't we ask.

ACT II The three men enter the control room. To their horror they discover no pilot.

Lester: Now see what you have done. We could have been perfectly happy just sitting there. Who put the nigger on the plane. I bet it was the Jews.

RFK: I'll fly it. I have the most experience. My brother was president. Of course that has nothing to do with my ability I always run on my record just like the late beloved and martyred president who . . .

Lester: He was a red. That's why they killed him.

RFK: Stokely. You can be co-pilot. I need one. I'll teach you.

Lester: But he's a nigger.

Stokely: Well maybe I'll help you and maybe I won't . . . And maybe I'll be pilot or maybe I'll have a plane of my own. By the way, my name is Mr. Carmichael, Bobby.

Lester: But he can't. HE'S BLACK! HE'S BLACK! HELP, HELP, HE WILL DESTROY US ALL. (He begins breaking up the instrument panel)

RFK and Stokely: Hey! Stop that. Do you want us to crash?

(indeed, the airplane is crashing. The three kneel down in prayer).

ALL: HELP. I NEED SOMEBODY

HELP, NOT JUST ANYBODY

HELP I NEED SOMEBODY

PLEASE HELP ME QUICK.

Placement Barometer

FINANCIAL AID INCREASES FOR GRADUATE STUDENTS

If you stay in school to earn a graduate degree, it'll be worth at least $1,000 a year more to you in annual earnings than a "mere" B.A., and this is an absolute minimum.

This is a key reason why a record 493,000 Americans are enrolled this school year in graduate and professional schools, and why this number is expected to double in the decade directly ahead. At a growing number of colleges and universities, 80 per cent or more of the undergraduates are now planning to continue beyond their senior year in college.

And the soaring demand from both private industry and government for those with graduate degrees is why the sum of financial aid available to the students is climbing rapidly. Roughly 88,000 graduate fellowships and research assistantships totaling $175,000,000 will be awarded this year alone. An overwhelming four out of five U.S. graduate students in the arts and sciences are receiving some kind of financial assistance.

Just in the past decade, the National Science Foundation, the nation's biggest single source of fellowships, has boosted its fellowship and traineeship funds from $1.5 million to $35 million.

But a single year of graduate study now costs a staggering $4,120. A Ph.D. may cost $20,000 or more, on top of $10,000 for undergraduate schooling.

Obviously, the vast majority of students and their families cannot afford such sums, even though they may be acutely aware of the potential long-range return on the investment. They must have financial help. Fellowships, which have jumped to an average of about $3,000 a year today, are their major solution.

Competition for graduate fellowships is admittedly fierce, particularly in the sciences and for the fattest fellowships. But there also are thousands of fellowships available to the nongenius with a serious interest in higher education and a worthwhile study plan.

So, if you, or you child, are considering graduate study and need a fellowship to help support it, here are five basic rules for finding and applying for one:

(1) Consult your graduate study adviser and professors in your major department on kinds and sources of fellowships and on institutions you might want to attend. Write the graduate school of each university to which you intend to apply and ask what financial assistance is available; the universities administer not only their own fellowship funds, but also many of the government and private foundation funds as well.

(2) Find out all the financial details of each fellowship for which you think you might qualify. Exactly what does it cover: tuition, travel, the full year, or only the academic year? Will the funds be tax-free? (Usually, payments up to $300 a month are tax-free if you are working for a degree). Are there special allowances for dependents?

(3) Focus on three or four fellowship sources, and confine your efforts to those for which you think you really qualify.

(4) Fill out application forms neatly, concisely, thoughtfully and correctly. Pay special attention to your statement on why you want a fellowship and how you intend to use it. Include supporting documents which may be required, letters of recommendation, special tests, academic records, etc.

(5) Get your application in on time. Deadlines for some fellowships are as early as the fall of your senior year in college. Preparation of your applications can easily take as long as six months before the deadline.

PERCEPTION

By Jan Quackenbush

This article introduces a series of five brief essays which when considered together, testify that each individual happiness has one (and only one) source which is some process of communication.

Immediately, two questions of semantics arise which demand answers: what is meant by "each individual happiness" and, secondly, what is meant by "communication"?

By the phrase "each individual happiness," I mean every particular instance that the sensation of delight is experienced. (For our needs here—experienced by people). The term "delight" is not to be confused with "Contentedness" which is much closer in meaning to "satisfaction." I mean "delight" in the same manner as enthusiastic jubilation.

The latter term, "communication", is a bit harder to deal with. By "communication," I mean not simply an act of expression, as I am now expressing to you my thoughts, but also a realization of understanding (e.g. I may express my thoughts to you for hours, but unless you realize that you understand me, I have not communicated to you; my thoughts are meaningless for you).

All this seems perhaps like so much jibberish, but it is essential that you understand the terms of my proposition if you are to realize its truth.

That this proposition is an important one and relevant to our social conditions, will be made apparent for you in the next article; though, upon reflection it ought to be apparent to you now.

Larry will outline the program he participated in and announces preliminary plans for this summer's ambassador. A selection of atypical slides will be shown to back up the telling of assorted adventures and experiences. Topics discussed will range from Cokes to laws to contraception. Larry hopes that all the Experiment alumni will be able to make it - the entire university community is welcome to attend.

PROFESSOR EVALUATION

Last year the Student Association initiated plans for a professor evaluation survey. At present, a special committee of the S.A. is drawing up a questionnaire and it is hoped that it will be completed soon.

Dr. Perrine of the Psychology Department is assisting in the wording of the questionnaire so it may be suitably used in the L.B.M. computer.

When the questionnaire has been completed it will be test piloted in a selection class. Dr. Gregg has consented for an initial trial of the evaluation form among the students of his class.

At 1:15 in room 301 Votey, he will speak to students with a primary interest in statistics about several research problems he has worked on.

At 4:00 in room 113 Votey, he will give a talk entitled "What do Industrial Mathematicians do?"

All interested persons, especially undergraduate mathematics and physical science majors are invited to attend.

For further information contact Dr. David Sylvester, Department of Mathematics, Ext. 616.

Financial Need Criterion for Aid

For incoming freshman, academic promise; for other University of Vermont undergraduates, academic achievement; and for both, financial need - these are the criteria for receiving a scholarship or loan aid at Vermont.

UVM's Financial Aid Director, Allen Walker, reports that "by far the majority of freshmen who received scholarship awards this year ranked high in their college board scores, and were in the top 20 per cent of their graduating class, and - most important - came highly recommended by their high school principals and guidance counsellors."

To continue to be eligible to receive financial aid, a student at Vermont must make a sound academic mark. For sophomores, the Financial Aid Office expects a quality point average of 2.5 - equivalent to a C plus. The required average is 2.6 for a junior, 2.7 for a senior. Deans' List average at Vermont is 3.0; overall average required for graduation is 1.7.

"Generally speaking," Walker reports, "we were able to give everyone with a satisfactory average and financial need some scholarship aid. As students advance through the four years, we generally reduce the scholarship and increase the amount of loan aid awarded. This is necessary because we do not have enough scholarship funds to go around."

"But as long as a student is in good standing, there is no need for him to leave school for financial reasons."

This year, the Financial Aid Office received 1800 applications for aid, awarded some form of aid to more than 1400 students. Scholarship awards alone - including $133,000 from the Wilbur Fund - totalled $528,000; loans over $477,000.

Campus jobs provided another $185,000, with Walker reporting many other students holding part-time jobs off campus, and a substantial number relying on summer earnings to help pay part of their college costs.

"M" IS FOR THE MANY THINGS YOU'LL TEACH HER

Nobody will dispute - surely not I - that raising children is a task which requires full time and awesome skills. Nonetheless, a recent nationwide survey has revealed a startling fact: mothers who go back to work after their children are safely through the early years are notably happier, better adjusted, and more fulfilled than mothers who simply remain housewives. Moreover - and mark this well - the children of such working mothers are themselves happier, better adjusted, and more fulfilled!

All very well, you say, but what's it got to do with you? Isn't it obvious? If you are underachieving at college, get your mother a job.

What kind of job? Well sir, your mother is probably between 35 and 50 years of age, so certain occupations must immediately be ruled out. Logging, for example. Or whaling. Or carhopping.

But don't despair. There are other kinds of jobs - not many, to be sure, but some. However, you must not stick Mom in just any old job. You must remember that after the excitement of raising you, she would be bored to tears as a file clerk, for instance, or as a doorman. (A doorman, as we all know, is someone who brings handfuls of water to track layers. With the recent invention of the pail, doormen are gradually falling into technological unemployment.)

But I digress. I was saying, find Mom a job worthy of her talents, something challenging that uses her vast wisdom and experience but, at the same time, is not too hard on her obsolescing tissues. That's what Walter Signafoos did, and the results were brilliantly successful.

Walter, a sophomore at the Upper Maryland College of Wickerwork and Belles Lettres, majoring in raffia, approached the problem scientifically. First he asked himself what his mother did best. Well sir, what she did best was to keep hollering, "Dress warm, Walter!"

At first glance this seemed a skill not widely in demand, but Walter was not discouraged. He sent out hundreds of inquiries and today, I am pleased to report, his mother is happily employed as wardrobe mistress for the Montreal Canadiens.

Another fortunate venture was that of Frank C. Gransmire, a junior at the Oregon State Conservatory of Music and Optometry, majoring in sties. Frank, like Walter, did a survey in depth of his mother's talents. Chief among them, he found, was her ability to make a roast of beef feed the whole family for three days. So, naturally, Frank got her a job at the Museum of Natural History.

What has one to do with the other, you ask? Isn't it obvious? Anyone who can stretch ribs like that belongs in paleontology.

I cannot conclude this column without saying a few words about Personna Super Stainless Steel Blades. The reason I cannot is that this column is sponsored by the makers of Personna Super Stainless Steel Blades, and they are inclined to get peckish if I omit to mention their product.

Not, mind you, that it is a chore for me to plug Personna. Or, for the matter of that, to shave with Personna. No sir: no chore. Personna takes the pain out of shaving, scrapes the scrape, negates the nick, repudiates the rasp, peels the pull, boycotts the burn, blackballs the bite, ousts the ouch. Furthermore, Personna endures and abides, gives you luxury shave after luxury shave, day after day after day. And further furthermore, Personna is available both in double-edge style and injector style. And as if all this were not bounty enough, Personna is now offering you a chance to grab a fistful of $100 bills! It's MERP Week Again

Is she the cute one in the second row or.....

The big clod! This is pushing it a little.

By Dick Matheson

Girls are catty. This is a universal truism, right, guys? Some girls are pussycatty and others are just catty. No one knows quite what catty means, but you get the idea of a huddle of females misanthropically probing the dark and deficient aspects of your (actually perfect) character.

Luckily, UVM has a Day of Judgment or rather a Week of Inquisition in which chaos gaily reigns supreme and all catty Catamounts (of the female variety) must mind their long, languid eyelashes and twitching tails.

No one should presume for a moment that MERP really stands for Men's Economic Recovery Period. Half the girls are going to take their guys to free dances or movies anyway, right?

The true essence of MERP week is Masculine Experiment in Reverse Psychology. Ah, yes. Let them know what it's like to be on the other end of the line. One can scarcely wait to hear some of the camp comments of the cool cats to and about the pretty kitties.

"Gee, I'm sorry I can't go out that night, Suzy, but it's my grandmother's birthday and I never miss that."

"I might have to study Friday night, Betti, but if you could call me back Friday sometime, I'll tell you for sure."

"Boy, Fred, I'm not going out with that Doreen chick anymore. She didn't hold the door for me once, and when we left the flicks, she didn't even help me with my coat."

But after the laughter, the only real fools will be the chicks who are chicken. All year long they whine to their roommates that the boys they really like never ask them out.

The proof's in the MERPing, but you can't make her drink. Or Something. Anyway, any girl that doesn't have a date sometime next week and claims to want one, will have to eat every word of any sour-grape excuses she's made in the last year.

Yes, Virgins, there is a MERP week. And it generally proves to be great for morale (for those who had to study the night of Halloween).

There is a tragic aspect to MERP week also. Think of all those guys hanging their long hair out of windows in their ivory tower, weeping beneath the stars, because their dream princess MERPed them not.

She must be the one in the second row. Wow!

The least he could do is act interested.

I guess he is interested!

Students Quiz

By Meryle Sacks
Debbie Thea

October 24-28 found many students taking an extra exam - a qualification test for the Peace Corps. Just what are these students heading for? Eight returned volunteers have told us of their impressions and experiences during their two year service in the Corps.

Mike LaPointe, a UVM senior headed for Bolivia, told us about the advanced training program in which he participated last summer.

He told us that the volunteers have a pay scale geared as close as possible to the living standards. He also said the year service is not a financial or an educational setback, as the experience is educational and many job opportunities arise from it.

The normal service is two years, the maximum is five. The Corps wants to keep its personnel young and fresh to propagate ideas and eliminate stagnation.

The training of the Peace Corps requires discipline and motivation. A volunteer is trained in the job he is going to do, but once he is there he is on his own. He makes his own hours and uses his own strategy. Generally, this strategy is to get the confidence of the people by sincerity and empathy. Secondly, a volunteer must lead and guide them, but let them make their own mistakes.

Peace Corps

The heads of various countries invite the Peace Corps, requesting the number and type of volunteers they want. The Peace Corps functions to improve international relations by developing interpersonal relations.

Because the Peace Corps is an amateur organization, it is easier for the people of a country to treat the volunteers as equals. There is more than just the G.I., businessman, or diplomat now. There is someone who will work with the people. The overall image, naturally, depends on how the volunteer handles various situations and follows up projects.

The job of the volunteer is to help people, not to try to break political records by introducing change.

WRA Aims Are Promote And Serve

Promote and serve are the two main objectives behind UVM's Women's Recreation Association. Essentially, the purpose of WRA is to promote interest in both intermural recreation and intercollegiate activities and sports among all women students here at UVM. This year the association is led by Nancy Nelson, president; Debbie Arnold, vice-president; Penny Rich, secretary; B.A. Cunningham, treasurer; and, advisor, Miss Martha Knight of the Women's Physical Education staff. New to the function of WRA this year is its membership which now includes every woman student at UVM.

How does the WRA "promote and serve"? Most well-known of the association activities is the team competition which takes place in any desired sport. Volunteer teams from dorm floors and sororities meet on tennis, volleyball, and basketball courts, as well as many others, to vie for winning points. At the end of the school year, a WRA trophy is presented to the dorm or sorority having acquired the highest number of participation points.

Also, with the cooperation of several other schools, the WRA sponsors a number of PlayDays, set aside for general competition in various sports.

To serve, the WRA also has varied projects in mind. Still in the planning, but hopefully for the end of November, the association will present two ski movies, one on Alpine skiing and another on Nordic skiing.

They will be open to any interested UVM students. Another project planned by the group is for Saturday, November 12, when girls from St. Joseph's Orphanage will spend the day with WRA members at Southwick, enjoying group recreation and refreshments.

Review Boards Not the Answer

The nature of its responsibilities has always made law enforcement an object of criticism and although it has its shortcomings, it is not responsible for all the grievances with which it is charged.

In some communities throughout the country civilian review boards have been established to hear complaints against law enforcement officers. But wholesale harassment of this sort is hardly an antidote for troublesome issues.

J. Edgar Hoover, speaking for the Federal Bureau of Investigation, calls these committees a "backward step." They consist of individuals who have had little experience with law or police administration. Furthermore, the usurpation of authority rightfully belonging to the police command can reduce the orderly processes of community life to petty bickering, suspicion and hatred.

Eventually, appointments will be made for political expediency, rather than merit, and politics has no place in effective law enforcement.

If police officers are to be subjected to public ridicule, or penalized in salary, promotion and personal career, the decision should not be reached by outside overseers to whom professional law enforcement and public protection may be merely of secondary interest.

Instead of promoting impractical review boards, communities should make positive efforts to emphasize high selection standards, outside training, realistic pay scales and advancement based on merit.

"Business is for the birds!" Who says so?

Lots of people do. Some right on your campus. And for rationale, they point an accusing finger at business and say it lacks "social commitment."

Social commitment? We wish they could visit our Kearny, N. J. plant, where we make cable and apparatus for your Bell telephone company. But we have time for other thoughts, other talents.

Like the situation in nearby Newark. With civic and business leaders, we began buzzing with ideas. "Let's teach higher skills to some of the un-employed and under-employed. Say, machine shop practice. They could qualify for jobs that are going begging — and help themselves as well."

We lent our tool-and-die shop, evenings. We found volunteer instructors. A community group screened applicants. Another supplied hand tools. The Boys Club donated classroom facilities. Another company sent more instructors.

Some 70 trainees enrolled. Their incentive? Self-improvement. Results to date? New people at better jobs. Happier.

And this is only one of dozens of social-minded projects at Western Electric plants across the country, where our first job is making communications equipment for the Bell System.

So, you don't give up ideals when you graduate. If anything, at a company like, say, Western Electric, you add to them. And it's not just a theory. It's practice. Satisfying. Come on and find out. And watch a feathered cliché fly out the window.

Soccer Team Hoping For Tourney Bid

Cats End Season With 8-1 Record

By Ted Ryan

Wrapping up its season in sensational style, the University of Vermont soccer team crushed the University of Maine squad, 7-0, and greatly enhanced its chances for an NCAA College Division tournament bid.

Only the fine work of Maine goalie Ken Olson kept the slaughter down. Olson made 30 saves, a fantastic total, as the Cats rained shot after shot at the Maine nets. Vermont fired 59 times, more than twice the normal total in a game.

Vermont goalie John Hilton turned in another shutout but the redheaded junior lounged near his goal throughout most of the game. Maine took only seven shots in the game and Hilton was credited with three saves.

"Maine is having a down year and we had a good day," was the way UVM coach Hal Greig explained the battering his team handed Maine.

The Cats had plenty of time to set up shots. The boots were made with a crispness seldom seen behing Gutterson Field-house.

Pete Baldwin once again sparked the Cats by rifling home two scores. Other goals were tallied by Pete Giroux, Bill Burling, Bob Schroeder, Jack Semler and Dave Cronin.

Once again this year the Cats surprised the members of the Yankee Conference by taking the league title. Massachusetts and Connecticut were co-favored with Vermont ranked as a dark horse.

MITCHELL: ECAC Again

Amherst, Mass. - Vermont halfback Bob Mitchell (Bridport, Vt.), New Hampshire sophomore Paul Coutourier (Dover, N.H.) and Massachusetts linebacker Rod Brooks (Ayer, Mass.) have been selected as the top Yankee Conference Back, sophomore and lineman for their performances last Saturday.

Mitchell, chosen for the third time this fall, crunched his way to 202 yards rushing in 23 attempts in Vermont's 27-3 win over Middlebury. Mitchell scored three touchdowns for a season's total of 13 and has netted 1,149 yards to pace the Catamounts to their 6-1 record.

Coutourier, a sub until Saturday, started his first varsity game and led New Hampshire to its 27-21 victory over Springfield College. Coutourier carried 20 times, netted 116 yards rushing for a 5.8 average, and scored two touchdowns. The second one came on a crucial fourth down play that ended up as a 71-yard TD run.

Brooks, Massachusetts' outstanding Co-Capt., was all over the field as the Redmen dropped a 16-14 decision to Holy Cross. Brooks made a key tackle when the Redmen held for four downs at their one yard line, blocked a punt that set up the first U Mass touchdown, and set a new Redmen season defensive statistic record with two games still to be played.

Backfield nominations included Bill Estey (New Hampshire), Paul Keany (Maine), Greg Landry (Massachusetts), John Thompson (Rhode Island) and Pete Petrillo (Connecticut).

Lineman nominated were John O'Brien (New Hampshire), Jack Schweberger (Vermont), Pete Norris (Maine), and Dick Zuchowski (Connecticut).

Sophomore standouts included Art Brown (Vermont), Charles Ingate (Maine), John Krot (Connecticut) and Leon Spinney (Rhode Island).

The Catamounts ended their season with a 7-0 romp over Maine. (Credit: Morgan, SPS)

For Greig, the season contained many surprises.

In pre-season Greig said the defense didn't look as sharp as he would like it. During the season, opponents scored only six goals in nine games. Giroux, Les Velez, Tom Bitter and Schroeder, working well as the defensive backs, kept opposing lines from setting up shots.

Hilton provided another defensive surprise. Hilton had never played soccer in his high school or collegiate life but the tall and talented junior has made many spectacular plays. He has, in short, been phenomenal. Among the outstanding plays was his block of a penalty kick against U Mass which would have tied the score.

Greig also expressed concern about the apparent lack of a smooth offense in pre-season. Yet Baldwin and Semler repeatedly came up with the clutch goals. Baldwin has 10 goals and four assists and Semler has six goals and three assists to lead the team.

But during pre-season, perhaps the thing Greig worried most about was the depth of the squad. Greig said he felt a few key injuries could ruin the entire season.

But when Vermont defeated U Mass for the Yankee Conference title, four starters were on the side lines.

"We have been forced to play with only a few players but our substitutes have done a great job. Theron Webster, Gary Smith and Dave Cronin all played great games when they were pressed into action," Greig explained. Smith scored the only goal in the game against U Mass.

The aggressiveness, versatility and "just plain desire to play" of the players resulted in an 8-1 season. Semler and Taft have played several positions during the season.

"We've had our share of luck too," Greig added. "But I feel a good team makes its own breaks."

The exploits of the soccer Cats have been overshadowed by great season of the football team. But, like their football cousins, the soccer players are champions. The announcement of tourney bids will be made this weekend.

Girls Ski Team

The UVM women's ski team has begun practice with the hopes of a successful year on the slopes. Returning from last year are juniors Debby Arnold and Joanne Bass, sophomores Linda Andrews, B.A. Cunningham and Peggy Nutt. Several freshmen with much racing experience complete the squad and should provide the strength and depth to the team to produce a winning combination.

Under the supervision of Miss Chase of the Women's Physical Education Dept. and managed by Katrina Koziol, the team is scheduled to enter four carnivals and individual USEASA races. Enthusiasm is high and a good season is looked forward to.

Some young engineers will go through almost anything for a future with "P.S.E. & G."

Don't fight. We'll be glad to see both of you. And if you qualify for our personalized training program, you've taken the first step on an exciting, rewarding career with a dynamic growth company. See our representative when he visits your campus.

Cats Still Trying For Tangerine Bowl

Vermont Travels To Maine

THE INSIDER

By LEO PFEIFFER

Amid the klinking of bottles in the Middlebury stands, Vermont came through the game in seemingly high flying colors. However, it was not exactly what meets the eye. As John Coons, the lead-line coach said Sunday night, the Cats won the game on ability alone, and a team that plays only on ability will not be a successful football team.

As most of the public knows the team was struck with a virus on Wednesday night. A good number had not fully recovered by game time. With the haggard faces, wobbly legs, red eyes and pale faces, many looked like they had just come off a Pacific island after being stranded a month. Not too many knew what was said at the half time break because they were busy in the bathroom.

Before all this, practice was called off Monday after the Massachusetts game, making it more difficult to get back on the track.

Possibly the only motive that Vermont had for beating Middlebury badly was to get them off the schedule. After all, many feel that they gain nothing at all by playing the Panthers even if it is a sure-win.

So maybe this helps explain why the score was not higher than it was.

Many players felt that this was their worst game but amid the complaining there were some right spots. Little 220 lbs. Dave Capman, who is the youngest man on the squad and still gets 17 shaves out of a beep-beep blade, was confronted with big Barnes Boffey (6'8" and 278 lbs.) a mountain of....of....(?) and gave him a lesson on solid football. Bob Mitchell, improving every week, dazzled everybody with his "now you have him, now you don't" tactics. Doing what he did was not enough for him so he thought he would really show the crowd something when he would lose his shoe during a T.D. run and, like Cinderella, presto.... but much to his disappointment, he came off the field still a football player instead of a pumpkin.

Then we have the dark side of things. Colin Hurd, the world's toughest man, thought he was Napoleon by trying to intercept a pass with one hand and has now acquired the distinctive nickname of "Pizza Paddles." John Gurreri tried to talk the Middlebury offensive line into stop triple teaming him. Pete Ambrose, who made the all E.C.A.C. kickoff team, and is known for his defensive signal calling, which once included a 2 man line, is now the number one draft choice of the U.S. Army. Bill Leete, the defensive secondary signal caller who was in the infirmary prior to the game, may as well have stayed there for the first five plays. Jim Culhane is now on a crash diet for gaining weight after he bounced off a Middlebury defender like a high school scat-back running into Ernie Ladd. And Leo Pfeiffer did absolutely nothing.

Were it not for individuals like Ed Kiniry and Bill Wolff, who played above par games as did our ends Jeff Kuhman and Jack Schweberger, the game may have been more like last years.

Looking ahead to Maine sees the Black Bear improving every game. This is their first losing season in 20 years but their whole season can be salvaged by defeating rival Vermont. The Cats, on the other hand, want to defeat Maine soundly for several reasons. One is last year's one sided defeat and another is if the Cats win, there is a good chance for a bid to the Tangerine Bowl. Who wouldn't want to be catching rays down in Florida in December?

FROSH LOOK STRONG

The freshman Hockey team has a host of good players this year. In an effort to strengthen Vermont's Hockey, Coach Cross has recruited some of the finest talent in New England. The boy that should lead the frosh is George Kriener, a rugged defenseman from the Nichols school in Buffalo, N.Y. Other boys that should make the frosh a top club are Goalie Jack Lawrence of Troy, N.Y., forwards Bob Mellstrom of Warwick, R.I., and Jim Yeates of Dorval, Que. Yeates played in the fast Metropolitan A league last year, so he should do very well this year.

The freshman schedule has been greatly improved and the Kittens will face stiff tests against Clarkson, St. Lawrence, Dartmouth, and the always powerful Middlebury squad.

Cross Country Squad Defeated

The University of Vermont cross country team traveled to Brunswick Maine this past week to face Bowdoin College. The UVM runners, guided by veteran coach Archie Post, lost the dual meet by only two points, 27-29.

The top runner for UVM was once again Rene Chaintreuil, captain of the Vermont squad. Chaintreuil came in second behind Ron Tulonon of Bowdoin. Chaintreuil ran the 3.8 mile course in the fine time of 18:54, just seven seconds behind Tulonon. Bowdoin runners Farwell and Paulding finished in the third and fourth places respectively. Ralph Coleman, Pete Jones, and Rick Howard all of Vermont took the fifth, sixth and seventh places.

Close Battle Is Expected

What many have called the finest University of Vermont football team in the history of the school travels to Orono this Saturday to finish its regular season play against the Maine Black Bears. The Cats will be seeking their seventh victory against one setback which will tie a UVM record for number of wins in one season.

Maine, despite a 3-5 record to date, has not lost any game by more than six points, including a close 10-7 loss to the Yankee Conference leader, U Mass. The Bears stand 1-3 in the Conference with a 17-6 win over U RI and close 10-7 and 20-19 defeat at the hands of U NH and Connecticut, respectively.

The game should provide an interesting duel between Maine's 6-1, 225 lb. linebacker, John Huard, a first team Little All-American choice on defense last year, and Vermont's candidate for Little All-America honors for this season, Halfback Bob Mitchell. In the Rhode Island game earlier this year Huard put on an amazing display as he blocked a punt, intercepted two passes, scored two touchdowns, knocked down three passes, made 15 unassisted tackles and assisted in six other stops.

Other key players for Maine included quarterback George Platter, halfback Paul Keany, fullback Charlie Belisle, split end John White, and defensive end and punter Pete Norris.

The Catamount should enter the game at close to full strength following last week's near disaster when 19 members of the 47 man squad were stricken with an intestinal virus on the Wednesday and Thursday before the Middlebury game. Most of the players recovered enough, however, to see action in the game in which Vermont comes out on top by a 27-3 margin. The victory assured the Cats of their fourth consecutive State Series championship.

The outstanding player of the game, as was expected, was th-

Bridport Bomb, Bob Mitchell. "Mitch" continued his attempt to completely rewrite the UVM offensive record book by gaining 202 yards on 23 carries for an average of 8.8 yards. In the process, he scored three touchdowns (on runs of eleven, one and twenty five yards) to boost his point total for the year to 78, a new school record. He now has gained 1149 yards on the season for a new one year total offense mark for the Green and Gold.

Mitchell's performance earned him a spot on the ECAC weekly team for the fourth time this year, also a record for a Vermont player.

Also scoring for UVM in the Middlebury game was senior open end Jack Schweberger on a 32 yard aerial from quarterback Dave Shumate. As usual the offensive line, led by Danny (Fuzzy) Martin, played an outstanding game in opening holes for Mitchell. Top defensive players were Ed Kiniry, Bill Wolff, and Captain Bill Van Bennekum.

Academics Hurt Hockey Team

By Fred Schlapp

The varsity hockey team has taken to the ice with many positions "up for grabs". The first line with Lee Roy, Curt Tobey, and Jack Semler is back with Bob Schroeder and Bob Snyder at the points. The second line has Ozzie Swett and Paul Dorsey at the wings, but it is still unknown whether center Paul Ryan will be playing. Neither Claude La Pearle or Bill Dunn, who paired to form the second defense, will play due to academic difficulties. Also, on the academic casualty list is Laddie Cook, the big center who scored many key goals for the Cats last year. In order to strengthen his defense, Coach Cross has moved co-captain Chips Uihlein back to the point position. This should prove to be a wise move as Chips is a rugged boy with fine defensive ability. The Cats will have Tom Gregg in the goal and this could be the key to their season. Gregg has a tendency to be either brilliant or terrible, but if he becomes more steady in his play, he could supply the Cats with outstanding goaltending which they will need this season.

Positions on the third unit are completely wide open, and Coach Cross is looking for a real battle for these positions. Ed Danks, who was injured last year, Pete Meyer, Dick Catron, Doug Krebs, and possibly Bob Martin are expected to give the team needed depth.

Coach Cross has scheduled some powerful teams this year in an effort to upgrade Vermont's hockey program. On November 12 the Cats host a Canadian Military College, and on November 25 they travel to Hanover, N.H. to play the always powerful Dartmouth team. This tough schedule puts a great burden on the shoulders of Captains Ozzie Swett and Chips Uihlein, for they must lead the team against some of the most powerful hockey teams in the country. The first game is with the Ivy League champion Brown which came within a few goals of winning the national championship. Even though Vermont is seemingly overmatched, the result of this game could be very interesting for it will serve as a measuring stick for the caliber of Vermont hockey.

NOTICE

Indoor track coach Archie Post announces a meeting for all varsity and freshman indoor track candidates on Wednesday, November 16, in one of the lecture rooms off the east balcony entrance at 4:15 p.m. The purpose of the meeting is to go over the details and to have all varsity candidates sign up for workouts which will commence after final exams. Especially needed are all available shot putters and sprinters.

Basketball Scrimmage

On Wednesday, November 16, at 4:15 p.m. head basketball coach Art Loche has announced a scrimmage between the varsity and freshman team. The scrimmage will be open to the public at the Partick Gym.

The game should be of particular interest since the basketball situation at UVM this season seems somewhat similar to the situation at UCLA a year ago. Last year the UCLA frosh, led by Lew Alcindor, Lucius Allen, Lynn Schackelford, and Kenny Heitz easily defeated their varsity opponents.

Although the basketball Kittens have no Alcindors and Allens in sight, they are the products of Mr. Loche's first full year of recruiting and should give the varsity hoopsters, lacking the three top scorers of last season, quite a battle.

Top returner to the varsity 6'3" junior Bill Librera (11.2 last year). Senior Russ Boardman and juniors Don Katz, Sandy McLeod, and Titus Hale provide height in the forecourt. Captain Bruce Haina and sophomores Dave LaPointe, Bob Jacobs, and Terry O'Leary are key backcourt performers. Other team members are Dick (Stuffer) Shaw, Bill Schmidt, Rich Kellogg, Rich Segal and Jim Evetti.

A few of the yearlings to watch include Also Salati, Frank Mastinuik, and Ray Beub.

Roth Speaks on India ; Worthwhile Experience

By Charlotte Beam

Larry Roth, a UVM senior, spoke Thursday at 8:00 in Billings about his experience in India last summer. He was UVM's first student ambassador to that country.

Larry was one of the three finalists chosen by the university as the possible ambassador to India. The Experiment in International Living made the final choice.

After a four-day orientation period at Putney, Vt., Larry found himself aboard a plane with 85 other young people bound for New Delhi. He arrived there July 11 and remained four days. He termed his first impression of Indian life a "cultural shock."

After the initial exposure to Indian life, the group divided into smaller groups of about ten people. Larry's group went to Wrangal, a city in south-central India. While here, Larry lived for three weeks with the family of a Hindu doctor. Communication was no problem since everyone spoke English.

After leaving Warangal, the group visited two industrial cities, Hyderabad and Bangalore. From there it went to the college town, Poona, about 100 miles from Bombay. Here each member was able to meet Indian students, attend classes and become more acquainted with Indian culture.

Finally, eight days were reserved for independent travel. Larry visited Bombay, Benares, and Agra, sites of the famous Taj Mahal.

The original group of 85 met again in New Delhi for two days and then returned to the United States.

Larry feels that India is not a "fun place" to go; in fact, he thinks that it is one of the toughest countries to be sent to. Nevertheless he feels that his experience was entirely worthwhile, especially since he is able to see how much his outlook toward India changed during his two months there.

Carmichael Says Black Power Misrepresented by Press

SNCC chairman, Stokely Carmichael, a young man who believes in fighting for what he wants, lashed out at the white press and white liberalism Monday night declaring Black Power was both misunderstood and misrepresented. Over 525 persons gathered in Southwick Hall to hear the controversial Negro protest leader speak.

He declared that fighting against white supremacy does not mean a desire to integrate, a good commonly misunderstood by the white society. In place of intergration, Black Power advocates not abolishing the black community, but preservind the cultural identity and establishing its own institutions. The goal of Black Power is not to take over the whole country; it is instead striving for power through its own community.

Accordint to Carmichael, advocates of integration are in favor of entering the Negro into the main stream of society previously excluded to him. He wen onto say that this selection of individual Negroes is a connotation of the white man's belief that the Negro community has nothing of value. Carmichael drew one of the first responses from the audiences when he remarked, "One day Harlem and Wats will stand empty — a triumph of integration. But what we want is the right to say what happens in the black ghetto."

Whites, according to Carmichael, benefit from Negro poverty ghettos, the shanties and slums of black communities that are blueprinted throughout the country. He views this as a result of identical repeating white racism, which correlates with his earlier definition of "black" as meaning "blackness and powerlessness."

Black Power today is taking the stand that "The time must come when the negro organizes to protect his own interests."

Attributing riots to needs, Carmichael stated that we will continue to know riots because of the absence of a community given Black Power, power to deal with its own problems.

In the question-and-answer period following the lecture, Carmichael made several statements that were a little removed from his soft spoken, almost pointedly inoffensive speech.

In anser to one question he referred to Hubert Humphrey as the "political screamer of the century." He elaborated by saying "If Johnson says to jump, Humphrey says, 'How high?' Confronted with a question on inter-racial marriage, Carmichael retorted that if two people wanted to get married, he'd consider it a matter strictly between them and would wish them the best of happiness.

When asked by one of the students if SNCC needed or wanted anything from the white man, Carmichael answered, "White people must learn they cannot legitimize Black Power, Black Power speaks to black people."

Memorial Services Held For 3 Accident Victims

The University of Vermont held an interfaith memorial service Thursday at 4:15 p.m. in the North Lounge of Billings Center for three students killed early Saturday morning at Stanstead, Que.

The students, Henry V. Trojanoski Jr. of Orange, Conn.; William O'Donnell of Mountain Lakes, N.J.; and George H. Van Tassel of Glen Ridge, N.J.; were killed in an automobile accident.

By Jack R. Warner

It was with a great sense of personal loss and grief that I learned, last Saturday, of the untimely death of three friends. The absence of George "Nick" Van Tassel, William O'Donnell, and Henry Tojanoski will be felt not only by their families, but also by their fellow students, who are proud to call them their friends.

All possessed a sense of selflessness which was reflected in their activities and contributions in the university setting and especially in their attitudes toward their fellow students and companions.

Nick, a senior Economics major, was an active member of Phi Delta Theta and was serving as house intramural sports director. He was known and respected in the intramural league for his sportsmanship and his ability. Nick and Bill, also a senior Economics major, were rival football captains in high school, and became close friends and roommates at UVM. Hank, a junior majoring in Economics, was also a member of Phi Delta Theta. He held the Offices of Vice-President and House Manager, was well liked by his fellow students, and respected as a worker, leader, and friend.

I can only be consoled by the thought that the memory of their friendship will always be with me and will not diminish through their absence.

These thoughts also reflect the feelings of the brothers of Phi Delta Theta and also, who were privileged to know them and call them Friends.

UVM Students May Use Home Area Library

The University of Vermont undergraduate or graduate student returning home for the holiday and vacation period frequently has a need to use the college or university library facilities in his home town.

Most college and university libraries welcome the use of their materials for consultation, on the premises, in connection with the preparation of research papers and reports.

They normally will not, however, provide books for course related assignments to students who are registered at other colleges, nor will they grant circulation privileges. These restrictions are understandable in the light of each institution's first responsibility for library service to its own student body and faculty.

UVM students who plan to work on a research topic during the coming inter-session are invited to apply to the Director of Libraries for a letter of introduction to the home area college library.

Such request may be submitted by Dec. 15, and should include the student's name, research topic, the name of the library which he anticipates visiting, and the probable dates of such use.

One routine which will especially hold both the student body and Scope members in suspense is Kreskin's attempt to mentally find his paycheck which will be hidden in the room. This is the only way he can receive his payment for performance.

On December 1, Departure, UVM's literary magazine, will present their fourth issue and will have a reading of various selections that night at Billings Center. For the first time there will be a 25 cent charge for the magazine and 50 cents for a yearly subscription. Subscriptions may be obtained at Billings main desk and are advisable because past issues have been in great demand.

The importance of Departure cannot be overemphasized. The creative talents of undergraduates, some grad students, and a smattering of faculty and independents in the UVM area are well intune with much of the prose and poetry being produced in this country today. Departure should be bought and read because it has many things of value to be communicated. McCune On Tokyo U.

Rebuilt Japanese University Has High Academic Level

Tokyo University is Japan's leading university. There are many people, some in prominent places, who are envious of this lofty status, — a status whose prestige continues to accumulate. It gets the best students; its faculty members stay on no matter how attractive other offers may seem. Its alumni continue to hold high positions in government, and so on. This unique position makes it an interesting university to visit. Having been a visiting Fulbright professor at Tokyo University in 1953-54, I am readily accepted and, though changes have taken place, I can still find my way around the campus.

Formerly the residence of a wealthy feudal lord, the campus has one of the most remarkable entrances of any university — a red lacquer painted gateway with a grey tile roof. In the middle of the campus is a beautifully landscaped ravine with a quiet pond. After the destruction of the Great Earthquake of 1923, the architectural style for rebuilding was of three and four story buildings of brown brick with casement windows. These have weathered considerably. Though they deteriorated with inadequate care, these fire-proof buildings were not damaged much during World War II. Fortunately, there is still enough space for construction of new buildings which are usually six or seven stories high, made of ferro-concrete. Quite a lot of building is going on. The University museum which was opened last year is already having a new addition built.

Across the city is another campus for the general education courses which the students take in their first two years and for some of the Liberal Arts departments. The main campus is devoted to upper division, graduate and professional courses including the medical school and hospital and to some research activity. Though located near the center of the metropolitan area of Tokyo, the tree-shaded campus is a remarkably quiet place where the din of the city scarcely intrudes.

After World War II, a major reorganization of the University took place. Tokyo, the oldest of the eight Imperial Universities was supposed to be diminished in importance, but that actually did not take place. It is still, by all odds the leading institution. One of the changes was the introduction of co-education. Even this has not affected Tokyo University greatly. Of the 11,681 undergraduate students, only 462 women; of the 3,226 graduates and professional school students, only 294 are women. For the total enrollment of 15,678, there are 1565 professors and associate professors, 181 full-time lecturers, 1711 assistant professors, 617 part-time lecturers and 23 foreign lecturers. The administrative staff numbers 5,517. The ratio of teachers to students, roughly one to four, is comparable to Harvard. In the ten colleges and schools there are 60 departments; the graduate school offers 85 fields of specialization.

Last Chance To Claim Luggage

"A great deal of unreclaimed luggage has accumulated over the past years in the storage rooms of the women's residence halls. As this storage space is needed to serve students currently housed, it has been necessary to remove the luggage to the store room in the Ira Allen Chapel basement.

Before final disposition of this luggage is made, the University would like to offer women students a final opportunity to reclaim items they may have stored two or more years ago.

Students are asked to contact the Purchasing Department Waterman Building, in writing, no later than Nov. 30 stating their name, address, and a description of the items they wish to reclaim. They will then be advised when they may inspect the stored luggage."

230 Debaters Compete Here This Weekend

Some 230 debaters representing 43 colleges and universities in 12 states, the District of Columbia, and Canada are participating in the 21st annual Vermont Invitational Debate Tournament sponsored by UVM's Lawrence Debate and Discussion Club today and tomorrow. UVM will have 20 debates in the tournament and 58 debaters will be going on simultaneously.

Students, faculty, and the general public are invited to attend the debates which will be held in UVM buildings. Rounds will be held at 7:00 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. Friday and 8:45 a.m., 10:30 a.m., 1:30 p.m., and 3:30 p.m. Saturday. Schedules listing who will be debating whom, where, and at what time will be available in the Marsh Lounge of Billings Center.

Dateline ROTC

Thirty-five cadets volunteered last Friday to participate in the Veteran's Day Ceremony held at 10:30 a.m. in the park side of Burlington's City Hall. The usual Friday drill was cancelled to honor Veteran's Day and to allow cadets to participate in local ceremonies. Lt. Col. Charles Ruggiero, Jr., Professor of Aerospace Studies at St. Michael's College was the featured speaker. His topic was civic action being carried on throughout the world by our armed forces.

Vermont Invationals, one of the largest non-trophy tournament in the country, was established 21 years ago by Director of Debate Dr. Robert Huber. It serves as a testing ground for new ideas and new speeches. Dr. Huber has been aided this year by coaches Harry Myers and Robert Welch.

Also on the list of those instrumental in making the tournament a success are the Pershing Rifles, who are aiding in transportation, the Tournament Committee of John Clark, Karen McMurray, Elaine Farrell, Walter Cooper, and Robert Gilbert, and numerous UVM students who are acting as timekeepers and chairmen.

Debaters Win Honors In Two Tourney At Chicago, Detroit

On a six day trip to Chicago and Detroit, four members of the Lawrence Debate and Discussion Club under the direction of coach Harry Myers recently participated in two debate tournaments and received several honors.

Debating on the affirmative side of the national intercollegiate topic "Resolved: that the United State should substantially reduce its foreign policy commitments" were sophomore George Phillips (Florence) and junior Robin Frost (Haydenville, Mass.). Upholding the negative were sophomores Priscilla Goekmeyer (Middletown, N.J.) and Robert Daniels (Burlington).

At the University of Chicago Nov. 3-4, each team debated six rounds; Daniels and Miss Goekmeyer won five, losing one. Phillips and Miss Frost won three, losing three.

Debating before audiences at Wayne State University's "Debate Days in Detroit" the four-some won 12 ballots and lost six. The team was judged by a regular debate judge. Daniels and Miss Goekmeyer, debating before a Lions Club, two high schools, and a college audience, won seven ballots and lost two. The pair tied for second place negative team. Speaking before two Kiwanis Clubs and two high schools, Phillips and Miss Frost won five ballots, losing four to tie for third place affirmative team. UVM tied for second place school with 17 colleges participating.

The debate club now has a total of 36 wins and 24 losses for a 56.7% winning record. Other tournaments during this semester will include UVM's Vermont Invitational, University of Pittsburg, Duke City Tournament (University of New Mexico), Oswego State University (Oswego, N.Y.), and Georgetown University (Washington, D.C.)

ONCE MORE UNTO THE BREACH

Way back in 1953 I started writing this column about campus life. Today, a full 13 years later, I am still writing this column, for my interest in undergraduates is as keen and lively as ever. This is called "arrested development."

But where else can a writer find a subject as fascinating as the American campus? Where else are minds so nettled, bodies so roiled, psyches so unglued?

Right now, for example, though the new school year has just begun, you've already encountered the following disasters:

1. You hate your teachers.
2. You hate your courses.
3. You hate your room-mates.
4. You have no time to study.
5. You have no place to study.

Friends, let us, without despair, examine your problems one by one.

1. You hate your teachers. For shame, friends! Try looking at things their way. Take your English teacher, for instance. Here's a man who is one of the world's authorities on Robert Browning, yet he wears $30 tweeds and a pre-war necktie while his brother Sam, a high school dropout, earns 70 thou a year in aluminum siding. Is it so hard to understand why he writes "F" on top of your themes and "Eeeyich!" in the margin? Instead of hating him, should you not admire his dedication to scholarship, his disdain for the blandishments of commerce? Of course you should. You may flunk, but Pippa passes.

2. You hate your courses. You say, for example, that you don't see the use of studying Macbeth when you are majoring in veterinary medicine. You're wrong, friends. Believe me, some day when you are running a busy kennel, you'll be mighty glad you learned "Out, damned Spot!"

3. You hate your room-mates. This is, unquestionably, a big problem—in fact, the second biggest problem on American campuses. (The first biggest, of course, is on which side of your mortar board do you dangle the tassel at Commencement?) But there is an answer to the roommate problem: keep changing room-mates. The optimum interval, I have found, is every four hours.

4. You have no time to study. Friends, I'm glad to report there is a simple way to find extra time in your busy schedule. All you have to do is buy some Personna Super Stainless Steel Blades. Then you won't be wasting precious hours hacking away with inferior blades, mangling your face again and again in a tedious, feckless effort to winnow your whiskers. Personna shaves you quickly and slickly, easily and breezily, hacklessly, scrapelessly, tuglessly, nicklessly, scratchlessly, matchlessly. Furthermore, Personna Blades last and last. Moreover, they are available both in double-edge and Injector style. And, as if this weren't enough, Personna is now offering you a chance to grab a fistful of $100 bills. The Personna Super Stainless Steel Sweepstakes is off and running! You can win $10,000 and even more. Get over to your Personna dealer for details and an entry blank. Don't just stand there!

5. You have no place to study. This is a thorny one, I'll admit, what with the library so jammed and the dorms so noisy. But with a little ingenuity, you can still find a quiet, deserted spot—like the ticket office of the lacrosse team. Or a testimonial dinner for the dean. Or the nearest recruiting station.

You see, friends? When you've got a problem, don't lie down and quit. Attack! Remember: America did not become the world's greatest producer of milk solids and sorghum by running away from a fight!

The makers of Personna Super Stainless Steel Blades (double-edge or Injector style) and Burma-Shave (regular or menthol) are pleased (or apprehensive) to bring you another year of Max Shulman's uninhibited, uncensored column.

EDITORIAL

Stokely Carmichael, in an apparent effort at slight moderation, did his movement a great service last Friday night. His lecture amounted to a very careful, almost scholarly presentation of the civil rights strategy proposed by SNCC. This was a striking departure from the scathing indictments which have characterized many of his earlier speeches. Whether an accommodation to this particular audience or simply an attempt to recoup some of his organization's recent financial losses, we feel that his format last Friday won much respect for his philosophy.

It certainly confirmed ours.

..... On the Subject of Royalty

The tradition of electing student royalty has gotten out of hand. It seems that almost every occasion demands a new king and queen. This rapid succession is symptomatic of a chronic instability in each regime we witness.

We feel that the election of kings and queens is merely a reaffirmation of a sick American value which demands: idolize the pretty people. But students must have their royalty, so what we propose is the election of a permanent student king to serve in the place of a student government and simultaneously perform the functions currently performed by an assortment of "ideal" people. Preferably the government would take the form of an enlightened despotism, although it may occasionally become necessary to resort to various shades of tyranny. We don't honestly believe any one will notice the difference.

R.B.

Editor's Note:

Having, at long last, read, on the front page of last Week's "Cynic," the article concerning "Most Happy Fella," we feel an explanation is in order, both to the cast of that production and to those who turned to that article as a source of information.

The writer, having viewed the play at the Wednesday night dress rehearsal, submitted her article to the production staff late Wednesday night. As a result the article was never properly read and edited.

We would like to stress this article was a response to a dress rehearsal and not a performance. Further, it was not intended as a review and was certainly not one. It was intended as a feature preview, however it fell far short of that.

This is as the situation occurred and we will pull no punches; we, the editorial staff, are to blame. For a more proper perspective and a fairer appraisal of the show we would request you read the review of our Drama Critic which can be found in this issue, on page 6.

Letters to the Editors

Cynic Rated 'Minus Nothing'

To The Editors:

JUST A FEW COMMENTS
HUGH MANITY - What an insult to the word! Why didn't you print it on yellow paper; it would have been quite appropriate.

CONGRATULATIONS Prof. Brown. I only hope that Mr. Minsky and his editor can read. And if they can read the big question is how much will they comprehend.

MR. BERK do you suppose that in the future you can refrain from such fakes as the letter to the editor from "Mrs. Gordon Sartwell"? If you have to make up the letters for this column than it must be indicative of the dubious quality of the rest of the paper.

ALSO Mr. Berk; who do you think you are? God? The Administration? The Book Store? Certainly you must be in league with them since you feel that you don't need student approval or support. I realize that we must pay for tutors for the "athletes" and that we must foot their food bills; but I wasn't aware that we were supposed to sit back and let the student "voice". The CYNIC, be run for and by a minority. I would suggest that you read a few of the articles of Confederation, The Declaration of Independence, or/and the Rights of Man. Don't forget, we pay for this trash, make it readable! Then we may be able to stomach a little more than the Flicks. This paper could be a little more than the minus nothing it now is; at least it could be zero!

Sincerely,
Mary G. Waldo

P.S. Who is Hugh Manity - one of those who got caught between the "sheets"?

Hugh Manity... Our Generation?

To The Editors:

Mr. Hugh Manity seems captivated and impressed by us. In fact he seems to have swallowed all of our characteristics even in his style of writing. His use of the English language makes me wonder; to which generation does Hugh Manity belong? He talks like us, rebels like us, (in writing bitterly and hatefully), and writes in our newspaper. Maybe he is psychosomatic and really wants to join us.

Well Hugh Manity levitate and we will gladly teach you some more of our customs and lingo.

Sincerely
Joanna Clausen

Re Pfeiffer... Letter Written Is Confused?

Mr. Bornstein,

Your letter to the editors concerning Mr. Pfeiffer seemed a little confusing. This confusion started with the first word and ended with your name.

It seems you do not care for the way the "Insider" article is written. I feel you fail to understand the purpose of the article. Since Mr. Pfeiffer is a member of the football team, he is able to add a little color and wit to the otherwise statistically oriented coverage of the game. This has proven to be of enjoyable interest to us weekend quarterbacks, who are not on the inside at the daily practices, meetings and locker room discussions. Also, while I am on the subject of color, I would like to inform you that the school colors are green and "gold", not yellow. Yellow denotes shyness and meekness which UVM is not and from the feeling your letter left with me, I think your choice of yellow better represents your character rather than that of UVM.

Secondly, you seemed disturbed that Mr. Pfeiffer should write an article about football and yet have his picture in the same paper. Is it conceit on his part... NO; jealousy on your part... YES. I too wish I could win a starting position of the football team, set a new UVM record for defensive points for a defensive back in one season, finish second in New England in defensive stats, first in interceptions on the team, and being a leading candidate for All-New England honors. With these qualifications I fail to see how you could be so perturbed at recognizing the accomplishments of someone else other than yourself.

It appears to me that the only thing you accomplished by your comment about his picture in the CYNIC was to reveal your ignorance. As an agricultural engineer you "should" (notice I did not say could) be able to differentiate between a UVM football player and our Catamount mascot, but... just like your color problem you have proven that you are a little confused.

So, Mr. Bornstein, until you get hit by a 240 lb. tackle, try and increase UVM spirit like Charlie Catamount, or write an article for public consumption, kindly convert your intellectual energy into something you understand - like milking cows.

Journalistic Incompetence

To The Editors:

It has recently come to my attention that several letters to the editors have been published under what could most diplomatically be called noms de plume.

These were written by The Sceptic, and the rationale for their publication is that they are an extension of the column.

The publishing of these letters (in the Letters to the Editors section) constitutes journalistic incompetence. The purpose of a Letter section is to provide a forum for those who wish to comment on the CYNIC'S content, etc.; not to provide a place where we can see how many different ways in one issue the Sceptic can make his point.

Sincerely,
Douglas M. Rapp '67

Stop Police Mindlessness!

Editor's Note: The concern here seems to have arisen over the fact that the members of SCOPE assigned to collect tickets were refused admission despite the efforts of the President of SCOPE, who was known to chief Barrett.

I would like to take this opportunity to strongly protest the arbitrary and idiotic seizure of control by Barrett and his band at the recent lecture by Stokely Carmichael. Originally, members of Scope were going to collect the tickets. For some reason the security police took this task upon themselves. Many members of the committee came early to make sure everything had been arranged; they were denied entry into the building. More seriously, several members of the committee, thinking they would be standing at the doors did not have tickets. There was some difficulty in getting these people into the auditorium. The uncooperative attitude of the police was despicable and insulting. They should be reminded they

And to the Readers

Pfeiffer Replies

To The Readers:

Mr. Bornstein last week, asked what has been done. Now I would like to ask what has been said. It seems nobody can understand what this escaped schizophrenic is trying to say or what neurotic plot he is referring to. Out of the maze, however, several images did emerge, so before I go any farther, let me straighten Mr. Bornstein out. It appears he seems slightly aggravated that my picture appeared underneath my column. He is not alone. I was more aggravated than he, and told the sports editor twice if he did it again he would be writing his own column.

Secondly, it was not my idea to even write the column. The Editor-in-Chief approached me and asked me to do it.

Thirdly, if you, Mr. Bornstein, can detect any trace of pragmatism in the column, I will personally go to your temple with you and ask humble forgiveness.

You said my name was captioned under one of the game photos, then implied I wasn't in the picture. A typographical error in number in the caption, clearly undetected by you, obviates your complete lack of knowledge and forethought in the situation.

So Mr. Bornstein, I have no intention of starting a letter was with you. Furthermore, since I no longer am wearing a uniform nor hiding behind a cheerleader, if you have anymore pseudo-intellectualism to dazzle the public with, I am willing to talk this over with you - coherently.

Matheson Criticized

To The Editors:

I am sick of reading Dick Matheson's blow by blow critical description of the CYNIC every week. If this hobby-horse of his is all he has time for, I suggest he employ one of the various other uses the CYNIC can afford for the general student populace: calmly roll up said paper into thin horn-like structure and shove it up or down or any which way he chooses. His opinions are banal and his attitudes are obnoxious. The fact is that I work for the paper and where it is obviously manned by the non-paid students of UVM it does a pretty damn good job of balancing political and intellectual opposites. One day I would like to find out where Dick Matheson stands on something, critic that he is. It's too easy to sit back on one's sofa and criticize the obvious.

PERCEPTION Placement Barometer

By Douglas O. Hanau, Director of Placement
 "WOMEN'S CAREER PLANNING THREE DIMENSIONAL"
 Today's senior woman, in looking ahead to her future, has to

By Jan Quackenbush

Last week I stated that communication is the function of two elements: the expression of an idea and the realization of its being understood. Self-communication, then, occurs when you yourself are engaged in both the expressing and the understanding of the idea.

REALIZING AN IDEA

Happiness is first perceived in the process of (the undertaking of) communication; when the realization of the nature of the idea is first sensed; when we first anticipate the idea's dimensions. The fact that happiness is "sensed" is the cause of its relativity, because the perception of objects and ideas (their interpretations) vary from person to person and are directly proportionate to experience.

It is to be understood then, that the "nature" of the idea might will be interpreted to be something other than what was meant to be expressed and will vary as the experiences of the people engaged in communicating vary. So the burden of interpretation falls on the expression of the idea.

HAPPINESS IS VARIABLE

This leads us to our first maxim: Happiness is a variable of expression. To illustrate this, let's imagine the idea: Viet Nam. Now my interpretation of this idea can be as follows:

If I fight in Viet Nam, I might die.

or

If I fight in Viet Nam, I will preserve my freedom.

The first expression of the idea causes grief; the second, a sense of happiness. The sensations I experience as a result of these expressions are, of course, relative to me; you may sense happiness in the first and grief in the second or, you may not sense happiness in either.

In conclusion to this article, then, we note that it is the manner in which an idea is expressed and its relationship to experience, that gives rise to a sense of happiness.

THE SPREAD-EAGLE OF TECHNOLOGY AT GRUMMAN

Ranges from inner to outer space

Grumman has special interest for the graduating engineer and scientist seeking the widest spread of technology for his skills. At Grumman, engineers are involved in deep ocean technology...engineers see their advanced aircraft designs proven daily in the air over Vietnam, and soon...in outer space, the Grumman LM (Lunar Module) will land the astronauts on the lunar surface. Grumman, situated in Bethpage, L.I. (30 miles from N.Y.C.), is in the cultural center of activity. Universities are close at hand for those who wish to continue their studies. C.C.N.Y., Manhattan College, New York University, Pratt Institute, Columbia University, State University at Stony Brook, Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn, Hofstra University and Adelphi College are all within easy distance. The surroundings are not hard to take. Five beautiful public golf courses are in Bethpage—two minutes from the plant. White sand beaches stretch for miles along the Atlantic (12 minutes drive). The famed sailing reaches of Long Island Sound are only eleven miles away. The informal atmosphere is a Grumman tradition, matched by an equally hard-nosed one of turning out some of the free world's highest performance aircraft systems and space vehicles.

Taking their place in a long line of Grumman aircraft that have contributed to the national defense, the aircraft shown below are performing yeoman service in Vietnam.

E-2A Hawkeye...A highly complex electronic system that contributes significantly to the science of early warning and airborne warning and control.

HU-19 Albatross...famous as the main tool of the U.S. Air Force Air Rescue Services.

S-2E Tracker...Anti-submarine warfare aircraft which performs both "hunter" and "killer" missions for the U.S. Navy.

S-1A Trader...land and carrier-based aircraft ferries cargo and personnel between carrier and shore.

A-6A Intruder...U.S. Navy carrier-based attack aircraft capable of operating with pinpoint accuracy in all weather conditions.

OV-1 Mohawk...U.S. Army STOL electronic surveillance aircraft operating in close support of ground troops.

E-1B Tracer...U.S. Navy carrier-based high resolution radar aircraft detects impending enemy attacks hundreds of miles from the fleet.

Currently, Grumman engineers, pulling the state of the art relentlessly forward, are engrossed in still more advanced aircraft and aerospace vehicles. These include:

B-70...World's fastest co-porate transport...non-stop coast-to-coast range at 585 m.p.h.

F-4...Carrier-on-board delivery (COB) aircraft carries high priority weapons systems and personnel and performs logistical missions for attack aircraft carriers.

EA-6B...All-weather tactical electronic countermeasures aircraft to support strike aircraft and ground troops.

F-111B...Navy version of the USAF/NAVY bi-service fighter with variable wing sweep from 16 to 72.5 degrees. (Flies at speeds up to two and one half times the speed of sound.)

OAO (Orbiting Astronomical Observatory)...Scientific satellite for the investigation of scientific phenomena.

LM (Lunar Module)...to land the astronauts on the lunar surface in the late sixties.

Here then is the opportunity for graduating engineers...CEs, EEs, MEs, IEs, Physic majors and Chemical Engineering majors...to take their place in the continuum of technology that is Grumman. Grumman representatives will be ON CAMPUS

"The Most Happy Fella" Nothing Short Of Exceptional

By K. Klonsky

Although "The Most Happy Fella" is one of the fine American musical comedies, this fact should not obscure the dramatic values of the script. Based on Sidney Howard's Pulitzer Prize winning play, "They Knew What They Wanted," "The Most Happy Fella" can provide an evening of insights which richly reward the thoughtful playgoer. When one proceeds to add the musical score of Frank Loesser, the choreography of Maggie Hayes, and the staging of Edward Feidner there is no question that the University Players and the Music Department Dance Workshop had some great material to work with.

The performers handled the entire show with a youthful gaiety and an almost professional coolness. James Pennell as Tony Esposito, the aging Italian American from Nappa Valley who thinks he is the "most happy fella," was perfectly suited and most able in the role. He spoke the broken English clearly and he sang with a deep resonant voice. Christiana Smith could start on Broadway musical comedy tomorrow if only she could sing a little better. Her acting performance in the role of Cleo, the gawky but good-hearted girl from "D-A-L-L-A-S," was the high point of the show. In the part of Herman, the man who likes "Everybody," Sandy Gerlis deftly handled a few show stoppers. Mark Stine as Joey, the Don Juan of the fruit pickers local, acted and sang with his usual proficiency. Tom French, Ken Stokes, Jeff Aaronson, and Roy Zuckerman provided the best group singing in the show in "Standin' on the Corner" and the hilarious and wonderful Italian chef scenes. Bill Levy as a postman, was particularly impressive in a minor role. Jill Bosworth as Rosabella, the erring wife of Esposito, did not have the stage presence needed to carry off a potentially meaty but indeed difficult role.

The singing was brilliant.

The question asked by "The Most Happy Fella" is basically, who is the most happy fellow? Is it Herman, the man unaffected by anything, or is it Esposito, the man overly affected by everything? Obviously it is neither and the realization by Esposito that happiness is more a state of mind than a material situation builds throughout the play and comes clearly at the end. It is here that Esposito forgives his wife for making love to Joey, swallowing a big load of pride in the process. In so doing, he gains the peace of mind that has always been right in front of his nose and is able to scoff at

(NOTE: the following movies are all subject to last minute changes by the theatres)

FLYNN - James Coburn in "Dead Heat" - Strong film; improves on "Flint." Sunday-Tuesday - Rescheduled "The Gospel According to Saint Matthew." The Flynn apologizes for any inconveniences caused by last week's wrong information. "The Gospel" is one of the great films of our time, given a realistic portrayal of Biblical events, and departing from spear and sandal epics.

STRONG - Khartoum - spectacle with Charlton Heston (Ben Hur, John the Baptist, Moses, God, the Holy Ghost) and Sir Laurence Olivier - Big, bold and bad.

STATE - Guess? Right again - "The Sound of Music"

SCOPE - November 22 - Greta Garbo in "Ninotchka" - One of the real classics. Probably no. 1 or 2 on the Garbo list of talkies and if you have not seen this you should with all speed. She is still Queen of the American screen or any other for that matter.

"Bossa Nova" King Appears Here Monday

By Judy Beeber

Stan Getz, the "Bossa Nova" king will be the first performer in the Red Lane Concert Series. The world renowned tenor-saxist will make his appearance on Monday, Nov. 21, in Memorial Auditorium at 8:30 p.m.

Music has always seemed to be indispensable to Getz. By the time he was 18 years old, he had graduated from such outstanding orchestras as Phil Harris, Stan Kenton, Jimmy Dorsey and Benny Goodman. Getz won his first major poll as top tenor man in 1949. In the years that followed, he went on to win many critics' and readers' polls for the best saxophone player.

Getz's recording of "Moonlight in Vermont" in 1952 paved the road for future success. During the next few years, he toured throughout the world with his Quartets and Quintets. His records with Dizzie Gillespie,

Stan Getz

Lionel Hampton, Ella Fitzgerald, Cal Tjader and Gerry Mulligan are now standards in the library of many record collectors. In 1961, Getz showed his virtuosity with his saxophone in the recording "Focus." This record served as a core around which Getz could improvise at will. "Focus" was written for a string ensemble with the thought that the saxophone would introduce the jazz element.

Perhaps Getz is best known for introducing the Bossa Nova to the American People. His album "Jazz Samba" was the first jazz album to remain number one on the charts in ten years. At the annual presentation of the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences, Getz won the Grammy for best solo performance of the year. Recently, among the jazz polls, he has won the Metronome Magazine poll, Playboy's Jazz Poll and Downbeat's Critic's Poll.

Only a few weeks ago Getz was given the opportunity to show his skill with the saxophone. While on his Asian tour, President Johnson visited King Bhumibol of Thailand who is a jazz enthusiast. As a treat for Bhumibol, President Johnson asked Getz, whom the President regarded as the foremost exponent of jazz, to fly to Bangkok to entertain the king.

the uncontrollable situation. More simply, Esposito gains a certain detachment from the trivia of life that used to drive him to distraction. But just to show that a man must not lose his sense of involvement completely, Herman also transforms in the end. In his bold act to protect Cleo from harm he stuns himself and sings the comical "I Made A Fist." The happy medium is reached by both men as life has become less of a burden to one, more of a challenge to both.

"The Most Happy Fella" was a remarkably spirited performance. A fine cast directed by Edward Feidner and a capable orchestra, under direction of James Keene, retained much of the musicality and most of the dramatic force of the Broadway production. Ranking with some of the finest shows done at Arena Theatre in the last four years, "The Most Happy Fella" turned up nothing short of exceptional.

SA Recognizes Vt. Student Movement

S.A., acting on a previous motion made by Dave Modalewski, recognized the Vermont Student Movement. The organization is concerned with social issues. It is open to all students interested in waking up the campus.

VSM started off its official program by sponsoring with SCOPE the appearance of SNICC leader Stokely Carmichael. Tentatively planned is a project in conjunction with the Burlington Peace Council on Urban Renewal. This will consist of working with displaced people. A film on Viet Nam and more controversial speakers are also in the offering.

Films, Exhibits & More Shown At Fleming

By Margaret Crane

The Fleming Museum is not just a building on the north side of campus. Rather it is a vital, ever changing institution which offers opportunities to UVM students and the community at large.

Each month an exhibition is presented. Many are put together from the museum's permanent collection or through loans from private collections. Others come from the American Federation of Art or from the Smithsonian Institution Exhibition Service. Currently there is an exhibition on Early Chicago Architecture. In December there will be a Christmas display of reasonably priced small paintings, sculptures, drawings, prints, ceramics and other hand crafts.

Another major opportunity which is offered to the community is the yearly film series. The films chosen for it are unusual art or artistic films, of the type shown in New York museums. The selections include the old, the contemporary, and the avant grade. Some other activities which are sponsored are art classes and guided tours for school children, gallery talks and lectures on current exhibits, and a print rental service for both members and non-members.

Members of the museum receive announcements of films and exhibitions and are admitted to the films free of charge. Information concerning membership can be obtained by contacting the information office at the museum.

The faculty members generally are devoted to research and like to have students work with them (or for them) on their special projects. Lectures are quite formal, but attendance is not mandatory. Since the class program is not stressed, the upper division and graduate students work on their own a great deal. This, at least, is the case in the geography department, where a ratio of four students for each faculty member exists. The students have their own desks and the department has its own well stocked library. In contrast, the central library of the University used to be a forbidding place with, literally, wire fences in front of some collections. Now it has been reorganized and is much more open; yet individual departments still like their own collections — a reflection of their general attitude towards departmental autonomy. Once majoring in a department, a student takes only courses in this field, or in closely related departments.

With its elite student body chosen by the highest competitive examinations, Tokyo University is known for its intellectual atmosphere. (It used to be famous for its baseball team, but this is now a thing of the past.) Partially reflecting the ideas of their professors, students tend to be very liberal-minded politically, but once graduated, they may turn conservative in order to get the "right" jobs. As students, they are very bright and able; they all have a good command of English, one of the prerequisites of entrance. Tokyo University, attracting the best students and the best faculty, is one of the world's leading universities and a stimulating place to visit.

Upon going through the Akamon, or Red Gate, one senses immediately that he is on the campus of a very lively university. There are placards announcing everything from a squeeze dance to a Marxist study group meeting. Students throng the walks, moving from the snack bars to the lecture halls, to the libraries. There is an archery range, left over from the feudal days. Professors, now affluent, have trouble parking their cars next to their offices.

The departments are the strong units, for a professor is a dictator in his own specialty. The president is elected by the faculty for a three year term. There have been a succession of these in recent decades, for a president of Tokyo University has difficulty pleasing all the various complex fractions.

Students at Tokyo and other universities have gone through an "Examination Hell" to gain admission, but once in, they can and do relax. There is very little flunking out. The highly selected students are subsidized by the government. It costs roughly 370,000 yen (over 1000 dollars) to educate a student at Tokyo University, but the tuition charge is only 12,000 yen, or $33.00 a year.

If this world is not to our taste, well, at all events there is Heaven, Hell, Annihilation — one or other of those large things, that huge scenic background, of stars, fires, blue or black air.

Canadian Studies Material Added At Bailey

The collection of Canadian studies material at the University to Vermont's Bailey Library has been significantly expanded by the library's designation as an official map depository of the Canadian Government, a partial depository for royal Canadian commission reports, and by the gift of personal papers of a former U.S. consul-general.

The library recently received some 18,000 topographical and general economics and cultural maps of Canada. Royal commission reports were also offered to the library and are selected to fit curriculum needs.

Austin Foster of Derby Line was the guest of the University Wednesday (Oct. 19) at a luncheon marking his gift of the personal correspondence of his father, John G. Foster, covering the period 1909-28. John Foster was U.S. Consul-general to Canada 1898-1927.

The correspondence was rated by special collections librarian John Buechler as "significant source material on the man. The letters will also be useful for filling in certain aspects of Canadian-American relations."

Included in the collection, according to Buechler, are letters from Charles Evans Hughes, Robert E. Lansing and Woodrow Wilson.

Bailey Library Director Paul B. Kebabian, and University President Lyman S. Rowell were on hand at the Wednesday luncheon to express the University's gratitude.

The maps, according to Prof. Edward J. Miles, director of the University's "Canadian" Studies Program, make the library "one of the very few U.S. institutions to be ranked as an official depository. They include complete coverage of all Canadian Territory and are here for our use but are subject to recall if the Canadian Government needs them, say, in a wartime emergency."

Canadian Royal commission reports are forwarded to the Bailey Library from the Queen's Printer in Ottawa. "We get all the annual reports," says Mrs. Jay Gould, documents librarian, "and select those we feel will fit our curriculum needs."

where from seven to ten years. She now enters the third work-a-day world, which is a re-entry into the job market and picking up the strings of her career, which was started following her graduation from college.

A report, prepared by the National Industrial Conference Board shows that in 40% of the 6.5 million U.S. families with incomes of $10,000 or more annually, the wife brings home a pay check to supplement the income of the chief bread winner. The rise of multi-wage families also is predicted on the continued increase in the number of married women in the labor force.

An estimated 13.2 million married women - nearly one fifth of the nation's work force - are currently employed or looking for employment. The typical working woman of today is likely to be about 41 years old, with a husband and a growing family. While many work out of necessity, a growing number are seeking to use the skills acquired by higher education and training. The Labor Department estimates that nine out of every ten women will be gainfully employed during some part of their lives. If she is married, a woman can expect to work 25 years. If she is single, she will work forty years. Despite this trend to outside jobs, housewifery is still the main occupation of most American women and about 35 million of them devote their full-time to it. However, for the wife who wants to, or needs to work, there are some 446 kinds of jobs open to her. She is most often found in a sales, service, or factory job. The Labor Department also reports some 2,500 women electricians, 5,000 carpenters and more than 12,000 painters and paperhangers.

No longer can the women college graduate in today's ever-changing world limit herself to the planning of a single career. For her thinking, unlike a man's, in at least this respect, must now become three dimensional.

Man, the only creature in all this creation who can meditate about his condition and seek to understand it, has earned the duty of this privilege.

Well, we are not totally incapable. The SCOPE committee should receive an immediate apology. Until then the matter should not be forgotten nor forgiven. Police mindlessness must stop.

DEAR REB:

Sports hero loses girl to mild-mannered math major.

DEAR REB:

I'm a big football star, and I've found a girl who suits me to a T. But I've been blocked out of the play by a math major. He knows math from $A = \pi R^2$ to $E = MC^2$. Now she says he's found the formula for success with her. All he has to do is mutter "Coronet R/T," and I get thrown for a loss. Believe me, this is no equilateral triangle that I'm in. Outside of telling me to bench myself, have you any advice?

FALLEN STAR

DEAR FALLEN STAR:

Now's the time to plunge. Coronet R/T isn't his exclusive formula. Your nearby Dodge Dealer has it, too. And it comes almost as easily as the cube root of 27. Then how can the girl of your dreams resist two superstars - you and your Coronet R/T? From there on out, your math major will be the victim of diminishing returns. Huddle with your Dodge Dealer now, and get your signals straight.

Sincerely, Reb

And why not? Look what you'll have going for you in your Dodge Coronet R/T, convertible or two-door hardtop. All standard, too. 440-cubic-inch Magnum V8 engine. Dual exhausts. Heavy-duty brakes and suspension. High-performance Red Streak tires. And exclusive R/T grille and hood scoop design, full length paint stripes, and nameplates, front, rear and sides. So get with your Dodge Dealer, and your problem will solve itself.

Cats Meet Elizabethtown, Pa.

Booters In NCAA Tourney

The University of Vermont will wrap up another great soccer season this weekend in the NCAA Atlantic Coast College Division Soccer Tournament to be held at the Coast Guard Academy in New London, Conn.

The Catamounts, who won the Yankee Conference title three weeks ago, will be paired against Elizabethtown College of Elizabethtown, Pa., at 2 p.m. Friday. In the morning game, Lynchburg College of Lynchburg, Va., was scheduled to meet Hartwick College of Oneonta, N.Y., at 11 a.m.

The championship match will follow the consolation game Saturday. Saturday's game times are also 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. The pairing and the selections were announced Monday by tournament director L.G. Bechtel, the soccer coach at the Coast Guard Academy.

Vermont coach Hal Grieg has little information on the Elizabethtown squad. He knows only that the team is experienced. Many of the players are veterans returning from last year's Middle Atlantic Conference title holders.

The Vermonters, who have been plagued with injuries all season, will have three starters out for the tourney. Jimmy Wood, Catamount soccer player mixes it up with two Maine opponents in final regular season game.

Jeff Hyman, and Peter Myer, who was injured in preseason scrimmage and hasn't been in a regular game all season, will sit out the tourney.

Donny Carlson, a defenseman who has been strong all season, is expected to return after joining the injury list during the Maine game two weeks ago.

Defeating all four Yankee Conference rivals, Vermont concluded its regular season with a smashing 7-0 win over Maine and an 8-1 record. The only Cat loss was a shutout, 1-0, against Middlebury.

A stout defense, a spectacular goalie, timely offense, desire and versatility put the Cats into the tournament. The defense has kept opponents off balance all season while rookie goalie John Hilton has yielded only six goals in nine games.

Throughout the season, Pete Baldwin and Jack Semler have come through in the clutch to pull a game out. The numerous injuries have forced several realignments of the Catamount units but each time the versatility of the players has allowed the team to adapt to the pressures.

Star defenseman Bob Schroeder is one of the keys to UVM's tourney hopes.

The UVM hockey team dropped a preseason scrimmage to College Royale Militaire last week by an 8-5 score. Catamount goals were scored by "Hoot" Squire, Bob Snyder, Bob Schroeder, Curt Tobey, and Jack Semler.

The University of Vermont was represented at the annual conference of the "Association of Synchronized Swimming for College Women." This conference was held on Friday and Saturday, November 11 and 12 at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst. The women who represented the University of Vermont were: Bea Black, Gail DeForge, Maureen O'Brien, Judith Cordner, Lynn Marcy, Linda Smith, and Carol Bechtel. The Catalina Club advisor, Miss Terry Brusstar, traveled with the girls.

The newly formed UVM Skating Club has started sessions every Tuesday night from 7:30-9:30 at Patrick Gym Skating Rink.

The skating club is co-educational, and the sessions include instruction by Miss Phillips of the Women's Physical Education Department. Also free skating and ice-dancing are a part of each session.

No experience is necessary, and beginners are most welcome. Figure skates are preferred, but boys may wear hockey skates. A good turnout is hoped for by Miss Phillips and all concerned.

Maine Tramples Cats, 52-7

Stunning Loss Ends Season

THE INSIDER

By LEO PFEIFFER

Good-bye, 7-1 record, the best in the school's history.
 Good-bye, hopes of sharing the Yankee Conference Crown.
 Good-bye, avenging the defeat the Black Bears handed the Catamounts last year.

Good-bye, plans for ending a great season on a pleasant note.

Good-bye, hopes for a Tangerine Bowl bid.

Good-bye, visions of grandeur.

Good-bye, readers (?).

It is one of those phenomena that is difficult to conceive, and some people still cannot believe it. But it happened, and contrary to public opinion, the Cats did not give up. Saturday just happened to be one day out of 365 that Maine seemingly could do no wrong. The Cats, on the other hand, kept trying, but nobody happened to be in the right place at the right time, and the score showed it. There is no concrete explanation. What else can be said except, "What a way to go."

It has been a pleasure serving you,

Hoop Fortunes Look Dim

The University of Vermont basketball team could be in for a very long year if its pre-season scrimmages against the freshman team are any indication of the varsity's ability. The following are two differing forecasts on the Catamounts from two basketball magazines.

DELL Magazine says, "Vermont should be in the upper echelon of the Yankee Conference as coach Art Loche has a fine mixture of youth and experience. Junior Bill Librera (6-3) and senior Bruce Hanna (6-0) and Russ Boardman (6-5) spell out the experience and Loche is meshing sophs Dave Lapointe (6-3) and Terry O'Leary (5-10) with these veterans. Lapointe is the best addition to the varsity, having been the highest scoring frosh in the school's history with 229 points in 10 games."

INSIDE BASKETBALL, however, may have taken a more realistic view when it stated, "Coach Art Loche has lost last season's first three scorers and is in for a tough season... With the Cats on the road for ten of their first 11 games, Vermont's in for a tough start. Last place (in the Yankee Conference) is the disturbing yet likely possibility."

Neither magazine mentioned one pleasant surprise in 27-year-old "newcomer" 6-5 Dick (Stuffer) Shaw. Sophomore Lapointe and junior Librera appear to be the only offensive threats.

The public will get another chance to see the Cats this Saturday at 1 p.m. in the Patrick Gym as they host Plattsburgh State College in a Scrimmage. All interested Spectators should take advantage of this opportunity as the hoopsters have no home games during the entire first semester.

Ed Kiniry is seen returning one of the many kickoffs UVM received against Maine as Jim Dedman accompanies him.

By George E. Passage, Jr.

The University of Vermont closed out its 1966 football schedule last Saturday and fell victim to an inspired Maine team. This was a dismal ending for the Green and Gold, the team that many consider to be the best Vermont team ever. Vermont ends the season with a fine 6-2 record and second place in the Yankee Conference. U Mass, with a perfect 5-0 conference record, once again heads the list.

There is little that has not already been said about the 52-7 loss to Maine, thus not much more needs to be mentioned. Maine's defense, led by pro-bound John Huard, was the only team this year able to contain UVM's great offense. Record-breaking Bob Mitchell was held to 58 yds. on the ground which is an indication of Maine's defense while the Cats passing game was good for only five completions in twenty attempts.

Although it was a tough loss for the Cats, Vermont fans and players have nothing to be ashamed of. It was a great season for UVM and only eleven players will be lost through graduation. Ten starters return from the offensive unit which set UVM's record for points scored, first downs and total offensive yards for a single season. (200 points, 133 first downs and 2611 total yards). The defensive team will have to replace six starters, but have a strong nucleus to work around.

The lone senior on the starting offensive unit was open end Jack Schweberger. Schweberger tied two Vermont records this year, touchdown passes caught in a single season with six and TD passes in a career with seven. The 6'2", 200 pound star will be missed by Coach Clifford. Flankerback Dick Hebert, injured midway through the season, will also be lost. The senior flankerback was the leading scorer for UVM his junior year and had a fine season before his injury this year.

The ten returning offensive starters, including Bob Mitchell, who set eight UVM records this year, should be even better next year with the full year's experience. The Cat's fine blocking fullback, Jim Culhane, will once again be leading the way for Mitchell. Returning at flankerback will be Pete Clifford, who did an excellent filling-in for Hebert. Returning offensive linemen include Jim Sullivan and Dave Lucaroni at tackle, guards Dan Martin and Bill Crudo plus sophomore center Dave Capman. At tight end, Jeff Kuhman, with two years experience and 38 receptions, should have another great year. These players, plus three proven quarterbacks, Dave Shumate, Jack Stroker and Paul Simpson, are the elements needed for another record setting year. These three quarterbacks set a UVM record by tossing for 14 touchdowns in one season.

The defense will have a little more rebuilding to do before Sept. 23, 1967. This defense unit loses such outstanding players as Captain Bill Van Bennekum, Joe Soldano, Leo Pfeiffer, Bill Leete, Ed Kiniry and Bill Dorozenski. But, all is not lost as linebackers Colin Hurd, Bill Wolff and Tom Dexter will once again change the course of opposing ballcarriers. End Don Nelson and Tackle John Gurrieri provide experience for the next year's line. Nelson, 6'1", 215 pounds and Gurrieri 6'0", 220, have both the size and speed to make the defense a strong point in next year's campaign. The defensive secondary will center around Bill Lawrence, who as a sophomore this year turned in a fine performance.

One player Coach Clifford must replace is Joe Soldano. Soldano, besides being All-Yankee Conference middle guard, is UVM's outstanding place kicker. Soldano booted 42 of 47 extra points in his career, 23 for 26 this year.

This year was Vermont's fourth straight winning campaign and gives Coach Clifford a record of 28-12 over this period. Clifford has done an outstanding job since coming to UVM in 1962 and better things loom in the future.

Flanker Pete Clifford gains yardage against the Black Bears under the protection of big Jim Sullivan.

Pussycats Swim

The Pussycats, the UVM girls' competitive swim team, opposed The University of Massachusetts, Green Mountain Jr. College, and Castleton on Nov. 6. UVM placed third with a total score of 41 points. The team is young and promising, consisting of twelve members, only two of which are upperclassmen.

Outstanding in performance was Sue Pitt, a member of the 1964 Olympic Team. Sue, swimming in three events, took a first in each while breaking Green Mountain's pool records for all three. Her first event was the 100 yard individual medley. The winning time was 71.1 seconds. In addition, her time for the 100 yard freestyle and 50 yard butterfly were 1:02.8 and 30.8.

Diane Dill captured a second place in the 50 yard breast stroke. Diane was leading, but the race was called back due to a false start by Gree Mountain. Diane's time was 43 seconds. Nancy Feyereisen came through with a second in the 50 yard backstroke. The time of this event was 41.9 seconds.

The other members of the team include: Juniors - Anne Graham, capt., Mibbs Taylor, Freshmen - Joan Bronheim, Karen Kiernan, Sandy Lotowycz, and Terrie Wurzbacher. The team also has three hard working divers, Wendy Clough, Candy Pratico, and Robbin Ramage. These three girls practice with the boys' Varsity team.

The Pussycats practice Thursday night having had their time cut from three nights to one due to the inavailability of the pool. The team will travel to U Mass on Dec. 4.

Kake Walk Skits Chosen

It's that time again... almost.

UVM Students' Homeland Is Now Free

Editors' Note: Bruce Goddard, a senior here, is a resident of the newly formed nation of Barbados.

By Bruce Goddard

A new mini-state, Barbados, was created last Wednesday night in the southern Caribbean.

The young nation is a coral island, 166 square miles in area and with a population of 250,000.

It is 2,100 miles from New York and approximately 300 miles from Caracas.

The extremely high population density (1,500 per square mile) is one of the island's major problems. This problem is intensified by the lack of industrialization and crop diversification. 90 percent of the island's cropland is in sugar cane.

However, though Barbados lacks in industry, it does not lack in the quality of the rum it produces and which is renowned as the most expertly distilled in the Caribbean.

The island has been in British possession ever since it was settled in the early 17th century. This gives the island an essentially British character, not to be encountered in any of the other Caribbean islands.

The island was led into independence by Prime Minister Barrow and his Democratic Labor Party. Fred Goddard, the father of two UVM students, Bruce and Robert Goddard, lost his seat in the 24-member legislature in the last election and thus will not be in the new nation's government.

The island's legislature dates back to before the American Revolution and Barbados has had some recent experience in self-government.

Even though the population is about 92 percent Negro and 8 percent white, no racial problems exist.

Alpha Tau Omega, Phi Sigma Delta, and Tau Epsilon Phi fraternities have been given the nod by the three Kake Walk elimination judges to start production for the 70th annual Kake Walk. The judges were Norman Council of the English Department, Dr. Samuel Hand of the History Department and Dr. Edward Feldner of the Speech Department. This year five fraternities submitted skits for one of Kake Walk's most exciting rivalries. Now the hard and long work begins. The skits will be written over several times and in the process refined and greatly improved. The skits will be presented on the nights of walking, February 17th and 18th. At that time will be seen the results of many months of hard work.

Dean Eycke Resigns

Named Director of Student Activities at North Carolina

(Credit: Burlington Free Press)

The University of Vermont's acting dean of men, Carl O. Eycke, will leave UVM Jan. 13, to become director of student activities at the University of North Carolina at Raleigh, with a student body of 10,000.

His new appointment will be effective Jan. 15, UVM Dean of Student Personnel Services Roland Patzer heads a six-member committee to find a successor for Eycke.

"We certainly have been privileged to have Eycke here," Patzer remarked, "and we've been pleased with his years of service to the student personnel program."

A native of Clarksburg, Ohio, Eycke joined the University of Vermont as assistant dean of men Sept. 7, 1961, and was named acting dean Sept. 23 of this year to succeed Patzer when he was named dean of student personnel services.

A graduate of Ohio University, where he earned his B.S. degree in personnel and management and his M.A. in student personnel, Eycke served in several administrative posts at Ohio.

Before coming to UVM, he was director of residence halls, assistant director of admissions and later director of Stevens Center at Stevens Institute of Technology.

He is Vermont State membership chairman for the American College Personnel Association.

successor for Eycke include: Dr. Stanley Burns, assistant dean of the College of Medicine; Dr. Robert J. Gobin, assistant professor of physical education for men; Dr. N. James Schoonmaker, professor of mathematics; Dr. Richard W. Amidon, medical director, Student Health Service; Dr. Joanna Davenport, assistant professor of physical education for women; Dr. M.W. Perrine, assistant professor of psychology.

Patzer said the position would probably be left vacant for some time, although the committee is considering about 50 candidates for the job.

"We'd like to have the position filled by the first of the year," said Patzer, "but realistically it may be as late as May or June before we have a replacement."

Other Side Of Tax-Credit Story Given

WASHINGTON, D.C. — College students and their parents were cautioned this week not to become unwitting supporters of a proposal that would lead to higher tuition fees across the country.

The warning came from the joint meeting of the National Association of State Universities and Land-grant Colleges and the Association of State Colleges and Universities.

In reaffirming their opposition to proposed federal income tax credit for educational expenses, the Associations urged the 90th Congress and citizens not to be deceived by the seeming attractiveness of the proposal.

The only way colleges could benefit from tax credits would be by hiking tuition, the associations noted, and this in turn would increase — not reduce — the burden of college costs that many families now bear.

Legislation to authorize the tax credits has been introduced at every session of Congress over the past several years, although it has yet to win majority support. In its most frequently cited form, the proposal would allow taxpayers to deduct up to $325 from their annual tax.

Proponents of the measure have sought to emphasize the financial relief it appears to imply for parents of college students. But the 300 publicly-supported institutions represented at this week's meeting remain convinced that "tax credits would offer and most help to those who need it the least — while giving the least help, or none at all, to those who need it the most."

The associations noted, for example, relatively high-income families paying tuition of $1500 or more a year could deduct as much as $325 from their tax

News at Bailey Library

Cataloging Systems Tested

At this time, the Bailey Library, along with all the other New England state university libraries, is taking part in an experiment sponsored by the New England Board of Higher Education.

The purpose of this experiment is to decide, through careful study and analysis, if a regional center for cataloging and processing would be beneficial to the New England state university libraries. Such a center would eliminate overlap in these libraries, would speed up acquisition, cataloging and book processing by the use of computers, and might result in a reclassification of the books from the Dewey Decimal System to the Library of Congress System. The Library of Congress System differs from the Dewey Decimal in that it is related to a specific collection, rather than to all books in general. It is an alphanumeric system with twenty-four subdivisions instead of ten. There are definite economic advantages in this system since the Library of Congress puts out its own catalogue cards with the books' number already on them. Thus, time would be saved.

For this month and next, NEBHE is conducting a study of a sampling of books, analyzing information, and devising a system design. In January, Buckland, the project director, is calling a meeting to study the collected information, and in February he plans to publish a report stating whether or not he thinks such a center would be practical. If he decides in its favor, it may result in a central computer connected to the participating libraries by a telecommunication network. Thus, many libraries would have access to specialization in cataloging that none of them could afford individually.

bills, while low-income families paying little or no federal taxes would receive no benefits at all under the plan.

These poorer families would be all-the-more hard-pressed the meet consequently higher college expenses, the associations declared.

At the same time, they continued, the tax-credit idea has been advanced by some of its advocates as a simple method of bringing federal aid to the colleges without government stipulations on how the money should be spent.

The associations view this as a direct contradiction of the claim that tax credits would provide citizens with financial relief. NASULGC and ASCU maintain that the credits could not simultaneously aid both the college and the taxpayer.

Pointing out the tax-credit approach would cost the U.S. Treasury at least 1 billion dollars in lost revenue during the first year alone, the associations warn that its adoption would likely preclude other forms of sorely-needed government aid to colleges for the foreseeable future. Knowing this, college trustees would be unable to avoid imposing higher tuition fees as a primary source of additional funds.

And higher tuition would, at the least, off-set the "advantages" many families might realize from tax credits.

The associations also point to the objections:

Library Receives Collection Of Dorothy Canfield Letters

The correspondence of one of Vermont's most famous authors and historians, to close personal friends, has been added to the extensive Dorothy Canfield Collection at the University of Vermont's Bailey Library.

Stretching over 38 years, the 650 letters were written to the late Mr. Robert K. and Mrs. Merele S. Haas of New York City between 1925 and 1958.

Special collection Librarian John Buechler noted that "With this addition we have the only extensive collection of source material on Dorothy Canfield Fisher. It numbers thousands of items."

Robert Kolvoord of New Hampshire, a professional appraiser, noted that the Haas-Fisher correspondence includes "Many references to Vermont affairs and to Book-of-the-Month Club matters." The letters supply a valuable source for biographical and Vermont historical information, and for research into the history of American publishing, according to Bailey Library Director Paul B. Kebabian. "She was a member of the original selection of the Club," he said.

Mrs. Fisher was born in Kansas in 1879 of an old Vermont family and spent most of her life in Arlington, Vt. She won wide acclaim for three novels, "Seasoned Timber," "The Bent Twig" and "The Deepening Stream," and for "Vermont Tradition," a work of interpretive history and biography.

* Supporters of the tax-credit plan have conceded that it would by-pass Constitutional provisions against using public funds for discriminatory purposes. By raising tuition, all colleges and universities -- whether they adhered to non-discriminatory policies or not -- could receive the indirect government assistance that tax credits would provide.

* The money lost to the federal government through tax credits for college expenses would probably have to be recouped -- no doubt through additional federal taxation.

The associations feel there are a number of affirmative ways by which federal funds, state tax dollars and private support can be used to halt the rising cost of higher education to the individual.

Increased support of existing national programs and new programs of institutional support offer sounder ways of providing assistance than tax credit. They feel, through the wise use of the billion dollars that tax credit legislation would cost the Treasury each year "many dramatic and worthwhile accomplishments could be achieved for public and private higher education," a spokesman for the associations noted.

ROTC Sergeant Commissioned 1st Lieutenant

Sergeant First Class Arnold C. Maher, a veteran of over seventeen years active duty with the Army, was commissioned as a First Lieutenant on November 29. Lt. Maher, who held this rank in the Army Reserve, was called to active duty as a commissioned officer.

Lt. Maher will be reassigned to the Army Training Center, Fort Dix, New Jersey at the end of this month. He was an instructor in the MS III section and Junior Drill Instructor while at UVM.

Pinning on the new silver bars was Major Michael Peck, Jr., Executive Officer of the UVM ROTC Department and Major Alton R. Sparks, MS III Moderator.

Collecting the traditional $1.00 from Lt. Maher for the first enlisted salute to a newly commissioned officer was SFC Gilford Knight, Administrative NCO.

Commentary On Carmichael

By John Kyper

It was with deeply mixed emotions that I heard Stokely Carmichael several weeks ago. Perhaps I was somewhat disappointed in that I had expected something more bellicose than what I actually heard. The speech, nevertheless, was disquieting and provocative.

Black Power, he began, had been widely misrepresented by an emotional press, which, admit it, is true. Carmichael equated his movement with those of previous minorities to acquire power and thus elevate themselves politically, economically, and socially, as best demonstrated by the Irish and the Italians. America, he said, was "racist from top to bottom."

Probably his go-it-alone attitude is to some extent a healthy development, for it signifies that Negroes are discovering that they must mature and not depend upon the whites to constantly pamper them with well intentioned, but humiliating assistance. As he implied, the later is a subtle, for it implies that they are incapable of solving anything for themselves.

Is it fair, however, to judge the United States en bloc as "racist"? Do ineffectual, good intentions and faltering attempts to correct a 350 year-old injustice necessarily constitute hypocrisy? Indeed, SNCC's chairman seems to believe that all the Negroes' difficulties are the fault of white racism, hence the fault of all the whites in general. It is true, of course, that the condition of the Negro is one of the worst blots against this society; but is the paranoid fear of the entire white community a constructive means by which to advance? Is it right to write off the majority in what amounts to reverse racism?

It is evident that he fears exploitation by whites who would use his movement to advance their own power at his expense. In citing the case of Populism in the South of the 1890's he demonstrates that his fear is legitimate, especially considering that selfish whites today are shamefully exploiting Negroes in ghetto tenements and stores. It can be seriously questioned, however, how much power, particularly economic, ghetto Negroes can obtain unaided.

He resents the brain drain from the ghetto by the trained Negro, for he would wish him to contribute his skill and knowledge to the betterment of the community in general. While this desire is laudable, it ignores the question of just how effectively the Negro alone can save a rapidly decaying city. Also, does not the trained Negro possess an obligation to his family and society in general? Of course, to Mr. Carmichael such would be white society and this Negro would be a mercenary, just as he would be in Vietnam.

Perhaps it is a reflection upon the irresponsible flight from responsibility of contemporary society, but the SNCC chairman seems to emphasize power as an end in itself. He seems to have forgotten the responsibility by which power must be conferred in a free society and the maturity by which it must be exercised. Without responsibility, power becomes subverted, as in the case of Chicago's Rep. William Dawson, who is a tool of the Daley machine; or it exploits its subjects, like New York's Adam Clayton Powell, who is little more than a demagogue. Carmichael would build Negro machines to bargain for concessions from the majority, but he forgets that machine politics breeds men so low as to exploit their own people, as demonstrated by James Curley of the Boston Irish.

Indeed, it is tempting to believe that SNCC is advocating a return to the old doctrine of "separate but equal." Of course, as he has implied, whites have attached a naive and superficial value to the concept of integration. They have expected that the mere passage of law and court orders shall "somehow" assure equal rights for everyone, that bigotry is the problem of everyone else, but certainly not themselves, that "somehow" human conditions shall change without they themselves changing first. It is these perpetrators of bigotry perhaps ourselves, who must understand that this is our problem, too.

This is not the "Negro problem" or the "white problem"; it is our common problem which currently divides this nation. As the ultimate test of America, it shall determine whether or not we believe in the ideals of our existence. If the majority does not care enough to correct injustice, if only because it is right; we can then expect the reoccurrence of such tragedies as Watts until, like the French Revolution, only tyranny can restore order; and the ideals, like those who held them, shall be ashes.

THE Magnificent

by Sandy Lockenill

"A football player is pride in pads; hope in a helmet; courage in cleats." These words are printed on a sign hanging in the bedroom of Bob Mitchell. To Mitchell it is more than a sign. It is his way of life.

He is a perfectionist and he works at the game of football. His style is that of Jim Taylor, the Green Bay Packers' rugged fullback. He runs over his opponent in brutal fashion and he runs with punishing power. Mitchell breaks tackles with sheer violence and superb balance.

The name Bob Mitchell is being brought up for All American mention. His record is outstanding, and chances are good that he will make it. Mitchell feels that if he does make All-American, it will be in the name of the team, and not an individual honor. Bob credits the offensive unit for his ground gaining records, and he takes pride in being a member of this squad.

Mitchell's favorite type of play is the end sweep. This power play was the bread and butter move of this year's team. Mitchell, however, will not take the credit for its success, but he passes it on to his blockers, and the offensive unit. The single play that stands out the most in Mitchell's mind was his 2-yard touchdown run against New Hampshire, for it was a team effort.

Bob Mitchell's dedication to the game of football is the prime reason for his outstanding success. The season is over, but Mitchell and next year's squad the week, in preparation for next fall. Mitchell feels confident that his record will be as outstanding next year, as it was this year, because his same blockers will be back to open up the holes.

Mitchell's hometown is Bridport, Vermont. He attended both high school and prep school where he starred in baseball as well as football. While in prep school Bob roomed with Pete Clifford, Coach Clifford's son, and the following year he enrolled at the University of Vermont. Mitchell is majoring in history, and is a member of Kappa Sigma.

"Mitch" terms his rushing statistics as the team's records, rather than his own. Some of these records include the NCAA record for most carries in one season, 249; the UVM record for the most points scored in one season, 78; the UVM record for total offensive yardage in one season, 1207 yards; and most times named to the EGAC squad by a UVM player, 4 times. Among Mitchell's other accomplishments were: leading rusher and top scorer in the Yankee Conference this year.

When asked about pro ball Mitchell seems to evade the subject. The fact is inevitable, however, that if next year's season is as successful as this one his name will appear in the pro football draft.

When he was asked, "What factor made the difference between Bob Mitchell, the average football player of last year, and Bob Mitchell, the potential All-American this year?" His answer was simply, "I played on the greatest team in the Yankee Conference, they did the blocking, and I just ran with the ball."

The administration made a very wise move this week. In reaction to the protests of a small group of students, they have reversed their earlier decision to close Ethan Allen House and relocate its residents in on-campus residence halls.

Apparently, the protesting students, many of whom had consented reluctantly to move into Ethan Allen house in September, have since developed a sense of "community" uncommon in most dormitory environments. The administration's original decision to close the house appeared unnecessarily arbitrary to them and a violent undercurrent of discontent followed, resulting in the reversal of the decision.

This entire episode may be variously interpreted as a major victory for the campus proletarian movement, or as the mere tossing of a crumb to an easily pacified mob. To us it represents proof positive of the often neglected fact that administrators are rational human beings, highly receptive to reason and diplomacy. Thus, an organized student group can expect to be given careful administrative consideration of its proposals and grievances.

This is a right which no university administration can safely deny its students.

Education is really a hard thing — boy is it hard. We poor students have to bust our chops just to get a stinking C. I have an exam this Friday in Systematic Psychology and I think I'll punt. Punt, Punt, Punt — color me Punt.

This is my friend Jane. She lives in an apartment. She punts too. She has an exam this Friday in the same lousy course, and I think I'll ask her to Punt with me. Oh my goodness, I hope she says yes. Well tune in next week for the results of our big test.

Letters to the Editors

Sit Back And Criticize

To The Editors:

Re. Klonsky

All hail the great inventor — Ken Klonsky! After many years of research and development, he has used the CYNIC as a means of personal gratification, namely to roll it into a "tin" horn-like structure" and then shoving it "up or down or any which way he chooses." It is surprising that he does not have the idea patented, for something which is so truly Klonsky is bound to be immediately popular, or so he thinks.

We suspected Mr. Klonsky of using the CYNIC for stimulation and satisfaction previously through his one-sided and nauseating critiques which, usually, nobody agreed with. However, his appetite for broken toes to be stepped on again and again has finally gone beyond limits. In screaming at the top of his lungs about the fall, his pride must have taken in having persons disagree with him. Mr. Klonsky failed to realize that Dick Matheson also works for the CYNIC. No, his name is not on the staff list, but just read a few of the better feature articles in past issues.

The difference between Klonsky and Matheson is that the former criticizes in the name of the CYNIC and in the letter box, while the latter criticizes in the letter box but at the same time does a real service to the paper and the University community through apt and serious writing concerning special events. Now we ask, who has nothing better to do but to criticize?

However, we must agree with Mr. Klonsky in part, "It's too easy to sit back on one's sofa and criticize . . ." forever and ever, Amen.

David E. Lambert '67

What Do People Believe?

To The Editors:

At first I was quite pleased to find Ken Klonsky's criticism of myself in the last issue of the CYNIC. Unfortunately, it was not very useful to me, since his letter was obvious distillation of invective, hypocrisy, and ignorance.

My main point in writing this letter, however, is not to criticize Ken's criticism of my criticism of certain criticisms printed in the CYNIC several weeks ago.

Ken Klonsky wrote that one day he would like to find out where I stand on some issue. The point of all this is that there is too much critical, negative opinion on campus and not enough positive statement of belief. Why?

One reason for this is that people do not always know precisely what they do believe. They may oppose the war in Viet Nam or cancer without having any solution for them.

SEMESTER RUSHING ENDS DEC. 6

December 4 will end the first semester informal rushing season with smokers at all the fraternities. We hope that this will give the freshmen rusher an opportunity to complete his rush card. These cards and a list of your top choices of fraternities can be handed in at Billings Center on December 5 & 6. Don't forget to do this for it is necessary in order to pledge during formal rushing second semester.

The IFC hopes that you will make a careful decision in your choice of fraternities.

Serious, intelligent people realize a great complexity of considerations within some issue such as policy in Viet Nam, the nature of God, or the purpose of art. A simple answer does not always appear.

What is needed in the case of such a complex question is a searching discussion or consideration of the issue, even if no final positive answer is ever reached.

I commend Jan Quackenbush for his current discussion and exploration of "communication" in Preception. UVM needs more of this sort of education.

There is little, however, to encourage such expression at UVM. The CYNIC is the only campus medium which reaches the majority of students and faculty.

Yet the CYNIC has a limit to the amount of space it can offer to student and faculty opinion. Also, the CYNIC seems to have done little to encourage contributions to the former columns of "Students" and "Professors."

Without the regular appearances of these columns, students and faculty apparently feel pre-tentious in attempting to present their opinions on some subject upon which they have no qualification to write except that they are sincere and intelligent "searchers."

The initiative now rests with you, the editors of the CYNIC, to provide encouragement, and it rests with each individual among the students and faculty to make known his beliefs if these beliefs might help someone to come to some conclusion about what is and what should be.

In answer to Ken Klonsky, I am perfectly willing to present my own opinions if there is some indication people are seriously interested in considering them.

SCEPTIC

By M.G. Minsky

Blue-eyed, blonde-haired, sorority-girl, lovely-pleasing-teasing supervirgin whipped cream minded innocent vulgar stupid mindless viscous and universally adored Miss Suzy Creamcheese (who has some dark secrets in spite of herself) has a cousin from New York, Hilda Hippee. Groovy cool swinging mod happy head Hilda Hippee. Happy heady. Hilda. You name it, she has it or at least claims to have it. She dotes on analysis — anytime anyplace with anyone.

Expelled from one university for growing marijuana as her botany lab project, Hilda Hippee now attends the University of Vermont. Unlike her cousin Suzy, Hilda never wins a thing. She submits tons of poetry to DEPARTURE where it is received, discussed, dissected and promptly rejected leaving Hilda with those alienation-down-so-far-not-a-nickle-in-my-pocket blues she so dearly cherishes. After all, artists by nature must suffer. "I suffer, I suffer, says Hilda, ergo . . ." Hilda, her poetry rejected, takes up the oboe instead. Needless to say she played the guitar — but she gave that up for poetry.

Hilda Hippee is a committed young girl. She is for free love. That's because she's a very frustrated virgin. She is a member of every civil rights organization — SNCC, CORE, NAACP, LEMAR etc. There is one civil rights organization she will not join — the Urban League. Recently she attempted to start a Black Panther Party write in campaign in Vermont, but gave up when she couldn't find any negroes. She has attended every peace rally which occurred on the Eastern Seaboard since 1963 and has the buttons to prove it. Last September she picketed a retired general who was to speak before a group of college students and much to her chagrin discovered that the army had not completely rotted his mind away and that he was against Johnson's War.

Her apartment has all the proper modern appointments. A super-cool Belmont poster, a whole mess of groovy comics, freaky drawings by freaky friends, superethnic pottery and various mind-blowing records and things. In addition, living with her, for various periods of time, is her boyfriend. The never sleep together. But that's a secret their best friends don't know. If Suzy Creamcheese has her secrets, Hilda Hippee should have hers. Suzy Creamcheese has her opinions; here are some of Hilda's.

Johnson's War: Like why bother fighting. There are better things to do.

Her Parents: I hate them. Really I hate them. I do. Honest. We don't get along at all. I'm completely independent. Aren't I? Civil Rights? That out.

Black Power: Groovy.

Bogie: Groovier

Tim Leary: GGGGGRRRRRROOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOO

O O

Now what was I just saying . . .

Future plans: Well after I get out of college and after I come back from Europe I think the first thing I'll do is to fight poverty.

Fraternities: Only idiots join fraternities. They make one become so narrow minded. Only a jerk would join a fraternity.

Alcohol: I only drink when I have nothing better to do.

Her Love Life: Well the Reef and I (the Reef, that's what I call my boy friend — he calls me his sugar cube) plan to get married soon, Native American church, with a hashish wedding cake and all that. We've chosen a lovely hotel room with real freaky blue and gold and green and silver wall paper for our honeymoon trip.

LOTS A LUCK HILDA HIPPEE.

There is something of an injustice at UVM. This injustice is caused perpetrated and allowed to continue by the administrative beauracracy. Fraternities not only allow liquor to be consumed at their parties but several of them have in the past openly sold liquor to people attending the parties. I am in no way opposed to this. Nor apparently are the various deans. They have not "cracked down" on drinking in fraternities. This is mainly because they are afraid of a riot which would probably be the result of such an action.

But God help him who gets caught drinking in the dorms even if he has the legal right to do so. I see no reason why this arbitrary and stupid policy should continue. A law is not a law in so far as it is a legal decree, a law is a law only in so far as it is enforced.

THE SPREAD-EAGLE OF TECHNOLOGY AT GRUMMAN

Ranges from inner to outer space

Grumman has special interest for the graduating engineer and scientist seeking the widest spread of technology for his skills. At Grumman, engineers are involved in deep ocean technology...engineers see their advanced aircraft designs proven daily in the air over Vietnam, and soon...in outer space, the Grumman LM (Lunar Module) will land the astronauts on the lunar surface. Grumman, situated in Bethpage, L.I. (30 miles from N.Y.C.), is in the cultural center of activity. Universities are close at hand for those who wish to continue their studies. C.C.N.Y., Manhattan College, New York University, Pratt Institute, Columbia University, State University at Stony Brook, Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn, Hofstra University and Adelphi College are all within easy distance. The surroundings are not hard to take. Five beautiful public golf courses are in Bethpage—two minutes from the plant. White sand beaches stretch for miles along the Atlantic (12 minutes drive). The famed sailing reaches of Long Island Sound are only eleven miles away. The informal atmosphere is a Grumman tradition, matched by an equally hard-nosed one of turning out some of the free world's highest performance aircraft systems and space vehicles.

Taking their place in a long line of Grumman aircraft that have contributed to the national defense, the aircraft shown below are performing yeoman service in Vietnam.

Currently, Grumman engineers, pulling the state of the art relentlessly forward, are engrossed in still more advanced aircraft and aerospace vehicles. These include:

Here then is the opportunity for graduating engineers...AEs, CEs, EEs, MEs, IEs, Physic majors & Chemical Engineering majors... to take their place in the continuum of technology that is Grumman. Grumman representatives will be

Hokkaido University—

"Boys Be Ambitious"

By Shannon McCune, Research Professor of Geography

Among the Japanese universities, Hokkaido is the closest in character to an American multi-purpose Land Grant University. In part this is due to the influence of one of the founders of Hokkaido, William S. Clark. In 1876, he came to Japan for a year from his position at the Agricultural College of Massachusetts. His influence was very great. The motto he left his students, "Boys, Be Ambitious," has been the motto of the University. Because I had helped re-establish relations between Hokkaido and Massachusetts ten years ago, I was given a very warm welcome when Mrs. McCune and I visited the university for three days in mid-November, 1966.

It was a real delight to breathe the fresh air of Hokkaido after the smog of Tokyo. Being the northern island of Japan, it is much cooler; there was snow on the tops of the mountains. Hokkaido is looking forward to being the site of the 1972 Winter Olympics. Already posters are up for the event. I told my friends that the Olympics might be held in Hokkaido but that the winners would be from Vermont. Since it has a volcanic base, Hokkaido has hot springs and ski slopes at the same locale, a combination that is hard to beat. Some of the volcanoes and cladera lakes are spectacular. One volcano started from a corn field in 1944.

Because extensive experimental farm lands were associated with it in the early days, it now has plenty of room for expansion. Though one or two of the old one-story wooden buildings are being kept for sentimental reasons, most buildings are brick or concrete. One of the most impressive is the Clark Memorial Student Center, dedicated in 1960, — an excellently planned activity center with stores, snack bars, restaurants, an auditorium, meeting rooms, and lodging facilities for visiting athletic teams and student groups. Next summer American students from Oregon are going to be quartered there for a Japanese Studies session. It is ideal for such uses.

The University is complex with some 12 colleges, plus the Graduate School and various institutes. The Medical College has its own hospital; a number of specialized schools for nursing, mid-wifery, x-ray technology and even a Research Institute for Medical Hot Spring Treatment. (Visits to its own hot spring are a good fringe benefit for the Dean and others.) Some 60-percent of the university's 9,000 students are from Hokkaido; about 12 percent are graduate students. The largest colleges are Engineering and Natural Science, though originally Hokkaido was best known for its College of Agriculture.

Equally impressive as the physical character are the cultural variations in Hokkaido. Permanent settlement had not been allowed by the feudal lords prior to 1868. However, after the restoration of the Emperor to power the situation changed. There was need to find land for former feudal retainers and to secure protection for the northern frontier of Japan from the threat of expansionist Russia. Therefore, settlement was fostered by the Japanese government. The Hokkaido Development Agency had American advisors who helped lay out the land in a grid pattern with dispersed farm houses and develop a dairy industry. The scattered farm houses with silos and hip-roofed barns, which are a common sight, present a great contrast today to the rest of Japan. The Agency was impressed also with the efforts of the new Land Grant Colleges in America and so financed the opening of Hokkaido University, north of the city of Sapporo.

Similar to other Japanese universities, the president and the dean are elected by the faculty. Hokkaido has just gone through the process of electing a new president, Dr. Furaiichi. I had the pleasure of being his guest for dinner along with his predecessor, Emeritus President Sugimoto, who I have known for a number of years.

The election of a president is a rather dramatic affair. It takes place every three years. President Sugimoto had served for four terms and had indicated that he was not anxious to be a candidate again. The balloting is done in an open meeting of the faculty; no secret ballots or meetings are held. Each professor, associate professor and full-time lecturer is eligible to vote, but must attend the meeting in person. At Hokkaido, there are some 900 eligible voters. The first ballot is for ten candidates. These are not necessarily faculty members but can be from other institutions or from public or private life. However, at Hokkaido and the other eight former Imperial Universities, they usually elect from within the faculty. After the first ballot a candidate may withdraw. President Sugimoto, who had been nominated by faculty members, even though it was known that he was not too anxious to be re-elected, withdrew at this time. The second ballot is for three candidates, drawn from those candidates who have not withdrawn. The third ballot is for two candidates and then, there is a final ballot. The process takes three days, with meetings each day, considerable press coverage and corridor discussion. President Furaiichi was elected on the final ballot by the majority of only a single vote. Years ago he had been a student of former President Sugimoto. He is expected to continue the same general policies, which have been termed conservative by some. Actually, President Sugimoto did a great deal of building of new facilities, such as the Clark Center and the Gymnasium-Auditorium, financed by private donations. Also, he started developing foreign contacts. President Furaiichi has expressed the desire that Hokkaido University not only continue to serve Hokkaido specifically and all of Japan in general, but that it expand even more its international aspects.

The center of the campus with its small pond, grass and trees is very attractive. A new central Library, which has just been completed, faces on this mall. The College of Agriculture buildings are at the end of the mall. A bust of Clark with the words, "Boys, Be Ambitious", is a favorite tourist attraction. During World War II it was supposed to have been melted down for scrap, but conveniently became "lost", then was restored to its place of honor after the War. Clark gave the charge to his students as he bade them farewell ninety years ago, but it still is an excellent motto for a university such as Hokkaido which since that time has been serving on the frontiers of Japan.

Free Speech

A University of Vermont student group has inaugurated a "free speech forum," taking to the College Green in the venerable "soapbox" tradition.

The sponsoring organization is the Vermont Student Movement, recently given approval as a student group by the University's Student Association. The UVM VSM group is independent of chapters of the group which have been formed at other Vermont colleges.

David H. Franzoni, a sophomore from Rutland, is president of the UVM group, whose announced purpose is "to organize students concerned with social issues."

Pittsburgh Symphony

Performance Great; Program III Chosen

By K. Klonsky

Rising from relative obscurity, there can be no doubt that the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra is now among the best in this country. Under the controlled and highly capable direction of William Steinberg, they gave a Lane Series performance (Nov. 17) that was without an equal for sheer precision in the recent memory in Burlington. Whereas, they are not known as innovators, they play every piece of music almost as if it were emerging from the composer's mind at that moment.

The program was somewhat disappointing. The first work was Edward Elgar's "Cockaigne (In London Town) Concert Overture." The piece is light in mood and belongs to that distinct and controversial class known as program music. For what it is worth, it was played to perfection and provided a gay and lively beginning.

Robert Starer's "Mutabili, Variants for Orchestra" was the next offering. This is a difficult, twelve-tone piece, difficult for the orchestra to play and difficult for the audience to get involved in or to grasp in the least way. It seemed a kind of musical gymnastics. As its conclusion, the people were unsure whether to applaud or not, a confusion that seemed somewhat universal. "Mutabili," the probably fore-runner of future music, for the present impressed no one.

The third work was the most interesting one on the program. "Sensemaya" by Silvestre Revueltas, reminiscent of Stravinsky's "Sacre du Printemps," employs a wild Mexican rhythmic pattern (seven-eight metre) through half the work and then shifts gear to an equally unorthodox metre and drives to an exciting conclusion. This Afro-Cuban chant is highlighted by unusual use of the kettle drums.

Berlioz's "Symphonie Fantastique," a popular piece of program music, was the final offering of the evening. Again, although the piece is rather thick with emotional and pictorial values, the Pittsburgh Symphony performed with the least possible slush and sentiment. Two encores, Wagner's "Prelude to Act II of Lohengrin," and Tchaikovsky's "Russian Dance" from the "Nutcracker Suite" finished off a remarkably well-played program.

The Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra is successful because they play with respect for the composer's intentions. There are no heroics and wild deviations. They are precise in execution and rich in tone; in all they are close to becoming a great orchestra.

Getz Presents Serious Jazz

By K. Klonsky

On Monday, November 21, the first Red Concert of the 1966-67 Lane Series featured Stan Getz and his quartet. The group consisted of Getz on the saxophone, Steve Swallow, bass; Gary Burton on the vibraphone, and Roy Haines, drums. Each man in the combo is a solid virtuoso performer.

For pure jazz, this was a delightful evening. The ability of the quartet must rank with any in the world. Their sound is clear and consistent and their imagination is limitless. It was really a night just to sit back and listen. Songs included "Desafinado,"

On the Fashion Scene

Military Brass

The strongest innovation on the fashion scene this fall has been made by the new and snappy military look, expressing itself jauntily in crisp, decisive lines.

The military look has marched into top view in every style including basic dress coats, sports clothes, and accessories such as the sailor's beret or anchor pins.

Navy blue, brass buttons, white stitching, and epaulets, the high signs of this new look, are appearing across the country and across our campus in the high ranking, revived pea jacket, double breasted coats, blazers, sailor suits, mess jackets, cuffed pants, and also the popular pant suit.

For the winter months, pea jackets are prepared to face the defense with warm crescent pile lining. Pant suits are also bracing up for the winter in heavier woollens or wool meltons with acrylic linings.

The prussian Military Great-Coat, reaching 12 inches from the ground, just to meet the new military boot, has the answer to the problem of the breeziness of the mini skirt.

So, hear this, whether you're "piping away" to classes, or taking "liberty" at the Den, you'll be out-of-the-ranks and one-of-the-brass in the new military look.

Flicks

FLYNN — "Texas Across The River" — Dean Martin and Joey Bishop — Mildly amusing farce.

STRONG — Burt Lancaster and Lee Marvin in "The Professionals" — adventure-packed western with an abominable script. However, it is so loud and so wild that it succeeds as one of the more rousing films in the last few years.

STATE — "The Sound of Music" — Julie Andrews & co. have taken permanent possession of the elegant Burlington picture house.

Miller

Ski Film Is Great Treat

Warren Miller provided entertainment in Patrick Gymnasium for the girls and their "merp" dates Wednesday evening, November 16. He personally narrated a 90-minute ski movie accompanied by taped background music, and took the audience on a wild whirl through Sun Valley, Idaho; Aspen and Vail, Colorado; California, New Mexico and Utah, as well as ski areas in France, Russia, and Japan. With the aid of two world-travelling camera crews, he filmed fascinating scenes of olympic champions competing in downhill and slalom races. More familiar to most of the audiences were Killington, Stowe, Mt. Snow, and Sugarbush with the famed Stein Erikson, candid of amateur skiers tumbling in various contortions, and of the wild night life of the ski lodge. Mr. Miller delighted his audience with his amusing comments.

He stated that during the popularity rise of skiing, the sport underwent complete change. "Sweaters and pants are tighter and lighter, and, whereas skis used to be very long and poles very short, now the skis are short and the poles are long."

During intermission, a member of the audience, Tommy Roy, was introduced. He was the individual who had performed double forward and backward somersaults on skis in the movie, and who offered instructions to anyone brave enough to try it.

The movie was shown for the benefit of the UVM Ski Team Scholarship Fund. Door prizes were awarded to a fortunate chosen few. They consisted of six Moriarty hats, thermal underwear, a continental ski bag, mittens, a sweater, a pair of Rieker ski boots, a Warren Miller film, and an assortment of two and three day passes to Glen Ellen, Stowe, and Sugarbush, a free "Learn-to-Ski-Week" at Madonna, and a season pass to Bolton Valley.

Winter Sport Season Debuts

Hockey Team Hosts Brown

Prospects Dim For Hoopsters

The 1966-67 University of Vermont hockey season will be all downhill after the Catamounts open the campaign Dec. 3 at home. The reason for this is the Green and Gold make their debut against the toughest hockey opponent ever scheduled in the school's history - Brown University.

Brown is a perennial ECAC Division I power and in recent years has joined with Cornell to dominate the Ivy League. Coach Jim Cross, starting his first year as full-time hockey coach at Vermont, feels the game will be a great test for his club and a crowd-pleaser for the northern Vermont area, where the ice sport is on the verge of a full-scale boom.

Cross will have 11 lettermen set for the opener against the Providence, R.I. - based powerhouse.

The former Boston University ice star has been working to improve the defense, which fell apart too many times last season, when Vermont posted an 8-11 record.

"The most pleasant surprise," said Cross, "has been the defensive play of co-captain Henry Uihlein."

Uihlein has been moved from the wing position he has played for three years and Cross feels the Milwaukee native could be one of the best defensemen in Division II of the ECAC.

Joining Uihlein on the first defensive unit is Bob Schroeder, a junior letterman from Wallingford, Conn. The second defensive unit will be a pair chosen from the trio of Jim Brock of East Longmeadow, Mass., Bob Snyder of Glenview, Ill., and Claude LaPearle of Barre.

Vermont's first two lines have an abundance of veterans. The expected first line will consist of juniors Lee Roy of Denmark, Me., Jack Semler of Salisbury, Conn. and Curt Tobey of Kenilworth, Ill. This trio did the bulk of the scoring last season with Roy leading the team and setting a new Vermont record.

However Cross has been impressed with the play of newcomer Dick Squire and the Westport, Mass. center is battling Tobey for a first line spot.

The second line has two veteran wings and a sophomore center. The veterans are co-captain Ozro Swett of Dixfield, Me. and Paul Dorsey of Belmont, Mass. Swett led Vermont in scoring his sophomore year.

Centering the line will be sophomore Dick Catron of Huntington, N.Y.

Jim Krebs of Potsdam, N.Y. and Ed Danks of Ithaca, N.Y. appear to be the third line wings. The center will be either Tobey or Squire, depending if Cross decides to break up his highly successful line of last season.

Tom Gregg of Essex Fells, N.J. will have to carry the load as the leading goalie although Cross says Jack Hynes, a Manchester, N.H. sophomore, has improved tremendously despite never playing the position before this year.

The Catamounts follow up the home opener with a Dec. 6 home date against Hamilton College

Mitchell Sets Eight Records

Junior halfback Bob Mitchell set eight individual University of Vermont records during his sensational 1966 football season.

The Little All American candidate broke season records in points (78), rushing yardage (1,207) rushing attempts (249), total of offense (1,207), and touchdowns (13).

The rushing attempt of 249 was the most a player has ever carried in an eight game season and his per game average of 31.1 carries a game is the highest ever by a college football player.

Mitchell set single game records of 205 yards rushing against New Hampshire and of 47 rushing attempts. The rushing attempt mark is an NCAA record.

The former Mineville (N.Y.) and Fryeburg (Maine) scholastic gridder also holds a career record of 301 rushing attempts with one season left to play. Mitchell needs 19 yards next season to break Vermont career rushing record held by Ken Burton.

The Catamount workhorse also will most likely erase career marks in points scored, touchdowns and total offense in 1967.

Riflemen Win Second Match

By David A. Keenan

The Catamount Rifle Team scored its second win Saturday as against one, loss as it shot its way to a 1263-1227 victory over Dartmouth College at the UVM Range. With a win over Bowdoin and a loss to U Maine, the Cats, led by Dick Walker, fared well despite a last round comeback by Dartmouth.

Two seniors, a junior and sophomore are assured of starting positions when the University of Vermont opens its 25-game basketball schedule Dec. 1 at Dartmouth.

Coach Art Loche, embarking on his second campaign at the helm of the Catamounts, says that seniors Russ Boardman and Captain Bruce Hanna, junior Bill Librera and Sophomore Dave Lapointe appear to have won starting jobs.

Boardman, a 6-5 center, and Librera, a 6-3 forward, are the only returning starters from last year's 12-8 squad. Hanna was the sixth man last season and his great defensive play and hustle helped him earn the captain title for this season. Loche calls the Union City, N.J. backcourt ace his top defensive player on a "defensive minded team."

Newcomer Dave Lapointe is well known in the state for his outstanding years at Winooski High School and at Deerfield Academy. The son of varsity baseball coach and freshman coach Ralph Lapointe, Dave led the 1965-66 frosh to a 9-1 season, averaging 22.9 points a game.

The fifth starting position is being battled for by 6-4 Dick Shaw of Burlington and vastly improved Don Katz, a 6-3 junior from Guttenberg, N.J. Shaw is a transfer from Johnson State College.

Loche looks for Terry O'Leary to be the top reserve in the backcourt and for Alden Hale, former Spaulding High of Barre standout, to spell Boardman in the pivot.

Loche is once again stressing defense. He says the Cats will be a ball control team with stronger ball handling and rebounding than a year ago. Loche is admittedly concerned about his team's ability to put the ball in the hoop however.

Ken Spalter, Layne Higgs and Milt Goggans, the three top scorers last year have all graduated.

Due to the exam period and the semester break, the Catamounts appear at home only once in the first 13 games. Five of the games are in tournament competition. Eight of the last 12 games are in Burlington.

The revised schedule: Dec. 1, at Dartmouth; 10, at Massachusetts; 27-28-29, at AIC Invitational in Springfield, Mass.; Jan. 2-3, at Loyola (Montreal) Invitational; 7, CONNECTICUT; 10, at New Hampshire; 13-14, at Maine; 16, at Connecticut; 18, at Rhode Island; 21, NEW HAMPSHIRE; 28, MASSACHUSETTS; 31, NORWICH; Feb. 4, SPRINGFIELD; 6, RHODE ISLAND; 8, ST. MICHAEL'S; 11, at St. Lawrence; 18, ALUMNI Kake Walk exhibition; 20 MIDDLEBURY; 22, at St. Michael's; 24, at Boston University; 27, at Middlebury; Mar. 1, at Norwich.

FROSH DROP OPENER

By Fred Schlapp

On November 17, the Kittens of UVM faced off against a strong Clarkson freshman team. Clarkson, which always produces fine hockey teams, had 11 Canadians on their 15 man squad, and had more experience than the Vermont players. Nevertheless, the Kittens made up with hustle what they lacked in experience, and at the end of the first period they trailed only by a 3-2 margin. The second period was completely dominated by UVM, and although Vermont tied the score at 4-4, it was unable to get the go-ahead goal. The second stanza ended deadlocked and the teams headed for the dressing room, each with 4 goals on the scoreboard.

Clarkson scored quickly at the start of the third period, and it was evident that conditioning was beginning to tell. Then to add to UVM's problems, star center, Jim Yeats, left the game with a knee injury, and after his departure, the Vermont offense sputtered, leaving Clarkson to dominate the rest of the game. Toward the end of the third period, the Clarkson frosh fired home three quick goals and pinned an 8-6 defeat on Vermont. Outstanding in defeat were the two goalies, Lawrence and Watson, and Bobby Krebs who played in front of a hometown crowd. Scoring for the Kittens were John Cussen with 2 goals, George Kreiner with 2, and George Kuntz, also with 2.

This was an auspicious start for the freshmen because they more than held their own against one of the top freshman clubs in the country. Both Coach Fox and Coach Cross expressed pleasure with the Kittens' performance, but noted that the freshmen will have to cut down the number of penalties they receive as Clarkson scored four times when UVM was shorthanded.

John Browning Opens Semester's Lane Series

By Judy Beeber

After a recital in Brussels, a critic wrote the following: "John Browning's musicality is exquisite, his technique simply prodigious. He plays with extraordinary virtuosity, sensitivity and penetrating intelligence." Browning will make his appearance on the Red Lane Series in Burlington on Saturday, Jan. 21 at 8:30 p.m. in Memorial Auditorium. He performed once before on the Lane Summer Series in 1961.

Browning has had a very eventful musical past. In New York, he studied at the Juilliard School of Music on scholarship, studying with Madame Rosina Lhevinne. In 1956, as winner of the coveted Edgar M. Leventritt Award the previous year, he made a debut with The New York Philharmonic. That same year he was heard for the first time in Europe, where he won The Gold Medal Award of the Concours International Musical, the famous competition founded by the late Queen Elisabeth of Belgium.

Besides many tours, Browning has made several recordings under contract with RCA-Victor. His first recording on that label was the Beethoven "Diabelli Variations," 33 variations on a waltz by Diabelli released in April 1966. His recording of the Prokofiev Piano Concertos 1 and 2 with Erich Leinsdorf and The Boston Symphony, is slated for release in the near future.

On Jan. 21, Browning will play a variety of classical greats. The pieces to be played are J.S. Bach's "English Suite in D minor," Chopin's "Sonata in B minor, Op. 58," Copland's "Piano Variations," and Ravel's "Gaspard de la Nuit."

McCune Visits Yamagata Writes Of University

By Shannon McCune, Research Professor of Geography

For decades the Japanese have trained their grade school and high school teachers in normal schools which were located generally in the prefectural capitals throughout the country. After World War II, with the need for more teachers, for retraining of older teachers and for more broadly educated persons, most of these schools were elevated to university status. There is still great argument in Japan over the wisdom of this action. Some argue that as teacher training institutions the normal schools had focus and purpose. Now they are only pale and poor copies of large universities and do not have a desired identity. They are diffuse and have too few ties with the regions in which they are located.

Yamagata University is one of these new universities and was interesting to visit. The city of Yamagata is located on an alluvial fan which spreads out into the Yamagata basin. Near the head of this fan, on the edge of the city, is the major campus of the university. Though some of the old wooden buildings are still used, most of the physical plant is new, — ferro-concrete in unimaginative box-like shapes. Flanking the main walk up the campus ginkgo trees have been planted, an apparent copy of the row of trees that leads from the entrance of Tokyo University. A new Student Union building is already crowded. A gymnasium and a music education building are the newest. Though there are some dormitories, most of the students live in nearby boarding houses or commute from their homes. Of the 113 students in the Education School some 60% come from the Yamagata area; over half are girls. The University has two branches; an Engineering School at Tsuruoka with 1561 students, all but ten of whom are men, and an Agricultural School on the Shonai plain with 436 students, of whom only 12 are girls.

An example of the involvement of the faculty in the local area has been the service of many faculty members on the prefectural planning council. The president has served as one of the eight members of the executive committee and numerous faculty members have served on sub-committees. The new five-year plan has just been publicized. It devotes considerable attention to the development of improved transportation facilities. Japan is undergoing a very rapid transition to the motor age which will involve reorienting marketing areas, commuting regions and so on. Yamagata has been losing population, — roughly 5% in each of the last five-year periods. They hope to reverse this trend by developing new industrial areas. In all of this planning the University has been involved; developing an Engineering and Technical School at Tsuruoka has been of help.

There is, however, a very real problem in areas of Japan such as Yamagata in endeavoring to keep pace with the economic growth of Japan. Many of the young people have left the farms for the cities such as Tokyo. The farmers must seek seasonal employment during the winter in order to make ends meet. This leaves the grandparents and the wife on the farm. Since they are not able to do the heavy farm work the production cycle continues downward. Though some of the old industries, such as raising silk cocoons and manufacturing specialties such as iron ware and hand-loomed textiles have been retained, there is not a strong industrial base. New hydro-electric power supplies are being used for some small chemical and high grade steel industries. The beauty of the mountainous area, the numerous hot springs resorts and the newly exploited ski area around Mt. Zao have helped expand the tourist industry. Perhaps in this trend lies the best hope for the future of the prefecture, one in which the University may be able to provide effective service in the planning and evaluation of economic development, — tourism in particular.

UVM Recieves $5 Million Grant

The University of Vermont received gifts and grants valued at more than $5 million during the 1966 calendar year. Most of the total, including over $4 million in research, training and equipment grants, was earmarked for specific projects by terms of the donor.

In addition to the grants Trustees of Vermont's oldest institution of higher learning accepted gifts valued at more than $1 million from alumni, friends, business, industry and foundations.

These gifts ranged from small amounts to a high of over $100,000 and included cash, stock, books, papers, equipment, art objects, even livestock — a Morgan stallion for the animal and dairy science department. Many gifts both large and small were in memory of a friend or relative.

Although it is a publicly founded state and Land-Grant institution the University of Vermont, one of the nation's oldest universities, has a long tradition of substantial support from private sources.

Museum Films To Begin Jan. 25

The spring semester half of the Fleming Museum's film series begins Wednesday, January 25 with a recent Canadian film "Nobody Waved Goodbye." Produced by the National Film Board of Canada, it stars Peter Kastner and Julie Biggs as a pair of affluent teen-age delinquents in search for direction in a world of confusing change. The film was shown at the Montreal, London and New York film festivals in 1964, the year it was made. It will be shown at 8 p.m. in the Arena Theatre. As is true of all programs in the series, admission is by museum membership only.

Other films in the series includes Busby Berkeley's "Dames," February 8 and "David Copperfield" with W.C. Fields as Micawber in Dickens classic, March 8. Prize-winning National Student Films are scheduled for May 3. A fifth program on Canadian films is planned for April.

SFC Ovitt receives the Bronze Star Medal with "V" device from General Hamlett.

Ovitt Wins Bronze Star

Sergeant First Class Thomas R. Ovitt of the UVM Military Science Department received the Bronze Star Medal with "V" device and the Army Commendation Medal at ceremonies Thursday night at the Lincoln Inn.

SFC Ovitt received the Bronze Star for his action while serving with Company B, 1st Battalion, 2d Infantry, 1st Infantry Division in Vietnam on August 25, 1966.

"After continually assaulting the well-entrenched insurgents, Sergeant Ovitt's Platoon began taking heavy casualties. Sergeant Ovitt, acting instinctively and courageously, exposed himself to the devastating Viet Cong fire and began rallying and encouraging his men. He effectively consolidated the disorder into a fighting perimeter and at the same time aided in the evacuation of the wounded forward of the perimeter. After the reorganization was accomplished, he again exposed himself to the hostile fire by going from position to position treating wounded, resupplying his men with ammunition, and giving words of encouragement until he was seriously wounded and had to be evacuated. Sergeant Ovitt's outstanding display of aggressiveness, devotion to duty and personal bravery is in keeping with the finest traditions of the military service and reflects great credit upon himself, the 1st Infantry Division, and the United States Army."

SFC Ovitt received the Army Commendation Medal "while serving as an Enlisted Instructor United States Army Reserve Officers' Training Corps Instructor Group, University of Vermont, from October 1962 to August 1966. Sergeant Ovitt distinguished himself by rendering exceptionally meritorious service. In this capacity, he demonstrated outstanding qualities of leadership, initiative and professional competence in the performance of his duties."

Presenting the medals to SFC Ovitt was General Barksdale Hamlett, President of Norwich University and former vice Chief of Staff of the United States Army.

Quota System Established By Panhel

This year, for the first time, Panhellenic Council is instituting a Quota Limitations system to determine the possible pledge size of each sorority. It is the ultimate aim of Council to equalize the seven sororities and at the same time, to give more university women the opportunity to benefit from sorority life.

Based on the current membership lists of each chapter, Panhel has placed an arbitrary limitation of 68 members for each house. So as to allow for the greatest number of pledges, the minimum number for the larger houses has been placed at twenty. Since it is difficult to work with a very large pledge class, the maximum number of pledges has been established at thirty.

The table below indicates current membership and possible pledge class size for this semester. If the sororities do not fill their pledge class quota during formal rushing period, they may take more women during open rushing, which immediately follows.

It is hoped that this system will be a flexible one, allowing for expansion of the sororities along with university expansion.

Special Registration

Due to the number of women who missed rushing last weekend, Panhellenic Council has ruled that those women will be permitted to register for this rushing period on Saturday, January 28 at Southwick from 8 to 10 a.m. provided that they attended the open houses last semester. If there are any questions, they will be answered at the registration on Saturday. There will be no allowances for women who do not come to Southwick or contact Dianne Dempsey before 10 a.m., January 28.

Housing Policy Is Clarified

By Richard Berk

In a restatement of its official policy regarding off-campus housing, the administration has attempted to clarify its position in an effort to avoid student confusion in the matter. The policy remains, as stated in March, 1966, that all students who have completed six semesters of college or have reached the age of twenty-one will be permitted to live off campus.

The administration's concern appears to have arisen out of student misunderstanding of its emergency housing statement of July, 1966. At that time, finding the university seriously over-enrolled for the coming year, the office of student personnel made the decision to allow all those above the freshman level the opportunity to live in apartments. This was an emergency decision and, as stated, was "... a temporary move to better accommodate all of our students for the coming year." Apparently a certain number of students misinterpreted this as a new and permanent housing policy. It was not intended as such.

Perhaps at this time a re-examination of the housing policy and the reasoning behind it would be helpful. The following is the official administrative statement as it appeared in The VERMONT CYNIC last March 14:

"Recognizing the commitment of the University of Vermont to educate as many qualified new students as possible within the limits of available physical and faculty resources, and further recognizing that housing ought not to be a deterrent to the education of any qualified student, the following policy for the University is announced by the Student Personnel staff:

I. The University will provide housing for all full-time undergraduate students except for commuting students and those who desire to live off campus under the provision of Parts II and III of this policy.

II. Students above the freshman level who are active or pledges of a fraternity or sorority may register for University residence hall housing or chapter housing.

III. Both men and women students who have completed six full semesters of college as of June 15, 1966 and also those who reach the age of 21 years as of December 31, 1966 may register for University residence hall housing or off-campus housing.

IV. The University will not be responsible for the approval of off-campus housing facilities for those eligible under this policy. The Director of Housing, however, will furnish a listing and information on housing facilities that are available in the area."

THE JUSTIFICATION

Some of the principles involved in the administration's establishment of the new housing policy were officially stated as follows:

1. The University is in a position to provide an opportunity for more prospective students to obtain a college education.

2. The University believes that a student usually benefits by living in University residence halls. These benefits are educational and financial in nature. The residence hall program gains in stature and function when those students who live in residence do so on the basis of voluntary acceptance of these educational and financial benefits. Additionally, our society demonstrates by its legal posture that 21 is the chronological age break in the assumption of complete adult responsibility, and therefore University policy ought to afford the student of this age the freedom of choice of residence.

3. Based upon enrollment projections the University anticipates that it will be necessary to continue to provide "temporary" facilities beyond normal housing capacities during the next few years. The justification of the use of these "temporary" facilities is more apparent under the new policy.

The administration offered further insight into reasoning behind its decision in the statement that, "Historically, the development of a University residence hall philosophy and policy for men and women has been separate evolution. The program for women is of long standing and rich in tradition while the men's program is of recent origin."

Fraternity Bids Due Saturday

Fraternity pledge bids will be given out Saturday, the 28th, at the Patrick Gym from 9:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. The IFC hopes that all freshmen have seriously thought about joining a fraternity. Choosing a certain house is not an easy decision and should not be hastily made.

If a freshman cannot pick up his bid on Saturday, they will be held for him and he may pick it up Monday or Tuesday between 2:00 and 3:00 p.m. The IFC wishes all the freshmen the best of luck.

32 UVM Students Do Research Under NSF Grants

Thirty-two University of Vermont undergraduates have an opportunity to participate as junior research colleagues under two grants for the University from the National Science Foundation.

Dr. Samuel C. Wiggins, professor of plant and soil science, is director of a grant of $16,800 to finance the work of eight students this academic year and eight students this summer.

Sr. Donald G. Forgays, professor of psychology, is director of a grant of $16,000 to finance eight students this summer and eight students during the next academic year.

Both have received similar grants in the past.

The grants received at the University are part of $4 million in grants to assist more than 3,250 of the nation's top undergraduate science student, at 185 colleges and universities.

Students selected for this program work in research as junior colleagues of established scientist, or independently under the guidance of senior scientists.

Bob Mitchell, left, receives engraved Little All America plaque from Donald Fillion, editor of the Burlington Free Press. Little All America second team halfback Mitchell and two-time All Yankee Conference middle guard Joe Soldano will be in Boston Saturday to pick up two more of their numerous post-season laurels. Mitchell, was named the New England small college offensive back of the year by the New England College Football Coaches Association. Soldano, a senior, will pick up the award for the top defensive lineman in New England.

Arena Theater, March 2-4

Farce Portrays The Draft

Selective Service was as big a problem 260 years ago as it is today. The Arena Theatre, University of Vermont, will present a 1706 British comedy, THE RECRUITING OFFICER, in early March, which demonstrates 'the more things change, the more they stay the same.'

Though times have changed, the draft is still the draft. This farce provides a funny look at draft customs of the early 18th Century.

The author of the comedy, George Farquhar, was a penniless poet in need of a job when appointed to a British regiment and posted to the provinces to recruit. Out of his experiences in Shrewsbury came THE RECRUITING OFFICER, a cockeyed look at the practices used to induce country boys into the army.

On March 2-3-4, at 8:30 p.m., the Arena Theatre will be transformed into an 18th Century theatre and the men of Restoration England will follow Farquhar's lead through the double-dealing pathways into the army. And not far behind the recruits comes the ladies, who engage in their own dubious practices to recruit the man into matrimony.

The playboy, Captain Plume, is brought into line by Miss Silvia, who has as many tricks up her sleeve as the Captain has up his. Behind all this polish and finery of the likes of Plume and Silvia are the country people. Unsophisticated, patriotic in their own way, but always wary of the "establishments," they are the ones who finally march off to the battlegrounds of Europe.

THE RECRUITING OFFICER is 260 years old, but as timely and fresh in 1967 as it was at the turn of the 18th Century.

Some men march to war; many men do not, and the difference between staying behind and marching off is often slim indeed.

The cast is as follows:

Balance, Gil Rood; Scale, Dave Franzoni; Worthy, Bill Levy; Plume, Terry Comerford; Brazen, Peter Covette; Kite, Forrest Bowman; Bullock, Steve Carlson; Pearlmain, Jeff Kent; Appletree, Mike Mermelstein; Butcher, Lou Blumenfeld; Constable, Jim Collins; Servant, Jan Quackenbush; Husband 1, Eugene

Dumas; Husband 2, David Anderson; Collier, Louis Bove; Melinda, Linda Simet; Silvia, Betty Smith; Lucy, Laura Wenz; Rose, Grace Kiley; Drummer Boy, Susan Norton; Wife 1, Judy Rosenblum; Wife 2, Karen Schumacher; Vegetable Lady, Diana Birt; Fishmonger, Sallyanne Gubbay; Ballad Singer, Liz Ingoldsby.

Warm, welcoming fireplace at Outing Club Ski Lodge.

Take a Weekend-Skiing

That's right -- just show up anytime! Where? Why, the new Outing Club Ski Lodge. It's open seven days a week and there is always someone there. Stop in after skiing and have a home-cooked meal. Relax in front of the big fireplace and have a most joyful evening.

Meet some new friends these next few weekends. During the Christmas vacation just UVM students, mostly girls, used the lodge.

Now, not only are UVM students using it, but also lots of people from other colleges. Many schools are on semester break and students from such colleges as Bates, MIT, Hartwick, Curry, Norwich, Middlebury, and a few others, will be at the lodge.

Why not come while these college people are here? Don't make reservations if it's not convenient.

They aren't necessary. Just show up at the lodge with a charter membership card and an UVM ID. Memberships are available at the Student Association desk in Billings Center. They are "free."

Of course, a little money is needed, but it's less cost than any other place in the Stowe-Madonna area.

Don't worry about transportation. Come to the Outing Club meeting Thursdays at 7 p.m., in Southwick Hall, and line up a ride. The Outing Club goes skiing every weekend. Starting the first weekend in February ski buses will be run. It will cost $1 to ride both ways. Departure times will be posted around campus next week.

Relax for a weekend and spend it with the Outing Club at their ski lodge.

VISTA

Sheldon Butts an assistant field director, said that VISTA has adopted a new, accelerated policy for students who have received their bachelor's degree or expect to receive it this year.

Over 75 percent of VISTA Volunteers are drawn from college campuses. This year VISTA will recruit 4,500 Volunteers to serve in one of 300 different projects from coast to coast and in Hawaii, Alaska, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

The projects are located in urban slums, rural areas, Indian reservations, migrants camps, Job Corps centers and mental hospitals. VISTA Volunteers may express a preference for location and type of assignment.

The Volunteers train for six weeks and serve for one year. They receive a monthly allowance to cover basic living expenses. At the end of service they receive in a lump sum a stipend of $50 for each month served.

A team was on campus, in case you missed them, the same information may be obtained from the Placement Office.

Pastore Creates Prize Poster

By Laura Cohners

This year's winner of the traditional poster contest for Kake Walk (Nov. 1 to Jan. 1) was Louis Pastore of Sigma Nu Fraternity.

The winning design was selected by faculty members of various departments from a group of 15 entries.

Mr. Auschenbach of the art department, Dr. Robert Cochran of the English Department and Maj. Finehurst who is affiliated with the ROTC program all participated in the judging.

The purpose underlying the whole competition, therefore, was to strengthen the rapport of the entire university -- especially that of the Greeks and Independents. Thus, during the actual judging, the posters were neither identified with their owners nor were any fraternity associations of the contestants revealed.

The contest itself is a fairly recent one which originated within the last 10 years. Past winners have been males, although a female won it a few years ago.

Competition has become increasingly keen as the art work is representative of the whole University and especially of Kake Walk.

The prize Pastore will receive is not only a cake award during one of the nights of Walking, but also his fraternity will receive points toward the Lechnyr trophy.

This trophy is one of the most coveted of all the Kake Walk awards as it serves to exemplify the ideal spirit of Kake Walk.

Pastore will also gain the satisfaction of having his poster used in all publicity releases concerning Kake Walk. It will also be displayed in various stores in downtown Burlington such as Concert Selections, Preston's Jewelry Store and Bailey's Music Store.

DEAR REB:

Composer wants to know the score on '67 compacts

DEAR REB:

I'm a well-known composer, and I need a new car. The trouble is, I'm just too Bizet to pick one out. And what's more, many of the new cars I see are Offenbach in the garage for repairs. But I do have a good friend who is pleased with his new '67 Dodge Dart. He was given an excellent deal and Berlioz any money on it. My Bach is to the wall. Can you help me?

LUDWIG

DEAR LUDWIG:

My advice is that you let yourself Ravel in the enjoyment of driving the sporty, all-new Dart for '67. You'll find its Liszt price is a lot lower than you'd expect. And even though it's longer outside and bigger inside this year, Dart's still an easy car to Handel.

Sincerely, Reb

Here's the swinging, man-sized compact for '67 that's got three B's. of its own: Bold, Brassy and Beautiful. Dart has been completely restyled this year, inside and out. It's longer, roomier, more powerful. But still at that snug compact price. Drop in at your nearest Dodge Dealer's and try it out for yourself.

EDITORIAL...

In keeping with its role, as one of the traditional academic whipping boys (in the noble company of institutionalized food and campus newspapers) the administration finds itself, once again, in a bind. This time its housing policy is the focal point of student discontent.

While the immediate source of dissent is a simple misunderstanding for which the various administrators involved are not responsible, the basic issue is in need of serious re-examination. Students, being as painfully human as they are, tend to absorb information selectively. To the extent that this is true, many appear to have casually overlooked the sentence in the administration's letter of last July 15 which clearly stated that the emergency housing decision to allow all upperclass students the option of living off campus was a temporary one, in no way reflecting a change of policy. Thus, we feel that students cannot legitimately complain that something is being taken away from them. Because nothing has been given to them.

However, it does appear that, in the light of current social attitudes and trends, the policy of allowing only seniors and those over the age of twenty-one to live in apartments is archaic. More than archaic, it is absurd. The administration justifies its position by citing the social and educational benefits of dormitory living. Admittedly, they are many, and we would agree that all undergraduates should be required to spend their freshman year in a university residence hall. Consider it basic training with an option to re-enlist. But, beyond this, any requirement represents a definite imposition upon personal freedom. An imposition, because while administrators are busy extolling the virtues of institutional living, they overlook the drawbacks. They don't want to know about the three clowns who come fooling in from the Mill at 1 a.m. and deposit their remains at the foot of your bed without clearance to land, proceeding to jabber something about the little one with the big ones over the tilting strains of a Stones album, while you lie there too weak to protest because you've been up on Dexedrine for the past 72 hours studying for a paddleball quiz. Or, from a somewhat different perspective, consider the three lovelies across the hall who may usually be found hanging out of their windows like French prostitutes awaiting the liberating Allied troops, the better to see who comes and who goes, and with whom. Especially with whom. Meanwhile, it's 12:59 and you find yourself fighting your way through the mob which is fogging up the vestibule window, while the snow melts under an overflow crowd outside. Once inside, your housemother scowls self-righteously, as the stud bows gracefully and kisses your hand.

These are a few of our favorite things. But one year was enough.

The fact is that this administration is merely bound by a universal tradition as a "residential campus." The fact is, further, that formidable financial commitments to this philosophy have been made, in the form of dormitories. But time changes, and along with it philosophies. It has become crystal clear to us that the current administrative policy regarding off-campus housing is merely an accommodation to prior financial commitments. In effect, the investment now dictates the philosophy. We are certain this is not the way it was intended.

If our education is truly the prime concern, we defend the right of any student to choose high level slum dwelling as an alternative to the pristine academic environment, after one year.

We did. And we like it.

KAKE WALK DATE CHANGED?

By Connie Chapman and Anne Elliot

In the November, 1966, issue of the University of Vermont Alumni Magazine (p.2), there is an article of prime importance to the undergraduate student body, especially the present classes of '68, '69, and '70.

It states "Changes in the University's academic calendar will make it necessary for winter hour exams to be given in 1968 during the period when Kake Walk is customarily held. For this reason Kake Walk in future years may well have to be scheduled one or two weeks earlier."

We would like to know:

1. What are these changes which will be made in the "academic calendar"?

2. Why has the student body not been informed of these changes in the schedule?

3. What is meant by "winter hour exams"? Are they the two and three-hour first semester finals, or the spring semester midterms?

The article continues: "It is hoped that this change will not prove to be of any marked importance to alumni..." It's fine to accommodate the alumni, but...

A month ago Jack Ruby died. He was killed by a cancer and not an American court. America could never really drag Ruby to the electric chair. America is after all a nation of Jack Rubys.

The son of an immigrant grows up in the poverty of an American slum and almost makes it in Dallas. Sure his business wasn't the most wholesome business but, it was his own. Business and you just gotta make a buck. The current manifestation of national paranoia will last until capitalists begin losing, rather than gaining money from the war. It is easier to kill than it is to go hungry. Ruby's business was sex. That's the American Way. (Advertisements would have us believe that we brush our teeth not for hygienic purposes, but in order to be attractive to members of the opposite sex.) The average male probably would not want his sister to work in Ruby's place, but he would certainly enjoy the show. Corruption in others is a sin; corruption in one's self is a pleasure.

The crew cut mindless American Legion "let's-make-democracy-work-by-killing-off-the-commie-queers" will condemn pornography. They will also sit in the front row of Ruby's club hoping for a little extra thrill. They claim to be moral people. Jack Ruby himself was a moral person. He would throw out any customer who got fresh with the girls. He was also a patriot. He would have made a good president of the Dallas American Legion.

When Ruby shot Oswald, he spoke with eloquence. His act was the most meaningful and symbolic act in American history. We are nation founded by violence, we grew with violence and, when faced with an "evil," we react in the only way we know how - with violence. Oswald, himself, tried to reject this society. He acted to stop Kennedy who he believed was directly responsible for various violent acts - The Bay of Pigs, the War in Viet Nam. But, while reacting against the nation, he conformed to its methods. He attempted to do a good deed by doing violence. One, after all, does not kill a political leader without a moral reason.

America completely rejected Oswald even though he reacted in the same way his government has usually acted when faced with an "evil." He used violence. Ironically, Oswald, in rejecting his nation, used the very means which made that nation "great." Far from rejecting his society, Oswald became a manifestation of it.

Ruby acted from what he believed were moral reasons. He wanted to prevent future pain, that is, Mrs. Kennedy's return to Dallas in order to testify. Oswald also acted from highly "moral" reasons. Kennedy, after all, was guilty of aggression in Cuba and, to a limited extent, in Viet Nam. As a leader of the Western "capitalist" world, he was, according to Oswald, the greatest enemy to "progressive and freedom loving people." Oswald killed Kennedy not only for revenge, but also to prevent further violence. To combat violence and murder, one must use violence and murder! Consequently, the human race goes on killing humans to prevent them from killing more humans who they believe desire to do nothing else but kill or conquer... Oswald, Ruby, Johnson... all are motivated by the same logical fallacy.

The Oswald murder was, in a sense, more disturbing than the assassination itself. It showed us the Oswald within us all. Was anyone sickened by the fact that they saw another human being killed live on coast to coast TV? If Ruby could murder, so could we! How many people pitied Oswald, not only because he was killed, but also because he killed? Can you imagine the desperation which causes a man to do such an act?

WE DIDN'T MURDER RUBY, GOD DID.

I wonder whether or not the Waterman bureaucracy will see fit to do something about the blatant double standard it has established in regard to drinking. Drinking is forbidden in the dorms; the rule is rather sternly enforced. Drinking in fraternities is also forbidden; that rule is hardly enforced. There is not a fraternity on campus that I know of that does not openly and flagrantly violate the drinking laws, not only of the university, but also of the state.

It is foolish to maintain that drinking must be rooted out of the fraternities. One should be free to do what one wants with one's own mind, whether it is expanding it or contracting it. A law is only a law in so far as it is enforced and there are any number of laws which are not and/or should not be enforced.

Professors Speak Out On China

China's "Great Proletarian Cultural Revolution" has nothing but its imposing name to distinguish it from a chronic Chinese state of affairs, according to a University of Vermont political science professor.

Dr. George T. Little, who taught for a year in a Formosa university and has a continuing interest in Chinese studies, calls Mao Tse-tung's current purge a classic example of Chinese Politics. "Emperors have nearly always burned books in China," he says. "Authority has always worked to establish a Chinese orthodoxy which defines and preserves the thought and behavior considered to be properly Chinese."

One of Professor Little's colleagues at Vermont, Dr. Lubomir A. D. Dellin, an economics professor and specialist in Eastern European Communism, adds that whatever the purge may be, "it has no exact parallel in any other Communist country. It's outside the usual pattern of Communist development anywhere."

Professor Dellin discounts any cause-effect relationship between the present domestic upheaval in China and the angry separation of Soviet and Chinese policy, but he does say "There may be a connection in a secondary way."

"The massive 'common front' of the International Communist movement has served to bolster domestic Communism in other countries, and the Sino-Soviet split certainly doesn't contribute to the security of Communism inside China."

Professor Little, director of the World Affairs Center at the University, recently returned from two years of Chinese language and area studies at Harvard's East Asian Research Center, where he was an associate with a postdoctoral fellowship from the NDEA. He sees Mao's purge as an ancient Chinese pattern erupting through the veneer of Communism.

"It makes sense that high school and college students are in the Red Guard," he says. "In Chinese history, academic institutions have always been centers of political activity. In fact, the historic way to power, as a mandarin-type official, was through the academic examinations, in which the candidate's orthodoxy was tested."

"The turnabout against Russia, the hatred of all foreigners, is an 'anti-barbarian' attitude found throughout Chinese history. It would be strange if this hadn't happened."

"The violence accompanying the purge is practically a Chinese political institution. Violence has often been a Chinese cultural trait. Vigorous denunciations and terror are traditional tools in political struggle there."

"The almost mystical power ascribed to the 'Thought of Mao Tse-tung' is not as extreme as it may seem to us. To be truly Chinese under Mao, one must believe in, memorize and quote his writings. To be truly Chinese under the emperors, one had to believe in, memorize and quote writings of Confucius and the other sages."

Professor Little goes on to say that "The only open question about the 'Cultural Revolution' in my mind is the extent to which there is a real division between Mao and China's President, Liu Shao-chi. The 'revolution' is probably a device for finding a successor to Mao and from our position it's practically impossible to say who's got the upper hand."

SALARY SURVEY. A Study of 1966-67 Beginning Offers. To the surprise of no one, College seniors are receiving more and higher salary offers; in what is expected to become the most competitive recruiting season in history. This is substantiated in the College Placement Council's first Salary Survey report for 1966-67.

Since the end of June, the average offer to technical students has risen 5.2 percent to $706 per month, while the average offer to non-technical students has gone up 4.6 per cent to $596.

The data in the current report, limited to male students, cover actual offers made this season up to the deadline of December 13, as substantiated by 116 colleges and universities. The bachelor's degree phase is based on a total of 3,130 offers - 2,344 to technical students and 786 to non-technical. As in the past, the aerospace industry has made many more offers to bachelor's candidates than any other employer group. Close behind are public utilities, electronics, chemicals, and drugs, metals, public accounting, and petroleum.

In dollar value of offers, the electronics industry, which was third at this stage last year, is back in first place at $712. Aerospace, the leader all last year, is second at $709, followed by chemicals and drugs at $702. By curriculum, there is the same order in volume of offers as the last two years: electrical engineering, mechanical engineering, accounting, and business.

Here at UVM we have just completed a very active Fall Campus Interview Program, largely for our Technology graduates. Sixty-eight employers visited the Placement Office to hold five hundred and thirty-six employment interviews. While it is still too early to see the results, there is no question that preliminary offers indicate a substantial increase over the preceding year.

WORLD-WIDE Cynic

By Terrie Wurzbacher

Due to the great controversy over drugs, particularly LSD, this year's first appearance of the World-Wide CYNIC will present excerpts from articles on the subject which appeared in college newspapers all over the country.

UNIVERSITY OF ALASKA - A three hour debate between two faculty members: side 1 - "Through the use of such discoveries as LSD, it is possible to see quite clearly the imaginary world in which we live. The chemical may hold great promise as a factor in knocking out mental illness." Side 2 - "I do not approve of the wide-spread use of LSD until further laboratory experimentation has proven it harmless: LSD presents us with an entirely new set of values that may be quite harmful."

LEHIGH UNIVERSITY - A forum was held with Dr. Timothy Leary and Donald Louria, M.D., speaking of LSD. Immediately following, rumors were spread as were notes like this one: "Drinking is Old-fashioned." The Lehigh Psychedelic Association invites you to get the most out of life. Start off with grass, which will have to be legalized by the time '70 graduates. If you're with it, you'll find out where the first voyage will occur. Signed Tim. Thus, the university stated "Indeed, the University must and does cooperate with law enforcement agencies. Lehigh University will not condone the use of such narcotics or drugs..."

DALHOUSIE - A member of the staff writes "Those who wish to stamp out LSD completely belong in a sense to the same cult as the prohibitionists of the thirties and the anti-birth control fanatics of our time. Because, in our changing world, a world of varied moral values and enthusiastic pleasure seekers, to ban a drug such as LSD, which is not anymore addictive than tobacco, will goad the explorer on to investigation. Thus the effects, if a mind opening Gay MacKintosh (the author) Madness, Mysticism, and Mescaline drug, which might some day control and alleviate the mental strain of the emotionally disturbed will be lost."

UNIVERSITY OF OTTAWA - "The federal government is investigating the exports of records into Canada by Dr. Timothy Leary - 'the high priest of LSD' - and the legality of advertisement for the records appearing in Canadian University newspapers."

The New York University Center for International Studies is offering 15 junior fellowships for outstanding young scholars with special aptitudes for research and writing.

Prof. Thomas M. Franck, director of the center, said the program "provides an unusual opportunity for combining a formal classroom education with tutorial training and original research."

The fellowships are given for the academic year and carry a stipend of $4,000 plus half tuition, approximately $900. Applications must be filed by Feb. 15, 1967.

The fellowship program is open to graduates of any recognized university in the United States or abroad who will be pursuing a full-time graduate degree program at New York University during the academic year of the fellowship. A junior fellow must qualify both as a member of the Center for International Studies and as a full-time degree candidate at the University.

Interested students should write for further details to the Center for International Studies, New York University, Washington Square North, New York, N.Y., 10003.

UVM ALUMNUS DIES

Word has been received by the University of Vermont of the death on Jan. 2 in San Francisco, Calif., of Col. Howard R. Smalley, a member of the Class of 1901. The oldest graduate attending the University's 1966 Commencement, Colonel Smalley participated with the U.S. Cavalry in the Army's last action against the Indians in 1907 in South Dakota. The funeral took place in Arlington National Cemetery on Jan. 10.

UVM Alumnus Named Bank Vice President

A University of Vermont alumnus has been named vice president of the Worcester, Mass., County National Bank.

Stewart P. Washburn, president of the Vermont Alumni Council, joined the Bay State bank in 1955. He is a 1951 Phi Beta graduate of Vermont, and also earned the M.B.A. at the Harvard Graduate School of Business. He is a native of Windsor, Vt.

In an insurance application, a chap giving information on his military background came to the question: "What did you do while in the service?"

"AS TOLD!" he wrote in large letters.

Master Sergeant Gerber

Master Sergeant August K. Gerber joined the military Science Department in December. Assuming the position of the unit's Sergeant Major, MSG Gerber has 12 years active duty time behind him. Prior to joining UVM, he served as an Operations Sergeant in the Training Division, Assistant Chief of Staff G3, United States Army Pacific in Fort Shafter, Hawaii.

Cadets Tour Engineer Center

Twenty-four cadets from the UVM ROTC Cadet Brigade toured the Army Engineer School and Center at Fort Belvoir, Virginia, and the Army Map Service at Washington, D.C.

Leaving Burlington on the morning of January 11 by chartered bus, the Cadets spent the following two days as guests of the Army touring engineer facilities. Areas on the itinerary were the Engineer School classes and demonstrations, Engineer Research and Development Laboratories, the Nuclear Reactor, and the Army Map Service.

The purpose of the trip was to interest the Cadets in the Army Corps of Engineers and show them how an Army Post operates. The Cadets returned to Burlington in the evening of January 14.

Those Cadets making the trip were: Douglas G. Orvis, William H. Burling, Jr., Norman J. Boyden, III, Charles S. Thompson, Jean G. Beliveau, David A. Keenan, Robert W. McDowell, David F. Stender, John P. Wagner, Robert W. Baldwin, Malcolm E. Brown, John R. Burnett, John T. Buckley, Robert E. Caboretto, Thomas M. Reed, Douglas E. Treuting, Thomas B. Wheel, Douglas L. Aiken, Ira C. Farnsworth, Donald B. Jones, David I. Joy, Michael R. Kelley, Gerald F. Pierce, and Martin D. Weiss.

Accompanying the Cadets from the ROTC Instructor Group were Major Alton R. Sparks, Captain Howard D. Fraser, and Captain Jack D. Rives. The trip was sponsored by the New England Division, Corps of Engineers.

tradition in the Brigade, the Banquet provides the setting for award of prized leadership positions and permanent cadet rank to members of the Class of '67.

Speaker for the Banquet was General Barksdale Hamlett, President of Norwich University and former Vice Chief of Staff of the United States Army. General Hamlett spoke on Leadership in the Cadet Corps. President and Mrs. Lyman S. Rowell were honored guests together with key members of the faculty and staff.

Cadets honored with key assignments were:

Brigade Commander and Cadet Colonel: Douglas G. Orvis, Burlington, Vermont.

Brigade Executive Officer and Cadet Lt. Colonel: William H. Burling, Jr., Toronto, Canada.

The Legion of Valor of the United States of America, Inc., Award was presented by General Hamlett to Cadet Colonel Douglas G. Orvis, Brigade Commander. One award is presented to one outstanding Senior Division ROTC Cadet in each U.S. Army Corp area each year. The recipient must be in the upper fourth of his class in ROTC standing, in the upper fourth of his class in academic standing, and recommended by the PMS and Dean of his college.

Mathematicians with Versatility & Imagination ... Look to nsa!

Mathematicians are key members of the professional fraternity at the National Security Agency, a scientific and technological community unique in the United States, perhaps in the world. NSA is the Agency responsible for developing "secure" communications systems to transmit and receive vital information.

YOU AND NSA

As a mathematician at NSA, you will be defining, formulating and solving communications-related problems, many of major national significance. Statistical mathematics, matrix algebra, finite fields, probability, combinatorial analysis, programming and symbolic logic are but a few of the tools applied by Agency mathematicians. They enjoy the full support of NSA's completely equipped computer laboratory where many of them often become involved in both hardware and software of advanced computing systems. Theoretical research is also a primary concern at NSA, owing to the fact that the present state of knowledge in certain fields of mathematics is not sufficiently advanced to satisfy NSA requirements.

IMAGINATION ... A REAL REQUIREMENT

Mathematical problems at NSA will seldom be formulated and handed to you, the mathematician, for solution. Instead, you will help define the problem by observing its origin and characteristics, and the trends of data associated with it. You will then determine whether the problem and data are susceptible to mathematical treatment, and if so, how. As you grow in your appreciation of this approach to mathematical problems, and the relationship of your discipline to non-mathematical subject matter, both your personal satisfaction and your value to NSA will increase, as will your responsibility.

CAREER BENEFITS

NSA's liberal graduate study program permits you to pursue two semesters of full-time graduate study at full salary. Nearly all academic costs are borne by NSA, whose proximity to seven universities is an additional asset.

Starting salaries, depending on education and experience, range from $7,729 to

The "Cipher Disk" ... NSA symbol and one of the oldest and most effective cryptographic devices known.

$12,873, and increases follow swiftly as you assume additional responsibility. Policies relating to vacations, insurance and retirement are more than liberal, and at NSA you enjoy the advantages of Federal employment without the necessity of Civil Service certification.

NSA is located between Washington and Baltimore, permitting your choice of city, suburban or country living, and allowing easy access to the Chesapeake Bay, ocean beaches, and other summer and winter recreation areas.

Check with your Placement Office for further information about NSA, or write to: Chief, College Relations Branch, Suite 10, 4435 Wisconsin Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20016. An equal opportunity employer, M&F.

Five Cadets Study Flight

Five UVM ROTC Cadets have been selected to participate in the Army's Flight Training Program.

The four, all seniors, are Edwin T. Congdon, Clarendon, Vt.; David E. Lambert, Lunenburg, Mass.; Charles S. Thompson, Bradford, Vt., and Michael L. Reardon, Wallin.

Each year, the Army makes participation in the program available to qualified and selected ROTC Cadets at colleges and universities where there are ROTC units. UVM was allocated five spaces in the program for the 1966-67 academic year.

Participants receive a single-wing badge to show they are in the training portion of the program.

During the training, each student receives 35 hours of ground school, 22 hours of flying instruction with an instructor pilot, 14 hours of solo flying (local and cross country), and upon the satisfactory completion of the course and the passing of the written and performance tests, a private pilot's license.
